Many witticisms have been lavished on the great loss of Russian officers in this campaign, and we have been told that the Turks had in some [illegible] been instructed by their superiors never to fire on a Russian General lest he should unfortunately be replaced by a man of some military capacity. It appears, however, from a very elaborate return compiled by the Germans of their losses in the Franco-German war, that very nearly as large a proportion of the Generals were killed and wounded as of the non-commissioned officers and privates, and a very much larger proportion of staff officers. Thus 2.56 per cent. of the Generals were killed, and only 2.60 per cent. of the non-commissioned officers and privates, while 8.72 per cent. of the Generals were wounded, and only 9.98 per cent. of the non-commissioned officers and privates. Of the staff officers, however, no less than 8.67 per cent. were killed, and as many as 18.22 per cent. were wounded. Thus, even in an army so admirably disciplined as the German army, it is obvious that the staff officers run a very much higher proportionate risk than any private soldier. How excellent was the discipline is to be gathered from the fact that while the total number of killed, wounded, and missing was about 14 per cent., decidedly less than 2 per cent. (to speak precisely, 1.68 per cent.) were missing, and in every grade above that of non-commissioned officers and privates the number of missing was hardly more than ½ per cent. The exceptional risks run by high officers, then, does not seem to be peculiar to the Russian army.—London Spectator.

Lord & Taylor,

NEW YORK.

WE INFORM THE LADIES OF AUBURN THAT OUR MAIL AND EXPRESS DEPARTMENT IS NOW SO THOROUGHLY ORGANIZED THEY CAN DO THEIR OWN SHOPPING IN NEW YORK WITHOUT THE EXPENSE OF TRAVELING THERE. WE SEND SAMPLES OF PIECE GOODS WITH PRICES PLAINLY MARKED, AND CATALOGUES OF LADIES', MISSES' AND CHILDREN'S FURNISHING GOODS BY MAIL TO APPLICANTS WHO SEND US THEIR PROPER ADDRESS, FREE OF CHARGE, AND IF THEY EXPLAIN CLEARLY THE KIND OF GOODS WANTED. WE SELDOM FAIL IN SUITING THEM, FROM THE PRINTED CATALOGUE THEY CAN ALWAYS MAKE SELECTION OF GARMENTS THAT WILL GIVE SATISFACTION, AND IT IS ONLY NECESSARY TO GIVE THE PROPER MEASUREMENTS TO INSURE SUCCESS.

OUR IMPORTATIONS

OF THIS SEASON GIVE US AN UNEQUALED STOCK OF GOODS.

BLACK SILKS, handsome and durable, all widths, $1.00 to $8.50. The GREAT AMERICAN INDESTRUCTIBLE SILK, $1.00, $1.25, and $1.50.

PLAIN COLORED SILKS, new shades, commencing as low as 75c. per yard, and at $1.00, same as quality of last season at $1.25.

Fancy Broche and Damasse Figures of the new Paris shades, from $2.00 upwards. Trimming Satins at $1.00, worth $1.25.

THE PRICES AT WHICH WE OFFER OUR SILKS ARE ONE-QUARTER TO ONE-THIRD LESS THAN LAST SEASON.

NOVELTIES IN DRESS GOODS

give a richer display of colorings and brilliant effects this season than for many years past, and we are receiving by every European Steamer fresh additions to our stock.

The mixed COSTUME CLOTHS range in price from 50c. a yard to $3.00, and on low-priced DRESS GOODS from 10c. a yard up, many of them being as effective as the heavier fabrics.

SHAWLS, MANTLES & WRAPS.

India Valley Cashmere Shawls from $100.00 up.

India Filled Centers at $60.00 and up.

Real Decca, Chedda and Striped India Shawls, new designs, from $10.00 upwards. Also, full lines British, French and German Shawls in beautiful new styles, of the best and most reliable manufacture. Paris Mantles and Cloaks of the latest modes from $15.00 up, and Berlin from $8.00.

Ladies' and Children's Suits and Fine Under-Clothing.

These departments embrace everything pertaining to Female Costume, suited to all ages and circumstances. For full particulars see catalogues.

HOSIERY.

Ladies', Misses' and Children's Hosiery from $1.50 a dozen up to the finest goods. All the newest and prettiest designs in Hosiery are represented in our stock in Silk, Cotton and Merino.

"A thing of beauty is a joy forever," and beautiful stockings are now considered an indispensable part of female attire.

GLOVES.

Kid, Silk, Lisle Thread and Merino Gloves of the new colors and shapes, in great variety.

Lord & Taylor's Kid Gloves, 2 buttons, warranted, at $1.00 per pair; price last season, $1.50.

ALSO,

Lace, Cambric, Linen and Silk Handkerchiefs, and beautiful Neckerchiefs, all prices, from 25c. upward, and all kinds Dress Trimmings to match our Goods.

MOURNING DEPARTMENT.

French and English Crapes, Grenadines and Organdies, Bombazines, Henrietta Cloth, $1.00 up; French Cashmeres, 50c. up; Biarritz Cloth, Serges, Australian Crapes and other desirable fabrics at very low prices.

We make up full suits of MOURNING from measure at short notice. Mourning Jet Jewelry and all small articles of Mourning in variety.

DOMESTIC AND HOUSEKEEPING GOODS.

Sheetings, Pillow Cloths, Blankets, Quilts, Comfortables, Flannels, and, in fact, every article required in this line, we always sell at manufacturers' prices.

White Goods and Linens, from the finest White Cambric to the best Linen Damask of all grades and qualities, and at satisfactory prices.

FURS.

Alaska Seal Sacques, from $65.00 up.
Alaska Seal Muffs, from $8.00 up.
Alaska Seal Boas, from $6.00 up.
Mink Muffs and Boas, from $12.50 a set upward.
Silk Fur-Lined Garments, from $35.00.
Alaska Sable Sets, from $7.50.
A good set of Furs as low as $5.00.

☞ Our Goods are all first-class. We make a point to fill all orders exactly and to the interest of purchasers. We guarantee all purchasers to be satisfactory to buyers, and stand ready to remedy all errors. We invite orders, convinced that a first trial will insure us the regular custom hereafter.

All orders for Goods to be accompanied by the money, or where parties wish Goods will be sent by Express C. O. D. Where the remittance is too large, we always return the difference.

Broadway and Twentieth St.,
Grand, Chrystie and Forsyth Sts.,
NEW YORK.

Auburn Courier.

AUBURN, INDIANA, DEC. 6th, 1877.

The Message.

The Message of President Hays was presented to the two Houses of Congress last Monday. We are glad to see that he makes a manly defense of his southern policy. He says that a discontinuance of the army upholding local governments was "no less a constitutional duty and requirement, than it was a needed measure." We are glad to see a Republican acknowledge that an army is out of its sphere of usefulness when used to back a state government, as was the case in the Carpet-bag administration lately in power in the south. That is good Democratic doctrine, a principle which the Democracy have alway advocated, and on that point the President and the Democratic party are in perfect harmoney with the Constitution. It is truly astonishing that a full vindication of this principle should be achieved through a Republican President, after the bitter warfare his party has waged against its recognition, but yet we are thankful, and with a good natured slap upon the back of Hayes we say, "stand firm old man, and we'll back you."

Hon. J. H. Baker does not propose to let Morton C. Hunter of this State act as spokesman for him, Hunter's speech on National Banks, is not endorsed by Mr. Baker. Mr. Baker has the ability, and intends to speak for himself.

Senator Sharon is at his silver mines in Nevada, and to the appeals of his Republican colleagues to come to Washington, he telegraphs: "I have 3000 tons of silver bricks waiting for the Silver Bill to pass, and am engineering a movement in Ophir stock. Senate can go to h——l.

Weamer is mad because a Democratic House discharged several Republican soldiers and put in Democratic soldiers. You must remember, Weamer, that we have disabled Democratic soldiers, and it is not right for one set to hold positions for years to the exclusion of all others.

Allen county is generally more ably represented in the Legislature than any other. Barring a Senator or two, the delegation for several years past has been unusually brilliant. And now Tom Foster is mentioned for Senator. There is nothing like starting out right. Peter Kiser was the early laid foundation.

Sheriff J. C. St. Clair, of DeKalb county, Indiana, gives twenty eight solid nonpareil reasons in the Auburn Courier for the repeal of the Resumption Act. Some Sheriffs in the State give as many as fifty reasons of the same kind for the repeal of the Resumption Act in a single issue of their official organs. The creditors are selling out the debtors. The Lord pity the debtor class.—Valparaiso Messenger.

The Steuben Republican says James Nellis succeeds C. O. Myers, whose term has expired as postmaster, at Kendallville. That was a very short term, as it has been but a very short time since we congratulated C. O. on his accession to a second term. It is not fair to say his term has expired, when his own political friends conspired to oust him, undeservedly, we believe.

The Columbia City Post says: "An analysis of the vote on the repeal of the resumption act in the House shows that of the majority 110 were Democrats and 23 Republicans. Of the minority 00 were Republicans and 30 were Democrats. The Democrats have been found true to their pledges made to the people, that if they were put in power the act should be repealed. The Republicans continue to father the infamous measure.

At last the great debate in the Senate relative to the admission of Kellogg and Butler has ended. They were both sworn in last Saturday morning at 2 o'clock, after an all night session. Conover voted with the democrats several times, but finally wheeled into line and voted for Kellogg and Butler. After all the hue and cry against Butler and the Hamburg massacres, a Republican Senate admits him as a member. It was all for buncombe.

For two or three years past the resumptionists have claimed that the hard times were caused by the failure of crops, and over production. But this year we have had an enormous crop of everything, and the dust and cobwebs have been accumulating in our factories since the panic of '73, and yet times, instead of improving, are pressing down, down, down, until there is a wail anguish throughout the land. Yet the bondholders, the capitalist, the rich man, wants to resume in '79

The Grand Secretary of the Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows, of this State, in his semi-annual report, made to the Grand Lodge, last week says:

"During the term 1,354 brothers, and 175 widowed families have been relieved. The sum of $25,261.59 has been paid for the relief of brothers; $8,308.73 for the relief of widowed familes; $692,06 for educating orphans; $7,563.20 for burying the the dead, and $2,657.23 for other charitable purposes, making the total amount for relief $38,482.81."

High Randall left last week on a visit to Kansas.

Butler Items.

—The Methodist's are holding a series of meetings.

—Stove wood has been in great demand and prices high.

—The roads in this vicinity are standing on end, "peaked and up."

—The health of the community is much improved since the freezing weather has set in.

—Dr. Bennet lost one of his children by dyptheria last week. It has been quite fatal thus far this fall.

—We learn [illegible] Jacob Crise and lady celebrated their 85th wedding day on Saturday of last week.

—Messrs Maxwell & May intend to re-build in the spring on their old site They propose to have a hall in the second story.

—There is much eager enquiry as to the most approved methods of thawing out a frozen pump. Some folks claim they can do it without the use of profanity.

—Mr. Campbell, our fire insurance agent is the busiest man in town. The prompt appearance of the adjusters and their manner of cash settlement proves the utility of a policy.

—Mr. Boots, that prince of restaurateurs, at the depot, has moved into his elegant new hotel. Tom, it is the tidiest place along the L. S. & M. S. R R. He has eight rooms for transient men and can feed hundreds on short notice.

—Sufferers of the fire have arranged themselves about thus. Searight in the old stand. Rev. Sutten, jeweler, now occupies space in the post office. Mr. May, billiards, room under Bellenger's Hall. Mr. Thompson, hotel, Butler House. Smith & Ocher, butchers, have bought out Mr. Hymen and have as fine a stall as the county can produce. Mr. Jones, grocer, has not located as yet—will build if a lease can be procured.

CORUNNA ITEMS.

— There was a wedding party at the M. E. Parsonage on Thanksgiving day. We did not learn the names.

— Dr. Snyder and lady will leave this week for a visit in the east. We wish them a safe and pleasant journey.

— One of our young ladies dressed up in male attire the other day, and was soon in-Klined to return to the "jockey hat and feather."

— The Red Ribbon Club held their social at the Imus House last evening The attendance was quite large and all had a jovial time.

— An old lady by the name of Mrs. Dunfee, went to the woods and slashed up several loads of fuel and some w. t. "bought" about half of it after night.

—Mr. Dawson and Miss Britton, daughter of Amus Britton, were married last week. We wish them a rattlin' good time, now, henceforth and forever.

— W. B. Adams has started a feed and livery stable. Our place now has two institutions of this kind, and if we judge right, the financial matters of either will not pan out very largely.

—The ladies are preparing for an oyster supper, the proceeds of which will be given to the churches. The time for the supper will be announced in the COURIER, and we bespeak for the enterprise a large patronage.

—One family lives up-stairs and one down-stairs. The former occasionally empties a vessel upon the "head" of the latter, and the consequence is "high old times ensue." Now, if the family up-stairs would fall down stairs and the family down-stairs would fall up-stairs, they might stair at each other until both come to their senses.

—There is a great deal of talk in regard to the dangerous condition of the public school building, and a number of scholars, who would attend, are deprived of the winter term from the neglect and lack of enterprise on the part of the citizens of this place. It would cost but a trifle to make the structure firm and substantial, while on the other hand, if it remains in its present condition, it will soon be a mass of ruin and probably a number of lives lost.

—Quince & Brumbach, stock and grain buyers, at this place, arranged to have a large lot of hogs delivered at Waterloo. We learn that about thirty teams loaded with porkers drove to the scales to be weighed, and were refused the use of the "stillards." But weigh they must and weigh they would, and one of the firm went to Auburn and borrowed the weights of the city scales and returning to Waterloo, unlocked the "weighing machine" with a crowbar and marched the rooters on. When they get ahead of Hank, they 'ave to get up in the mornin'.

—A lively temperance meeting was had the other evening, and financial matters were brought down to a fine point. It was ascertained that the R. R. Club had $40 in the treasury and what to do with it they couldn't tell. After several eloquent and elaborate speeches from several "who knew their biz," it was decided to use the money for an organ for the M. E. Church. Along toward the latter part of the performance it was voted, by a large majority, that the R. R. Club furnish $40 and a committee was then appointed to canvass the town and ask the citizens to aid in raising the money for a $80 organ, delivered at the depot, "right side up with care." As far as we know they have all "whacked up" liberally, and the only difficulty now remaining is, who shall be the organist. We mentioned once before in the COURIER that we'd 'ave one or bust.

Newville Items.

—The Bridge is nearly completed.

—G. Hathaway is refitting his property.

—The schools have all commenced in this vicinity.

—Our town is looming up again after lying dormant so long.

—Geo. Gunsenhouser has erected a neat house on College street.

—Our efficient sewing machine agent, J. M. Taylor, has taken up his residence with J. S. Thomas.

—Our merchants got running on the price of oil last week, and it sold from Thursday until Saturday at 10c per gal. One man took pitty on the merchants and carried in three cans at once. The clerk wore a smile that was child-like and bland, and another kind soul stooped down and blew the few bubbles from the measure and says, "It isn't quite full is it?" But since the cold snap the common expression is "Darn that oil."

—Our town is also the residence of that wonderful "Lothargio," correspondent of the Republican. What wonderful wisdom he is possessed of. He stated a few weeks ago that three ladies drove off the bridge. He was mistaken one lady—but two ladies did actually drive on the bridge and off of it like other mortals. But you know that great historians are liable to make events as thrilling as possible. Last week he informed his readers that the postmistress, after attending the county Institute, was suffering from some unknown malady. Now, for fear the public mind will be thrown off its balance, we will state the case. The P. M's, clerk did attend the Institute, and had a slight bilious attack and also had a tooth extracted, and was necessitated from work for nearly two days. But Brutus is an honorable man and just give "Lothargio" a chance and he will tell things just as they are (or nearly so) Just get him a place where something happens worth telling and he'll tell it.

A. R.

Township Trustees Report.

The Trustees of the several Townships named below made settlement with the County Commissioners, last week:

	Rec.	Ex.
FRANKLIN TOWNSHIP.
Township purposes	$ 348 83	$ [illegible]
Road "	127 36	[illegible]
Dog-tax "	164 61	175 48
Common School purposes	2415 86	1560 10
Special School purposes	3110 08	[illegible]
Recapitulation	5570 74	2678 53
NEWVILLE-TP.
Township purposes	$269 08	$ 121 48
Road "	140 15	130 80
Dog-tax "	54 53	54 81
Common School "	2065 52	1823 21
Special School "	1182 17	1108 11
Recapitulation "	3701 21	2530 50
SMITHFIELD-TP
Township purposes	$ 587 41	526 11
Road "	176 37	186 85
Dog-tax "	163 21	156 00
Common School "	3911 46	2218 [illegible]
Special School "	1257 83	1229 27
Recapitulation "	6106 27	[illegible]
STAFFORD-TP
Township purposes	$ 279 69	155 36
Road "	136 94	147 01
Dog-tax "	125 36	51 90
Common School "	1298 29	793 00
Special School "	1195 56	1165 27
Recapitulation "	2999 24	2312 83
CONCORD-TP
Township purposes	$ 366 08	360 42
Road "	340 26	189 72
Dog-tax "	180 78	161 66
Common School "	3607 42	2420 50
Special School "	1438 10	1175 20
Recapituation	5863 06	4158 42
JACKSON-TP
Township purposes	$ 280 29	206 65
Road "	400 25	323 91
Dog-tax "	116 27	66 87
Common School "	3073 87	1942 00
Special School "	1152 64	1141 26
Recapitulation "	5023 34	3680 10
WILMINGTON-TP
Township purposes	$ 804 93	589 48
Road "	752 45	308 68
Dog-tax "	187 31	163 80
Common School "	4266 74	2385 00
Special School "	2905 88	2000 38
Recapitulation "	8821 37	5865 38
R CHLAND-TP
Township purposes	$ 718 57	563 13
Road "	371 67	173 09
Dog-tax "	121 65	70 48
Common School "	3563 44	2278 25
Special School "	2760 00	2641 34
Recapitulation "	7142 23	[illegible]
UNION-TP
Township purposes	$ 965 93	370 26
Road "	202 82	229 20
Dog-tax "	280 28	280 01
Common School "	3679 31	1801 50
Special School "	1865 94	1237 41
Recapitulation "	7232 28	3720 38
TROY-TP
Township purposes	$ 231 47	215 69
Road "	10 31	17 38
Dog-tax "	120 06	42 05
Common School "	1348 52	933 74
Special School "	681 63	143 81
Recapitulation "	2400 99	1372 54
KEYSER TP
Township purposes	$ 316 24	147 74
Road "	222 35	336 85
Dog-tax "	58 69	48 00
Common School "	2286 79	1084 95
Special School "	950 01	858 66
Recapitulation "	3834 08	2476 90
BUTLER-TP.
Township purposes	$ 347 87	251 65
Road "	572 28	283 81
Dog-tax "	75 18	73 10
Common School "	2004 59	1425 11
Special School "	3690 52	1418 18
Recapitulation "	4788 43	3417 87
TOWN OF AUBURN
Common School purposes	$4456 47	2085 78
Special School	9151 17	8765 61

Why is there not a literary organization of some kind formed in this place, at which an evening could be passed pleasantly and profitably. If nothing else, get up a damphino club. It would be very popular here.

Safe—Speedy—Sure.

The rapidity and certainty with which Dr. Morris' Syrup of Tar, Wild Cherry and Horehound cures diseases of the respiratory Organs and its reliability as a remedy for consumption long ago secured for it a foremost rank among medicine of its class. It is in fact the recognised specific for throat and bronchial disorders. It promptly checks a cough, no matter how long standing, and affords great relief in cases of asthama. It should not be mistaken for a mere palliation, since it not only affords immediate relief, but also removes all traces of the malady. It is a specific for croup. Trial size 10 cents. Large sizes 50 cents and $1.00. For sale by F. E. Davenport. Also Agents for Prof. Parker's Pleasant Worm Syrup which never fails. Pleasant to take, and requires no physic. Price 25 cents.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court, in a cause wherein Samuel Swihart is plaintiff, and Samuel Geisinger, et ux. is defendant, requiring me to make the sum of one hundred and seventy-two dollars, 172, and eighty-three, 83, cents, with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 29th, 1877.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House of DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate to-wit:

Town lots numbers seventy-eight, 78, and seventy-nine, 79, in Ensleys second addition to the town of Auburn, Dekalb County and State of Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose at public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
By THOS. D. GROSS, Deputy.
Guy Plum Attorney for plaintiff.
Auburn, Ind. Dec. 5th, 1877. Pf. $7.50

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of an execution to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Levi Houser is plaintiff, and Noah Lang is defendant, requiring me to make the sum of one hundred and fifty-two dollars (152) and twenty cents with interest on said judgment and costs, I will expose at public sale to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 29th, 1877.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House of DeKalb County, Indiana, the rents and profits, for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

A life estate in ten (10) acres of land of a square form in the south west corner of the east half of the south west quarter of section twenty one (21), township thirty-three, 33, north of range twelve, 12, east in DeKalb county Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said judgment, interest and costs, I will, at the same time and place, expose at public sale, the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said judgment, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation and appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
By THOS. D. GROSS, Deputy.
Penfield Attorney for plaintiff.
Auburn, Ind., Dec. 5th Pf. $7.55.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court, in a cause wherein Stiefel & Ochs are plaintiffs and George M. Tappan is defendent, requiring me to make the sum of Two hundred and fifteen[$215] and fifty[50]cents with interest on said judgement and costs, I will expose to the highest bidder on

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 29th, 1877.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M. of said day, at the door of the Court House, in DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years of the following real estate to-wit:

The undivided one seventh (1-7) of one hundred acres off the north part of the southeast quarter of section twelve, 12, township thirty-four, 34, north of range fourteen, 14, east in De Kalb County Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interests and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St CLAIR, Sheriff.
Young & Ralston, Attorneys for plaintiffs
Auburn, Nov, 21st, 1877. Pf. $9.25.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of an execution to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court, in a cause wherein John A. Garver is plaintiff, and Hubbell and Bordner and Solomon Bordner are defendants, requiring me to make the sum of Two Hundred and Twenty Dollars and fifty cents with interest on said judgment and costs I will expose at public sale to the highest bidder, on SATURDAY, DECEMBER 8th, 1877.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m., and 4 o'clock p. m., of said day at the door of the Court House of DeKalb County, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years of the following real estate to-wit;

Lots number eighteen 18] and nineteen [19] in Danford's addition to the town of Butler, DeKalb county, Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for sufficient sum to satisfy said judgment interests and costs, I will at the same time and place, expose at public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said judgment interests and costs.

Sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

JOHN C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
Chas. W. Pitcairn, Att'y. for Plaintiff.
Auburn, Indianan, Nov. 15th, 1877.
Pr. fee $7.50.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of an execution to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court, in a cause wherein Stephen W. Hackley is plaintiff, and Julius Proctor is defendant, requiring me to make the sum of One Hundred and Ninety-Five Dollars and Forty-Five cents with interest on said judgment and costs, I will expose at public sale to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 15th, 1877,

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M. of said day, at the door of the Court House of DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

Southeast quarter of the Northwest quarter of section twelve (12), township thirty-four (34) north of range fourteen]14], east in DeKalb County, Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said judgment, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose at public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said judgment, interest and costs

Sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation and appraisement laws.

J. C. St CLAIR, Sheriff.
Rose & Hartman, Atty's for plaintiff.
Auburn, Indiana, Nov. 20th, 1877.
Pr. fee $7.75.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of an Execution to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein J. M. Combs et al. are plaintiffs, and Burgett & Freeburn, are defendants requiring me to make the sum of Four Hundred and Fourteen Dollars with interest on said judgment and costs I will expose at public sale to the highest bidder on

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 15th, 1877,

Between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m. and 4 o'clock p. m. of said day at the door of the Court House of DeKalb County, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate to-wit:

Lot number seventy-three (73) in Ranew's addition to the town of Butler, DeKalb county, Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said judgment interest and costs, I will at the same time and place, expose at public sale, the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
Best & McClellan, Att'ys for Plaintiff.
Auburn, Indiana, Nov 20th, 1877.
Pr. fee $7.50.

Sheriff Sale.

BY virtue of an execution to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb County Circuit Court in a cause wherein Joseph Boyer et al. are plaintiffs and Joseph Jones et al. are defendants, requiring me to make the sum of Three Hundred and Forty-Four Dollars, and Twelve cents, with interest on said judgment and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 15th, 1877

Between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m. and 4 o'clock p. m. of said day, at the door of the Court House in DeKalb County, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

Lot number fifty-six (56), in the town of Lawrence, (now Sedan,) in DeKalb County, Ind.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said judgment interests and costs, I will at the same time and place, expose the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said judgment, interest and costs.

Sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
McBride, Morlan & Leas, Att'ys for plaintiff,
Auburn, Ind. Nov. 20, 1877.
Pr. fee $7.50.

ROOT & COMPANY

46 and 48 Calhoun Street.

FORT WAYNE, IND.

BLACK SILKS Superb stock, most of them bought at auction sales and will be sold cheap. Prices, 65c, 75c, 85c, $1.00, 1.15, 1.25, 1.30, 1.50 per yards.

CASHMERE SILKS Black silks, brilliant color warranted to wear, $1.50, 1.65, 1.75, 2.00, 2.25, 2.50, 3.00 per yard.

COLORED SILKS All the popular shades for dresses and trimmings at greatly reduced prices, viz: 75c, 85c, 1.00, 1.15, 1.25, 1.40, 1.50 per yard.

CHENEY'S American grosgrain silks, 22 inches wide, in all the new dark shades, warranted to ware and give satisfaction. Price 1.50 per yard.

BLACK CASHMERES Full lines of all our popular numbers. The best value in the city at 60c, 68c, 75c, 85, 90c, 1.00 1.25, per yard.

COLORED CASHMERES In seal brown, navy blue, myrtle green, plum color, drabs, bargains at 60c, 75c, 85.c 1.00 per yard.

BOURETTE CLOTHS Nieguse and matalasse effects. Knickerbockr and snow flake goods for overdresses. Suits, etc., 25c, 35c, 50c, 75c, 1.00, 150 per yard

MOURNING GOODS Large choice stock cashmeres, black merinos, henriettas, Austrailian crepes, bombazines, tamise cloths, baratheas, matalasse, etc.; etc.

COURTAULD'S ENGLISH CREPES 3-4 4-4 5-4 6 4 wide, cut on the bias at 75c, 85c, 1.00, 1-25, 1.50, up to 8.00 per yard Also crepe vails, al sizes, best goods 2.50 to9.00 each.

UNDERWEAR for gentlemen, ladies, and infants wear. All sizes from smallest to the largest. The largest stock and lowest prices in the city.

HARRIS KID GLOVES is the best kid glove sold. In 2, 3, 4, 6 buttons. Prices reduced. Also 2 and 3 button kids at 75c, 1.00, 1.25 and 1.50 per pair.

HOSIERY KID GLOVES for wear, complete stock, newest styles and lowest prices. Balbri gan hosiery for ladies and gentlemen.

CLOAKS, SUITS, SHAWLS, Paris and New York styles. Immense stock to select from. New styles open daily.

CARPETS, this department is the most prosperous in our etablishment, choice styles and low popular prices do the business

HOUSEKEEPING GOODS of all kinds, table linens, and demasks, towels and towelings, quilts, napkins, table covers, piano covers, etc.

Root & Company.

AUSTIN ALWAYS ALIVE!

EUREKA!

Eat Buckwheat Cakes
And Buy Your
BOOTS AND SHOES
AT THE

BOOT UPSIDE DOWN!

And you will always have plenty of money and be happy—because they have $12000.00 worth of goods which they sell

20 Per Cent. CHEAPER

Than any other house in this county.

MEN'S GUM BOOTS $3.50

Save your money by trading at the

BOOT UPSIDE DOWN.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Thomas Richardson is plaintiff and Robert Zacher, et al are defendents require me to make the sum of one hundred and seventy-seven dollars, with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder on

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 15th, 1877.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House in DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

Town lot number seventy-two [72] in Ensley's 2nd addition to the town of Auburn, in DeKalb County and State of Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
By THOS. D. GROSS, Deputy.
A. A. Chapin, atty for pltf.
Nov. 21st, 1877. Pf. $7.75,

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of an Execution to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Sumner K. Randall is plaintiff, and Charles G. Smith and Daniel W. Smith are defendants requiring me to make the sum of Ninety-Eight Dollars and Seventy-Two cents, with interest on said judgment and costs I will expose at public sale to the highest bidder, on SATURDAY, DECEMBER 15th, 1877.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m., and 4 o'clock p. m. at the door of the Court House of DeKalb County Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years of the following real estate, to-wit:

Lot number twenty-five [25] and forty-five [45] in Kuhlman's addition to the town of Auburn, DeKalb county, Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said judgment, interest and costs. I will at the same time and place expose at public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said judgment, interest and costs.

Sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuations appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
By Thos. D. Gross Deputy.
Moody & Huffman, Att'ys. for Plaintiff.
Auburn, Ind., Nov. 21, 1877.
P. fee $7.50

James Anderson is now fully prepared to do all kinds of blacksmithing at his shop on Seventh street. Mr. Anderson makes a speciality of shoeing lame, and interfering horses. Give him a call and you will be satisfied that he does as he says.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit in a cause wherein Joseph C. Silvers is plaintiff and John Rinehart and Christiana Rinehart are defendants requiring me to make the sum of three hundred and thirty nine (339) dollars and fifteen, 15, cents with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder, on SATURDAY, DECEMBER 22d, 1877.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House in DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

The west half of the south half of the south east quarter of section thirty-six, 36, township thirty-five, 35, north of range twelve, 12, east containing forty acres of land more or less in DeKalb County Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
Rose & Hartman, Attorneys for plaintiffs.
Auburn, Nov. 8th, 1877. Pf. $8.00.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a Decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court, in a cause wherein Alonzo Lockwood is plaintiff and Samuel Hickman, et al. are defendants, requiring me to make the sum of Three Hundred and Eighty-Five dollars and Seventy-Four cents, with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, DECEMBER, 8th, 1877.

between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m., and 4 o'clock p. m. of said day, at the door of the Court house of DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

Town lots number twenty-three [23] and twenty-four 24, in Ralston's addition to the town of Auburn, DeKalb county Indiana

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs. I will at the same time and place, expose at public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said judgment, interest and costs.

Sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation and appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff,
THOS. D. GROSS, Dept.
Altenberg & Lockwood Att'ys, for plaintiff.
Aubur Indiana, Nov. 14th, 1877.
Pr. fee $8.50.

OPIUM and Morphine Habit absolutely and speedily cured. Painless; no publicity. Send stamp for particulars. Dr. Carlton, 187 Washington St., Chicago, Ill.

$2500 A YEAR. Agents wanted. Business legitimate. Particulars free. Address J. WORTH & CO. St Louis, Mo.

Auburn Courier.

Local and Miscellaneous.

What We Need.

"A safe depository to lock our savings banks in, officers with telescopes to watch our officials; a judiciary to try some of our judges and juries to indict some of our jurors." The best brand for silver plated ware is the Mereden Bretannia Co., and Rodger Bro's. All ware of the Double Plate and Tripple Plate is stamped with their name.

Embossed Tea Sets, $40.00
Chased Tea Sets, $35 to $64.
Silver, Chased Tea Sets, $100.
Syrup Cups, $5 to $10.
Chased Tilting Water Pitcher $14 to $60
Water Pitchers $7.50 each.
Casters $4 to $30 each.
Butter Dishes, Pickle Casters, Fruit Knives, Fish Knives.

All of the above goods are of the best Tripple Plate. of the Mereden Britannia Co.'s make Ward's Cheap Crockery Store, No. 9 Calhoun Street, Fort Wayne, Ind.

Sign of the big dog.

The tintinnabulation of the doubled-jointed stovepipe is heard in the land, and the Recording Angel has his hands full.

If you have a watch to repair give Abright a call. He will fix it up in good running order at a very small cost.

"Lady Slipper" is the name of a vessel just launched at Boston. She must be intended for the whaling service.

The annual meeting of the Directors of the N. E. Ind. Agricultural Associations will be held at Waterloo on Dec. 17, 1877.

The Methodist prayer meeting to-night, will in consequence of a temperance address, meet promptly at seven o'clock.

One of our professional men fell short a few hundred dollars and his goods were levied on to satisfy the creditors.

Eugene Carter has been visiting his parents here this week. Him and his mother are now paying a visit to friends in Bryan, Ohio.

The members of the different churches met at the Presbyterian church for Thanksgiving services. The attendance was quite large.

The morning freight train going north on the Saginaw road, jumped the track at Waterloo Monday. The switch was not in its proper condition.

If you would be a millionaire loan somebody $100 at 10 per cent., get your interest in advance, as banks do, and you will be worth $1,380,900.

There will be a big trade during the holidays, and the merchant who advertises freely will get the biggest share of it. Just stick a pin there.

All wanting to lay in their winter supplies in dry goods at cash, will have the opportunity now at the New York Store. Go and see for yourself.

The "reversible hat" is the most popular as it can be made to represent two different hats; worn in one way it is a bonnet, in the other a round hat.

When a man returns home at night and kisses his wife with more than ordinary tenderness, she may be pretty certain that he has been in mischief.

How is it that a woman sees so readily that she is loved, but never can find out that she is loved no longer? This is a French question of course.

Custer, the temperance speaker to-night, is a cousin of the gallent Gen. Custer, who was killed by the Indians in the Black Hills country a year ago.

Joe Morlan says that the author of "Leetle Yacup Strauss" has been discovered. Its Charles Francis Adams. We had a glimmering that Charles was guilty.

Messrs. Gregg & Maxfield have re-opened the ball alley at the north end, opposite the Auburn House. They will in connection put a target gun, and a fine line of tobacco, cigars etc.

Frank Rand, the desperado was originally from Fort Wayne. His name was then Charles A. Van Zandt, and he was a good little boy while there, being sent to the penitentiary but once.

The Neoteric Association gave a hop last Wednesday evening. At one time the caller-off said: "Keep your eye on your partner, I'm going to give you something new," and he yelled out, "first four right and left!"

It is cold in the fourth floor back hall bed room of the boarding house these nights, and a young man with a flute isn't so limber and expansive with that instrument as he used to be in the balmy evenings of early June.

Life is but short, but we should do all we can to prolong it. Check a cough or cold at once and use an old reliable remedy such as Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. For sale by F. E. Davenport.

Only 3½ cents per pound is being paid for live hogs.

A telegram passed over the wires last week announcing the death of the little girl named Clara Hood, who made her home at Mr. Benedict's, agent of the Saginaw depot last summer.

The two newly married couples who sojourn up town, aver that there is more caloric to the cubic inch in matrimony, than there is in half a dozen coal stoves. Therefore if you wish to live comfortably and economical during the winter months, get married.

This is an off season for the small boy. He can't eat green fruit and he can't fall through an ice hole; so he hangs around the parlor and tells his sister's young man how much of Anna Maria's chiefest glory is hair and how much is jute switch.

A man's soul may be a perfect æolian harp, pulsing with melody from the breath of every sweet thought, and yet it will grate like a rat-file if he comes in unexpectedly and detects his wife taking music lessons, with the professors chin resting—no matter how carlessly—upon her shoulder.

What an infinite blessing in a family is a cake paddle! It is useful alike to turn up the buckwheats, and the young ones. In a family raised on a reliable cake paddle and a mother with a well developed biceps, you never hear tell of the boys running bogus saving banks, or the girls marrying red-headed dry goods bummers.

Since the introduction of "female postmasters" a girl goes to the window and says: "Is there a letter for Miss Margaret Robinson?" "Yes," says the "female postmaster," "here is one from Austin & Co., our shoe merchants, who says they have the cheapest boots and shoes in the county. We should judge so by the way they are selling them out.

A sad scene took place in the south part of town last week. It was about a girl. One fellow was escorting her home, when another, who thought he had a prior claim, came upon them, and a fight ensued, in which the escort was knocked down. That's hardly according to hoyle, and Pat should be more careful in the future.

Commencing Saturday, December 1, 1877, and until further notice, the switch engine will leave Garrett at 8:00 A. M., and returning, leave Auburn Junction at 9:00 A. M., with a caboose attached for accommodation of travel between Garrett and Auburn. Round trip tickets 25 cents. This is a step in the right direction, and we believe our Auburn neighbors will appreciate it.—Garrett Hearald.

Man is an absolute puzzle; when he has a pair of shoes with a brake in them he is not satisfied until he has a new pair; and when he has a new pair he is not satisfied until he breaks them in. If there is a man in the State who can give an exhaustive opinion on this subject, it is Austin, the boot up side down. He can wait on more customers and do it more pleasantly, and sell goods cheaper than anybody we ever knew. It may pay to call and see him. It will remind you of a circus.

The sluggard may sometimes, perhaps, go to the ant with profit; but we have frequently known property-owners to go to ten-ants and come away no better off than when they went. Ladies who go to Abright's Jewelry Store always find goods as represented, and know if a mistake has been made or an exchange is desired it will be attended to. Mr. Abright is adding largely to his stock for the holidays and if you want to purchase a nice present, give him a call.

The merchants and business men must not expect the daily sales to be so large now as heretofore. Articles do not bring as much money now, and hence the cash drawer does not fill up as formerly. A calico dress can be purchased for sixty cents that one year ago cost double, and this holds good with almost all articles of merchandise. The best way we know of is, to advertise liberally and draw all the trade you possibly can.

We were pleased to meet an old-time friend at Butler the other day—no less a personage than Dr. W. O. Butler, now a minister of the United Brethren church. Gemimi, didn't we open our eyes when he told us that, not that the Doctor was ever a bad boy, quite the reverse, but then he was a jovial, wholesouled fellow—well, why can't a minister be so, too. He is in charge of the U. B. congregation at that place, and we know he will be successful, for we always found him an accomplished, genial, clever gentleman.

Geo. Picker, away out in Kansas, sends us a paper published at Independence, from which we take the following item: "We saw a field a few days ago that had been planted in corn last spring, the soil of which was so rich that the tassels of the corn were forced out before it was knee high, and when shooting time came that process was accomplished with such terrible force that the ears were blown entirely from the stalks. Nothing too wonderful to be accomplished in this great country of ours.

Our druggists all say they have never sold any medicine that gives such universal satisfaction as Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup for Coughs, Colds, etc. It has no equal. Pyice 25 cents. Sold in every drug store.

—Christmas is on the way.

—No school Thanksgiving.

—Jas. McClellan's horse died.

—Mr. Geo. Hazzard is in the city.

—All speak well of the Thanksgiving dinner.

—Three weeks from Tuesday is Christmas.

—The saloons were all closed on Thanksgiving.

—The first sled of the season was in town Saturday.

—O. E. Porter, of Hicksville, was in the city last week.

—The jail birds have a second-class circus every day.

—Our business houses were not closed on Thanksgiving.

—Prosecutor, John Bixler, gave us a call last Saturday.

—A number of our sports went hunting on thanksgiving.

—There is some talk of reviving the Red Ribbon movement.

—Oil cloth carpet at Kiblinger's Hardware, sold very cheap.

—Miss Alice Shaffer has returned from an extended visit to Ohio.

—D. B. Thomas, Esq. and lady, of Garrett, were in town yesterday.

—The invitations for the Hook and Ladder Hop are being circulated liberally.

—J. A. Smith will move back to the Buckeye State. We are sorry to loose Jake.

—Messrs. Carry, Shoff and Snyder, of Angola, were in the city Thanksgiving day.

—A brother-in-law and sister of Jas. Anderson is paying him a visit this week.

—Go to Kiblinger & Co. for your Cross Cut saws and axes, they are warranted.

—Parties from Ft. Wayne have been repairing the gass fixtures in the new jail.

—Mrs. Minnie Kline, of Corunna, was in the city last week, the guest of Mr. Willis.

—The meat market one door south of the Auburn House has closed up business.

—Mr. Gregg will occupy the Maurhaun room and deal in butter, eggs and poultry, so we learn.

—Our saw mills seems to have a stand still. Better roads will improve matters in general.

—Kiblinger & Co. is headquarters for Iron, Steel, and general line of wagon and carriage hardware.

—The Thanksgiving dinner given by our Methodist friends was well patronized, and all enjoyed a good time.

—The Rev. Mr. Rice delivered an excellent discourse at the Presbyterian church on Thanksgiving day.

—Kiblinger's Hardware is headquarters for all kinds of lamps, chimneys and general line of lamp goods.

—The Lake Shore road has been reducing the number of its employees since the strike. 1,000 have been cut off.

Assignment of mortgages should be Recorded.

Articles of agreement should be recorded.

Articles of Association should be recorded.

Leases of land should be recorded.

Mechanic's Liens should be recorded.

Deeds and mortgages of real estate should be recorded within forty-five days from date of execution.

Chattel mortgages should be recorded within ten days from date of execution.

Are your deeds recorded?

Are all old deeds in your posession received from previous owners of your land recorded?

Are all old mortgages recorded?

These are all required to protect your title.

The following items from the Waterloo Press last week.

—Billy Fisher, son-in-law of Esquire Wolf, is reputed to be dangerously ill.

—J. B. Hoover has been suffering from an attack of malarial fever, but is now better.

—The wife of Daniel DeWitt, of Wilmington, died very suddenly last Sunday evening.

—H. H. Keep has been compelled to relinquish the Pleasant Lake school by long continued ill health.

—Sudden Death.—Belle, 14 months old child of Mr. and Mrs. E. Y. Williamson, died Saturday night of convulsions, brought on by fever. Mr. Williamson was absent in Ohio at the time, but came home in response to a telegram. Deaths among the little ones are always sad affairs, and this one was rendered peculiarly so by the circumstances.

Parents cannot be too careful in guarding the health of their babies. Only a good and reliable medicine should be given to them. Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup is known not to contain anything injurious. Price 25 cents. For sale by F. E. Davenport.

Simple yet efficacious is Lawson's Curative in counteracting Rheumatic and Neuralgic diseases. It is easily applied and will not cause any irritation or soreness, but, on the contrary, is deliciously soothing and healing. For sores, cuts, wounds, or wherever there is inflammation, it is a perfect balm. For sale By F. E. Davenport.

Mr. C. S. Stoy, of Butler, has just obtained a patent of a Gasket, which he invented a short time ago. It is bound to prove an important invention, as it is simple, easily constructed, and yet most perfect Gaston in use. A Gaston is the packing between joints of a steam pipe, or any other tubelar arrangement, which has one or more joints not screwed together. This Gaston consists of hard rubber cut into small strips and coiled up to the required size, inside of two flanges, fastened together around the whole at the center. These flanges are made of thick stencil brass, and when the joints are bolted together with this Gaston between, the rubber is protected, and the joint is absolutely air tight and perfect. Mr. Stoy intends introducing it in a short time, and we believe it is going to be a grand success. At least we wish him that much.

Homeopathist.—Judge B. B. Daily, of Delphi, Ind., writes of Dr. W. T. Knapp: "I have known the doctor as a practicing physician in this city for the past five years. He is a gentleman of culture and refinement. I know him to be a skillful physician, for the reason that he effectually cured me of a disease that I have suffered with for years, and which was pronounced incurable by some of the most eminent physicians in the State. Dr. W. T. Knapp has removed to this city and can be found at his office on Seventh street, Ralston's old residence.

Grand Concert.

The musical Convention now in session in this place under the direction of Messrs. Straub and Reed, is progressing finely and will close Friday evening Dec. 14th, with a grand Concert in the spacious room of the Presbyterian church. The best musical talent of our community is represented in the convention, and a high order of music is in rehearsal. Our citizens may expect an unusual fine entertainment. Make your arrangements to attend the Concert.

Temperance Address.

John W. Custer of Michigan, who comes highly and well recommended as an able, popular, and logical temperance speaker, will address the people of this place at the M. E. church to-night at 7:45. We hope all who have the good of the cause at heart will attend, and give us their aid in endeavoring to revive the good work of last spring, which has for some time been at so low an ebb. No admittance fee.

W. H. Dills, Pres't.
Mrs. W. H. Rakestraw, Sec'y.

Gen Reub Williams of warsaw, is manager of the Morton Monument Association for the Thirteenth District. He has appointed the following gentlemen as Associate managers.

Elkhart—Gen. M. S. Haskall.
Noble—Isaac Mendenhall.
Lagrange—Dr. J. R. Rerrick.
DeKalb—George W. Gordon.
Marshall—Major Kendall.
Steuben—Lawrance Gates.
Kosciusko—Capt. A. S. Miller.

Don't forget that the holidays will soon be here, and that you are expected to give something to those dear to your heart a present. To make a fine selection go to Abright's, where a splendid stock of toys, jewelry, &c., can be seen and bought at very low prices.

Mr. McDowell, Trustee of Richland township, desires to enter a denial of the rumor given in the Courier a few days ago, that he declined to employ the two female teachers chosen by the people.

Two doses of Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup completely cured my child of a severe case of croupe. I have used a great many different cough medicines, but have never found any so efficient as Dr. Marshall's. J. W. Spellman, Elkhart, Ind. Sold in every drug store.

Great Reduction.

Flour at Eagle Mills at $1.50 per sack Corn Meal, 30c. per sack. Buckwheat, 85c. per sack. Chop Feed from $1.00 to $1.25 per cwt. All goods delivered in town.

The Warsaw Republican says that Hon. Wm. Williams is to deliver a lecture in that place to-morrow night, on the supject "What we have Seen and Things as they are." If Billy can't make an interesting lecture on that subject nobody can.

The M. E. Social will be entertained by Mrs. Rush, Friday afternoon, Dec. 6th. We wish to see a great turn out. A good time anticipated. Mite in the evening.

We were pleased to meet Angola's most handsome representative, the accomplished Miss Morse, at the dance here last week.

—That good old paper, the Logansport Pharos, has changed hands.—Messrs. Todisman & Loutham being now at the helm

W. T. KNAPP, M. D.
Formerly of Chicago, Ill.,
HOMEOPTHIC PHYSICIAN,
AUBURN, INDIANA.
Office at Residence, Ralston Property, Seventh Street.
Special attention given to
CHRONIC DISEASES
AND
DISEASES OF CHILDREN.
Calls promptly attended, day or night, city or country. Consultation in German or English.

WHAT IS THE LATEST?
CUSTOME MADE
Artic Coats, Ulsters, Broadway OverCoats, Winter Suits, Diagonal Coats And Vests.
SAM, PETE & MAX.
FORT WAYNE.

LOOK AT THIS!
Never has our Millinery Department been so full and com! and
PRICES LOWER.
Than has ever been known.
HATS. HATS.
Ladies and childrens untrimmed hats for 25c. 50c. 75c. and $1.00
" " well trimmed hats for 50c. 75c, and $1.00 and upward
Ladies silk ties 15c, 20c, 25c, and 50c
FUR AND FEATHER TRIMMINGS,
A good assortment. Ball ahd Silk Fringes, all prices.
FURS. FURS.
Our line of Furs has never been better. Children's sets 50c, 75c, and upward. Ladies Mink, full set 7, 12, and $18. Ladies Bever, sets 2, 2 50, $3 per set
CLOAKS.
A new lot of Ladies Cloaks just received for 4 50, 5, 6, and $7, and as high as $20
HAW K AND SKIRTS
A find assortment. Ladies and Children Unddrwear 35c, 40c, and 50 cents
NOTIONS.
Our Notion department is full. Gloves, hose, buttons, Misses knit sacques and hoods, etc.
DRESS GOODS DEPARTMENT.
Waterproof all styles 75c, 1 00, $1 25, per yard, Calico 5c, Gingham the best 10c, black alpacca 20c, 25c, 40c, and upward.
Germantown and Zephyrs Yarns all shades. Mottos and splits 2 to 5 cents.
H. H. STAMETS.

DAVENPORT THE DRUGGIST
Would call the attention of the public to his splendid stock of
PURE DRUGS AND MEDICINES!
Which have been selected with especial reflerence to the wants of this locality, and warranted fresh and genuine. Also to his fine stock of
HAIR OILS AND PERFUMERY.
The finest in the county. He also keeps a full stock of
Toilet Soaps, Face Powders, Combs, Brushes, Sponges, etc. Also Trusses and Supporters, in large varieties and a full Stock of DRUGGIST'S SUNDRIES.
SCHOOL BOOKS WALL PAPER AND CURTAINS!
The largest and most complete stock in Northern Indiana. Be sure to call on
DAVENPORT.
His stock is very complete and PRICES WAY DOWN. Also a full line of.
GOLD PENS, ALBUMS, POCKET BOOKS, BLANK BOOKS, INK and STATIONERY.
Be sure and call on
DAVENPORT, THE DRUGGIST,
AUBURN, IND.

$200.000.
GREATEST In order to clear out our stock of very superior Gold-plated Jewelry valued at over $200,000, we will send as below, 20 Pieces, all warranted Gold-plated for $1.00. 1 pair Gold Stone Sleeve Buttons; 1 pair Engraved Sleeve Buttons; 1 set Pointed Studs; 1 set Amethyst Studs; 1 Wedding Ring; 1 Engraved Band Finger Ring; 1 Amethyst Stone Ring, Inlaid with Gold; 1 Elegant Ring, marked "Friendship;" BARGAIN 1 Amethyst Stone Scarf Pin, Inlaid with Gold; 1 Silvered Hat Pin; 1 set Ladies' Jet and Gold Pin and Drops; 1 Misses' set Jet and Gold; 1 Collar Stud; 1 set Handsome Rosebud Ear Drops; 1 Gents' Elegant Lake George Diamond Stud; 1 Cardinal Red Bead Necklace; 1 pair Ladies Amethyst Stone Ear Drops, Inlaid with Gold; 1 Ladies' Ornamented Jet Brooch; 1 Fancy EVER Scarf Ring and Elegant Watch Chain. Take your choice, the entire lot of 20 pieces, sent Post-paid for $1.00 or any 8 pieces you choose for 50 cents. Now is the time to make money. These can easily be retailed at $10.00. CLUB PREMIUM. To any OFFERED one ordering 12 Lots at $1.00 each, we will present Free, an Open Face Coin Silver Watch as Premium. WATCH AND JEWELRY CIRCULAR FREE.
NOTICES OF THE PRESS.
Our cotemporary, the Boston Globe, speaks very highly of both advertiser and goods as being honorable in his dealings, and reliable in his goods, a commendation we heartily endorse.—St. Louis Dispatch, December 7, 1876.
The house is a thoroughly reliable one in every respect.—Boston Globe, Oct. 28, 1876.
His reputation for honesty, fair dealing, and liberality is unequaled by any advertiser in this city.—N. Y. Day Book, December 16, 1876.
Advertises more and sells cheaper than any man in New York.—Herald, April 12, 1877.
F. STOCKMAN, 27 Bond Street, New York.

POETIC POSIES.

Selected from the December Magazines.

THE WAY.

First, and [illegible] Truth, and then,
  Although she strays
From beaten paths of men
  To sacred ways,
Her leading follow straight,
  And bide thy fate;
And, whether smiles or scorn
  Thy passing greet,
Or find'st thou flower or thorn
  Beneath thy feet,
[illegible] nor fear thy fate
  At heaven's gate.
—M. E. Sherwood, in Scribner

DICKENS.

As one who flings large hospitable doors
  Wide to a world of [illegible] when he has seen
  [illegible] hurrying onward with their faces [illegible]
And covertly close his vacant chamber-doors,
[illegible]
  Humanity's eager passions, blithe or sad,
  Each revelling, and, however strangely clad,
Are still the old rascals, bigots, fools and bores!
Ah, what a [illegible] they prolong
  Of avarice, hatred, hope, revenge, despair!
[illegible] from the clutch of wrong!
  How pleasure and ease take hands with toil and care!
  While humor, that wild harlequin, here and there,
Dashes in spangled somersaults through the throng!
—Edgar Fawcett, in Scribner.

NATURE AND ART.

Art is the child of Nature, yes,
Her darling child, in whom we trace
The features of the mother's face,
Her aspect and her attitude,
All her majestic loveliness
Chastened and softened and subdued
Into a more attractive grace,
And, with a human sense imbued.
He is the greatest artist, then,
Whether of pencil or of pen,
Who follows Nature. Never man,
As artist or as artisan,
Pursuing his own fantasies,
Can touch the human heart, or please,
Or satisfy our nobler needs,
As he who sets his willing feet
In Nature's foot-prints, light and fleet,
And follows fearless where she leads.
—Longfellow's "Keramos," in Harper's Magazine.

TWILIGHT.

After the French of Victor Hugo.

Child, go and pray—for see! the night is here!
Through cloudy rifts the golden lights appear;
The hills' faint outline trembles in the mist;
Scarcely is heard a distant chariot—list!
The world's at rest; the tree beside the way
Gives to the evening wind the dust of day.

Twilight unlocks the hiding-place of stars;
They gleam and glow behind night's shadowy bars.
The fringe of carmine narrows in the west,
The moonlit water lies in shining rest;
Furrow and foot-path melt and disappear;
The anxious traveler doubts the far and near.

It is the hour when angels stoop to earth
To bless our babes amid our careless mirth.
The little ones with eyes upraised in prayer,
With tiny, folded hands and white feet bare,
Ask at this twilight hour a blessing dear
Of Him who loves his little ones to hear.

Then, while they sleep, a cloud of golden dreams,
Born in the calm of day's declining beams,
Waiting in shadow till the hour of night,
Fly to each couch and scatter visions bright;
As joyous bees seek honey-laden flowers,
Dreams hover near in slumber's peaceful hours.

O cradled sleep! O prayers of childhood blest!
O baby-voice, speaking a loving breast!
The happy prayer the darkness maketh light,
Attuned to song the solemn sounds of night,
As 'neath his wing the birdie hides his head,
Thou shelterest by thy prayer the cradle-bed.
—Florence A. Kendrick, in Appletons'.

THE GOLDEN AGE.

I know our nation's vernal bloom is over,
Vanished the springtide's dear, delicious days,
When simple toil amid the fragrant clover,
With youth, and help, and hope, gave God the praise,
Ah! shall we walk again in virtue's ways?

They say the storm has ceased its angry motion,
And that Alcyone is sitting by the sea,
Her bird auspicious brooding on the ocean;
That Peace is coming back to you and me;
But, I ask you, are your people free?

They tell me Ceres pours her horn of plenty,
That barns are brimmed with heavy sheaves of gold,
The sower sows his sack—the reaper gathers twenty,
The marvels of our wealth tongue hath not told;
But have we now the rights we had of old?

They say our white-winged Commerce breaks the barrier
Of earth's remotest limits for her spoil,
And, laden like a bee, far-flying carrier,
Brings tribute back of wine and spice and oil;
But brings she back content with all her toil?

Tell me, O Messenger, absolved from error!
Shall we e'er see again the days of old,
When sovereignty was swayed in love, not terror,
Duty was strong, and honest worth was bold,
And mighty Truth prevailed, not sordid gold?
—William Preston Johnston, in Galaxy.

ANTICIPATION.

Slanting across the fields of snow,
The westering sun makes haste to go;
This day, I know, is tried and sweet,
To-morrow tires my lagging feet.

With many a pause of happy rest
I've journeyed with To-Day, my guest;
His stranger brother cannot be,
Methinks, as goodly company—

Holding in his mysterious hand
Gifts that will bless or blight my land!
Tarry yet longer, fair To-Day,
That losing step an hour delay.

What songs have told my spirit's cheer,
What sunlight warmed the glowing year,
What dear companions round me hung,
While life, and love, and hope were young!

These with to-morrow fade apace,
Like bloom from a beloved face;
And, trusting half, yet half with dread,
I question, "What shall be instead?"

The sun drops deeper, night is chill;
The oracles I seek are still;
Yon herald star which glitters low
Seems beckoning on the way I go.

To-morrow? Ah, that door doth ope
A new celestial path to Hope,
More than I ask or dream must be,
In God's to-morrow kept for me!
—Atlantic Monthly.

PALISSY.

Who is it in the suburbs here,
This Potter, working with such cheer,
In this mean house, this mean attire,
His manly features bronzed with fire,
Whose figulines and rustic wares
Scarce find him bread from day to day?
This madman, as the people say,
Who breaks his tables and his chairs
To feed his furnace fires, nor cares
Who goes unfed if they are fed,
Nor who may live if they are dead?
This alchemist with hollow cheeks,
And sunken, searching eyes, who seeks,
By mingled earths and ores combined
With potency of fire, to find
Some new enamel hard and bright,
His dream, his passion, his delight?

O Palissy! within thy breast
Burned the hot fever of unrest;
Thine was the prophet's vision, thine
The exultation, the divine
Insanity of noble minds,
That never falters nor abates,
But labors and endures and waits,
Till all that it foresees, it finds,
Or what it cannot find, creates!

Turn, turn, my wheel! This earthen jar
A touch can make, a touch can mar;
  And shall it to the Potter say,
What makest thou? Thou hast no hand?
As men who think to understand
A world by their Creator planned,
  Who wiser is than they.
—Longfellow's "Keramos," in Harper's Magazine

MY MOTHER'S OBJECTIONS.

I.

"There is no use in talking; nothing on earth will ever induce me to give my consent."

It was my mother who spoke, and I sat silent, vainly endeavoring to find some argument which should induce her to change her mind. Unless she did so, the case, I knew, was hopeless, for Helen, proud, beautiful darling that she was, would never marry a man whose family refused to sanction the match. My mother was the best woman in the world, too good for the world, I sometimes thought—too good, at least, for the world in which I lived, and to which I had recently transplanted her from the quiet New England village in which she had lived all her married life. If you know anything of the rigid spirit which prevails in those quiet spots of New England where a stern Puritanism rides rough-shod over all natural tastes and instincts, you can, perhaps, appreciate the force of my mother's objections to my betrothed, Helen Leighton; otherwise, you must take my word for their cogency.

"She dances; she gambles; she laughs in church."

These were the grounds on which my mother's objections were based. I had argued them with her, point by point, many a time, driving her from them one by one, forcing her to acknowledge their untenability. So far so good; but, as a bit of whalebone springs back when the pressure upon it is relaxed, just so surely did her mind spring back to the original point:

"She gambles; she dances; she laughs in church."

Dance? of course she danced, like a wave of the sea or a bubble of the air. Thanks to my Puritanical training, I had no opportunity of learning the art until my muscles had lost their youthful flexibility. Nevertheless, it was my delight to watch her graceful figure and to catch the bright glances which from time to time she sent me as she floated past.

Gamble? She played cards, as everybody does, which hardly constitutes gambling; but this was a distinction which my mother would by no means allow.

"Cards are cards," was her line of argument. "It may be a shade worse to play for money, but, in either case, the principle is the same."

As for her laughing in church, who would not have laughed, under the circumstances, I should like to know? You see, her brother, Harry Leighton, was gifted with a naturalist's tastes and instincts. Bugs and beetles, worms and larvæ, and all hideous flying and creeping things, were to him types of beauty in its divinest essence. Now, on that soft August afternoon, as Helen and Harry were crossing one of our city parks on their way to church, his eye fell upon a specimen of the rare Dorcas brevis, which, by some miraculous means, had strayed thither. How was it possible for him to resist capturing such a prize? As he had come out unprovided with the collector's supply of boxes, murderous drugs, entomological pins, and such like, an empty envelope served to confine it, and he had thrust it into his pocket. Unluckily, the envelope was not sealed; the beetle, by no means pleased with its incarceration, made its escape, and, being of an investigating turn of mind, proceeded to burrow under Harry's garments. It is in vain to endeavor to preserve a calm and decorous demeanor, with mysterious claws burying themselves in your skin in inaccessible places. When to this is added the fear of injuring a rare and valuable specimen in your frantic attempts at recapture, and, also the dread of attracting the attention of clergyman and congregation, Harry Leighton's state of mind may be imagined. As for Helen, at first she had gazed upon her brother's wild contortions and grimaces with a mild wonder and alarm. The alarm was relieved by his whispered explanation of the true state of the case, profusely illustrated by frantic but cautious grabs at the cause of his woes. Now, I ask, could any mortal maiden resist this, especially in a place where to laugh was to feel herself forever disgraced? The very sense of horror which she felt at the idea of her own untimely levity only hastened the explosion. A little half-smothered rivules of laughter trickled out; shame and fright only made matters worse; the laughter became uncontrollable, hysterical, until the welcome sound of "Let us pray!" enabled her to hide her blushing, agonized face.

Now I had again and again explained the circumstances to my mother, but it was all in vain.

"If she had had a proper sense of the solemnity of the place, she never would have been tempted to laugh," was all that she would say, adding, as her ultimatum, "If ever you find me gambling, dancing, and laughing in church, I will give my consent; but, until then, it is quite useless to ask me."

And, so saying, my mother terminated the argument by sweeping from the room, leaving me to chew the cud of sweet and bitter reflections. How my mother's objections were to be answered, I confess that I could not see; that she would ever change her mind of her own accord, I knew her too well to imagine. Could I inveigle her into a faro-bank under pretext of a prayer-meeting, engage her attention, and then bet in her name, persuading her afterward that the act was the effect of her own volition? Hardly feasible; and, even if practicable, how were the other miracles to be accomplished? My mother dancing! my mother laughing in church! Unless she joined the Shakers, I could not see how the first was to be effected. As for the last, monkeys might perch on sounding-boards and angle for clergymen's wigs, stray dogs might run amuck up and down the aisles, with sexton and Sunday-school children in full cry after them, bats might flap and clergymen blunder, but I was quite sure that never a muscle of my mother's face would move.

With a sigh I gave up the problem at last, and sallied forth, all unconscious that fate was working for me in a case where I was utterly helpless.

II.

It had rained for a week—a driving, easterly storm, with occasional interludes of heavy, foggy weather, low, gray skies, and a damp, raw air. My mother's chest being weak, she was debarred from all out-door exercises during its continuance, and, sooth to say, the time began to hang very heavily upon her hands. Reading is all very well for a time, but, when you have all your life been a bustling notable housekeeper, finding your highest pleasure in new and recondite recipes, in scrupulous and frequent cleansings and purifyings of your domicile from cellar to garret, your literary tastes are apt to rust. In a city boarding-house there is little outlet for energy in a [illegible]wifely direction. Therefore it was no wonder that my mother soon began to stray about the parlors with a forlorn and hopeless expression, wistfully watching the various groups, each deep in the mysteries of cassino, Sancho Pedro, or such like unwholesome diversion; for cards just then happened to be a mania with all of us.

Suddenly, as I watched her on that especial evening, I saw her whole face light up as she paused beside a group of four who were collected around a small stand. Naturally I strained my eyes and ears to learn what could have produced that look of placid and profound satisfaction; but my observations were in vain, until one of this group, rising with an apology to the rest, politely offered his chair to my mother. He, being a comparative stranger among us, knew nothing of her peculiar ideas, which were no secret to the rest of the house. I saw the look of laughing dismay exchanged among those who were left; then, to my unbounded amazement, I saw my mother subside into the offered chair. In another instant I understood it.

"Dominoes!" I heard her say, in a tone of satisfaction. "I have never played them since I was a child, but I was very fond of them then. You seem to be playing some new game of which I do not know the rules; but, if you will bear with my ignorance for a while, I make no doubt that I shall learn them soon."

The others, with, I fancied, a slight hesitancy, began to instruct her in the laws of the game. Soon I heard terms flying freely—terms curiously familiar, but strange and uncanny as proceeding from my mother's lips.

A "flush," a "pair," a "straight flush"—what could it all mean?

"I chip!" cried my mother's voice, in tones of wild excitement; but—

"Too late!" cries another voice. "How many counters have you?"

"Twenty-five," replies my mother, blandly and unsuspiciously.

Instantly a 25-cent stamp is laid upon the table before her. She starts back, eying it with wild dismay. A horrible suspicion creeps across her mind, and, looking around the table, she gasps, faintly:

"What—what have I been playing!"

Amid a shout of laughter the answer reaches her, brokenly, faintly, but, alas! only too intelligibly:

"Playing? Why, 'penny ante,' to be sure. The cards were all in use, so we have been playing poker with dominoes by way of variety."

I must pass lightly over the tableau which followed, or my tale will be too long; over my mother's apologies, remorse, tearful explanations; over her indignant refusal of the money; her final acceptance of it under protest and its subsequent dedication to the cause of missions. All this I must leave to your imagination, and pass to the next scene.

III.

Georgie had succeeded at last in her efforts at persuasion. Georgie Lenox was my cousin, and my mother's favorite niece. She was married now—married a year ago to Rudolf Aronach, one of the best fellows in the world, and they had taken up their abode in Hoboken, that most German of American towns. It was to the celebration of their wedding anniversary that my mother had, after much hesitation, consented to go.

"It is to be a very quiet dinner," Georgie had said; "but Rudolf has so many friends who must be invited, that we have decided to give it at the German Club instead of our own house, which is much too small."

"I am afraid it will be a very gay and worldly affair," sighed my mother; "but Georgie makes such a point of it that, for her sake, I suppose I must go. But remember, Frederick, if I see any signs of dancing, I leave at once, for that I really can not countenance by my presence. There is a point beyond which I will not go."

Of course I satisfied her with a cheerful "All right," and she made her preparations with a sort of resigned equanimity edifying to behold.

My mother was a handsome woman still, in spite of her fifty years, with a tall, finely molded figure, delicate, clear-cut features, unblurred yet by time's ruthless touch, soft blue eyes, and heaps upon heaps of snow-white hair which glistened like spun silk above her low, broad forehead. I was very proud of her as I looked at her that evening in her sweeping dress of black velvet, finished at throat and wrists with soft falls of creamy lace. Dress and laces had been my present to her upon her last birthday, and she had accepted them with a mild rebuke of my extravagance, and wore them with an air of quiet protest, blended with subdued pride, which was charming.

Georgie's fiction of the "quiet dinner" had hardly imposed upon my mother, I think. Nevertheless, I felt her cling closely to my arm, with a stifled groan, as we entered the one long room which then composed the entire second floor of the German Club-house, with its polished floor and brilliant lights, and the little curtained stage at the upper end on which her eye fell first. There was no danger to be apprehended from that quarter, however, as she soon found; but scarcely less alarming, from her point of view, was the array of many-colored glasses which clustered beside each plate all the way down the three long tables.

"What does it mean?" she murmured faintly. "Will they make me drink wine? Oh, Frederick, take me home."

I should not have done so in any case, but it was already too late, for Georgie had caught sight of us, and hastened up, followed by one Herr Muller, a German of the stout, jolly, rubicund type, whom she introduced to my mother as the son of a German Protestant minister. My mother's face partially lost its look of bewildered dismay at this item of news, and she allowed him to lead her to her place without further objection.

I am afraid that at this point my attention wandered slightly from my mother, for Helen was there, the darling, more beautiful than ever in her draperies of pale blue and paler salmon, with tea-roses and forget-me-nots nestling among the ripples of her bonny brown hair; with her pure proud, face, and her clear, steadfast brown eyes, and the gentle, tranquil grace which, of all her charms, was the one which most attracted me.

Of course Helen knew nothing of the state of affairs between my mother and me. She would have broken off our engagement in an instant, even at the risk of breaking her own heart, had the faintest suspicion of it entered her mind. Fortunately my mother and she were not likely to be brought into close contact for the present. Even had they been, Helen would probably account for my mother's indifference on the ground of her being still ignorant of our engagement, which was an affair of only a month's standing. As for me, I thought it best to let things rest as they were until the way should be cleared, of which my mother's involuntary gambling had already given me good hope.

The dinner was a thoroughly German affair. Servants, dishes, conversation, music, all were German of the purest type. It was a little slice cut out of the very heart of Vaterland, and set down bodily in the midst of an American town. My mother did not understand a word of German, but Herr Muller spoke excellent English, and I was glad to see that my mother was gradually becoming more and more absorbed in the conversation. When she found that her refusal to take wine provoked only a very mild surprise and remonstrance, her last scruple melted away, and I was scarcely surprised to see her wildly waving her empty glass, and chanting with the rest the musical "Hoch," which is the German version of our unmelodious cheer. To be sure, the toast which she elected thus to honor was, "To the health of our American friends now present," but, as no doubt of the propriety of her proceeding crossed her mind, it would have been a pity to enlighten her.

Now there was a stir around the table. The band, which had hitherto been silent, struck up a march-like air. Each gentleman offered his arm to his partner and we moved around the room in a dignified promenade, while the waiters entered to clear the tables and push them out of the way. Round and round we went, my mother beaming with mild enjoyment as she leaned upon her partner's arm. Suddenly the measure changes; hand is linked in hand, and the long line winds and waves, weaving itself in and out in graceful undulations. For an instant my mother, in confusion and bewilderment, yields to the impulse. Then a dreadful suspicion breaks upon her mind, and she turns to her partner with the frenzied question:

"What is it? What are we doing?"

"Doing, madam?" repeats Herr Muller, looking bland but slightly puzzled. "We are dancing the Polonaise, to be sure. Do not be troubled; you do perfectly well, I assure you."

But my mother waits for no further encouragement. With a gasp she wrests her hand quickly from the grasp upon it, and mechanically retaining her hold upon her partner, she whirls him, too, out of the ranks, and drops, a limp, collapsed heap, upon the nearest chair. Helen and I disengage ourselves from the line and hasten up to her. But consolation is in vain. She only raises her tearful eyes to mine and murmurs,

"Frederick, your mother will disgrace both you and herself in her old age: First gambling, and now dancing. Oh, Frederick, send me back to Neponsuc before I sink further!" And covering her face with her hands she bursts into helpless tears, while her bewildered partner looks on, unable to form the slightest conjecture as to the meaning of this remarkable scene.

Obviously there was but one thing to be done, and that I do, by hastily consigning Helen to Herr Muller's charge, and leading my mother out of the room as quickly and as quietly as possible.

IV.

It is Sunday morning—the Sunday after my mother's little escapade at the German Club. The church bells are filling the air with music, church-goers throng the streets, and still my mother does not come. I have been waiting in the hall for fifteen minutes, and already the bell has ceased chiming and begun to toll. I grow uneasy at last, and am half way up the stairs, when I meet her coming down. What has detained her? How can I tell? A string has come off, or a button would not fasten, or something of that sort. What do I know of the various but trifling accidents of a woman's toilet? She was ready at last, however; had caught up prayer-book and muff, and hastened down to join me.

The service had begun as we entered the church which my mother and I attended. Episcopalianism was not her favorite form of worship, but she had consented to go with me to that church, fearing, I suppose, that otherwise I would not go at all. Need I say that my choice had been decided by the fact that Helen was a member (and a most devout one) of that church? I considered myself fortunate in having been able to secure a pew exactly in front of that which her family occupied, and thither we directed our steps. It was situated well up in the middle aisle, and, as we entered later than our wont, my mother, who prided herself upon her punctuality, was somewhat flustered by the time we reached it.

"Dearly beloved brethren, the Scripture moveth us," repeated the clergyman, in his full, rich tones.

"Captain Jinks of the Horse Marines;
I give my horse good corn and beans."

Where on earth did it come from? Not words, you understand, only a tinkle of jig-a-jig-jig-jig, jig-a-jig-jig, curiously near and distinct, and curiously, horribly inappropriate to the occasion. I looked about in doubt and amaze; so did everybody else. Had a lunatic strayed into church that clear November morning, or— Suddenly my gaze fell upon my mother's face—such a scarlet, agonized face as it was—as her trembling fingers fumbled nervously but vainly with the clasp of the prayer-book which she held. My eyes followed hers downward, and the mystery was solved. Instead of a prayer-book, she had in her haste caught up a musical photograph album, which was of precisely the same size and shape, never discovering the difference until the fiendish thing began to rattle out its rollicking tune at this horribly inopportune time:

"Captain Jinks, of the Horse Marines."

"We have erred and strayed from Thy ways as lost sheep."

It was all a confused Babel of sounds. People stared, giggled, and wondered. My mother in wrath, and agony, struggled fiercely with her infernal machine, but to no end. The stopping part was out of order; the playing part was in horribly perfect condition. She threw it into the prayer-book rack, and the contact with the hard wood sent forth the sounds with redoubled distinctness. She hid it in her muff, but no amount of fur would muffle it. She threw it upon the seat behind her, where it rattled away as merrily as ever. She was just about to sit upon it, when a hand was extended from the pew behind us—a slender, delicate hand, faultlessly gloved in pale silver-gray. The hand closed over the box, and in another instant we heard the sounds growing fainter and fainter, as Helen sailed down the broad aisle, leaving a trail of melody behind her as she passed. Just as, with a click, the air changed to "Champagne Charley," the door closed behind them, and only the clergyman's voice broke the stillness which settled over the church.

I looked at my mother. The expression of agony upon her face faded slowly to a look of intense relief. She turned her eyes upon me, bent toward me to whisper something, and—broke into a perfectly audible laugh! It was a laugh of sheer nervousness, without a particle of mirth in it, but a laugh nevertheless, positive and uncontrollable. Laugh she must, and laugh she did until her face grew scarlet and the tears poured down her cheeks, and she was fain to hide her diminished head behind her muff—laughed until, in sheer despair, she was obliged to fairly flee from the church just as the congregation rose for the "Te Deum."

V.

My mother and I sat for a long time without speaking, on that memorable Sunday evening. She was calm and composed now, though the traces of recent emotion still lingered upon her face. I would not be the first to broach one subject, the only one upon which I felt inclined to talk just then; so we sat silent in the dusky twilight, watching the leaping violet flames which quivered and flickered above the bed of glowing coals.

"Frederick," said my mother at last.

"Yes, mother."

"Your Helen is a brave girl."

"I am glad that you think so, mother."

"Do you think," said my mother, slowly, "that she did it because I am your mother, or because—"

"I think," said I, quickly, "that if anything would have prevented her doing it, it would have been the fact that you are my mother."

"And that you were present," said my mother, nodding her head sagaciously. "I thought so. Frederick, we had a conversation two weeks ago—"

"On dancing, gambling and laughing in church," I suggested, as my mother paused.

"Frederick," said my mother, severely, "will you be kind enough to let that subject drop? Because I was a cantankerous idiot and a self-opinionated bigot, will you leave me no place for repentance? I have had new views of the fallibility of human nature since then, and I suppose I may take a woman's privilege of changing my mind."

"By all means," I said, laughing, "especially as you have fulfilled the conditions so admirably."—Harper's Magazine.

Incapable Russian Generals.

The Russian Generals in Bulgaria are mainly very old men, who studied the art of war forty or even fifty years ago. They are described by a correspondent of the Daily News as men who never look in a book and who rarely read a newspaper, and appear to be utterly oblivious to the march of progress, and of science especially, in the military art. Their whole lives may be said to have been passed in but one occupation; their whole minds, whatever they ever had, concentrated on one object, and that the most trivial to which the human mind can descend—card playing. They have done nothing else, thought of nothing else, for years. Their minds have rusted until they are as dull, as heavy, and as incapable of receiving new impressions as the veriest clodhopper's. Called from their card-tables by the trumpet of war, they rise, rub their eyes, look round them completely bewildered, and as thoroughly out of the current of modern war as if they had been asleep for forty years. Not even Rip Van Winkle, with his rusty gun dropping to pieces after his long sleep, was more bewildered and lost than the majority of these poor old Generals suddenly thrown into the campaign at the head of their brigades, divisions, and corps. It may be asked why the Emperor does not send these old dotards back to their card-tables, and replace them by younger men, and men of talent, of which, after all, the Russian army is not destitute. The soft heart of the Emperor has much to do in retaining these old incapables in their positions. He cannot bear the idea of depriving an old public servant of his position and thus disgracing him, and so unconsciously prefers to sacrifice the lives of thousands of brave fellows to this misplaced feeling of kindness.

He Pleaded Guilty.

An amusing scene occurred at the recent arraignment of prisoners at the Criminal Court. A colored man stoutly pleaded not guilty to a charge of burglary, and, as he had no money, Judge Jones beckoned toward one of the young and rising counselors present and remarked:

"Mr. ——, I appoint you to defend the prisoner."

The colored burglar rolled his eyes with horror when he heard the name of the hero of a hundred convictions mentioned in connection with his case, and eagerly cried:

"No, Jej, no. I guess not. I pleads guilty ef you don't make it more'n two years in de pen."

The prisoner was sentenced accordingly, and the young lawyer tallied one more lost case.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Anti-Horse-Thief Association has 361 lodges and 8,000 members in Missouri, Iowa and Illinois. It does not encourage lynching, although that course is permitted in places where the officers of the law cannot be relied on to prosecute thieves.

Spurgeon calls the people who go to church from compulsion, as they might do to escape from a shower of rain, "umbrella Christians."

BENEATH HER WINDOW.

BY CHARLES [illegible]

Maiden, down the moonlit [illegible]
Let thy whisper softly creep,
Sweet as midnight's breath of pines,
Pure as lilies grouped asleep.
All the fervors of the deep
Yearn and falter in my soul;
The revealing, secret things,
Buried under Memphian wings,
Move me with a weird control.

All of [illegible] hidden lies
In the raptures of thine eyes;
And what olden empires free
Ceaseless chords of memory,
Or what happy ripples wet
Thy rich garments, by the sea,
In some cloudland, wide and [illegible],
Is not whispered, is not said,
By the wise stars overhead.

Dost remember when the [illegible]
[illegible] thy [illegible]
Ere thy days of human speech?
Art I doubt not Dian's [illegible],
When the fair youth dreamed at [illegible],
Just a flicker in the shade
Of your modest branches made;
And you heard the crimpled fern
In its mossy hollows turn,
As the goddess, half afraid,
Fled across the mossy glade,
Wast thou queen of Plato's isle,
Lapt in summer's endless smile?
All the training of a queen
Lingers yet in step and mien;
And the graceful, tingling [illegible]
Wavers in your airy speech;
And your motions, quickly, slowly,
Are the woodland naiad's wholly.

Maiden of unwhispered love,
Hast thou never loved before?
Did no former ages fold
Lover's kiss and rapture bold?
Then you have not sounded clearly
All the age's essence nearly.
Yet thou seem'st a simple woman,
Warm and mortal, bright and human;
Let a dewy rosebud slide,
And the starlit night divide,
Then my soul will understand
You forget the cloudy land,
And your olden spells resign
For the sake of love divine.
—Atlantic Monthly for December.

PITH AND POINT.

Natural slippers—Eels.

A matter of course—A horse race.

A bad policy—One that has run out.

A Solicitor-General—A poor beggar.

When is a literary work like smoke? When it rises in volumes.

When is a clock on the stairs dangerous? When it runs down.

A literary class—Builders. They are always finishing stories.

Sweetening one's coffee is generally the first stirring event of the day.

The safest way to rid yourself of your wife's female friends is to make love to them.

Why is a pair of skates like an apple? Because they have occasioned the fall of a man.

"O, Edith, won't you kiss Dr. McCluskie?" "I'm so shy, mamma; you kiss him first!"

He blew his little lamp out at the top,
And his life came to a sudden stop;
If he hadn't been so confounded green,
He'd never have fooled with kerosene.

"Artaxerxes, my boy," said Mr. Marrowfat, "remember the dying words of Socrates—Never marry a woman that kicks sideways."

Miss Long, of Oregon, has married Mr. Little. She, of course, says: "Love me, Little;" and he, of course, says. "Love me, Long."

Puck says that when four women are walking abreast on the pavement they will break ranks for nothing except a man—with a paint-pot.

It is a final test of brotherly affection for a girl to lend her brother's silk umbrella to her beau and not be jawed clean out of her gaiters.

The editor who saw a lady make for the only vacant seat in a car, found himself "crowded out to make room for more interesting matter."

A minister asked a tipsy fellow leaning against a fence where he expected to go when he died. "If I can't get along any better than I do now," said he, "I shan't go anywhere."

The editor of a child's paper received a letter from a lady subscriber recently, in which was written: "Our Annie died last week, after reading the last number of your valuable paper."

When asked why her sweetheart left her, Miss Jones replied, "In consequence of a falling out." She didn't tell the whole story. Her false teeth were what did the falling out.

A Virginia Sheriff asked a murderer if he wanted to make a speech on the gallows, and he replied: "Guess not; it looks like rain, and I don't want to get wet. Go on with the hanging."

A well-known girl of the period—Em Bezzle.—New York Weekly. Her near and dear relative—D. Fault.—Norristown Herald. And the name by which friends salute them both is P. K. Dillo.—Graphic.

Bill Smith was a member of the Twenty-sixth. While the boys crowded around the old flag at the recent reunion, Bill, with an irrepressible humor, called out: "Boys, I am no speaker, but there's a blamed sight more of you here than ever I saw in a fight." This brought down the house.—Franklin (Ky.) Review.

A traveler visiting a cathedral was shown by the sacristan, among other marvels, a dirty opaque glass vial. After eying it for some time the traveler said, "Do you call this a relic? Why, it is empty." "Empty!" retorted the sacristan, indignantly. "Sir, it contains some of the darkness that Moses spread over the land of Egypt."

"See here, Parker, what's the difference between a ripe watermelon and a rotten cabbage?" asked one letter-carrier of another the other day. "You've got me there. I don't know," he returned with a look more puzzled than an illiterate man at a cross-roads guide-board. "Then you'd be a mighty nice man to send after a watermelon, you would," remarked the quizzer as he moved on.—Cincinnati Breakfast Table.

Politics in the Household.

In the village of C. the children are as strong partisans in politics as their parents. A little girl of Democratic persuasion had been taking tea with a little Republican friend, and was amicably helping her wipe dishes when the news of Hayes' election was announced, whereupon, dropping the spoons she was wiping, she caught up her sun-bonnet and disappeared. "What brings you home so early?" asked her mother, as the little Democrat rushed into the house. "Why, I happened to think that there I was wiping Republican dishes, and I just threw down the towel and ran," was the excited answer.—Christian Union.

ALL SORTS.

Christine Nilsson is learning to sing in German.

There are nearly 3,000 telephones in use in New York city alone.

Boston type founders have never before known as dull a time in their business.

The face of Miss Blaine will always show an ugly scar as the result of her wound.

The country population of California is only equal to the population of San Francisco.

Senator Morton's death, just as it occurred, was predicted by his physician thirteen years ago.

The famous Madame Bonaparte, of Baltimore, is now over 90 years of age, and in very feeble health.

It is gratifying to hear that the Pope's medical examiners see no reason why he should not live twenty-five years.

Mr. Sylvanus Atkins, aged 104, was taken to the polls on election day in Valatie, Columbia county, N. Y.

Gen. Franz Sigel has bought a farm in Pike county, Pa., where he is going to educate two of his sons as farmers.

Europe has purchased $2,500,000 worth of our American fruit within the past twelve months, principally dried fruits.

The Grand Jury has ignored the bill against Gen. Pierson, charged with murder in connection with the riots at Pittsburgh.

It is estimated that turbine water wheels have, since their invention, saved the country over $300,000,000 in the one single item of fuel.

The official canvass shows that the vote of Colorado on the woman-suffrage question was: For, 6,612; against, 14,053; majority against, 7,441.

John Levick, who claims to be one of the 60[illegible] that made the famous charge at Balaklava on Oct. 25, 1854, is in jail at Cleveland, on a charge of assault with intent to kill.

Among our Indian tribes the Creeks, Chickasaws, Choctaws and Cherokees are steadily increasing in numbers and advancing in agricultural wealth, good order and education.

Maj. Campbell, who, with a battalion 800 strong, led the Turks in their attack upon Fort St. Nicholas in the Schipka pass, is regarded by critics as having done the pluckiest thing of the war.

Gale, the pedestrian, who, not long ago, walked a mile and a half at the beginning of each hour for 1,000 hours, has just succeeded in walking 4,000 quarter miles in as many ten-minute spells.

The one-term mania has broken out in Mexico. A law has passed the Senate, and is expected to be ratified by the lower house of the National Legislature, prohibiting the election of a President for a second term.

The amount of wheat raised in Dakota the present year, according to statistics furnished by Judge Brooklings, of Yankton, is, in round numbers, 7,000,000 bushels, 5,000,000 bushels being produced by Southern Dakota.

Mrs. Hayes has a hearty liking for the White House, old-fashioned as it is. She took an old friend through it the other day, showed him the great rooms, and said: "No matter what they build, they'll never build any more rooms like these!"

A Harrisburg (Pa.) jeweler says that neither he nor one of his two workmen uses tobacco, and both can handle any polished tool in the shop and lay it aside unwiped without injury. The other workman uses tobacco habitually, and if he neglects to wipe polished tools after using them rust spots will soon invariably appear.

New York city now contains nearly 1,300,000 people, besides the population of Brooklyn, which numbers 550,000. New Yorkers lay claim also to the inhabitants of Staten island and Jersey City, which, including Brooklyn, would increase the census to about 2,000,000. The principal cities in the civilized world are estimated, in point of population, as follows: London, 3,489,428; New York, over 2,000,000, and Paris, 1,851,792.

The new monument to be erected to Ex-President Johnson, at Greenville, Tenn., will be twenty-six feet high, with a base of granite and a shaft of Italian marble. Upon the front is a scroll representing the constitution of the United States, and an open book with a hand resting upon it, suggesting the taking of the oath of office. Over the apex is the American flag, and surmounting the whole an American eagle with outstretched wings.

Nine ladies rode for prizes at a tournament in Nevada. In order that there might be no ill-feeling among the competitors, every one was given a prize. The silver medal was won by a daring lady from Long valley, whose horse was almost unbroken and plunged frightfully. The other riders got tea-sets, cake-baskets, fans, pickle-dishes, chromos, books of poetry and other raff. Nor was horsemanship exalted above the humbler domestic virtues. Prizes were awarded for the best bread, the neatest sewing and the prettiest pillow-shams. One lady was awarded a premium for being the best-dressed dancer at the Society ball.

Searching for Lost Treasure.

An expedition is now preparing to leave this country with the purpose of recovering gold and silver treasures which for more than sixty years have been hidden beneath the waters of the Spanish main, not far from La Guayra, Venezuela. In 1815 the San Pedro Alcantara, a Spanish man-of-war, was sent as a convoy to provision-laden vessels designed to supply the fleet in the Caribbean sea. Thirteen hundred men were on board, and the treasure-chest contained $3,000,000 in silver. When the San Pedro Alcantara arrived [illegible] a revolution was found to be in progress, and Spanish citizens and churches of Venezuela caused their treasures of gold and silver and jewels to be transferred for safety to the frigate. Several Venezuelan towns were also plundered and destroyed, their wealth being carried on board the vessel. The soldiers and sailors were so exultant at their successes that they indulged in a drunken revel, during which the frigate caught fire. The half-crazed men could do nothing, and when the flames reached the powder-magazine a terrible explosion sent the San Pedro Alcantara, with men and treasures widely scattered, beneath the waves. Several attempts have been made to recover the sunken millions; but in all not more than $60,000 has been found, and this in silver. The gold, jewels and church plate remain undiscovered. Capt. Hollingsworth, an experienced diver, has obtained permission from the Venezuelan Government to search for the lost treasure, the permission to last six years, and a percentage on all sums recovered to be paid to Venezuela. With modern appliances and contrivances, with energy, knowledge and prudence, he believes that some millions may be recovered.

Anecdote of Lincoln.

The Drawer is assured that the following anecdote of the late President Lincoln has not heretofore appeared in print. It was related to a little company of Chicago lawyers.

"One day," said Mr. Lincoln, "when I first came here, I got into a fit of musing in my room, and stood resting my elbows on the bureau. Looking into the glass, it struck me what an awfully ugly man I was. The fact grew on me, and I made up my mind that I must be the ugliest man in the world. It so maddened me that I resolved, should I ever see an uglier, I would shoot him at sight. Not long after this, Andy ——" (naming a lawyer present) "came to town, and the first time I saw him I said to myself, 'There's the man.' I went home, took down my gun, and prowled round the streets waiting for him. He soon came along. 'Halt, Andy,' said I, pointing my gun at him. 'Say your prayers, for I'm going to shoot you.'

"'Why, Mr. Lincoln, what's the matter? What have I done?'

"Well, I made an oath that if I ever saw a man uglier than I am, I'd shoot him on the spot. You are uglier, sure; so make ready to die.'

"'Mr. Lincoln, do you really think I'm uglier than you?'

"'Yes.'

"'Well, Mr. Lincoln,' replied Andy, deliberately, and looking me squarely in the face, 'if I am uglier, fire away!'"—Harper's Magazine for December.

An Alabama Squatter.

William Stevens, of Clay county, Ala., has squatted on a mountain tract and built himself a log cabin, where he resides contentedly with his rifle, wife, eight kids and 100 goats. The goats are hardy and prolific; he shoots them when he wants meat, or leather for shoes; has their milk for milk, butter and cheese; exchanges kid-flesh for meal with a miller at the foot of the mountain; sells his surplus animals yearly for clothing, hats, etc., and claims that he is the best-fed, best-clothed, best-shod and best-humored man in the county.

The total nominal capital invested in all the railways of Great Britain is nearly $3,200,000,000. This is at the rate of $200,000 per mile of railway opened. More than $190,000,000 of capital pay no dividend; $270,000,000 less than 5 per cent., and only $25,000,000 more than 10 per cent.

Comfort for Uneasy Stomachs.

That incomparable anti-dyspeptic cordial, carminative and appetizer, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, yields comfort to the uneasy stomach with a degree of promptitude most gratifying to the victim of indigestion. The eradication of dyspepsia by the Bitters is, of course, accompanied by the disappearance of every one of its multifarious and puzzling symptoms, among which may be mentioned as the most prominent, heartburn, flatulence, abdominal oppression after eating, and sinking at other times, palpitations of the heart, water brash, vertigo, sick headache and nausea. Hostetter's Bitters tone and regulate the various organs which assist in the processes of assimilation, secretion and evacuation, fortify the system against malarious fevers, and develop in the enfeebled system fresh stores of vitality. In efficacy, as in popularity, they surpass any tonic or regulating medicine of the age.

The Queen of the Oven.

A breakfast-biscuit or tea-roll made with Dooley's Yeast Powder is certainly the queen of the oven—so light, white and delicious. You lift it tenderly, break it open gently, spread it daintily with fresh, sweet butter, waiting to be gracious. After breakfasting on biscuits made with Dooley's Yeast Powder what man would contemplate suicide, or grumble because his wife asked him for money.

Rheumatism Quickly Cured.

"Durang's Rheumatic Remedy," the great Internal Medicine, will positively cure any case of rheumatism on the face of the earth. Price, $1 a bottle, six bottles, $5. Sold by all druggists. Send for circular to Helphenstine & Bentley, Druggists, Washington, D. C.

CHEW
The Celebrated
"Matchless"
Wood Tag Plug
Tobacco.
The Pioneer Tobacco Company,
New York, Boston and Chicago.

Burnett's Cologne received the highest award at the Centennial Exhibition. It is filled in elegant bottles—glass and cork-stoppered, and basket-covered—and is for sale by all first-class Grocers and Druggists.

We have a larger sale for Hatch's Universal Cough Syrup than for any other medicine of the kind. We have for sale all the old standard remedies. None are in such demand.
Flint & Dayton, Friendship, N. Y.
Sold by J. Bloch & Co., Chicago, Ill.

It will pay to read advt. "Florida Homes!"

FLORIDA HOMES!

Location elevated, fertile and healthy. Close to R. R. Stations and Northern Colonies. Price ONLY $1.25 PER ACRE. Cheap transportation. Settlers are delighted. Send stamp for State Map, Views, and Report Chicago Excursion. Brainerd T. Smith & Co., 302 LaSalle st., Chicago.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $1 free. Stinson & Co., Portland, Maine.

GUNS REVOLVERS. Price-List free. Address Great Western Gun Works, Pittsburg, Pa.

MAGIC LANTERNS VIEWS
[illegible] E. T. MILLIGAN

AGENTS WANTED FOR
Creative Science;
Or, MANHOOD, WOMANHOOD, AND THEIR MUTUAL INTER-RELATIONS; LOVE, ITS LAWS, POWER, ETC.
Agents are selling from 15 to 25 copies a day. Send for specimen pages and our extra terms to Agents, and see why it sells faster than any other book. Address NATIONAL PUBLISHING CO., Chicago, Ill.

BABBITT'S TOILET SOAP.
[illegible]
For Use in the Nursery it has No Equal.
[illegible]
B. T. BABBITT, New York City.

NASBY AS A BANKER, AND On the President's Policy. Two of the richest, raciest pamphlets ever issued. Full of the rare Humor and profound Philosophy of the Sage of Confedrit X Roads. 10 cents each; three for 25 cents. Address THE BLADE, Toledo, Ohio.

STORIES. Two complete novels, by eminent writers, and four delightful stories, all for 25 cents. In book form, would cost $1.50. Address THE BLADE, Toledo, Ohio.

FREE. Choice Standard BOOKS by all departments of Literature, Poetry, Fiction, History, Biography, the Classics, etc.; the best and cheapest books in the world. Catalogue free. Address THE BLADE, Toledo, Ohio.

BEFORE YOU subscribe for any other paper send for a specimen copy of THE TOLEDO BLADE. It is a Mammoth Eight-Page Weekly Paper of Sixty-four Columns, filled with carefully-prepared reading matter of interest and value to people in all parts of the United States. Specimens free.

BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES — FOR COUGHS AND COLDS
A Cough, Cold, or Sore Throat,
Requires immediate attention, as neglect oftentimes results in some incurable Lung disease. BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES are a simple remedy, and will almost invariably give immediate relief.
SOLD BY ALL CHEMISTS and dealers in medicine.

Chorus, Anthem & Glee Books
Musical Societies this Winter will use
The Gem Gleaner. By J. M. Chadwick, is especially for Choirs, having rather more than one good Anthem or Motet for each Sunday of the year. Just published. Music by Dr. Munger, J. M. Chadwick, and other favorite composers. A good book for the easy practice of Societies. $1.00; or $9.00 per doz.
Emerson's Chorus Book. By L. O. Emerson, has an admirable collection of Sacred Choruses, and an equally large number of Secular Choruses and Glees. All is of the best quality. A first-class Society book. $1.25; or $12 per doz.
Perkins' Glee & Chorus Book. By H. S. Perkins, has 26 Glees and 8 Sacred Choruses, all of the best, and many unusually attractive. A first-class Society book. $1.25; or $12 per doz.
Chorus Choir. By E. Tourjee, has 75 fine Anthems and Choruses, and 25 Chants, Te Deums, &c. First-class Chorus-Choir book. $15 per doz.
The American Glee Book. By W. O. Perkins, is a true Glee Book, with the best and most entertaining compositions from beginning to end. $1.50; or $13.50 per doz.
OLIVER DITSON & CO., Boston.
C. H. Ditson & Co., 843 Broadway, N. Y.
J. E. Ditson & Co., 922 Chestnut St., Phila.

HULL & SCOTNEY,
GENERAL
COMMISSION
MERCHANTS,
346 NORTH WATER ST.,
PHILADELPHIA,
And wholesale dealers in Butter, Cheese, Eggs, Poultry, Game, Potatoes, Apples, Grain, Flour, Fur, Wool, Cotton, Peanuts, Broom Corn, Foreign and Domestic Fruits, and, in fact, we can sell any and everything at the highest market price, make prompt returns, and LIBERAL CASH ADVANCES made on all shipments except perishable articles. To show that we do an extensive business, any game dealer in Philadelphia will tell you we handled more game last season than all other Houses in Philadelphia put together. Send for Price-Lists, Stencils, &c., &c. REFERENCE CASH, or we refer you to Any RESPONSIBLE HOUSE in Our City.
Butter. Cheese, Poultry.
EGGS. GAME.

GRAFF'S IMPROVED POTASH OR LYE. TRADE MARK PATENTED. SOAP MADE [illegible]. WILL MAKE NINE POUNDS OF PURE SOAP IN ONLY ONE HOUR.
PROF. BEDFORD'S LETTER SHOWING SUPERIORITY OF THE ARTICLE OVER ALL OTHERS FOR SOAP MAKING SENT FREE BY MAIL ON APPLICATION TO H. M. ANTHONY 104 READE ST. NEW YORK.

CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED
The prevention and cure of CONSUMPTION, as also of Asthma, Bronchitis, Catarrh, and all diseases of the LUNGS and THROAT, may be realized in which is also recommended as a certain and radical cure for all general and special derangements of the Nervous System, Disorders of the Blood, and Functional Disorders of the Stomach and Bowels, and as a general Brain, Nerve and Blood Tonic.
PULMONA,
PULMONA [illegible] Consumption, Asthma, Bronchitis, &c. It imparts strength and color to the pale blood, subdues the Chills and Fever, and diminishes the expectoration. It checks the Night Sweats, invigorates the appetite, relieves the cough and difficult breathing, stops the wasting of flesh, and induces a calm and refreshing sleep.
PULMONA is adapted to every disease, however called by name, in which is exhibited any derangement of either the Nervous or the Blood Systems. For Female Diseases it is [illegible] unequaled.
PULMONA takes the place of "Cough Mixtures" for the Cough, "Tonics" for the Appetite, "Expectorants" for the Expectoration, Anodynes for the Nervous Irritation, Iron for the Blood, and thus is both the best and the most economical medicine that can be taken. By a special action upon the Constitutional condition it reaches and has a direct effect upon the whole series of symptoms. PULMONA is confidently recommended in all cases wherein are exhibited any one or more of the following symptoms:
Cough, Difficulty or Irregularity of Breathing, Wasting of the Flesh, Loss of Appetite or Strength, Bleeding from the Lungs, General Debility, Flying Pains through the Chest, Limbs or Back, Nervous Headache, Nervous Prostration, Night Sweats, Dizziness or Vertigo, Sore Throat, Sleeplessness, Indigestion, Sinking of the Stomach, Remittent Fever, and especially in all Female Diseases or Uterine Irregularities.
Read the Following Certificates.
College Hill, Cincinnati, O.—"I was in the last stage of Consumption. Ten days after taking PULMONA, my Chills, Night Sweats, Fever, &c., decreased, and finally ceased altogether. My renewed health is a marvel to all who knew me."—F. D. Dawson.
"PULMONA saved my daughter's life, and probably saved me hundreds of dollars."—Rev. E. Jones, [illegible].
"We bless God for the benefit we received from your PULMONA."—Rev. P. Warren, Canton, Pa.
A Sufferer from Asthma writes: "Your PULMONA is decidedly the best remedy we have ever had, and the only one that has produced entirely favorable results."—Geo. M. Graham, Amsterdam, N. Y.
The price of the PULMONA is $1 per bottle. It may be obtained through Druggists generally, or directly from the Proprietor, OSCAR G. MOSES, 18 Cortlandt Street, New York. Send for free circular, containing particulars of MANY cases successfully treated.

BEATTY Piano, Organ best. Look! starting news. Organs, Melodeons, Pianos only $130, cost $650. Cir. Free. Daniel F. Beatty, Washington, N.J.

MARY J. HOLMES.
The new novel, MILDRED, by Mrs. Mary J. Holmes, author of those splendid books—Edith Lyle—West Lawn—Tempest and Sunshine—Lena Rivers—etc., is now ready, and for sale by all booksellers. Price, $1.50. It is one of the finest novels ever written, and everybody should read it.
G. W. Carleton & Co., Pub'rs., New York.

DUNHAM PIANOS.
Dunham & Sons, Manufacturers,
Warerooms, 18 East 14th St.,
(Established 1834.) NEW YORK.
Prices Reasonable. Terms Easy.

HIGHLAND
Military Academy,
WORCESTER, MASS. Established in 1856. The cheapest school in the land for what is furnished.
C. B. METCALF, A. M., Sup't.

CONSUMPTION CURED.
An old physician, retired from practice, having received from an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for speedy and permanent cure of consumption, bronchitis, catarrh, asthma, and all throat and lung affections; also a cure for nervous debility and all nervous complaints, after having tested its curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free to all who desire it, this recipe in German, French, or English, with full directions. Address, with stamp, W. W. SHERAR, 12 Power's Block, Rochester, N. Y.

KEEP'S SHIRTS—only one quality—The Best. Keep's Patent Partly-Made Dress Shirts can be finished as easy as hemming a Handkerchief. The very best, six for $7.00. Keep's Custom Shirts—made to measure, The very best, six for $9.00. An elegant set of genuine Gold-Plate Collar and Sleeve-Buttons given with each half doz. Keep's Shirts. Keep's Shirts are delivered FREE on receipt of price in any part of the Union—no express charges to pay. Samples, with full directions for self-measurement, sent Free to any address. No stamp required. Deal directly with the Manufacturer and get Bottom Prices. Keep Manufacturing Co., 165 Mercer St., N.Y.

WEBER'S
METROPOLITAN CORSET!
The ONLY CORSET COMBINING
Grace, Comfort and Beauty!
Is constructed on purely scientific principles. The back is whole boned and left open at the hips to be laced at pleasure of wearer, and is so gored in back that the fabrics and bones adapt themselves with marvelous accuracy to every curve and undulation of the finest type or figure. For sale by all leading merchants. Lady Agents wanted. Samples by mail on receipt of $1.50.
WESTERN DEPOT, KEITH BROS., Chicago, Ill.

THE GOOD OLD STAND-BY.
MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT.
FOR MAN AND BEAST.
Established 35 Years. Always cures. Always ready. Always handy. Has never yet failed. Thirty millions have tested it. The whole world approves the glorious old Mustang—the Best and Cheapest Liniment in existence. 25 cents a bottle. The Mustang Liniment cures when nothing else will.
SOLD BY ALL MEDICINE VENDERS.

"VEGETINE,"
Says a Boston Physician, "has no equal as a blood purifier. Hearing of its many wonderful cures, after all other remedies had failed, I visited the Laboratory and convinced myself of its genuine merit. It is prepared from barks, roots and herbs, each of which is highly effective, and they are compounded in such a manner as to produce astonishing results."
VEGETINE
Is the Great Blood Purifier.
VEGETINE
Will cure the worst case of Scrofula.
VEGETINE
Is recommended by Physicians and Apothecaries.
VEGETINE
Has effected some marvelous cures in cases of Cancer.
VEGETINE
Cures the worst cases of Canker.
VEGETINE
Meets with wonderful success in Mercurial Diseases.
VEGETINE
Will eradicate Salt Rheum from the system.
VEGETINE
Removes Pimples and Humors from the face.
VEGETINE
Cures Constipation and regulates the bowels.
VEGETINE
Is a valuable remedy for Headache.
VEGETINE
Will cure Dyspepsia.
VEGETINE
Restores the entire system to a healthy condition.
VEGETINE
Removes the cause of Dizziness.
VEGETINE
Relieves Faintness at the Stomach.
VEGETINE
Cures Pains in the Back.
VEGETINE
Effectually cures Kidney Complaint.
VEGETINE
Is effective in its cure of Female Weakness.
VEGETINE
Is the great remedy for General Debility.
VEGETINE
Is acknowledged by all classes of people to be the best and most reliable blood purifier in the world.
VEGETINE
PREPARED BY
H. R. STEVENS, Boston, Mass.
Vegetine is Sold by All Druggists.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER.
Absolutely Pure.
All Grocers authorized to guarantee it full weight, and absolutely pure. To try it, send 60 cents for 1-pound can to ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., N. Y. Sent by mail free of postage.

$400 [illegible] AGENTS WANTED. [illegible] Send for Catalog. Van & Co., Chicago.

JACKSON'S BEST
SWEET NAVY CHEWING TOBACCO
was awarded the highest prize at Centennial Exposition for its fine chewing qualities, the excellence and lasting character of its sweetening and flavoring. If you want the best tobacco ever made, ask your grocer for this, and see that each plug bears our blue-strip trade-mark, with words Jackson's Best on it. Sold wholesale by all jobbers. Send for sample to C. A. JACKSON & CO., Manufacturers, Petersburg, Va.

AGENTS
WANTED!
FOR PARTICULARS, ADDRESS
WILSON SEWING MACHINE CO.
829 Broadway, New York City;
Chicago, Ill.; New Orleans, La.; or San Francisco, Cal.

TO ADVERTISERS! We will send, free to all applicants who do any newspaper advertising, the THIRD EDITION of AYER & SON'S MANUAL FOR ADVERTISERS. 160 8vo. pp. More complete than any which have preceded it. Gives the names, circulation, and advertising rates of several thousand newspapers in the United States and Canada, and contains more information of value to an advertiser than can be found in any other publication. All lists have been carefully revised, and where practicable prices have been reduced. The special offers are numerous and unusually advantageous. Be sure to send for it before spending any money in newspaper advertising. Address N. W. AYER & SON, ADVERTISING AGENTS, Times Building, Philadelphia.

HUNT'S REMEDY
THE GREAT
KIDNEY MEDICINE
A positive remedy for Dropsy and all diseases of the Kidneys, Bladder and Urinary Organs. Hunt's Remedy is purely vegetable and prepared expressly for the above diseases. It has cured thousands. Every bottle warranted. Send to W. E. Clarke, Providence, R.I., for illustrated pamphlet.
If your druggist don't have it, he will order it for you.

A Perfect Hair Dressing. A Promoter of the Growth of the Hair. A Preparation Free from Irritating Matter.
BURNETT'S COCOAINE.
Cocoa-nut Oil.
JOSEPH BURNETT & CO. BOSTON.
Fac Simile of Label & Wrapper

JONAS WHITCOMB'S REMEDY for ASTHMA,
ROSE COLD,
HAY FEVER,
The signal success which has attended the use of this Medicine, has induced the Proprietors to publish some account of its wonderful properties, and to offer it for the benefit of those who are afflicted with the above named painful diseases.
DIRECTIONS.
[illegible]
JOSEPH BURNETT & CO.
Boston.
Fac Simile of Label & Wrapper

POND'S EXTRACT.
POND'S EXTRACT.
The People's Remedy.
The Universal Pain Extractor.
Note: Ask for Pond's Extract.
Take no Other.
"Hear, for I will speak of excellent things."
POND'S EXTRACT—The great Vegetable Pain Destroyer. Has been in use over thirty years, and for cleanliness and prompt curative virtues cannot be excelled.
CHILDREN. No family can afford to be without Pond's Extract. Accidents, Bruises, Contusions, Cuts, Sprains, are relieved almost instantly by external application. Promptly relieves pains of Burns, Scalds, Excoriations, Chafings, Old Sores, Boils, Felons, Corns, etc. Arrests inflammation, reduces swellings, stops bleeding, removes discoloration and heals rapidly.
LADIES find it their best friend. It assuages the pains to which they are peculiarly subject—notably fullness and pressure in the head, nausea, vertigo, etc. It promptly ameliorates and permanently heals all kinds of inflammations and ulcerations.
HEMORRHOIDS or PILES find in this the only immediate relief and ultimate cure. No case, however chronic or obstinate can long resist its regular use.
VARICOSE VEINS. It is the only sure cure.
BLEEDING from any cause. For this it is a specific. It has saved hundreds of lives when all other remedies failed to arrest bleeding from nose, stomach, lungs, and elsewhere.
TOOTHACHE, Earache, Neuralgia and Rheumatism are all alike relieved and often permanently cured.
PHYSICIANS of all schools who are acquainted with Pond's Extract recommend it in their practice. We have letters of commendation from hundreds of Physicians, many of whom order it for use in their own practice. In addition to the foregoing they order its use for Swellings of all kinds, Quinsy, Sore Throat, Inflamed Tonsils, simple and chronic Diarrhœa, Catarrh (for which it is a specific), Chilblains, Frosted Feet, Stings of Insects, Mosquitoes, etc., Chapped Hands, Face, and indeed all manner of skin diseases.
TOILET USE. Removes Soreness, Roughness and Smarting; heals Cuts, Eruptions and Pimples. It revives, invigorates and refreshes, while wonderfully improving the Complexion.
TO FARMERS—Pond's Extract. No Stock Breeder, no Livery Man can afford to be without it. It is used by all the leading Livery Stables, Street Railroads and first Horsemen in New York City. It has no equal for Sprains, Harness or Saddle Chafings, Stiffness, Scratches, Swellings, Cuts, Lacerations, Bleedings, Pneumonia, Colic, Diarrhœa, Chills, Colds, etc. Its range of action is wide, and the relief it affords is so prompt that it is invaluable in every Farm-yard as well as in every Farm-house. Let it be tried once and you will never be without it.
CAUTION! Pond's Extract has been imitated. The genuine article has the words Pond's Extract blown in each bottle. It is prepared by the only persons living who ever knew how to prepare it properly. Refuse all other preparations of Witch Hazel. This is the only article used by Physicians, and in the hospitals of this country and Europe.
HISTORY and Uses of Pond's Extract, in pamphlet form, sent free on application to POND'S EXTRACT COMPANY, 98 Maiden Lane, New York.

$12 A DAY at home. Agents wanted. Outfit and terms free. TRUE & CO., Augusta, Maine.

$60 a week with our popular Books, Bibles, Chromos & Maps. Goodspeed's Pub'g House, Chicago.

$66 a week in your own town. Terms and $5 outfit free. H. HALLETT & CO., Portland, Maine.

WANTED—18 Agents in every Co., male or female, $3.50 per day. Postmaster, West Randolph, Vt.

25 CARDS, with name beautifully written, 20c. Address E. W. MOUL, West Randolph, Vt.

$200 a month. Agents wanted [illegible] Address Childs & Pratt, Cincinnati, O.

WONDER box, contains 27 useful articles; 25 stamps. Miss Eva Grant, Middleboro, Mass.

3 new vocal and 3 new instrumental pieces Sheet Music, 10c. Union Music Co., Middleboro, Mass.

$330 [illegible]

$350 A MONTH—AGENTS WANTED. 36 best selling articles in the world; one sample free. Address JAY BRONSON, Detroit, Mich.

$2500 a year. Agents wanted everywhere. Business honorable and legitimate. Particulars free. Address J. WORTH & CO., St. Louis, Mo.

$5 GOLD PLATED WATCHES. Cheapest in the known world. Sample Watch free to Agents. Address, A. COULTER & CO., Chicago, Ill.

EVERY SOLDIER [illegible] or contracted permanent disease in the army, can get a Pension by writing to John Kirkpatrick, Cambridge, Ohio.

WANTED—Lady Agents in every city, town and village in the United States and Canada. Also a business permanent and profitable. No letters answered unless stamp is inclosed. G. K. Wilson & Co., 8 Exchange Building, Chicago, Ill.

WE WANT good Local and Traveling SALESMEN—men and women. New business. No peddling. Salary and all expenses paid by us. Add's Monitor, Moscoden & Co., Cin'ti, O.

CLOCKS E. INGRAHAM & CO.'S are superior in design and not equaled in quality, or as time-keepers. Ask your Jeweler for them. Manufactory—Bristol, Ct.

YOUNG MEN! Learn Telegraphy and earn from $40 to $100 a month. Small salary while learning. Situations furnished. Address, with stamp, R. VALENTINE, Manager, Janesville, Wis.

PIANOS AND ORGANS.
BEST AND CHEAPEST in the WORLD. For Cash or Installments. Send for Illustrated Catalogues. AGENTS Wanted. Horace Waters & Sons, 40 E. 14th St., N. Y.

WATERPROOF COVERS,
Awnings, Tents, Signs, Window Shades, &c. MURRAY & BAKER, 100 S. Desplaines St., Chicago.
Send for Illustrated Price-List.

BOSTON WEEKLY TRANSCRIPT
The best family newspaper published; eight pages; fifty-six columns reading.
Terms—$2 per annum; clubs of eleven, $15 per annum, in advance.
SPECIMEN COPY GRATIS.

$10 to $25 A DAY SURE made by Agents selling our Chromos, Crayons, Picture and Chromo Cards. 125 samples, worth $5, sent postpaid, for 85 Cents. Illustrated Catalogue free. J. H. BUFFORD'S SONS, Boston. [Established 1830.]

TRUTH IS MIGHTY!
[illegible]

WORK FOR ALL
In their own localities, canvassing for the Fireside Visitor (enlarged), Weekly and Monthly. Largest Paper in the World, with Mammoth Chromos Free. Big Commissions to Agents. Terms and Outfit Free. Address P. O. VICKERY, Augusta, Maine.

NEW DISCOVERY.
Cure for PILES. Not a quack's worthless stuff, but an honest remedy, discovered by one who suffered for many years, who was pronounced by the leading physicians of New York as incurable, but cured himself in ten days. Has tested the merits of the remedy on nearly 100 cases, and now offers $50 for any case of Piles he cannot cure. Remedy, with full instructions, $1.00. GEO. E. WILSON, 8 Exchange Building, Chicago, Ill.

Send for Reduced Price-List of MASON & HAMLIN
CABINET ORGANS.
NEW and SPLENDID STYLES; PRICES REDUCED $10 to $50 EACH THIS MONTH (NOV., 1877). Address MASON & HAMLIN ORGAN CO., Boston, New York, or Chicago.

$1.00 $1.00
Osgood's Heliotype Engravings.
The choicest household ornaments. Price One Dollar each. Send for catalogue.
JAMES R. OSGOOD & CO.,
BOSTON, MASS.
$1.00 $1.00

DR. WARNER'S
HEALTH CORSET
With Skirt Supporter and Self-Adjusting Pads.
Unequaled for Beauty, Style & Comfort.
Approved by All Physicians.
For Sale by Leading Merchants.
Samples, any size, by mail. In Satteen, $1.50; Coutil, $1.75; Nursing Corset, $2.00; Misses' Corset, $1.00.
AGENTS WANTED.
WARNER BROS., 351 Broadway, N. Y.

10,000 A YEAR.
It is estimated that this number die yearly in the United States of
CONSUMPTION.
ALLEN'S LUNG BALSAM will at once allay the pain and irritated parts, stop the cough, and prevent what would be consumption. All persons with weak Lungs, or afflicted with Cough, should at once test the merits of this good Cough and Lung Balsam.
Sold by all Medicine Dealers.

Nature's Cure
For Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Neuralgia, Nervous Weakness and Diseases is The Voltaic Belt. When worn it generates Electricity—the great curative agent. Physicians use and recommend it. Try it. $5. Novelty Truss—a comfortable, durable and perfect Hernia supporter—$5. Adjustable Uterine Supporter—highly recommended—$6. Digital Syringe—combines 3 tips, forceps and speculum, hard rubber—$4. Pile Supporter—comfortably worn on horseback—afflicted ones get it—$2.50. Discount to trade and physicians. Goods sent C. O. D. Address CHICAGO VOLTAIC AND TRUSS CO., 56 Washington Street, Chicago.

BOOK AGENTS, TAKE NOTICE!
JOSIAH ALLEN'S WIFE
Has "wrote another book," and it is really
SAMANTHA AT THE CENTENNIAL!
As a P. A. and P. I. outdoes herself, and WIDOW DOODLE leaves BETSY BOBBET far behind. Don't wait and lose your chance; send for circulars, territory, &c., at once. Address AMERICAN PUBLISHING CO., Chicago, Ill., Cincinnati, O., and Hartford, Conn.

READ! A RARE OPPORTUNITY! Don't Miss this Chance!
Upon receipt of only 25 Cents (currency or silver), we will send One Pair Elegant French Oil Chromos (companion pictures and very beautiful), and also The Cricket on the Hearth, the People's Favorite Literary and Family Journal, for FOUR MONTHS on trial. It is a mammoth 16-page, 64 column Illustrated paper (size of Harper's Weekly), filled with splendid Continued and Short Stories, Sketches, Poems, Useful Knowledge, Wit and Humor, etc., etc. The largest, handsomest and cheapest paper of its class in the world. This Great Offer is made to introduce it into New Homes. Write Now. Address F. M. LUPTON & CO., Publishers, 116 Broadway, New York. READ!

SANDAL-WOOD.
A positive remedy for all diseases of the Kidneys, Bladder and Urinary Organs; also, good in Dropsical Complaints. It never produces sickness, is certain and speedy in its action. It is fast superseding all other remedies. Sixty capsules cure in six or eight days. No other medicine can do this.
Beware of Imitations, for, owing to its great success, many have been offered; some are most dangerous, causing piles, &c.
DUNDAS DICK & CO.'S Genuine Soft Capsules, containing Oil of Sandal-Wood, sold at all Drug Stores. Ask for circular, or send for one to 35 and 37 Wooster street, New York.

C. N. U. No. 48

WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS, please say you saw the advertisement in this paper.

FRUIT HOUSE PRICES!

Great Reduction on Sugars

All grades reduced 1 cent per pound; the lowest they have sold for fifteen years. Best white coffee sugar 10c, best coffee C 9c, choice yellow sugar 8c.

An immense stock of all goods for

CHRISTMAS AND NEW YEARS!

Candies, Nuts, Toys, Liquors and Cigars.

TEAS!

Fifty more chests of the choice 40c tea and 40 chests of the good 25c tea. We sell large amounts of these two teas; being good drawers, strong and well flavored. We now sell more chests of tea in a month than we used to in a year, and this comes simply from our purchasing direct of the importers and selling direct to our customers, thereby saving the profit of the middle men, which is 20 to 40c on the pound.

Young Hyson Tea,	25, 50, 70, best 90 cents per pound
Gunpowder Tea,	60, 70, best 90 cents per pound
Imperial Tea,	40 60, best 90 cents per pound
Oolong Tea.	25, 60, best 70 cents per pound
Japan Uncolored Tea.	35, 50, best 70 cents per pound

COFFEE! COFFEE!

Our Best Rio, 22 cents. Good Fine Rio, 20 cents. Old Government Java, 30 cents.

SYRUPS.

Cuba 40 and 50 cents. New Orleans, 50 and 75 cents White Drips, 75 cts. and $1.

RAISENS, and ZANTEE CURRENTS for CHRISTMAS CAKE, CITRON, LEMON and ORANGE PEEL.

Valencia raisins per pound 8c, Best layers raisins 12½c. Zantee currents 9c Leghorn citron 35c. Orange and Lemon peal 30c,

CANDIES.

Toy candies of all kinds. Stick candy per pound 18c. French mixed 20c, Toy candy all sorts and varieties 30c. Toys for Santa Claus from a penny whistle to a nice album to make presents with a thousand different things to amuse the little ones—Dogs, cats, rats, mice, birds, elephants, lions, tigers, drums, wagons, horses, Chineese lanterns, pistol caps, &c., something for every little one in the country.

And for Christmas tree candles we have a large assortment of every color, from ½ cent to 2 cents each or 50c per box.

OILS, OILS, OIL!!

Coal Oil per gallon, 20 cents. Headlight Oil per gallon 25 cents. Lard Oil, per gallon, $1.00
Fish Oil per gallon, $1.00. Best Golden Machine Oil per gal. 70c. Machine Oil per gal. 30ct

Nuts for Christmas and New Years.

Brazil nuts 10c. Filberts, quart 15c. Almons, qurrt 25c. English walnuts, quart 15c. Pecans, quart 12 1-2c. Roasted pea nuts quart 5c.

Liquors of all Kinds for Medical use Whisky, Rum, Brandy, Gin, Wines and Ales.

Good old bourbon $1 and $1.25. 2 years old $1.40 and 1.60. Best old 76 for medical use $2.50. Sherry Wine as good as any in the country $1.50. Port wine best in the market $1.50. California Angelica wine best $1.50. Gin $1.50 and $2.50. Dublin and London Porter 22c. Scotch 23c.

TOBACCOS AND CIGRS.

A No. 1 smoking for 30c per pound. Choice fine cut 50c per pound. No. 1 Plug Tobacco 50c per pound.

We have a large assortment and can sell a good cigar at $1.25 per box. And a choice No. 1 cigar for $1.75 per 100.

FRESH OYSTERS LOWER THIS YEAR THAN MEAT—We sell a fine Oyster at 15c. No. 1 fall count saloon oyster 20c. Large A standard 30c.

You can save at least 25 per cent. on the dollar at the

Fruit House, Fort Wayne, Ind

JOHN L. DAVIS,

OF THE

PIONEER HARDWARE STORE,

Would respectfully announce that he has made large additions in every department, and is prepared to furnish everything in the Hardwase line.

He keeps a full stock of

BUILDING MATERIAL.

Whichhe can sell at prices to suit the times. All kinds of

STOVES and TINWARE

on hand. He keeps a first-class TINMR and prepared todo all kinds of Eaves Trough hangnig Roofing, on short notice, and in a workmanlike manner.

MAIN STREET, OPPOSITE COURT HOUSE AUBURN, IND

JUST RECEIV'D

—AT—

J. ABRIGHT'S

Fine Gold and Plated Jewelry.
Ladies Gold Watches,
American Watches,

Rogers & Bro. Silverware,

A splendid line of imported Vases
Watch Chains, magnificent
Holiday Gifts, Lockets,
Ladies Sets, Gents

GOLD & SILVER SET

Sleeve and Collar Buttons, Jet
Shell and Horn Jewelry,
All at astonishingly

LOW PRICES.

Watches and Jewelry repaired on short notice and in good style.

BOOK STORE

WILLIS & CO. !

Successors to C. P. Houser, having purchased the above named stock, we wish to say to the people of Auburn and vicinity that by the patronage that we hope to merit, we expect to build up a first-class

BOOK AND NEWS STORE,

that will be a credit to the place. We are adding a large variety of goods, and shall endeavor to keep on hand the novelties of the season. We solicit orders for

Books, Magazines, Papers, etc.,

which will be furnished promptly at the publishers prices by

WILLIS & CO.

October 11, '77—no41.

BOSS HARNESS SHOP.

I have purchased the harness stock of Geo. Nock, and added largely to every description of stock that is usually kept in my line of trade, such as

HARNESS, DOUBLE AND SINGLE!

Bufalo Robes, Lap Robes,
Horse Blankets, Collars,
Whips, Brushes, Combs,
Harness Oil, Axel Greese,
Fine Ready-made Harness,
Double and Single a Specialty.

Manufactured by the most experienced workman that can be found in Northern Indiana, I employ none other, none other need apply. I would say to all customer freinds that I will warrant all stock and work that goes out of my shop as recommended. I use none but the best Oak tanned Leather. I would invite all in need of goods in my line to call at my shop before purchasing elsewhere Shop in Flukes old Tannery Building on corner Jackson and seventh St. As I am bound not be undersold in the same class of goods in Northern Indiana

Being an old farmer formily I keep a very effable experienced Foreman to see that all work is well done. Repairing done with neatness and dispatch.

J. E. SHILLING, Sole Proprietor.
W. SHEFFER, Foreman.

Geo. De Wald & Co.

FORT WAYNE, IND.

Have always on hand the largest and best stock of Dry Goods and Ladies Dress Goods in the city. Our ctizens when of visiting Fort Wayne, should not fail call and examine their stock

DRY GOODS.

They can make it to the interest of every person who trade with them. They buy for cash and sell for cash, keep the best goods and sell for one price. Also agents for the Domestic Paterons

Their store is located at No. 1 Columbia Street.

GEO. DEWALD & CO.

DOWN! DOWN! DOWN!

FROM 10 TO 25 PER CENT.

HARNESS, SADELES,

COLLARS, WHIPS, &c.,

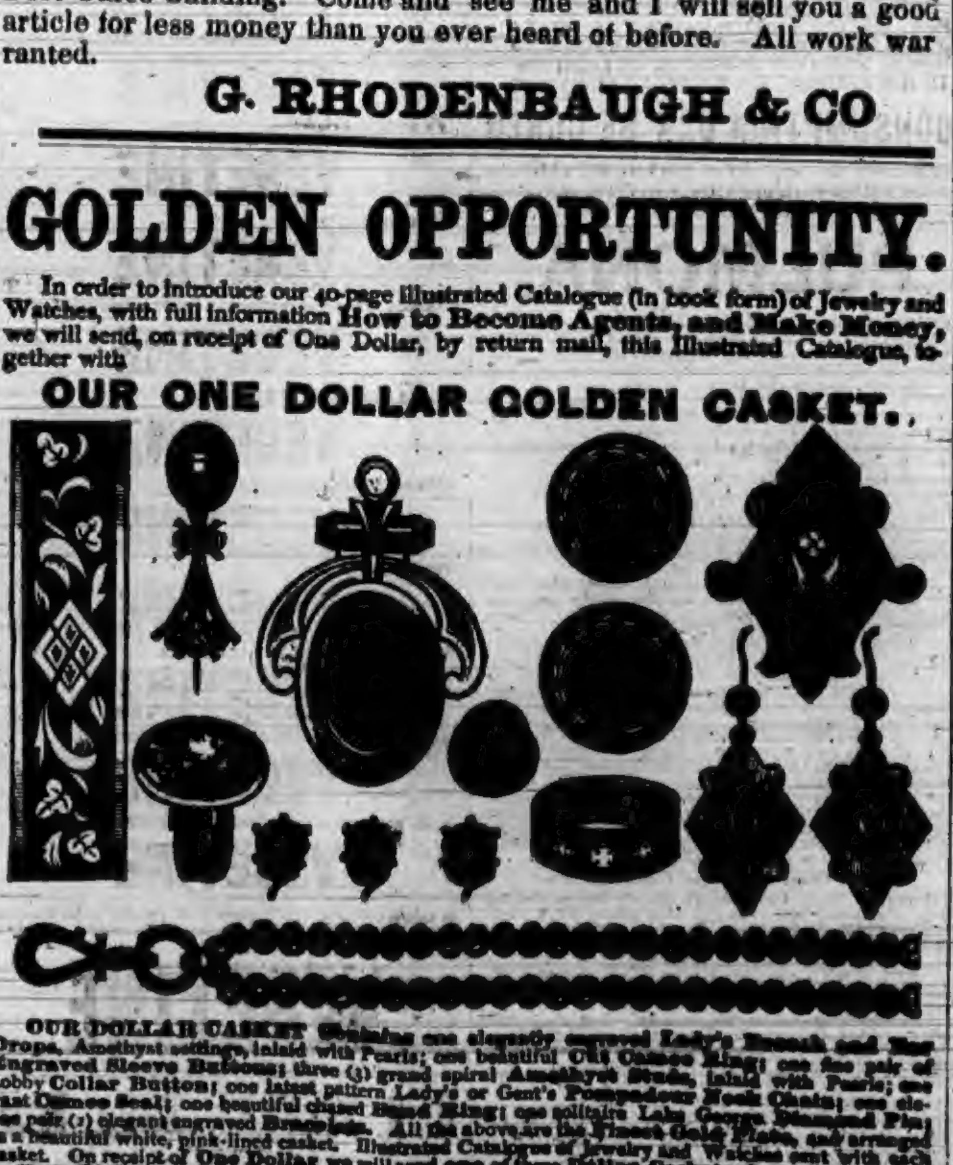
At my new shop on seventh street, opposite Court House, in old Post Office building. Come and see me and I will sell you a good article for less money than you ever heard of before. All work warranted.

G. RHODENBAUGH & CO

GOLDEN OPPORTUNITY.

In order to introduce our 40-page Illustrated Catalogue (in book form) of Jewelry and Watches, with full information How to Become Agents, and Make Money, we will send, on receipt of One Dollar, by return mail, this Illustrated Catalogue, together with

OUR ONE DOLLAR GOLDEN CASKET.



OUR DOLLAR CASKET Contains one elegantly engraved Lady's Brooch and Ear Drops, Amethyst settings, inlaid with Pearls; one beautiful Cut Cameo Ring; one fine pair of Engraved Sleeve Buttons; three (3) grand spiral Amethyst Studs, inlaid with Pearls; one nobby Collar Button; one latest pattern Lady's or Gent's Pompadour Neck Chain; one elegant Cameo Seal; one beautiful chased Band Ring; one solitaire Lake George Diamond Pin; one pair (2) elegant engraved Bracelets. All the above are the Finest Gold Plate, and arranged in a beautiful white, pink-lined casket. Illustrated Catalogue of Jewelry and Watches sent with each casket. On receipt of One Dollar we will send one of these Dollar Caskets, by mail, post-paid, or Four Caskets on receipt of [illegible]. Address,

GEO. G. JACOBY & CO., Importers of Jewelry and Watches,
177 Wisconsin Street, Milwaukee, Wis.

RAIL ROADS.

Lake Shore & Mich Southern R R

AIR LINE DIVISION.

On and after June 10 1877, trains will run as follows:

GOING WEST

	Special Ex.	Pacific Ex.	Accom
Toledo	11 11a m	12 01 a m	4 00 p m
Wauseon	12 15 "	1 07 "	5 20 "
Bryan	1 00 "	1 50 "	6 28 "
Butler	1 21 "	2 26 "	7 10 "
Waterloo	1 31 "	2 40 "	7 20 "
Sedan	2 00 "	2 50 "	7 00 "
Corunna	2 07 "	2 54 "	7 17 "
Kendallville	2 20 "	3 05 "	8 04 "
Ligonier	2 37 "	3 40 "	8 50 "
Goshen	3 25 "	4 12 "	9 35 "
Elkhart	3 50 "	4 35 "	10 00 "

GOING EAST

Elkhart	7 55 p m	9 40 p m	7 00 "
Goshen	8 08 "	10 10 "	7 25 "
Ligonier	8 35 "	10 42 "	8 00 "
Kendallville	8 40 "	11 17 "	8 45 a m
Corunna	8 56 "	11 31 "	9 00 "
Sedan	9 00 "	11 36 "	9 06 "
Waterloo	9 05 "	11 46 "	9 15 "
Butler	"	12 01 a m	9 25 "
Bryan	"	12 40 "	10 17 "
Wauseon	"	1 35 "	11 12 "
Toledo	"	2 40 "	12 30 "

CHAS. PAINE, Gen. Supt.
J. W. CARY, Gen Tic. Agt.
J. R. CURTIS, Division Su

Pittsburg, Ft. W. & C. R. R

Condensed time card Nov. 11, 1877.

GOING WEST.

	No. 1 Fast ex.	No. 7 Pac. ex.	No. 3 Nigh ex	No 5 Mail.
Pittsburgh	11 45 pm	9 00 am	1 50 pm	6 00 am
Rochester	12 53 am	10 15	2 55	7 45
Alliance	3 10	12 50 pm	5 35	11 00
Orrville	4 45	2 25	7 12	12 55 pm
Mansfield	7 00	4 40	9 20	2 11
Crestl'e ar.	7 30	5 15	9 45	2 50
" lv.	7 50	5 40	9 55
Forest	9 25	7 35	11 25
Lima	10 40	8 00	12 25 am
Ft. Wayne	1 30 pm	11 55	3 40
Plymouth	3 45	2 46 am	4 55
Chicago	7 00	6 30	7 58

GOING EAST

	No. 4 Night ex	No. 2 Fast ex.	No. 6 Pac. ex	No. 8 Mail
Chicago	9 10 pm	8 00 a.m	5 15 pm
Plymouth	2 48 am	11 25	9 00
Ft. Wayne	6 55	2 15 pm	11 30
Lima	8 55	4 10	1 30 am
Forest	10 10	5 20	2 37
Crestl'e ar.	11 45	6 55	4 20
" lv.	12 05 pm	7 15 pm	4 30	6 05am
Mansfield	12 35	7 44	5 00	6 55
Orrville	2 26	9 38	7 10	9 15
Alliance	4 00	11 15	9 00	11 20
Rochester	6 22	1 20 am	11 06	2 00pm
Pittsburgh	7 30	2 30	12 15	3 30

Trains Nos 3 and 6 run daily. Train No. 1 leaves Pittsburg daily except Sunday. Train No 4 leaves Chicago daily except Saturday. All others daily except Sunday.

F. R. MYERS,
Gen. Pass. and Ticket Agent.

De'troit, Eel River & Illinois R R.

TAKE EFFECT Nov. 19 1877.

GOING EAST.

Stations.	MAIL No. 2,	ACCOM. No. 8,	LOCAL FT No. 6,
lv. Logansport	8 15am	7 20pm	6 30am
Mexico	8 37	8 20	7 40
Denver	9 05	9 03	8 25
Chili	9 17	9 12	8 47
Roann	9 35	9 27	9 35
Laketon	9 55	10 00	10 10
N. Manchester	10 06	10 17	10 35
Liberty Mills	10 17	10 30	11 00
Collamer	10 31	10 50	11 40
S. Whitley	10 35	10 55	11 50
Columbia City	11 05	11 31	12 50
Col'en's	11 20	11 55	2 00
Churubusco	11 34	12 18	2 51
La Otto	11 47	12 42	3 25
Cedar Creek	12 06	12 53	3 48
Auburn Junct'n	12 23	1 12	4 25
Aupurn	12 25	1 17	4 35
Butler	1 00am	2 00am	5 45pm

Going West.

Stations.	No. 1,	No.	No. 7,
Logansport ar.	5 00pm	1 00pm	6 50pm
Mexico	6 26	12 00	5 40
Denver	6 17	11 46	5 20
Chili	6 10	11 35	5 00
Roann	5 57	11 12	4 15
Laketon	5 42	10 50	3 30
North Manchester	5 35	10 35	3 00
Liberty Mills	5 27	10 17	2 38
Collamar	5 15	9 57	2 05
South Whitley	5 12	9 52	1 53
Columbia City	4 50	9 18	12 10
Collin's	4 32	8 53	11 20
Cherubusco	4 20	8 38	10 35
La Otto	3 55	8 10	10 05
Cedar Creek	3 45	8 00	9 48
Auburn Junction	3 27	7 40	9 15
Auburn	3 22	7 35	8 30
Butler lv	2 45pm	6 55am	7 15

FRANK J. HECKER,
Gen. Sup't

Baltimore & Ohio Railroad.

IN EFFECT Nov. 18 1877.

GOING WEST.

STATIONS:	Express	Express	Cum'l A
lv New York	8 15am	8 55pm
Philadelphia	11 45	11 30
Baltimore	5 15pm	7 00am
Washington	6 55	8 40
Wheeling	8 25am	10 50pm	4 20pm
Bellaire	8 50am	11 15	4 50
Barnesville	10 10	12 30am	6 12
Cambridge	11 15	1 17	7 30
Zanesville	12 35pm	2 35	8 50
ar Newark	1 30	3 40	9 00
Columbus	2 30	5 20
Shawnee	4 50	10 10
lv Columbus	12 40
Newark	2 20	3 50	5 00pm
Mt Vernon	3 29	4 50	7 15
Mansfield	4 54	6 19	11 25
Shelby	5 11	6 47	12 25am
Monroeville	6 13	8 25	3 00
ar Sandusky	7 30	9 10	4 30
lv Chicago Junction	6 00	7 45	6 15
Republic	6 45	8 19	8 10
Tiffin	7 15	8 39	9 55
Fostoria	7 45	9 10	10 00
Deshler	8 50	10 09	1 35pm
Defiance	9 52	11 06	3 35
Hicksville	10 42	11 53	5 45
Auburn Junction	11 23	12 30pm	7 20
Garrett	11 40pm	1 05	8 00am
Avilla
Albion	12 17am	1 44	9 04
Milford Junction
Walkertown Junction	2 23	3 42	1 04
Chicago	5 40	7 00

GOING EAST.

Chicago	6 50am	9 40pm
Walkertown Junction	12 30pm	10 54pm	11 20am
Milford Junction			2 27pm
Albion	2 30	2 10	4 15
Avilla	2 49	3 30	5 00
Garrett	3 20	3 55	6 00am
Auburn Junction	3 28	4 02	6 18
Hicksville	4 07	4 42	7 48
Defiance	4 54	5 27	9 15
Deshler	5 48	6 25	11 35
Fostoria	6 47	7 23	2 10pm
Tiffin	7 15	7 54	3 20
Republic	7 36
Sandusky
Monroeville
Chicago Junction	8 40	9 30	1 25
Shelby Junction	9 15	10 06	2 56
Mansfield	9 44	10 37	3 55
Mt. Vernon	11 13	12 10pm	7 15
Ar Newark	12 15am	1 15	9 30
lv Columbus	9 30	3 00
Shawnee
Newark	12 30am	2 05	5 55am
Lv Zanesville	1 35	3 10	7 10
Cambridge	2 37	4 05	8 14
Barnesville	3 38	5 05	9 20
Ar Bellaire	4 50	6 20	10 40
Wheeling	5 00	7 05	11 55
Washington	7 20pm	7 50am
Baltimore	8 40	9 20
Philadelphia	2 15am	1 45pm
New York	6 45	5 15pm

Zanesville Accommodation leaves Zanesville daily except Sunday at 4:50 a. m., and arrives a Columbus at 9:40 a. m.

Express trains run daily, other trains daily except Sunday.

L. M. COLE, Gen. Tick. Agt.

Ft. Wayne, Muncie & Cin. R. R.

Muncie Route.

THE SHORT LINE TO INDIANAPOLIS,
—AND—
THE SOUTHWEST.

Time Card in effect Nov. 18, 1877.

STATIONS.	GOING SOUTH. 1. Mail.	3. Express.	5. Accom
FORT WAYNE	1 00 pm	6 00 pm
Bluffton	2 10	7 15 pm
Montpelier	2 44	7 57 pm
Hartford	3 17	8 34 pm
MUNCIE	4 15	9 30 pm	8 10 am
Newcastle	5 00		9 00
Cambridge City	5 40		9 40
Connersville	6 30		10 30
Cincinnati	10 00 pm		12 25 pm
INDIANAPOLIS	6 05	11 30 pm
Louisville	10 05 pm	6 20 am
Terre Haute	10 04 pm	4 40 am
St. Louis	7 35 am	8 30 am

STATIONS	GOING NORTH. 2	6 Express.	4 Accom.
St. Louis		6 45 am
Terre Haute		1 35 pm
Louisville		7 17 pm
Cincinnati	7 30 am
Indianapolis		4 35 am	4 10 pm
Connersville	10 00 am		6 26 pm
Cambridge City	11 15 am		7 40 pm
New Castle	11 55 am		8 18 pm
Muncie	12 41 pm	8 20 am	8 50 pm
Hartford	1 35 pm	9 15 am
Montpelier	2 04 pm	9 41 am
Bluffton	2 40 pm	10 19 am
Fort Wayne	3 50 pm	11 15 am

All trains daily except Sunday. Trains run on Columbus time. Through cars attached to trains 1 and 4, and run between Fort Wayne and Indianapolis via Muncie.

Geo. W. Mullen, Act'g Gen. Tick. Ag't.
W. W. Worthington, Gen. Supt.

Ft. Wayne, Jackson & Sag. R. R

Short Line Between

Michigan and the South.

Time card in effect Nov. 18—run by Chicago time

Going South.

Stations	Mail	Exp.	Fr't.
Jackson	6 45 am	40 am	[illegible]
Air Line Junc
Wilsons	7 15	11 .
Baldwins	7 22	12 11
Hanover	7 27	12 20
Stony Point	7 42	12 25
Mosherville	7 55	12 36	6 55
Ar Jonesville	8 10	12 45	7 20
Bankers	8 23	1 07	7 47
Reading	8 44	1 20	8 15
Montgomery	9 00	1 35	8 33
State Line	9 11	1 44	8 56
Fremont	9 22	1 55	9 12
Ar Angola	9 45	2 15	9 45
Pleasant Lake	9 56	2 28	10 03
Summit	10 11	2 33	10 24
Waterloo	10 23	2 47	10 50
Auburn	10 41	3 01	11 15
Auburn June	10 46	3 05	11 26
St. Johns	10 56	3 16	11 32
New Era	11 00	3 20	11 50
Steners	11 10	3 25	12 11am
Huntertown	11 16	3 33	12 16
Caroll's Crossing	11 25	3 36	12 23
Academie	11 33	3 46	12 36
Ft Wayne	11 45 am	4 00 pm	1 00am

Going North.

Dep. Fort Wayne	4 15 pm	11 15 am	1 30am
Academie	4 31	11 30	1 52
Caroll's Crossing	4 38	11 32	2 00
Huntertown	4 45	11 38	2 05
Steners	4 50	11 42	2 16
New Era	5 00	11 51	2 26
St. Johns	5 5	11 55	2 36
Auburn Junction	5 15	12 05 pm	3 00
Auburn	5 18	2 06	3 25
Waterloo	5 22	2 10	4 05
Summit	5 47	2 33	4 30
Pleasant Lake	6 02	2 46	4 45
Ar Angola	6 38	2 57	5 15
Fremont	6 55	1 15	6 00
State Line	7 03	1 25	6 15
Montgomery	7 20	1 35	6 40
Reading	7 35	1 49	7 15
Bankers	7 47	2 06	7 40
Jonesville	8 05	2 28	8 10
Mosherville	8 22	2 47	8 35
Stonep Point	8 31	2 55	8 45
Hanover	8 37	3 01	8 52
Baldwins	8 48	3 10	9 16
Wilsons	8 50	3 21	9 35
Air Line Junc
Jackson	9 20 pm	3 40 pm	10 00am

All trains daily except Sunday.

P. S. LOOMIS, Pres't
S. K. HOOPER Gen. Ticket Ag't.

JAS. CLIFFORD,

WATERLOO, IND.

Keeps constantly on hand the best and choicest brands of all kinds of

Wines and Liquors,

Cigars, Tobaccos, &c.

He also has, in connection with the above a first class

BILLIARD HALL.

To our citizens and the traveling public, we would say that this is the popular resort at W co. First door south of the railroad

---

GOLD Great chance to make money. If you can't get gold you can get greenbacks. We need a person in every town to take subscriptions for the largest, cheapest and best illustrated family publication in the world. Any one can become a successful agent. The most elegant works of art given free to subscribers. The price is so low that almost every body subscribes. One Agent reports making over $150 in a week. A lady agent reports taking over 400 subscribers in ten days. All who engage make money fast. You can devote all your time to the business, or only your spare time. You need not be away from home over night. You can do it as well as others. Full directions and terms free. Elegant and expensive outfit free. If you want profitable work send us your address at once. It costs nothing to try the business. No one who engages fails to make great pay. Address "The People's Journal," Portland Maine.

Dr. A. G. OLIN'S [illegible]

MARRIAGE GUIDE [illegible]

A PHYSIOLOGICAL

View of Marriage!

WOMAN AND MARRIAGE

[illegible]

$45 [illegible] Chicago, Ill.

$3 GOLD PLATED WATCHES. Cheapest in the known world. Sample Watch Free to Agents. Address, A. COULTER & Co., Chicago.

THE AUBURN COURIER.

Devoted to the Interests of the Democratic Party and to the Collection of Local and General News.

Volume 7. AUBURN, DeKALB COUNTY INDIANA, DECEMBER 13th, 1877. Number 50.

The Auburn Weekly Courier

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY, BY

TOM. C. MAYS.

One Year......$[illegible] | Six Months......$[illegible]

Advertising Rates.

Space.	1m.	3m.	6m.	1 Y.
1 Square	2 00	5 00	7 00	12 00
¼ Column........	[illegible]	12 00	[illegible]	[illegible]
½ Column........	10 00	15 00	30 00	[illegible]
1 Column........	15 00	20 00	50 00	100 00

Local Notices 10 cents per line, first insertion 5cents each insertion thereafter. Business cards Five Dollars.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY

TERMS OF COURT.

COURTS IN DEKALB CO.	COURTS IN STEUBEN CO
th Monday in February	1st Monday in Feb'y
rd Monday in May.	4th Monday in April.
th Monday in Septem'r	1st Monday in Sept'r
rd Monday in Decem'r	4th Monday in Nov'r.

ATTORNEYS.

H. C. PETERSON,

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public. Office over Davis' hardware store, Auburn, Ind.

J. W. RICKEL,

ATTORNEY AT LAW Auburn, Ind. Special attention given to collections. Office over First National Bank.

A. F. PINCHIN

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public, Butler, DeKalb Co., Ind. Insurance and real estate business promptly attended to.

GUY PLUM

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public. Office in the Court House. Special attention paid to the collection of claims. Also agent for Home Insurance Company.

B. D. MOODY. P. V. HOFFMAN.

Moody and Hoffman,

ATTORNEYS AT LAW. Office in Odd Fellows' building, opposite Court House, Auburn, Ind.

BEST and McCLELLAN.

ATTORNEYS AT LAW, Waterloo, Ind. Will practice in the Courts of DeKalb & Steuben counties. Liberal Advances Made on all first-class claims left in our hands for collection.

R. A. FRANKS. O. Z. HUBBELL.

Franks & Hubbell,

ATTORNEYS at law, will practice in DeKalb and adjoining counties. Special attention given to the collection of claims, settlements of decendent estates and conveyance. Office on Broadway opposite Haskins & Son's livery stable, Butler, Ind.

R. WES. M'BRIDE, J. L. MORLAN, W. H. LEAS

McBRIDE, MORLAN and LEAS

ATTORNEYS AT LAW, NOTARIES PUBLIC, COLLECTING AND INSURANCE AGENCY Office over Fisher's Clothing Store, corner of Wayne and Marion streets, Waterloo, Ind. Will practice in all parts of the State. Especial Attention given to collections in DeKalb, Steuben, LaGrange and Noble counties.

PHYSICIANS.

DR. J. A. COWAN,

PHYSICIAN & SURGEON, Auburn, Ind. Office on Main street, over Central Grocery.

W. S. ALLEN.

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, Office West of Court House, on Main Street, over McBridge's store. Same office lately occupied by Dr. Cowan.

Dr. T. J. Dills,

Especial attention given to Diseases of the EYE and EAR. Rooms 1 and 2 Odd Fellows' building. Office hours—9:30 to 12 a. m.; 1 to 3 p. m. 7 to 8 p. m.

DR. TRITCH,

HOMEOPATHIC PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON Special attention given to Surgery and Chronic diseases. Office in Case's Block, Auburn Indiana.

DR. S. B. JOHNSTON.

DENTIST. WATERLOO, INDIANA, Does all work in the line of his profession at as low figures as possible. Special attention given to gold filling and making new teeth. All work warranted.

HOTELS.

AVELINE HOUSE,

MILLER & MORITZ, Prop's., corner Calhoun & Berry Sts., Fort Wayne, Ind.

BUTT'S HOTEL,

FORMERLY THE BIGLER HOUSE, JOHN BUTT & A. B. RICHARDS. Proprietors, Waterloo, Ind. Free omnibus to and from all trains Good sample rooms on first floor.

Central House,

MR. M. O. MARKEL, Prop. Corner Main and Seventh streets. Good Sample Rooms for Drummers.

MAYER HOUSE.

ENOCH ZOLLARS Proprietor, Corner Calhoun and Wayne Streets, Fort Wayne, Ind. Good Sample Rooms.

TREMONT HOUSE.

WASHINGTON, D. C. Accommodates three hundred guests. Terms $2.50 per day. Located corner Second street and Indiana Avenue, in full view of the Capitol City Hall.

F. P. HILL.

SANDS HOUSE.

COR. WABASH AVE. & MADISON ST. CHICAGO, ILL. New House, elegantly furnished. Only $2.00 per day.

Geo. S. Palmer, O. Sands,
[Late of City Hotel.] 6 mo. Proprietor

MISCELLANEOUS.

H. Wartenslaben

PAINTER and paper hanger. House painting specialty. Residence corner Williams and Cedar street.

EXAMINATION OF TEACHERS.—Examinations will be held in Auburn on the first Saturday, and in Waterloo on the last Saturday in each month, beginning March 4, 1876. Examination begin at 10 o'clock A. M.

JAMES A. BARNES Co. Sup't.

BILL BRITTON
THE DRAY MAN
Will attend promptly to all orders for
DRAYING AND HAULING.
[illegible] good teams and teamsters.

EAGLE MILLS.

FLOUR, CORN MEAL, FEED, &c.

The reputation of the Eagle Mills, its excellent facilities for making good flour together with the advantages it possesses in the way of improved machinery enables the proprietor to announce that he is now prepared to meet all demands in the way of custom work. The Eagle Mill brand of flour will be found on hand at reasonable rates. Orders delivered in any part of town free of charge. P. W. SILVERS.

CARPETS

ELLSWORTH, ANDREW & Co.,

Offer a large and choice stock of Carpets in all the newest designs.

Body Brussels Carpets,
Tapestry Carpets,
Ingrain Carpets,
COTTON CHAIN CARPETS,
HEMP CARPETS,
RAG CARPETS.

Terry's Reps, Cretonnes, Lace Curtains, Shades, Wall Paper, Stair Rods.

OIL CLOTHS,

Mattings, Rugs and Mats, Druggets

And all goods pertaining to the carpet and upholstry business.

Lambrequins
A Specialty.

Prices Low to Compete with the Times

ELLSWORTH, ANDREW & CO.
26 East Berry Street,
Fort Wayne, Indiana.

J. G. FLEDDERMAN
No. 27, East Main-St.
FORT WAYNE, IND'A
as the largest and finest stock of
CLOTHS, COATINGS, CHEVIOTS,
AND CassimereS
in Ft. Wayne. The finest line of
Made up Clothing
ever shown in Fort Wayne
Youths' and Children's Clothing!
Furnishing Goods, &c.
Merchant Tailoring

All work done in all the latest styles, prom attended. [illegible]

HURRAH.

THE NEW AMERICAN
SEWING MACHINE
SELF THREADING SHUTTLE
SELF SETTING NEEDLE
SIMPLEST & BEST.

A MAN CRAZY
Selling
SEWING MACHINES!
For 30 DOLLARS
Go and see them.
G. H. YESBERA, AGT

True Merit Will Win.

A few years since the proprietor of Dr. Morris' Syrup of Tar, Wild Cherry and Horehound introduced it there.—Our people soon found it out to be the reliable and already it has become the most staple and popular pulmonary remedy in the market. It quickly cures the worst colds, coughs, croupe, bronchitis, asthma and incipient consumption. Nothing acts so nicely in whooping cough, and it is so pleasant that children really like it. Containing no opium, or other dangerous drug, it is as safe as it is sure. Trial size 10c; large sizes 50c and $1.00. Sold by F. E. Davenport.

Also agents for Prof. Parker's Pleasant Worm Syrup, which is sure death to worms, pleasant to take, and requirs no physic. Price 25 cts. Try it.

German Syrup.

No other medicine in the world was ever given such a test of its curative qualities as Boschee's German Syrup. In three years two million four hundred thousand small bottles of this medicine was distributed free of charge by Druggists in this country to those afflicted with Consumtion, Asthama, Croupe, Severe Coughs, Pneumonia and other diseases of the throat and lungs, giving the American people undeniable proof that German Syrup will cure them The result has been that Druggists in every town an village in the United States are recommending it to their cutomers. Go to your Druggist, F. E. Davenport, and ask what he knows about it. Sample bottles 10 cents. Regular size 75 cents. Three doses will relieve any case.

For sale by F. E. Davenport.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician retired from active practice, having had placed in his hands by an East Indian missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitas, Catarrh, Asthama, and all throat and lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for general debility and all nervous complaints, after having thouroughly tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, feels it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. The receipt will be sent free of charge, to all who desire it, with full directions for preparing and successfully using. Address with stamp naming this paper, Dr. J. C. Stone, 44 North Ninth Street, Philadelphia Pa.

For Kansas and Colorado.

Take the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railroad, extending from Kansas City and Atchison, on the Missouri river, via Topeka, the capital of Kansas, through the fertile Arkansas Valley, to Pueblo, where direct connections is made with the Denver & Rio Grande Railway for Colorado Springs, Manitou, Denver, Cannon City, and all points of note on the Denver & Rio Grande. The track is excelled by that of no road in the West, and the passenger equipment embraces all the modern improvements for comfort and safety. Through express trains leave union depots, Kansas City and Atchison, daily, on the arrival of trains from the East, and run through to the Rocky Mountains, with Pulman Sleeping Cars attached. For maps, circulars and detailed information send to T. J. ANDERSON,

Gen. Pass. Ag't., Topeka, Kan.

A Few Words of Wisdom.

For all who are seeking new homes in the West. If you are going to change your location, by all means you should keep on about the same latitude as where you formerly lived for in this way you will escape the severe climatic changes in the weather incident to the extreme North or South, having none of these things to contend with, your self and family are healthy and you become a producer at once, consequently soon independent; on the other hand should you listen to the many glowing accounts of the sunny South, or the mild climate of the North, and thus be induced to try your fortunes there, you will find the reality is not all your fancy painted it. If you go South it usually takes about two years to get accli nated to the climate, during which time, not being able to work, yourself and family are consumers, besides being constantly exposed to the malarial fevers which abound there, and the experience of many is that they return discouraged, leaving not a few loved ones beneath the sod in the sunny South. Therefore, in going West keep on about the same latitude which will insure health and happiness. There are most excellent lands in Northern Missouri on the line of the Hannibal & St. Jo. R. R. and in Kansass, Nebraska and Colorado, "just as cheap and good as the sun ever shown upon," why not accept a certainty rather than run the risk of losing all? Through day and sleeping cars are run from Toledo, Ohio, via the Wabash R'y and Quincy to St. Jo., Atchison and Kansas city, and from Chicago via Chicago, Burlington & Quincy R. R., whereby all arre furnished firstclass accomodations.

Send for map and time-table to J. A. S. Reed, 59 Clark street, Chicago, C. W. Boardman, Decatur, Ill., or T. Penfield, G. P. and T. A., Hanibal, Mo.

From the Logansport Pharos.

Notes and Items of Early Times.

BY MAJOR M'FADEN.

Now for the bear. After going north he turned east and killed a couple of hogs in the neighborhood of Brunk's, and then turned northwest and killed a calf near Stephen Jones', the bee hunter. We sounded the tocsin, called in our forces, and with the Torence and Hollenbeck boys, started on the war path, resolved to do or die for the rising generation. We were provided with guns and five dog, including the big grey hound, given to my father by Samuel Matlock, of Lancaster, Ohio, which money could not buy. We soon got on the bear's track, crossing the sand ridges and soft places in the prairie. He was a smasher, and made a track more like the human family than any animal that we had ever seen. We were almost led to believe in Darwin, who teaches that man came up from the lower order of animals, and this bear's tracks did look as if he might be a connecting link between man and the monkey. But I never liked Darwin's idea of running you out to a tadpole or a grease spot. The bear traveled fast and had a kind of an elephant trot, or engineer swing. The dogs would run way ahead after him for miles, and then come back pretty well "chawed up." They at last got frightened and would not follow him. The greyhound was game and wanted to pitch in, but we kept him back, as we did not want him to get hurt. Several times we got sight of the old fellow crossing the prairie from one side ridge to another. He made good time and we had hard work to keep anywhere near him.

While crossing a ridge, we saw a deer coming right towards us with tongue out and very tired. One of the boys was going to shoot, but I told him to hold on, that there was something the matter with it. We kept the dogs in and it came right up to us. Just then five or six big grey wolves (none of your little prairie wolves) and one big black one, the only one we ever saw, came running after it. We opened fire on them and killed the black and grey one, and wounded another, which got away with the rest. As we heard that a black wolf skin was very valuable, we skinned them. While doing so we heard a noise and looking round saw an old she wolf and four young ones coming in on the home stretch, to be at the death and feast off the deer. We fired at them, but without effect, and they ran one way and the deer another, without saying good-bye. We hung up the wolf skins in a safe place and followed up bruin, who had got the start of us, and had come across bees in an old hoolow tree and tore the honey out making a mess of it, but had left enough for us. Bears are great for honey or anything sweet, and do not mind the sting of bees more than you would a mosquito bite. Along toward night his tracks became most too fresh, and we were afraid, so conclued to camp on his track. While preparing to camp a couple of the boys went out to get some game for supper, and in about an hour came in with a fine fat buck, from which we had a fine feast. We sat by the camp fire and "chawed" roasted ribs and broiled venison, and thought how the old fellows who dressed in purple and fine linen, and fared suptiously every day, but had lost their appetite and digestive powers, and got the gout and despepisia, would give a million if they could just eat such a meal as we did. There are some who live only to eat, but in those days we ate to live and keep soul and body together, and were happy. I long for those days again. The nights were dark and we made two big fires, one on each side of us, as we had heard that wild animals will not go through fire for a meals victuals. Several times we were badly frightened in the night, and even our dogs were afraid. We kept out a picket guard, but it was hard to get any one to leave the fire very far, as we were afraid that the bear would make a raid and gobble us up before we could say our prayers.

The morning came and found us with our scalps all right, and we were soon off on the trail. He had turned east and gone north of Fletcher's lake, and by Mud lake in Fulton county, and then west to the Tippecanoe, near the Indian camp where Aubbeenaubbee and Mingo were. Through the day we found where he had made a meal off of a dead or wounded deer as bear connot catch a sound deer. As it was nearly night we concluded to stay with the Indians, and they agreed to go with us in the morning. After a good night's sleep we were off early, with Indians, guns, and a new supply of dogs, and with their aid soon found the trail. After following him till almost noon, we saw him go into a swamp filled with thick elbow brush. The Indians said he would make his last fight there. We prepared to give battle, surrounded the swamp and then sent the dogs in. One of the Indians who had a rifle that carried an ounce ball, got sight of him, fired and broke one of his fore legs and that brought him to bay. He stood up on his hind legs and looked like a gorillo and I almost thought that Darwin was right. We all closed in on him, but could not fire for fear of killing the dogs, they were so close around him. After he had killed and wounded four or five dogs the grey hound broke loose and went in. The bear grabbed him with his well fore leg and was about to crush and kill him when Aubbeenaubbee rushed in with a big kife and struck the bear under the shoulder and that settled his hash. He let the dog go and gave up the ghost. He was an ugly old rascal and had a bad preath. According to parenology and phyiology, and judging from his head and countenance, which were bad, his moral character had not been good in the neighborhood and vicinity where he had formily resided.

The Indians said he was the largest and only one they had seen in this part of the country for many years. They supposed that he was a wanderer from the far north, on an exploring expedition. We skinned him and gave the hide to 'Aubbee,' as it was he who struck the fatal blow and saved my father's dog. He was not very fat and tasted like a mixture of coon, pork, shad, and codfish. We took a scout around and got our wolf skins and returned home well satisfied with our bear hunt, which was the last and only one in my life. We sold our wolf skins and other fur to Tom Archer, who was then buying fur for Walker & Ewing for a good price. We bought something for everybody in the neighborhood and invited 'Aubbee' and Mingo over and we had a grand jambouree on the prairie, they staid two or three days with us and had a grand old time out in the wilderness.

Now my dear friends I must leave you again for the present, and when I get more time will tell you of the death and burial of Aubbeenaubbee, how he died a christian, with the cross of Christ in his hand and gently passed away without a murmur to the happy hunting grounds and also what became of Mingo.

BLUE GRASS, 1839.

* * *

An unusually sad and unexpected calamity has befallen the family of ex-Sheriff Twitchell, of this place, within the last two weeks. Mrs. T., an estimable lady, while in apparent good health, has through a terrible fright—by a rash (and no doubt malicious) act—been driven to malignant insanity.

The circumstances connected with and directly leading to the case in question are substantially as follows: About ten days ago Mrs. Twitchell retired for the night and was sound asleed when—crash! crash!—the fine large lights of the bay window were shivered into innumerable fragments by the blows of a heavy club in the hands of some one outside, the particles of glass flying all over the room. As may well be expected, the woman was terribly startled and sprang from her bed, screaming for life.

At about the same hour of the following night—ten o'clock, or perhaps a little later,—Mr. Twitchell was aroused by the voice of his wife who had suddenly struck up a favorite air and continued to sing, notwithstanding his efforts to arouse her. All attempts were vain, and the devoted husband soon realized the fearful truth that his wife was no longer sane. From that hour she has continued to rave, almost constantly, requiring the closest attention, and at times several strong men to keep her under subjection and prevent her from injuring herself and others.—Angola Herald.

* * *

How beautiful it is to enter a house where there is a daughter just blossoming into womanhood, and to note the effect of her presence in the domestic arrangements. Everything speaks of her benign presence—the tender and home like atmosphere of the parlor—the thousand little tastful trifles—the birds, the flowers, the various graceful feminine adornments—even the abnormal limberness of the sofa-springs, and to have her old man worth $50,000, with an assurance of getting a big lift right after you hook on to her. Yes, its nice.

"An' zis," remarked McMahon, extending his hand and smiling affably. "An' zis is ze braze zhonoral zat unto ze men of ze grad United States armies have sade: "I vill on zis line it fight out no mattaire if it consume ze hole summaire?"

* * *

Our friend Mr. Gibson at the City Bakery has now exclusive control of the baking department, and is ready with increased facilities to supply the demand for good bread. tf.

100,000 Copies of ST. NICHOLAS FOR THE CHTIRSMAS HOLIDAYS. Only 25c a Copy.

Some idea of the attractions offered in the Christmas Holiday Number of St. Nicholas, of which 100,000 copies will be issued, may be gained from the following: There are poems of William W. Longfellow, and William Cullen Bryant; a fine hitherto unpublished sketch of Boy Life, by the late Theodore Winthrop; and a short story by the author of "Alice in Wonderland;" a new fairy story, "Sweet Marjoram Day," by Frank R. Stockton, "The Peterkins' Charades," by Lucretia P. Hale; a poetic riddle by Dr. J. G. Holland, and a comparison between the manners of young folks in olden times and nowadays, by Gail Hamilton.

Of the story element, the brightes feature is the begining of the new serial by Miss Alcott, entitled "Under the Licacs," with illustrations by Mary Hallock Foote.

The Christmas number contains also the opening of a new serial Story for boys, a tale of tropical life, by Gustavus Frankenstein, entitled "Tower-Mountain," admirably illustrated by the artists Moran & Kelly; A portrait of Miss Alcott, with a sketch of her life; several poems by two little American girls; a play and a Christmas carol (set to music), and half a dozen complete short stories, bright, funny, exciting and pathetic, &c.

The New Cover is by the English artist, Walter Crane,—the famous designer of "The Baby's Opera."

ST. NICHOLAS FOR 1878

Besides Miss Alcott's serial for girls, and the three serials for boys, to follow each other in rapid succession, will contain a short serial story by the author of "Schonbergcatta Family," and an article "Around the World in a Yacht, Boys!" has been promised by a briliant writer, now on the actual tour of the world in his own yacht. There will be contributions by a daughter of the famous Peter Parley, and a letter to Young Americans by George Macdonald The "How" series of instructive papers, by various authors, will tell how to bind your own books; how they mine coal; how to enjoy your selves at home; how to be an agreeable guest; how to entertain company; how to be a carpenter; how to make an ice boat; how to build a house; how India Rubber is gathered; how matches are made; how money is made; how mackerel are caught; how they laid the atlantic cable; how they mine in California; how they work in the tea-country; how to be a parlor magician; etc. There will be also a series of stories and sketches of Foreign Life.

Travel and Adventure, such as "Old Nicholl" (a Russian story), "A Day among the Welch Castles," "Easter in Germany," "The Indian of the Amazon, 'How Kitty was Lost in a Turkish Bazar,' 'Master Montezuma' (a Mexican story), 'Hans, the Lapp Maiden,' and many others.

"Jack-in-the-Pulpit," Young Contributors' Department,' 'Letter-Box,' 'Riddle-Box,' and 'For Very Little Folks,' will be continued.

The four bound volumes of St. Nicholas already published are the most wonderful, beautiful and attractive Christmas present for young people. Each volume is complete in itself. Vols. 1 and 2, $3.00 each: vols. 3 and 4, $4.00 each.

Subscription price, $3.00 a year, postage paid. Single copies 25 cents each.

Sold by all Book Sellers & News-Dealers.

SCRIBNER & CO., 743 Broadway, N. Y.

Grand Concert.

The musical Convention now in session in this place under the direction of Messrs. Straub and Reed, is progressing finely and will close Friday evening Dec. 14th, with a grand Concert in the [illegible] room of the Presbyterian church. The best musical talent of our community is represented in the convention, and a high order of music is in rehearsal. Our citizens may expect an unusual fine entertainment. Make your arrangements to attend the Concert.

* * *

While ten men watch for chances, one man makes chances; while ten men wait for something to turn up one man turns something up; so while ten fail, one succeeds and is called men of luck, the favorite of fortune. There is no luck like pluck, and fortune most favors those who are most indifferent to fortune.

$777 is not easily earned in these times but it can be made in three months by any one of either sex, in any part of the country who is willing to work steadily at the employment we furnish. $66 per week in your own town. You need not be away from home over night. You can give your whole time to the work, or only your spare time. We have agents who are making over $20 per day. All who engage at once can make money fast. At the present time money cannot be made so easily and rapidly at any other business. It costs nothing to try the business. Terms and $5 outfit free. Address at once, H. HALLETT & Co., Portland, Maine. October 11,—6m eoll.

—Kiblinger's Hardware is headquarters for all kinds of lamps, chimneys and general line of lamp goods.

THE MESSAGE

Annual Communication of the President to Congress.

The Southern, Civil-Service, Financial and Other Questions Discussed.

Fellow-Citizens of the Senate and House of Representatives:

With devout gratitude to the Bountiful Giver of All Good, I congratulate you that, at the beginning of your first regular session, you find our country blessed with health and peace, and abundant harvests, and with encouraging prospects of an early return of general prosperity.

The Southern Policy.

To complete and make permanent the pacification of the country continues to be, and, until it is fully accomplished, must remain the most important of all our national interests. The earnest purpose of good citizens generally to unite their efforts in this endeavor is evident. It found decided expression in the resolutions announced in 1876, by the national conventions of the leading political parties of the country. There was a widespread apprehension that the momentous results in our progress as a nation, marked by the recent amendments to the constitution, were in imminent jeopardy; that the good understanding which prompted their adoption in the interest of a loyal devotion to the general welfare might prove a barren truce, and that the sections of the country, once engaged in civil strife, might be again almost as widely severed and disunited as they were when arrayed in arms against each other. The course to be pursued which, in my judgment, seemed the wisest in the presence of this emergency, was plainly indicated in the inaugural address. It pointed to the time, which all our people desire to see, when a genuine love of our whole country and of all that concerns its true welfare shall supplant the destructive forces of mutual animosity of the races and of sectional hostility. Opinions have differed widely as to the measures best calculated to secure this great end. This was to be expected. The measures adopted by the administration have been subjected to severe and varied criticism. Any course whatever which might have been entered upon would certainly have encountered distrust and opposition. These measures were, in my judgment, such as were most in harmony with the constitution and with the genius of our people, and best adapted, under all circumstances, to attain the end in view. Beneficent results already apparent prove that these endeavors are not to be regarded as a mere experiment, and should sustain and encourage us in our efforts already in the brief period which has elapsed. The immediate effectiveness, no less than the justice, of the course pursued, is demonstrated, and I have an abiding faith that time will furnish ample vindication in the minds of the great majority of my fellow-citizens.

The discontinuance of the use of the army for the purpose of upholding the local Governments in two of the States of the Union was no less a constitutional duty and requirement, under the circumstances existing at the time, than it was a much-needed measure for the restoration of local self-government and the promotion of national harmony. The withdrawal of the troops from such employment was effected deliberately, and with solicitous care for the peace and good order of society and the protection of property and persons and every right of all classes of citizens. The results that have followed are indeed significant and encouraging. All apprehension of danger from remitting those States to local self-government is dispelled, and a most salutary change in the minds of the people has begun, and is in progress in every part of that section of country, once the theater of unhappy civil strife, substituting for suspicion, distrust and aversion, concord, friendship and patriotic attachment to the Union. No unprejudiced mind will deny that the often-fatal collisions, which for several years have been of frequent occurrence, and have alarmed the public mind, have almost entirely ceased, and that a spirit of mutual forbearance and hearty national interest has succeeded. There has been a general re-establishment of order, and of the orderly administration of justice. Instances of remaining lawlessness have become of rare occurrence; political turmoil and turbulence have disappeared; useful industries have been resumed; public credit in the Southern States has been greatly strengthened, and the encouraging benefits of a revival of commerce between the sections of the country lately imbroiled in civil war are fully enjoyed. Such are some of the results already attained upon which the country is to be congratulated. They are of such importance that we may with confidence patiently await the desired consummation that will surely come with the natural progress of events.

The Emancipated Race.

It may not be improper here to say that it should be our fixed and unalterable determination to protect, by all available and proper means, under the constitution and the laws, the lately-emancipated race in the whole of their rights and privileges, and I urge upon those to whom heretofore the colored people have sustained the relation of bondsmen the wisdom and justice of humane and liberal local legislation, with respect to their education and general welfare; a firm adherence to the laws, both national and State, as to the civil and political rights of the colored people, now advanced to full and equal citizenship; the immediate repression and sure punishment, by the national and local authorities within their respective jurisdictions, of every instance of lawlessness and violence towards them as required for the security alike of both races, and justly demanded by the public opinion of the country and the age. In this way the restoration of harmony and good will, and the complete protection of every citizen in the full enjoyment of every constitutional right, will surely be attained. Whatever authority rests with me to this end I shall not hesitate to put forth. Whatever belongs to the power of Congress and the jurisdiction of the courts of the Union, they may confidently be relied upon to provide and perform, and to the Legislatures, the courts, and the executive authorities of the several States I earnestly appeal to secure by adequate, appropriate, and seasonable means within their borders these common and uniform rights of a united people which loves liberty, abhors oppression, and reveres justice. These objects are very dear to my heart. I shall continue most earnestly to strive for their attainment. The cordial co-operation of all classes of all sections of the country, and of both races, is required for this purpose, and with these blessings assured, and not otherwise, we may safely hope to hand down our free institutions of government unimpaired to the generations that will succeed us.

Resumption of Specie Payments.

Among the other subjects of great and general importance to the people of this country, I cannot be mistaken, I think, in regarding as pre-eminent the policy and measures which are designed to secure the restoration of the currency to that normal and healthful condition in which, by the resumption of specie payments, our internal trade and foreign commerce may be brought into harmony with the system of exchanges which is based upon the precious metals as the intrinsic money of the world. In the public judgment that this end should be sought and compassed as speedily and as securely as the resources of the people and the wisdom of the Government can accomplish, there is a much greater degree of unanimity than is found to concur in the specific measures which will bring the country to this desired end, or the rapidity of the steps by which it can be safely reached. Upon a most anxious and deliberate examination which I have felt it my duty to give to the subject, I am but the more confirmed in the opinion which I expressed in accepting the nomination for the Presidency, and again upon my inauguration, that the policy of resumption should be pursued by every suitable means and that no legislation would be wise that should disparage the importance or retard the attainment of that result. I have no disposition, and certainly no right, to question the sincerity or the integrity of opposing opinions, and would neither conceal nor undervalue the considerable difficulties, and even occasional distress, which may attend the progress of the nation toward this primary condition of its general and permanent prosperity. I must, however, adhere to my most earnest conviction, that any wavering in purpose, or unsteadiness in methods, so far from avoiding or reducing the inconvenience inseparable from the transition from an irredeemable to a redeemable paper currency, would only tend to an increased and prolonged disturbance in values, which, unless relieved, must end in serious disorder, dishonor and disaster in the financial affairs of the Government and of the people. The mischiefs which I apprehend and urgently deprecate, are confined to no class of the people; indeed, they but seem to me most certainly to threaten the industrious masses, whether their occupations are of skilled or common labor. To them, it seems to me, it is of prime importance that their labor should be compensated in money which is, in itself fixed in exchangeable value, by being irrevocably measured by the labor necessary to its production. This permanent quality of all the money of the people is sought for and can only be gained by the resumption of specie payment. The rich, the speculative, the operating, the money-dealing classes, may not always feel the mischiefs of, or may find casual profits in, a variable currency, but the misfortunes of such a currency to those who are paid salaries or wages are inevitable and remediless.

The Silver Dollar.

Closely connected with this general subject of the resumption of specie payments is one of subordinate, but still of grave importance—I mean the readjustment of our coinage system by the renewal of the silver dollar as an element in our specie currency, endowed by legislation with the quality of legal tender, to a greater or less extent. As there is no doubt of the power of Congress, under the constitution, to coin money and regulate the value thereof, and as this power covers the whole range of authority applicable to the metal, the rated value, and the legal-tender quality which shall be adopted for the coinage, the considerations which should induce or discourage a particular measure connected with the coinage belongs clearly to the province of legislative discretion, and of public expediency. Without intruding upon this province of legislation in the least, I have yet thought the subject of such critical importance, in the actual condition of our affairs, as to present an occasion for the exercise of the duty imposed by the constitution on the President of recommending to the consideration of Congress such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient. Holding the opinion, as I do, that neither the interest of the Government, nor of the people of the United States, would be promoted by disparaging silver as one of the two precious metals which furnish the coinage of the world, and that legislation which looks to maintaining the volume of intrinsic money to as full a measure of both metals as their relative commercial values will permit would be neither unjust nor inexpedient, I must ask your indulgence to a brief and definite statement of certain essential features in any such legislative measure which I feel it my duty to recommend. I do not propose to enter the debate represented on both sides by such able disputants in Congress, and before the people, and in the press, as to the extent to which the legislation of any one nation can control this question, even within its own borders, against the laws of trade, or the positive laws of other Governments. The wisdom of Congress in shaping any particular law that may be presented for my approval may wholly supersede the necessity of my entering into these considerations, and I willingly avoid either vague or intricate inquiries. It is only the certain, plain and practical traits of such legislation that I desire to recommend to your attention.

In any legislation providing for a silver coinage, regulating its value, and imparting to it the quality of legal tender, it seems to me of great importance that Congress should not lose sight of its action as operating in a two-fold capacity and two distinct directions. If the United States Government were free from a public debt, its legislative dealing with the question of silver coinage would be purely sovereign and governmental, under no restraints but those of constitutional power and the public good as affected by the proposed legislation; but in the actual circumstances of the nation, with a vast public debt distributed very widely among our own citizens, and held in great amounts also abroad, the nature of the silver-coinage measure as affecting the relation of the Government to the holders of the public debt becomes in any proposed legislation of the highest concern. The obligation of the public faith transcends all questions of profit or public advantage; otherwise, its unquestionable maintenance is the dictate as well as the highest expediency of the most necessary duty, and will be carefully guarded by Congress and the people alike.

The public debt of the United States, to the amount of $729,000,000, bears interest at the rate of 6 per cent., and $708,000,000 at the rate of 5 per cent., and the only way in which the country can be relieved from the payment of the high rates of interest is by advantageously refunding the indebtedness. Whether the debt is ultimately paid in gold or silver coin is of but little moment compared with the possible reduction of interest one-third by refunding it at such reduced rate. If the United States had the unquestionable right to pay its bonds in silver coin, the little benefit from the process would be greatly overbalanced by the injurious effect of such payment. If made as proposed, against the honest convictions of the public creditors, all the bonds that have been issued since Feb. 12, 1873, when gold became the only unlimited legal-tender metallic currency of the country, are justly payable in gold coin, or in coin of equal value. During the time of these issues, the only dollar that could be or was received by the Government in exchange for bonds was the gold dollar. To require the public creditors to take in repayment any dollar of less commercial value would be regarded by them as a repudiation of the full obligation assumed. The bonds issued prior to 1873 were issued at a time when the gold dollar was the only coin in circulation or contemplated by either the Government or the holders of the bonds as the coin in which they were to be paid. It is far better to pay these bonds in that coin than to seem to take advantage of the unforeseen fall of silver bullion to pay in a new issue of silver coin made so much less valuable. The power of the United States to coin money and to regulate the value thereof ought never to be exercised for the purpose of enabling the Government to pay its obligations in a coin of less value than that contemplated by the parties when the bonds were issued. Any attempt to pay the national indebtedness in a coinage of less commercial value than the money of the world would involve a violation of the public faith and work irreparable injury to the public credit. It was the great merit of the act of March, 1869, that, in strengthening the public credit, it removed all doubt as to the purpose of the United States to pay their bonded debt in coin. That act was accepted as a pledge of public faith. The Government has derived great benefit from it. In the progress thus far made in refunding the public debt at low rates of interest, an adherence to the wise and just policy of an exact observance of the public faith will enable the Government rapidly to reduce the burden of interest on the national debt by an amount exceeding $20,000,000 per annum, and effect an aggregate saving to the United States of more than $300,000,000 before the bonds can be fully paid. In adapting the new silver coinage to the ordinary uses of currency in the every-day transactions of life, and preserving the quality of legal tender to be assigned to it, a consideration of the first importance should be so to adjust the ratio between the silver and the gold coinage, which now constitutes our specie currency, as to accomplish the desired end of maintaining the circulation of the two metallic currencies, and keeping up the volume of the two precious metals as our intrinsic money. It is a mixed question for scientific reasoning and historical experience to determine how far, and by what methods, a practicable equilibrium can be maintained which will keep both metals in circulation in their appropriate spheres of common use. An absolute equality of commercial value, free from disturbing fluctuations, is hardly attainable, and without it an untried legal tender for private transactions, assigned to both metals, would tend to drive out of circulation the dearest coinage, and disappoint the principal object proposed by the legislation in view. I apprehend, therefore, that the two conditions of a near approach to equality of commercial value between the gold and silver coinage of the same denomination, and of a limitation of the amounts for which the silver coinage is to be a legal tender, are essential to maintaining both in circulation. If these conditions can be successfully observed, the issue from the mint of silver dollars would afford material assistance to the community in the transition to redeemable paper money, and would facilitate the resumption of specie payment and its permanent establishment. Without these conditions I fear that only mischief and misfortune would flow from a coinage of silver dollars, with the quality of unlimited legal tender, even in private transactions; any expectation of temporary ease from an issue of silver coinage, to pass as a legal-tender at a rate materially above its commercial value, is, I am persuaded, a delusion; nor can I think that there is any substantial distinction between an original issue of silver dollars at a nominal value materially above their commercial value and the restoration of the silver dollar at a rate which once was but has ceased to be its commercial value. Certainly the issue of our gold coinage reduced in weight materially below its legal-tender value would not be any the less a present debasement of the coinage by reason of its equaling or even exceeding in weight a gold coinage, which at some past time had been commercially equal to the legal-tender value assigned to the new issue. In recommending that the regulation of any silver coinage which may be authorized by Congress should observe the conditions of value and limited legal tender I am governed by the feeling that every possible increase should be given to the volume of metallic money which can be kept in circulation, and thereby every possible aid afforded to the people in the process of resuming specie payments. It is because of my conviction that a disregard of these conditions would frustrate the good results which are desired from the proposed coinage, and embarrass with new elements of confusion and uncertainty the business of the country, that I urge upon your attention these considerations.

I respectfully recommend to Congress that in any legislation providing for a silver coinage, and imparting to it the quality of legal tender, there be impressed in the measure a firm provision exempting the public debt heretofore issued and now outstanding from the payment, either of principal or interest, in any coinage of less value than the present gold coinage of the country.

The Civil Service.

The organization of the civil service of the country has for a number of years attracted more and more of public attention. So general has become the opinion that the methods of admission to it, and the conditions of remaining in it, are unsound, that both the great political parties have agreed, in the most explicit declarations, on the necessity of reform, and in the most emphatic demands for it. I have fully considered the declarations and demands to be the expressions of the sincere convictions of the intelligent masses of the people upon the subject, and that they should be recognized and followed by earnest and prompt action on the part of the legislative and executive departments of the Government. In pursuance of the purpose indicated before my accession to office, I endeavored to have my own views distinctly understood, and upon my inauguration my accord with the public opinion was stated in terms believed to be plain and unambiguous. My experience in the Executive duties has strongly confirmed the belief in the great advantage that the country would find in observing strictly the plan of the constitution, which imposes upon the Executive the sole duty and responsibility of the selection of those Federal officers who by law are appointed, not elected, and which in like manner assigns to the Senate the complete right to advise and consent to or reject the nominations so made, while the House of Representatives stands as the public censor of the performance of official duties, with the prerogative of investigation in all cases of dereliction. The blemishes and imperfections in the civil service may, as I think, be traced in most cases to a practical confusion of the duties assigned to the several departments of the Government. My purpose in this respect has been to return to the system established by the fundamental law, and to do this with the heartiest co-operation and a most cordial understanding with the Senate and House of Representatives. The practical difficulties in the selection of numerous officers for posts of widely varying responsibilities and duties are acknowledged to be very great. No system can be expected to secure absolute freedom from mistakes, and the beginning of any attempted change of custom is quite likely to be more embarrassed in this respect than any subsequent period. It is here that the constitution seems to me to prove its claim to the great wisdom accorded to it. It gives to the Executive the assistance of the knowledge and experience of the Senate, which, when acting upon nominations as to which they may be disinterested and impartial judges, secures as strong a guaranty of freedom from errors of importance as is perhaps possible in human affairs. In addition to this I recognize the public advantage of making all nominations as nearly as possible impersonal, in the sense of being free from mere caprice or favor in these directions, and in those offices where special training is of greatly increased value, I believe such a rule as to the tenure of office should obtain as may induce men of proper qualifications to apply themselves industriously to the task of becoming proficient. Bearing these things in mind, I have endeavored to reduce the number of changes in subordinate places usually made upon the change of the general administration, and shall most heartily co-operate with Congress in the better systematizing of such methods and rules of admission to the public service and of promotion within it as may promise to be most successful in making thorough competency, efficiency and character the decisive tests in these matters.

I ask the renewed attention of Congress to what has already been done by the Civil Service Commission, appointed in pursuance of the act of Congress by my predecessor, to prepare and revise the civil-service rules. In regard to much of the departmental service, especially at Washington, it may be difficult to organize a better system than that which has thus been provided, and it is now being used to a considerable extent under my direction. The commission has still a legal existence, although for several years no appropriation has been made for defraying its expenses. Believing that this commission has rendered valuable service, and will be a most useful agency in improving the administration of the civil service, I respectfully recommend that a suitable appropriation be immediately made to enable it to continue its service. It is my purpose to transmit to Congress, as early as practicable, the report by the Chairman of the commission, and to ask your attention to such measures upon this subject as, in my opinion, will further promote the improvement of the civil service.

Foreign Relations.

During the past year the United States has continued to maintain peaceful relation with the foreign powers. The outbreak of war between Russia and Turkey, though at one time attended by grave apprehension as to its effect upon other European nations, has had no tendency to disturb the amicable relations existing between the United States and each of the two contending powers. An attitude of just and impartial neutrality has been preserved, and I am gratified to state that, in the midst of their hostilities, both the Russian and the Turkish Governments have shown an earnest desire to adhere to the obligations of all treaties with the United States, and give due regard to the rights of American citizens.

Italy.

By the terms of the treaty defining the rights, immunities and privileges of Consuls between Italy and the United States, ratified in 1868, either Government may, after the lapse of ten years, terminate the existence of the treaty by giving twelve months' notice of its intention. The Government of Italy, availing itself of this facility, has now given the required notice, and the treaty will accordingly end on the 18th of September, 1878. It is understood, however, that the Italian Government wishes to renew it in its general scope, describing only certain modifications in some of its articles. In this disposition I concur, and shall hope that no serious obstacles may intervene to prevent or delay the negotiation of a satisfactory treaty.

Passports, Naturalization, Etc.

Numerous questions in regard to passports, naturalization, and exemption from military service have continued to arise in the cases of emigrants from Germany, who have returned to their native country. The provisions of the treaty of Feb. 22, 1868, however, have proved to be so ample and so judicious that the Legation of the United States at Berlin has been able to adjust all claims arising under it, not only without detriment to the amicable relations existing between the two Governments, but, it is believed, without injury or injustice to duly naturalized American citizens. It is desirable that the treaty originally made with the North German Union, in 1867, should now be extended so as to apply equally to all the states of the empire of Germany.

The Paris Exposition.

The invitation of the Government of France to participate in the Exposition of the products, agriculture, industry and fine arts, to be held at Paris during the coming year, was submitted to your consideration at the extra session. It is not doubted that its acceptance by the United States, and a well-selected exhibition of the products of American industry on that occasion, will tend to stimulate international commerce and emigration, as well as to promote the traditional friendship between the two countries.

Extradition.

A question arose some time since as to the proper meaning of the extradition articles of the treaty of 1842 between the United States and Great Britain. Both Governments, however, are now in accord in the belief that the question is not one that should be allowed to frustrate the ends of justice or to disturb the friendship between the two nations, and no serious difficulty has arisen in accomplishing the extradition of criminals when necessary. It is probable that the points of disagreement will in due time be settled, and, if need be, more explicit declarations be made in a new treaty.

The Fishery Question.

The Fishery Commission under articles 18 and 25, treaty of Washington, has concluded its session. The result of the deliberations of the commission, as made public by the Commissioners, will be communicated to Congress.

Trademarks.

A treaty for the protection of trademarks has been negotiated with Great Britain, which has been submitted to the Senate for its consideration.

Mexico.

The revolution which recently occurred in Mexico was followed by the accession of the successful party to power and the installation of its chief General, Porfirio Diaz in the Presidential office. It has been the custom of the United States, when such changes of government have heretofore occurred in Mexico, to recognize and enter into official relations with the de facto Government as soon as it should appear to have the approval of the Mexican people, and should manifest a disposition to adhere to the obligations of treaties and international friendship. In the present case such official recognition has been deferred by the occurrences on the Rio Grande border, the records of which have already been communicated to each house of Congress, in answer to their respective resolutions of inquiry. Assurances have been received that the authorities at the seat of the Mexican Government have both the disposition and the power to prevent and punish such unlawful invasions and depredations. It is earnestly to be hoped that events may prove these assurances to be well founded. The best interests of both countries require the maintenance of peace upon the border and the development of commerce between the two republics. It is gratifying to add that this temporary interruption of official relations has not prevented due attention by the representatives of the United States in Mexico to the protection of American citizens as far as practicable, nor has it interfered with the prompt payment of the amounts due from Mexico to the United States, under the treaty of July 4, 1868, and the awards of the joint commission. While I do not expect an interruption of the friendly relations with Mexico, yet I cannot but look with some solicitude upon a continuance of the border disorders, as exposing the two countries to initiations of popular feeling and mischances of action which are naturally unfavorable to complete amity. Firmly determined that nothing shall be wanting on my part to promote a good understanding between the two nations, I yet must ask the attention of Congress to the actual occurrences on the border, that the lives and property of our citizens may be adequately protected and peace preserved.

The Cuban War.

Another year has passed without bringing to a close the protracted contest between the Spanish Government and the insurrection in the island of Cuba. While the United States has sedulously abstained from any intervention in this controversy, it is impossible not to feel that it is attended by incidents affecting the rights of American citizens, apart from the effect of the hostilities upon trade between the United States and Cuba. Their progress is inevitably accompanied by complaints, having more or less foundation, of searches, arrests, embargoes and oppressive taxes upon the property of American residents, and of unprovoked interference with American vessels and commerce. It is due to the Government of Spain to say that during the past year it has promptly disavowed and offered reparation for any unauthorized acts of unduly zealous subordinates whenever such acts have been brought to its attention. Nevertheless such occurrences can not but tend to excite feelings of annoyance, suspicion and resentment, which are greatly to be deprecated between the respective subjects and citizens of two friendly powers.

Venezuela.

Much delay, consequent upon accusations of fraud in some of the awards, has occurred in respect to the distribution of the limited amounts received from Venezuela under the treaty of April 25, 1866, applicable to the awards of the joint commission created by that treaty. So long as these matters are pending in Congress the Executive cannot assume either to pass upon the questions presented, or to distribute the fund received.

It is eminently desirable that definite legislative action should be taken, either deciding the awards to be final, or providing some method for a re-examination of the claims.

Southern American Nations.

Our relations with the republics of Central and South America and with the empire of Brazil have continued without serious change, further than the temporary interruption of diplomatic intercourse with Venezuela and with Guatemala. Amicable relations have already been fully restored with Venezuela, and it is not doubted that all grounds of misunderstanding with Guatemala will speedily be removed. From all these countries there are favorable indications of a disposition on the part of their Governments and people to reciprocate our efforts in the direction of increased commercial intercourse.

Samoa.

The Government of the Samoan Islands has sent an envoy, in the person of its Secretary of State, to invite the Government of the United States to advise and protect their independence, to establish commercial relations with their people, and to assist them in their steps towards regulated and responsible government. The inhabitants of these islands, having made considerable progress in Christian civilization and the development of trade, are doubtful of their ability to maintain peace and independence without the aid of some stronger power. The subject is deemed worthy of respectful attention, and the claims upon our assistance by this distant community will be carefully considered.

Foreign Commerce.

The long commercial depression in the United States has directed attention to the subject of the possible increase of our foreign trade and the method for its development, not only with Europe, but with other countries, and especially with the states and sovereignties of the Western hemisphere. Instructions from the Department of State were issued to the various diplomatic and Consular officers of the Government, asking them to devote attention to the question of methods by which trade between the respective countries of their official residence and the United States could be most judiciously forwarded. In obedience to the instructions, examinations and reports upon this subject have been made by many of these officers and transmitted to the department, and the same are submitted to the consideration of Congress.

National Finances.

The annual report of the Secretary of the Treasury on the state of the finances presents important questions for the action of Congress, upon some of which I have already remarked. The revenues of the Government during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1877, were $269,000,586.62. The total expenditures for the same period were $238,660,008.93, leaving a surplus revenue of $30,340,577.69. This has substantially supplied the requirements of the sinking fund for that year. The estimated revenues of the current fiscal year are $265,500,000, and the estimated expenditures for the same period are $232,430,643.72. If these estimates prove to be correct, there will be a surplus revenue of $33,069,356.28, an amount nearly sufficient for the sinking fund for this year.

The estimated revenues for the next fiscal year are $269,250,000. It appears from the report that during the last fiscal year the revenues of the Government, compared with the previous year, have largely decreased. This decrease, amounting to the sum of $18,481,452.54, was mainly in customs duties, caused partly by a large falling off of the amount of imported dutiable goods, and partly by the general fall of prices in the markets of production of such articles as pay ad valorem taxes. While this is felt injurious in the diminution of the revenue, it has been accompanied with a very large increase of exportations. The total exports during the last fiscal year, including coin, have been $658,637,457, and the imports have been $492,097,540, leaving a balance of trade in favor of the United States amounting to the sum of $166,539,917, the beneficial effects of which extend to all branches of business.

Revenue.

The estimated revenue for the next fiscal year will impose upon Congress the duty of strictly limiting appropriations, including the requisite sum for the maintenance of the sinking fund within the aggregate estimate of the receipts, while the aggregate of taxes should not be increased. Amendments might be made to the Revenue laws that would, without diminishing the revenue, relieve the people from unnecessary burdens. A tax on tea and coffee is shown by the experience, not only of our own country, but of other countries, to be easily collected without loss by undervaluation or fraud, and largely borne in the country of production. A tax of 10 cents a pound on tea and 3 cents per pound on coffee would produce a revenue exceeding $12,000,000, and thus enable Congress to repeal a multitude of annoying taxes yielding a revenue not exceeding that sum. The internal-revenue system grew out of the necessities of the war, and most of the legislation imposing taxes upon domestic products under this system has been repealed. By the substitution of a tax on tea and coffee, all forms of internal taxation may be repealed, except that on whisky, spirits, tobacco and beer. Attention is also called to the necessity of enacting more vigorous laws for the punishment of frauds and smuggling. This can be best done by judicious provisions that will induce the disclosure of attempted fraud by undervaluation and smuggling. All revenue laws should be simple in their provisions, and easily understood. So far as practicable the rates of taxation should be in the form of specific duties, and not ad valorem, requiring the judgment of experienced men to ascertain values and exposing the revenue to the temptation of fraud.

Customs Abuses.

My attention has been called, during the recess of Congress, to the abuses existing in the collection of the customs, and strenuous efforts have been made for their correction by Executive orders. The recommendations submitted to the Secretary of the Treasury by a commission appointed to examine into the collection of customs duties at the port of New York contain many suggestions for the modification of the customs laws, to which the attention of Congress is invited.

Public Credit.

It is a matter of congratulation that, notwithstanding the severe burdens caused by the war, the public faith with all creditors has been preserved, and as the result of this policy the public credit has continuously advanced, and public securities are regarded with the highest favor in the markets of the world. I trust that no act of the Government will cast a shadow upon its credit.

The Public Debt.

The progress of refunding the public debt has been rapid and satisfactory. Under the contract existing when I entered upon the discharge of the duties of my office, bonds bearing interest at the rate of 4½ per cent. were being rapidly sold, and within three months the aggregate sales of these bonds had reached the sum of $200,000,000.

With my sanction, the Secretary of the Treasury entered into a new contract for the sale of 4-per cent. bonds, and within thirty days after the popular subscription for such bonds was opened subscriptions were had amounting to $75,496,550, which were paid for within ninety days after the date of subscription. By this process, within but little more than one year, the annual interest on the public debt was reduced in the sum of $3,775,000.

Savings Funds.

I recommend that suitable provision be made to enable the people to easily convert their savings into Government securities, as the best mode in which small savings may be well-secured and yield a moderate interest.

It is an object of public policy to retain among our own people the securities of the United States. In this way our country is guarded against their sudden return from countries, caused by war or other disturbances, beyond our limits.

American Shipping.

The commerce of the United States with foreign nations, and especially the export of domestic productions, has of late years largely increased, but the greater portion of this trade is conducted in foreign vessels. The importance of enlarging our foreign trade, and especially by direct and speedy interchange with countries on this continent, cannot be over-estimated, and it is a matter of great moment that our own shipping interest should receive, to the utmost practical extent, the benefit of our commerce with other lands. These considerations are forcibly urged by all the large commercial cities of the country, and public attention is generally and wisely attracted to the solution of the problems they present. It is not doubted that Congress will take them up, in the broadest spirit of liberality, and respond to the public demand by practicable legislation upon this subject.

The Indian Wars.

The report of the Secretary of War shows that the army has been actively employed during the year, and has rendered very important service in repressing hostilities in the Indian country, and preserving peace and protecting life and property in the interior as well as along the Mexican border. A long and arduous campaign has been prosecuted, with final and complete success, against a portion of the Nez Perces tribe of Indians. A full account of this campaign will be found in the report of the General of the Army. It will be seen that in its course several battles were fought, in which a number of gallant officers and men lost their lives. I join with the Secretary of War and General of the Army in awarding to the officers and men employed in the long and toilsome pursuit and in the final capture of these Indians the honor and praise which are so justly their due.

The Labor Riots.

The very serious riots which occurred in several of the States in July last rendered necessary the employment of a considerable portion of the army, to preserve the peace and maintain order in the States of West Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania and Illinois. These disturbances were so formidable as to defy the local and State authorities, and the National Executive was called upon, in the mode provided by the constitution and laws, to furnish military, and I am gratified to be able to state that the troops sent in response to these calls for aid in the suppression of domestic violence were able, by the influence of their presence in the disturbed regions, to preserve the peace and restore order without the use of force. In the discharge of this delicate and important duty both officers and men acted with great prudence and courage, and for their services deserve the thanks of the country.

The Rio Grande Troubles.

The border disturbances along the Rio Grande, in Texas, to which I have already referred, have rendered necessary the constant employment of a military force in that vicinity. A full report of all recent military operations in that quarter has been transmitted to the House of Representatives in answer to a resolution of that body, and it will not therefore be necessary to enter into details. I regret to say that these lawless incursions into our territory by armed bands from the Mexican side of the line, for the purpose of robbery, have been of frequent occurrence, and, in spite of the most vigorous efforts of the commander of our forces, the marauders have generally succeeded in escaping into Mexico with their plunder. In May last, I gave orders for the exercise of the utmost vigilance on the part of our troops for the suppression of these raids, and the punishment of the guilty parties, as well as the recapture of the property stolen by them. Gen. Ord, commanding in Texas, was directed to invite the co-operation of the Mexican authorities in efforts to this end, and to assure them that I was anxious to avoid giving the least offense to Mexico. At the same time he was directed to give notice of my determination to put an end to the invasion of our territory by lawless bands, intent upon the plunder of our peaceful citizens, even if the effectual punishment of the outlaws should make the crossing of the border by our troops in their pursuit necessary. It is believed that this policy has had the effect to check, somewhat, these depredations, and that, with a considerable increase of our force upon that frontier and the establishment of several additional military posts along the Rio Grande, so as more effectually to guard that extensive border, peace may be preserved, and the lives and property of citizens in Texas fully protected.

The Army.

Prior to the 1st day of July last the army was, in accordance with law, reduced to the maximum of 25,000 enlisted men, being a reduction of 2,500 below the force previously authorized. This reduction was made, as required by law, entirely from the infantry and artillery branches of the service, without any reduction of the cavalry.

Under the law, as it now stands, it is necessary that the cavalry regiments should be recruited to 100 men in each company for service on the Mexican and Indian frontiers. The necessary effect of this legislation is to reduce the infantry and artillery arms of the service below the number required for efficiency, and I concur with the Secretary of War in recommending that authority be given to recruit all companies of infantry to at least fifty men, and all batteries of artillery to at least seventy-five men, with power, in case of an emergency, to increase the former to 100 and the latter to 122 men each.

I invite your special attention to the following recommendations of the Secretary of War: First, that a provision be made for supplying to the army a more abundant and better supply of reading matter. Second, that early action be taken by Congress, looking to a complete revision and republication of the army regulations. Third, that section 1,258 of the Revised Statutes, limiting the number of officers on the retired list, be repealed. Fourth, that the claims arising under the act of July 4, 1864, for supplies taken by the army during the war, be taken from the offices of the Quartermaster and Commissary Generals, and transferred to the Southern Claims Commission, or some other tribunal having more time and better facilities for their prompt investigation and decision than are possessed by these officers. Fifth, that Congress provide for an annuity fund for the families of deceased soldiers, as recommended by the Paymaster General of the army.

The Navy.

The report of the Secretary of the Navy shows that we have six squadrons now engaged in the protection of our commerce and other duties pertaining to naval service. The condition and operations of the department are also shown. The total expenditures for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1877, were $16,077,974.54. There are unpaid claims against the department, chargeable to the last year, which are presented to the consideration of Congress by the report of the Secretary. The estimates for the fiscal year commencing July 1, 1878, are $16,233,234.40, exclusive of the sum of $2,314,231 submitted for new buildings, repairs and improvements at the several navy-yards. The appropriations for the present fiscal year, commencing July, 1877, are $13,592,932.90. The amount drawn from the treasury from July 1 to Nov. 1, 1877, is $5,343,037.40, of which there is estimated to be yet available $1,029,528.30, showing the amount of actual expenditure during the first four months of the present fiscal year to have been $4,313,508.10.

The Postal Service.

The report of the Postmaster General contains a full and clear statement of the condition of the Postoffice Department. The ordinary revenues of the department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1877, including receipts from the money-order business and from official stamps and stamped envelopes amounted to the sum of $27,531,585.26. The additional sum, $7,013,000, was realized from appropriations from the general treasury for various purposes, making the receipts from all sources $34,544,885.26. The total expenditures during the fiscal year amounted to $33,486,322.44, leaving an excess of total receipts over total expenditures of $1,058,562.82, and an excess of total expenditures over ordinary receipts of $5,954,737.18. Deducting from the total receipts the sum of $63,261,841 received from international money orders of the preceding fiscal year, and deducting from the total expenditures the sum of $1,163,818.20 paid on liabilities incurred in previous fiscal years, the expenditures and receipts appertaining to the business of the last fiscal year were as follows: Expenditures, $32,322,504.24; receipts (ordinary from the money-order business and from official postage stamps), $27,468,323.42; excess of expenditures, $4,854,180.82.

Postoffice Department.

The ordinary revenues of the Postoffice Department for the year ending June 30, 1878, are estimated at an increase of 3 per cent. over those of 1877, making $29,034,098.28, and the expenditures for the same year are estimated at $36,427,771, leaving an estimated deficiency for 1878 of $7,393,392.02. The additional legislation recommended by the Postmaster General for improvements of the mail service and to protect the postal revenues from the abuses practiced under existing laws is respectfully commended to the careful consideration of Congress.

Judiciary.

The report of the Attorney General contains several suggestions as to the administration of justice, to which I invite your attention. The pressure of business in the Supreme Court and in certain Circuit Courts of the United States is now such that serious delays, to the great injury and even oppression of suitors, occur, and a remedy should be sought for this condition of affairs—whether it will be found in the plan briefly sketched in the report, of increasing the number of Judges of the Circuit Courts, and, by means of this addition to the judicial force, of creating an intermediate Court of Errors and Appeals, or whether some other mode can be devised for obviating the difficulties which now exist.

Indian Affairs.

I leave to your mature consideration the present condition of the Indian tribes on the territory of the United States, and our relations with them are fully set forth in the reports of the Secretary of the Interior and the Commissioner of Indian Affairs. After a series of most deplorable conflicts, the successful termination of which, while reflecting honor upon the brave soldiers who accomplished it, cannot lessen our regret at the occurrence. We are now at peace with all the Indian tribes on our borders. To preserve that peace by a just and humane policy will be the object of my earnest endeavors. Whatever may be said of their character and savage propensities, of the difficulties of introducing among them the habits of civilized life, and the obstacles they have offered to the progress of settling in certain parts of the country, the Indians are certainly entitled to our sympathy and to a conscientious respect on our part for their claims upon our sense of justice. They were the aboriginal occupants of the land we now possess. They have been driven from place to place. The purchase money paid to them in some cases for what they called their own has still left them poor. In many instances, when they had settled down upon land assigned to them by compact, and begun to support themselves by their own labor, they were rudely jostled off and thrust into the wilderness again. Many, if not most, of our Indian wars have had their origin in broken promises and acts of injustice upon our part, and the advance of the Indians in civilization has been slow, because the treatment they received did not permit it to be faster and more general. We cannot expect them to improve and to follow our guidance unless we keep faith with them in respecting the rights they possess, and unless, instead of depriving them of their opportunities, we lend them a helping hand. I cordially approve the policy regarding the management of Indian affairs outlined in the reports of the Secretary of the Interior and of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs. The faithful performance of our promises is the first condition of a good understanding with the Indians. I cannot too urgently recommend to Congress that a prompt and liberal provision be made for the conscientious fulfillment of all agreements entered into by the Government with the Indian tribes. To withhold the means necessary for the performance of a promise is always false economy, and is apt to prove disastrous in its consequences. Especial care is recommended to provide for the Indians settled on their reservations, cattle and agricultural implements to aid them in whatever efforts they may make to support themselves, and by the re-establishment and maintenance of schools to bring them under the control of civilized influences. I see no reason why Indians who can give satisfactory proof of having by their own labor supported their families for a number of years, and who are willing to detach themselves from their tribal relations, should not be admitted to the benefits of the homestead act and the privileges of citizenship; and I recommend the passage of a law to that effect. It will be an act of justice as well as a measure of encouragement. Earnest efforts are being made to purify the Indian service, so that every dollar appropriated by Congress shall redound to the benefit of the Indians intended to be benefited. These efforts will have my firm support. With an improved service and every possible encouragement held out to the Indians to better their condition, and to elevate themselves in the scale of civilization, we may hope to do, at the same time, a good work for them and for ourselves.

The Timber Thieves.

I invite the attention of Congress to the importance of the statements and suggestions by the Secretary of the Interior concerning the depredations committed upon the timber lands of the United States, and the necessity for the preservation of the forests. It is believed that the measures taken in pursuance of the existing law to arrest these depredations will be entirely successful, if Congress, by an appropriation for that purpose, renders their continued enforcement possible.

The experience of other nations teaches us that a country cannot be stripped of its forests with impunity, and we shall expose ourselves to the gravest consequences unless the wasteful and improvident manner in which the forests of the United States are destroyed be effectually checked. I earnestly recommend that the measures suggested by the Secretary of the Interior for the suppression of depredations on the public timber lands of the United States, for the selling of timber from the public lands, and for the preservation of the forests, be embodied in law, and that, considering the urgent necessity of enabling the people of certain States and Territories to purchase timber from the public lands in a legal manner, which at present they cannot do, such a law be passed without unavoidable delay.

Desert Lands.

I would also call the attention of Congress to the statements made by the Secretary of the Interior concerning the disposition that might be made of the desert lands, not irrigated, west of the one hundredth (100th) meridian. These lands are practically unsalable under existing laws, and the suggestion is worthy of consideration, that a system of leasehold tenure would make them a source of profit to the United States, while at the same time legalizing the business of cattle-raising, which is at present carried on upon them.

Agriculture.

The report of the Commissioner of Agriculture contains the gratifying announcement of the extraordinary success which has rewarded the agricultural industry of the country for the past year. With the fair prices which obtain for the products of the soil, especially for the surplus which our people have to export, we may confidently turn to this as the most important of all our resources for the revival of the depressed industries of the country. The report shows our agricultural progress during the year, and contains a statement of the work done by this department for the advancement of the agricultural industry upon which the prosperity of our people so largely depends. Matters of information are included, of great interest to all who seek, by the experience of others, to improve their own methods of cultivation. The efforts of the department to increase the production of important articles of consumption will, it is hoped, improve the demand for labor and advance the business of the country, and eventually result in saving some of the many millions that are now annually paid to foreign nations for sugar and other staple products, which habitual use has made necessary in our domestic every-day life.

Centennial Board.

The board, on behalf of the United States executive departments at the International Exposition of 1876, has concluded its labors. The final report of the board was transmitted to Congress at the last session. As these papers are understood to contain interesting and valuable information, and will constitute the only report emanating from the Government on the subject of the exhibition, I invite attention to the matter, and recommend that the report be published for general information.

District of Columbia.

Congress is empowered by the constitution with the authority of exclusive legislation over the District of Columbia, in which the seat of the Government of the nation is located. The interests of the District having no direct representation in Congress, are entitled to especial consideration and care at the hands of the General Government. The capital of the United States belongs to the nation, and it is natural that the American people should take pride in the seat of their National Government, and desire it to be an ornament to the country. Much has been done to render it healthful, convenient and attractive, but much remains to be done, which its permanent inhabitants are not able and ought not to be expected to do. To impose upon them a large proportion of the cost required for public improvements, which are in a great measure planned and executed for the convenience of the Government and of the many thousands of visitors from all parts of the country who temporarily reside in the capital of the nation, is an evident injustice.

Your attention is invited to the suggestion of the Commissioners and of the Board of Health for the organization of a Board of Charities to have supervision and control of the disbursement of all money for charitable purposes from the District treasury.

I desire also to ask your especial attention to the need of adding to the efficiency of the public schools of the District by supplemental aid from the national treasury. This is especially just since so large a number of those attending schools are children of employes of the Government.

I earnestly commend to your care the interest of the people of the District who are so intimately associated with the Government establishment, and to whose enterprise the good order and attractiveness of the Capital are largely due, and I ask your attention to the request of the Commissioners for legislation in behalf of the interests intrusted to their care. The appropriations asked for the care of reservations belonging to the Government within the city by the Commissioner of Public Buildings and Grounds, are also commended to your favorable consideration.

The Washington Monument.

The report of the joint commission created by the act approved August 2, 1876, an act providing for the completion of the Washington monument, is also herewith transmitted, with accompanying documents. The board of engineer officers detailed to examine the monument in compliance with the second section of the act, have reported that the foundation is insufficient. No authority exists for making the expenditures necessary to secure its stability. I therefore recommend that the commission be authorized to expend such portion of the sum appropriated by the act as may be necessary for the purpose. The present unfinished condition of the monument, begun so long ago, is a reproach to the nation. It cannot be doubted that the patriotic sense of the country will mainly respond to such prompt provision as may be made for its completion at an early day, and I urge upon Congress the propriety and necessity of immediate legislation for this purpose.

Public Education.

The wisdom of legislation upon the part of Congress in aid of the States for the education of the whole people in those branches of study which are taught in the common schools of the country, is no longer a question. The intelligent judgment of the country goes still further, regarding it as also both constitutional and expedient for the General Government to extend to technical and higher education such aid as is deemed essential to the general welfare, and to our due prominence among the enlightened and cultured nations of the world. The ultimate settlement of all questions of the future, whether of administration or finance, or of true nationality of sentiment, depends upon the virtue and intelligence of the people. It is vain to hope for the success of a free government without the means of insuring the intelligence of those who are the source of power. No less than one-seventh of the entire voting population of our country are yet unable to read and write. It is encouraging to observe, in connection with the growth of fraternal feeling in those States in which slavery formerly existed, evidences of increasing interest in universal education, and I shall be glad to give my approval to any appropriate measures which may be enacted by Congress for the purpose of supplementing, with national aid, the local systems of education in those States and in all the States; and, having already invited your attention to the needs of the District of Columbia with respect to its public-school system, I here add that I believe it desirable, not so much with reference to the local wants of the District, but the great and lasting benefit of the entire country, that this system should be crowned with a university in all respects in keeping with the National Capital, and thereby realize the cherished hopes of Washington on this subject.

I also earnestly commend the request of the Regents of the Smithsonian Institute, that an adequate appropriation be made for the replenishment and conduct of a national museum under their supervision.

And So Forth.

The request of providing for the preservation and growth of the library of Congress is also one of national importance. As the depository of copyright publications and records, this library has outgrown the provisions for its accommodation, and the erection, on such site as the judgment of Congress may approve, of a fire-proof library building, to preserve the treasures and enlarge the usefulness of this valuable collection, is recommended. I recommend also such legislation as will render available and efficient for the purposes of instruction, so far as is consistent with the public service, the cabinets or museums of invention, of surgery, of education, of agriculture and other collections, the property of the National Government. The capital of the nation should be something more than a mere political center. We should avail ourselves of all the opportunities which Providence has here placed at our command to enhance the general intelligence of the people and increase the conditions most favorable to the success and perpetuity of our institutions.

(Signed) R. B. HAYES.

December 3, 1877.

WHAT COMES OF OVERWORK.

Symptoms of a Common Brain Disease Described by Dr. Hammond.

[From the New York World.]

Before the New York Neurological Society last evening, Dr. E. C. Seguin presiding, Dr. Wm. A. Hammond read a paper on "Cerebro Hyperæmia." This, he said, was quite a common disease, and was brought on generally by over intellectual exertion. The symptoms are vertigo, noises in the ears, dark spots before the eyes, a staggering in the walk, numbness in the limbs and twitchings or spasms in the face. There is a mental disturbance which is shown by hallucinations [illegible] The [illegible] is impaired. These are the symptoms in violent cases. In general the patient is deprived almost wholly of sleep, or has unpleasant dreams. He finds it impossible to fix his attention on any subject, and is troubled by a pain in the head if he makes a mental effort. An accurate accountant who was attacked by this disease could not add up a column of figures, making mistakes which in his normal condition he would consider ridiculous. In one case reported a gentleman attempted to commit suicide because he could not solve a simple sum. The patient is forgetful of names and faces, and makes mistakes in using words. There is, too, a great deal of indecision manifested in simple matters.

"I knew a patient," Dr. Hammond said, "to carry several thousands of dollars every day for a month to Wall street, intending to make a certain speculation, but every day he put it off without any reason whatever. There is a morbid apprehension of impending evil, and the patient is afraid that he will himself commit some dreadful act. I have known of a man who dreaded to go on a ferry-boat because he feared that he would throw himself off; of another who would not go near a tram, for fear he would throw himself in front of it; of a husband who made his wife keep his razors locked up; of a man who would not take a warm bath, in the fear that he would not turn off the hot water. The subject, however, never yields to these impulses. The emotional system is deranged. The patient becomes suspicious and annoyed on the slightest grounds. A patient once was liable to be attacked by vertigo at any time, so that frequently and in the street he would have to support himself by a lamp-post, or sit on a stoop until the attack was over. This vertigo is generally increased by mental effort, and disappears more or less when the patient is about to go to sleep. The ocular muscles are easily tired, so that the patient cannot read. Sometimes the sense of hearing is very acute, and at other times very dull. The disease is generally accompanied by congestion of the tympanum, and the symptoms are intensified by sulphate of quinine and other medicines, which are sometimes given to patients who are suffering from this disease. The muscular strength is impaired so that the patient sometimes is unable to lift his arm or his foot.

"The causes of cerebro-hyperæmia are mental. A young lady was once attacked by it in consequence of an intense intellectual effort she put forth to solve a mathematical problem. The disease is more apt to attack those in middle life than the young or old. To be cured the patient should abstain from severe mental work, should exercise in the open air, indulge in moderate gayety and a plain but nutritious diet."

Five and a Half Millions.

The award of the Fishery Commission at Halifax, giving damages against the United States o $5,500,000, will be to most people in this country a disagreeable surprise. True, the Canadians claimed damages to nearly three times that amount, fixing their estimate, by a curious coincidence, at just about the figures of the Geneva award for the Alabama claims. But it was generally supposed here that the somewhat shadowy damages set forth by the Canadians would be dissipated under a careful analysis, or balanced by our counter-claims. Our energetic fishermen will have to bestir themselves in the most lively way, if they are ever to catch enough mackerel and cod off the coasts of the Dominion to make a surplus profit equal to this award. The convenience of going ashore occasionally with their fish was part of the claim, including the privilege of buying bait and curing fish on the coast.

It will be an interesting problem, which may be recommended to the mathematical classes in our public schools, to calculate how often our sailors can make a landing, how many codfish they must salt down on shore, and how much bait they must buy of the Canadians, to damage them to the extent of—say two out of the five and a half millions.

The decision of this question of the fishery claims was left open in the Alabama treaty for a future commission. That commission has done its work in accordance with the general rules of arbitration to which we have heartily subscribed. It would be exceedingly improper for us to object to the verdict, however much it may surprise us. There it really nothing to be done but to accept it, and pay with as much grace as we can command. Probably, however, the question of returning to England the unexpended balance of the Geneva award will never be raised again.

Thousands of Tramps Like This Man.

There was a tramp on the street corner yesterday, and he hadn't had a meal for a week. Through the holes in the tattered coat and the holes in the dilapidated trousers and the holes in the soleless boots that same wind whizzed and whistled. Every little while a dash of snow beat upon his face and settled in a little drift in the rolled-up brim of his old hat. He leaned against the lamp-post, and, watching the sparrows in the gutter, in a feverish kind of way began to talk: "I s'pose they're havin a jolly old time down there now. Long ways down there, tew Maine. Hadn't oughter gone away from there. S'pose they think I'm dead; hain't heerd from 'em 'n four years. Wall, I'm n. g. anyhow, an' I hadn't oughter have anything to do with 'em. It'll be Thanksgivin' soon; rale old Yankee Thanksgivin'. I s'pose the girls is runnin' around out 'n the pine woods ter day, a gittin' moss an' limbs ter fix up with, and the old lady's slingin' round the kitchen a mixin' up mincemeat, with young Josh a choppin' away for dear life, an' a warm fire roarin' up the chimney an' just makin' things hum. Dad's out feedin' critters with that old red comforter on an' them buckskin mittens. Ah! they'll have a solid old time. An' the little gal that used to live crost the road, she was mighty nice; most likely married now. Then that Thanksgivin'; like ter be there, but they don't want me, an' if they did Maine's too fur off. But what's the use o' talkin'? This ere's my last winter, an' they won't take me at Poverty Barn any more, an' I won't go to the workhouse. Good God, I'm hungry." And he wiped his mouth with his sleeve, looked hungrily around and trudged feebly away.—Cleveland Herald.

How a Vicious Horse was Subjugated.

The horse is a thoroughbred and imported Irish Harkaway, long famous as the Galway "cross-country horse," but the virtues of which breed are slightly vitiated by an uncontrollable desire to [illegible] starting out. This horse had fits of madness, and what rendered these fits more undesirable was the fact that there could be no authoritative computation of the time of their return. On the occasion of one of these fits his keeper was seized by a happy thought. He had just burned his mouth by trying to eat one of the insufficiently-cooled potatoes which he had roasted for his matutinal meal. He thought it would be better for the horse, perhaps, and certainly for himself, if he could fool his Harkaway countryman upon an incandescent vegetarian breakfast. As the horse advanced, therefore, to eat him, he threw into his mouth a red-hot potato. The effect was marvelous, and the attention of the Rareys and Tapps is called to the result. The horse bit into the potato, and all his attention was immediately given to getting the hot fodder out of his mouth. The result of this operation was that the horse was not only cured of his biting propensities, but he never afterward attempted to injure any one by his old methods of crowding, kicking with his hind feet or striking with his fore feet. He became, indeed, a more completely tamed animal than was ever the result of the drugs of Rarey or the cross-hobbles of Tapp, his only irritability being a dislike for roasted potatoes for breakfast.—San Francisco Chronicle.

The Phantom Dog Whistle.

Two singular incidents, which will furnish nuts to crack to unbelievers in the supernatural, have recently come to light in England in regard to the recent loss of the Avalanche in the British channel. A lad, who was a great friend to one of the apprentices who was lost, made arrangements to accompany him down the channel and come ashore with the pilot, but, at the last moment before sailing, he was seized with such an indefinable an ungovernable misgiving that he declined to go, and thus escaped almost certain death. The apprentice who was lost had a retriever dog who was very fond of him, and which answered to a shrill dog-whistle that he carried. On the night of the shipwreck his mother and aunt were in the sitting-room, and the dog in the kitchen. Between 9 and 10 o'clock the ladies were startled by hearing a shrill whistle upstairs, in sound resembling that of the dog-whistle used by the young man. The dog heard it also, gave his usual recognizing bark, and bounded up-stairs, where he supposed his master was. The whistle was heard just about the time that the Avalanche went down, and it was heard by two credible witnesses, whose testimony was confirmed by the response made to it by the dog of the lost sailor.

Our Trade with Brazil.

An unpublished statement of the trade of the United States with Brazil, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1877, from the department at Washington, shows that we have imported from that country $43,498,041 worth of merchandise, consisting of $36,000,000 worth of coffee, $1,000,000 of hides, $2,000,000 of rubber, and $3,000,000 of sugar, and some smaller items not necessary to mention. Meanwhile we have sent out to that country, partly in foreign vessels, only $7,499,718 worth of our own products. Our largest item is flour, of which we sent nearly $4,000,000 worth. The rest consists of railroad supplies, machinery, illuminating oils, lard, and about $500,000 worth of cotton goods. England, on the other hand, gets about $40,000,000, and pays in cash only $4,000,000. The balance against the United States is $35,998,423. This remarkable showing of English trade is made the basis of a claim for a subsidized line of steamers between this country and Brazil to develop the American trade.

Mars' Moons.

When the telegraph announced the discovery by Prof. Hall that our neighboring planet had two satellites, and the dispatch was read the next morning at ten thousand American breakfast tables, what think you was the effect upon the hearers? Some colloquy similar to the following was sure to occur: "Mars has two moons, hey? Pass me the milk, Kitty. Strange, isn't it, that astronomers never saw them before. Another chop, please. I wonder what they'll discover next? These corn cakes are excellent. What's the latest from Europe?" We have become so accustomed to startling discoveries and announcements that we take them as a matter of course. Even truth must appear in flaming colors to make herself seen. The virtues of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Pleasant Purgative Pellets have been tested in ten thousand households, whose inmates will tell you that they consider the discovery and introduction of these remedies of far greater importance to the world than the moons of Mars.

SHIPMAN, Ill., June 13, 1876.

Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.:

DEAR SIR: Last fall our daughter—aged 18—was fast sinking with consumption. Different physicians had pronounced her case incurable. I obtained one-half dozen bottles of your Golden Medical Discovery. She commenced improving at once, and is now as hardy as a pine knot. Yours respectfully,

REV. ISAAC N. AUGUSTINE.

Mrs. General Sherman,

Wife of the General of the United States Army, says:—"I have frequently purchased Durang's Rheumatic Remedy for friends suffering with Rheumatism, and in every instance it worked like magic." Send for circular to Helphenstine & Bentley, Druggists, Washington, D. C.

"There's Nothing Like It."

"The best we ever used." "Find it much cheaper than others." "Can testify to its superiority." Extracts from letters to the manufacturers of DOOLEY'S YEAST POWDER.

MILLIONS of bottles of BURNETT'S COCOAINE have been sold during the last twenty years, in every civilized country, and the public have rendered the verdict that it is the cheapest and best Hair Dressing in the world.

Strong Nerves an Attainable Blessing.

There are many who have never known the blessing of strong nerves, having been born with weak ones. Those who have, and, through disease or some other cause, have suffered a loss of nerve power, can, by contrast, more fully appreciate the magnitude of that loss. The true way to repair it is to invigorate the system through the medium of improved digestion, secretion, and the establishment of a regular habit of body, three results invariably accomplished by the use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which insures the thorough conversion of the food into pure, nourishing blood, from which the nerves, in common with every other part of the bodily economy, gather vigor, the grand prerequisite of health. The great objection to sedatives and narcotics is, that they not only exert no tonic influence, but are always followed by a hurtful reaction. Such is far from being the case with the Bitters, the primary action of which is most salutary, and whose after effects are beneficial in the extreme.

Rheumatism Quickly Cured.

"Durang's Rheumatic Remedy," the great [illegible] will positively cure any case of rheumatism on the face of the earth. Price, $1 a bottle, six bottles, $5. Sold by all druggists. Send for circular to Helphenstine & Bentley, Druggists, Washington, D. C.

CHEW
The Celebrated
"MATCHLESS"
Wood Tag Plug
TOBACCO.
THE PIONEER TOBACCO COMPANY,
New York, Boston and Chicago.

AYER & SON'S MANUAL contains information of great value to advertisers. Sent free by N. W. Ayer & Son, Adv. Agts., Philadelphia.

PATENTEES and inventors should read advertisement of Edson Bros. in another column.

Two Chromos Free.—A pair of beautiful 9x11 Chromos, worthy to adorn any home, and a Three Months' Subscription to LEISURE HOURS, a handsome 16 page literary paper, filled with the Choicest Stories, Sketches, Poetry, etc., sent Free to all sending fifteen cents (stamps taken) to pay postage. The publishers, J. L. Patten & Co., 162 William St., N. Y., Guarantee every one Double Value of money sent. $1000 in prizes, and big pay given to agents. Send at once!

MESSRS. TIFFANY & CO., UNION SQUARE, NEW YORK CITY, the leading Jewelers and Silversmiths in the United States, have just prepared for complimentary distribution, a pamphlet of sixty-four pages, containing a condensed account of each of their several departments, practical suggestions relative to the selection of presents for Ladies, Gentlemen or Children, and lists of appropriate articles, that cannot fail to be of service to persons having gifts to select for Wedding, Holiday or other occasions. They will send it by mail postage paid, on request.
ADDRESS AS ABOVE.

$$$ Persons, male or female, old or young, who desire liberal pay for honest industry, address W. F. SEMPLE & Co., Mt. Vernon, O.

PIANOS AND ORGANS.
BEST AND CHEAPEST in the WORLD For Cash or Installments. Send for Illustrated Catalogues. AGENTS Wanted. Horace Waters & Sons, 40 E. 14th St., N. Y.

ONLY ONCE! CUT IT OUT!
WANTED.—Boys and Girls, Young Ladies, Men and Women, to engage in pleasant, easy and PROFITABLE WORK, that will have the hearty encouragement and support of Clergymen, Teachers, Parents, and all interested in the welfare of youth. Particulars and Outfit free. Also, wanted, 1,000 Ladies, to get a $75 Sewing Machine for only $15.
No humbug. Address Z. POPE VOSE, Rockland, Maine.

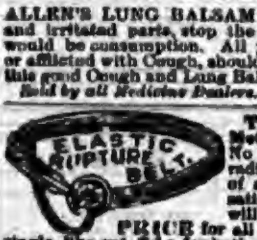
TAKE NOTICE. We have the LARGEST and best selling Stationery Package in the world. It contains 18 sheets of Paper, 18 Envelopes, Pencil, Penholder, Golden Pen, and a piece of valuable Jewelry. Complete sample package, with elegant gold stone Sleeve Buttons, Set Gold plated Studs, Engraved Gold-plated Ring, and a Ladies' Fashionable Fancy Set, Pin and Drops, postpaid 25 cents. 5 PACKAGES with Assorted Jewelry $1. A Splendid Watch and Chain free with every $50 worth of Goods you buy. Extraordinary Inducements to Agents.
BRIDE & CO. 11 Clinton Place, New York.

KEEP'S SHIRTS.
KEEP'S Patent Partly-made Dress Shirts, best quality, only plain seams to finish, 6 for $7.
KEEP'S Custom Shirts to measure, best quality, 6 for $9, delivered free. Guaranteed perfectly satisfactory.
RED FLANNEL UNDERWEAR.
Undershirts and Drawers, best quality, $1.50 each.
White Flannel Undervests, best quality, $1.50 each.
Canton Flannel Vests & Drawers, ex. heavy, 75c. each.
Twilled Silk Umbrellas, paragon frames, $3 each.
Best Gingham, patent protected ribs, $1 each.
Circulars and Samples mailed free on application. Shirts only delivered free. KEEP MANUFACTURING COMPANY, 165 and 167 Mercer Street, New York.

MARY J. HOLMES.
The new novel, MILDRED, by Mrs. Mary J. Holmes, author of those splendid books—Edith Lyle—West Lawn—Tempest and Sunshine—Lena Rivers—etc., is now ready, and for sale by all booksellers. Price, $1.50. It is one of the finest novels ever written, and everybody should read it.
G. W. Carleton & Co., Pub'rs., New York.

10 Cts BUYS — The STANDARD and POPULAR Western Farmer's Almanac — Estab'd 1826
Original Articles by the best authors: Practical, Humorous, with Anecdotes, sayings wise and witty, etc. Send ten Cents for a copy.
51 Yrs OLD. — JOHN P. MORTON & CO. LOUISVILLE, KY. — 1878 NOW READY
Dealers supplied by St. Louis or Chicago News Co.

10,000 A YEAR.
It is estimated that this number die yearly in the United States of
CONSUMPTION.
ALLEN'S LUNG BALSAM will at once allay the pain and irritated parts, stop the cough, and prevent what would be consumption. All persons with weak Lungs, or afflicted with Cough, should at once test the merits of this good Cough and Lung Balsam.
Sold by all Medicine Dealers.



The Best Truss without Metal Springs ever invented. No humbug claim of a certain radical cure, but a guarantee of a comfortable, secure and satisfactory appliance. We will take back and pay FULL PRICE for all that do not suit. Price, single, like cut, $4; for both sides, $6. Sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of price. N. B.—This Truss WILL CURE more Ruptures than any of those for which extravagant claims are made. Circulars free.
POMEROY TRUSS CO., 746 Broadway, New York.

AGENTS WANTED!
FOR PARTICULARS, ADDRESS
WILSON SEWING MACHINE CO.
820 Broadway, New York City; Chicago, Ill.; New Orleans, La.; or San Francisco, Cal.

JACKSON'S BEST
SWEET NAVY CHEWING TOBACCO
was awarded the highest prize at Centennial Exposition for its fine chewing qualities, the excellence and lasting character of its sweetening and flavoring. If you want the best tobacco ever made, ask your grocer for this, and see that each plug bears our blue-strip trade-mark, with words Jackson's Best on it. Sold wholesale by all jobbers. Send for sample to C. A. JACKSON & CO., Manufacturers, Petersburg, Va.

Nature's Cure. For Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Neuralgia, Nervous Weakness and Diseases is The Voltaic Belt. When worn it generates Electricity—the great curative agent. Physicians use and recommend it. Try it. $3. Novelty Truss—a comfortable, durable and perfect Hernia supporter—$4. Adjustable Uterine Supporter—highly recommended—$6. Digital Syringe—combines syringe, forceps and speculum, hard rubber—$3. File Supporter—comfortably worn on horseback—afflicted ones get it—$2.50. Discount to trade and physicians. Goods sent C. O. D. Address CHICAGO VOLTAIC AND TRUSS CO., 80 Washington Street, Chicago.

TEACHERS of VOCAL MUSIC,
Desiring the Best Book extant, should try FAVORITE SONGS. An unequaled collection of Gems compiled for their use by Profs. H. S. and T. H. B. Christie, and supervised by Prof. R. M. McIntosh, the eminent author and teacher. Price $4.00 a dozen. Sample by mail, 50 cents. SPECIMEN PAGES FREE. R. W. CARROLL & CO., Publishers, Cincinnati, or LYON & HEALY, Chicago.

PENSIONS Procured or NO PAY, to every wounded, ruptured or accidentally injured or diseased Soldier. Address Col. N. W. FITZGERALD, U. S. Claim Att'y, Washington, D. C.

ACENTS WANTED FOR
Creative Science;
Or, MANHOOD, WOMANHOOD, AND THEIR MUTUAL INTER-RELATIONS; LOVE, ITS LAWS, POWER, ETC.
Agents are selling from 15 to 25 copies a day. Send for specimen pages and our extra terms to Agents, and see why it sells faster than any other book. Address NATIONAL PUBLISHING CO., Chicago, Ill.

ALL FOR 3 CTS.! An Unparalleled Offer! 3 cts (stamp or silver), we will send a copy of our large, new and beautiful Lithographic Engraving, entitled "The Proffered Kiss," also a specimen copy of The Cricket on the Hearth, a mammoth 16-page, 64-column Illustrated paper, (size of Harper's Weekly), filled with splendid Continued and Short Stories, Sketches, Poems, Useful Knowledge, Wit and Humor, etc., etc. [illegible] the paper for the Home Circle, and the Largest, Handsomest, Best, and Cheapest of its class in the world. This Great Offer is made to introduce it into New Homes. Don't miss this chance. Write Now! Address F. M. LUPTON & CO., Publishers, [illegible]

WEBSTER'S UNABRIDGED DICTIONARY
3000 ENGRAVINGS

BEST HOLIDAY GIFT
FOR PARENT, CHILD, TEACHER, PASTOR, FRIEND.

CANCER.
THE treatment of Cancer has become so interwoven with quackery that the progressive physician has appeared unwilling to enter into the arena against the deception, consequently the mass of the medical profession are almost totally ignorant of this fearful and most prevalent disease. They regard cancer as incurable because they do not understand its origin or pathology, consequently they merely try to alleviate the excruciating pain which this disease entails upon its victims. We regard cancer as curable in both forms—medullary and cirrhus. We have used our remedies in this country and Europe for the last twenty years with marvelous success, especially in cases of the womb, breast and face. We earnestly solicit a call from those who have given up hope. One of the physicians of the institute will visit those in any part of the country who are unable to call. We use neither knife, plaster nor caustic, and cause no pain, depending entirely upon our specific. Patients on beginning treatment only pay for the medicines they receive until they are satisfied they are improving. Fee for examination and consultation $3.00 in all cases. All letters of inquiry must contain $1.00, as our time is valuable and cannot be given for nothing. Address all letters to the Superintendent, DR. ROBERTSON, at office of Institute, 24 Tremont Street, Boston.

HENS LAY If fed with EGYPTIAN EGG PRODUCER.
scraps not needed; 1 lb. is enough for 10 hens a month. Grocers sell it, 4 lbs. $1; 1 lb. 35 cts. C. W. GUY, Manufacturer, 25 Bedford st., Boston. Circulars free. One pound sent, postage paid, for 50c.
Agents wanted in every town in the United States.
Agents, Jobbers and Retailers supplied by
B. R. NOBLE, 101 Wall st., N. Y.
WEIKEL & SMITH SPICE CO., Philadelphia, Penn.
J. E. KINGWILL & BRO., 128 So. Water st., Chicago.
EDWD L. MUELLER, 118 N. Main st., St. Louis, Mo.
ADAMS, BUTTERFIELD & CO., Indianapolis, Ind.
JOHN T. HANCOCK & CO., Dubuque, Iowa.
CHAS. H. TELLER, 44 Joy st., Detroit, Mich.
ALBERT FRIES, St. Nicholas, Fla.
CHAS. BULLOCK, Trenton, N. J.

BABBITT'S TOILET SOAP.

Unrivaled for the Toilet and the Bath. No artificial and deceptive odors to cover common and deleterious ingredients. After years of scientific experiment the manufacturer of B. T. Babbitt's Best Soap has perfected and now offers to the public The FINEST TOILET SOAP in the World. Only the purest vegetable oils used in its manufacture.
For Use in the Nursery it has No Equal.
Worth ten times its cost to every mother and family in Christendom. Sample box, containing 3 cakes of 6 ozs. each, sent free to any address on receipt of 75 cents. Address
B. T. BABBITT, New York City.
For Sale by all Druggists.

BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES — FOR COUGHS AND COLDS
A
Cough, Cold, or Sore Throat,
Requires immediate attention, as neglect oftentimes results in some incurable Lung disease. BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES are a simple remedy, and will almost invariably give immediate relief.
SOLD BY ALL CHEMISTS and dealers in medicines.

WEBER'S
METROPOLITAN CORSET!
THE ONLY CORSET COMBINING
Grace, Comfort and Beauty!

Is constructed on purely scientific principles. The back is whole boned and left open at the hips to be laced at pleasure of wearer, and is so gored in back that the fabrics and bones adapt themselves with marvelous accuracy to every curve and undulation of the finest type of figure. For sale by all leading merchants. Lady Agents wanted. Samples by mail on receipt of $1.50.
WESTERN DEPOT, KEITH BROS., Chicago, Ill.

DR. SANFORD'S LIVER INVIGORATOR
CATHARTIC TONIC
GENERAL FAMILY MEDICINE
FOR DISEASES OF LIVER STOMACH & BOWELS
CONSTIPATION
SICK HEADACHE
DIARRHŒA
BILIOUSNESS DYSPEPSIA

PULMONA,
Made from the prescription of one of the most eminent physicians in the medical faculty, is now offered to the public as a radical cure for CONSUMPTION, BRONCHITIS, CATARRH, ASTHMA, and all affections of the THROAT and LUNGS; for all Disorders of the Nervous System, and Diseases of the Blood. PULMONA increases the strength and deepens the color of the pale blood. It checks Night Sweats within a fortnight. It subdues the CHILLS and FEVER. It diminishes Expectoration. It causes calm and refreshing sleep. It invigorates the appetite, and the invalid gains flesh rapidly. It is beyond comparison the best remedy known for CONSUMPTION and all affections of the THROAT, LUNGS and NERVOUS SYSTEM.
Extracts from Letters from Pastors of Churches.
PULMONA saved my daughter's life. * * * REV. E. JONES, Remsen, N. Y.
We bless God for the benefits we have received from the use of PULMONA. REV. P. WARREN, Canton, Pa.
Every one who I have recommended it to has benefited much by its use. REV. C. D. HUMPHREYS, Racine, Wis.
A circular containing advice for the treatment of the diseases above mentioned, certificates of MANY actual cures, and full particulars of cases successfully treated will be sent free to applicants.
PULMONA may be obtained through Druggists, or orders may be sent to the Proprietor direct. Price, $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5. OSCAR G. MOSES, 18 Cortlandt Street, New York.

IF YOU WANT
A First-Class Magazine
Subscribe for THE ATLANTIC MONTHLY for 1878 now, and you will receive the November and December numbers FREE. Price $4.00. For One Dollar extra you can obtain a splendid life-size portrait of either of the world-famous poets, Whittier, Bryant and Longfellow, by mail, postage free. Mark Twain is a constant contributor to THE ATLANTIC, and the best Authors, Poets and Story-Tellers in the country write for its pages. Address H. O. HOUGHTON & CO., Riverside Press, Cambridge, Mass.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER.
Absolutely Pure.
All Grocers authorized to guarantee it full weight, and [illegible] To try it, send [illegible] a pound can [illegible] Sent by mail free of postage.
ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., N. Y.

WHITNEY & HOLMES
ORGANS.
The Finest Toned and Most Durable Made.
New Styles. New Solo Stops.
Warranted Five Years. Send for Price-Lists.
WHITNEY & HOLMES ORGAN CO., QUINCY, ILL.

BOOK AGENTS, TAKE NOTICE!
JOSIAH ALLEN'S WIFE
[illegible]
SAMANTHA AT THE CENTENNIAL!
As a [illegible] and [illegible] outdoes herself, and Widow Doodle leaves Betsy Bobbet far behind. Don't wait and lose your chance; send for circulars, territory, &c., at once. Address AMERICAN PUBLISHING CO., Chicago, Ill., Cincinnati, O., and Hartford, Conn.

"The Best Polish in the World."
THE RISING SUN STOVE POLISH

THE GOOD OLD STAND-BY.
MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT.
FOR MAN AND BEAST.
ESTABLISHED 35 YEARS. Always cures. Always ready. Always handy. Has never yet failed. Thirty millions have tested it. The whole world approves the glorious old Mustang—the Best and Cheapest Liniment in existence. 25 cents a bottle. The Mustang Liniment cures when nothing else will.
SOLD BY ALL MEDICINE VENDERS.

BURNETT'S
KALLISTON FOR REMOVING
Tan, Sunburn, Freckles, Redness and Eruptions of the Skin, and for Rendering the Complexion Clear and Beautiful.
Of all the effects that exposure of the skin to the air or sun produces, the most disagreeable is called freckles, or tan. If spread over the entire surface of the parts exposed, it is called tan; if scattered at intervals, freckles. The finest skins are most subject to them. The KALLISTON, prepared by Joseph Burnett & Co., Boston, contains a peculiar erasive property which will remove these disagreeable stains. It is at the same time perfectly harmless, allays all tendency to inflammation, and renders the complexion clear and beautiful.

JONAS WHITCOMB'S ASTHMA REMEDY
—TRADE MARK—
FOR ASTHMA, ROSE COLD, HAY FEVER, Etc.
This remedy has been used in thousands of the worst cases, with astonishing and uniform success, and is offered to the public with full confidence in its merits. It contains no poisonous or injurious properties whatever, and an infant may take it with perfect safety.
Extract from the "Life of Washington Irving," by his nephew, Pierre M. Irving, Vol. IV., page 272.
"The doctor prescribed, as an experiment,—what had been suggested by Dr. (O. W.) Holmes on his late visit,—'Jonas Whitcomb's Remedy for Asthma,' a teaspoonful in a wineglass of water, to be taken every four hours. A good night was the result."
"I have had the spasmodic asthma fifteen years. I commenced taking 'Jonas Whitcomb's Remedy for the Asthma' eighteen months ago, and have not had a severe paroxysm since." SARAH SEELY, Eddytown, Yates Co., N. Y., to Editors Rural New Yorker.
"Have sold 'Whitcomb's Remedy' for nearly twenty years. I know of nothing so uniformly successful." THEODORE METCALF, Druggist, Tremont Street, Boston.
"I have derived very great benefit from 'Jonas Whitcomb's Asthma Remedy.'" G. F. OSBORNE, President Neptune Insurance Co., Boston, Mass.
"My mother had suffered eight years from the harvest asthma. The recurrence of this three-months' agony every year must soon wear her out. 'Jonas Whitcomb's Asthma Remedy' arrested the terrible disease, and has kept it off for the whole season, to the great joy of the family." Rev. JOS. E. ROY, Chicago Agent of the American Home Missionary Society, to the N. Y. Independent.
Prepared only by JOSEPH BURNETT & CO., Boston. For sale by all Druggists.

A GOOD OFFER
$19.15 for $11.45
The Manager of THE INTER-OCEAN, of Chicago, makes the following offer to new subscribers:
On the Receipt of Only $11.45
We will send you THE WEEKLY INTER-OCEAN for one year, postage paid, price $1.65, "INDOOR AND OUT," an illustrated monthly publication, price $1.50, and an
ELGIN NATIONAL WATCH
Price, $16.00.
These Watches which we offer are made by the ELGIN NATIONAL WATCH COMPANY of Chicago, and each is GUARANTEED by the Company's own MEDAL CERTIFICATE, which will accompany the same. The very superior value and workmanship of these Watches are too well known, and their reputation too firmly established to need any praise from us.
They are manufactured expressly for us, engraved "Inter Ocean," put up in warranted silver hunting cases, and are good reliable timekeepers, no pains being spared by the Company to make them trustworthy and reliable.
THE INTER-OCEAN is a large, eight-paged, quarto newspaper, and one of the BEST AND MOST POPULAR published in the country. It has the largest circulation of any paper published west of New York.
Remit in money order or registered letter.
Address THE INTER-OCEAN, 119 Lake St., Chicago, Ill.

Chorus, Anthem & Glee Books
Musical Societies this Winter will use
The Gem Gleaner. By J. M. CHADWICK, is especially for Choirs, having rather more than one good Anthem or Motet for each Sunday of the year. Just published. Music by Dr. Munger, J. M. Chadwick, and other favorite composers. A good book for the easy practice of Societies. $1.00; or $9.00 per doz.
Emerson's Chorus Book. By L. O. EMERSON, has an admirable collection of Sacred Choruses, and an equally large number of Secular Choruses and Glees. All is of the best quality. A first-class Society book. $1.25; or $12 per doz.
Perkins' Glee & Chorus Book. By H. S. PERKINS, has 26 Glees and 6 Sacred Choruses, all of the best, and many unusually attractive. A first-class Society book. $1.25; or $12 per doz.
Chorus Choir. By E. TOURJEE, has 75 fine Anthems and Choruses, and 26 Chants, Te Deums, &c. First-class Chorus-Choir book. $15 per doz.
The American Glee Book. By W. O. PERKINS, is a true Glee Book, with the best and most entertaining compositions from beginning to end. $1.50; or $13.50 per doz.
OLIVER DITSON & CO., Boston.
C. H. Ditson & Co., 843 Broadway, N. Y. — J. E. Ditson & Co., 922 Chestnut St., Phila.

$5 to $20 A DAY at home. Agents wanted. Outfit and terms free. TRUE & CO., Augusta, Maine.
$50 [illegible] with our [illegible] Bibles, Charts & Maps. [illegible] Pub'g House, Chicago.
$66 a week in your own town. Terms and $5 outfit free. H. HALLETT & CO., Portland, Maine.
$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $5 free. STINSON & CO., Portland, Maine.
GUNS REVOLVERS. Price List free. Address Great Western Gun Works, Pittsburgh, Pa.
$3300 A YEAR. How to Make it. New Agents Goods. COE & YONGE, St. Louis, Mo.
WORTHINGTON BUSINESS COLLEGE, Evanston. Send for circular to Chicago, Ill.
Books Old & New wanted and sold. [illegible] Book Exchange, 38 [illegible] N. Y.
100,000 [illegible] GEO. D. [illegible]
PAT [illegible] 12c prepaid. J. JAY GOULD, Boston, Mass.
MAGIC PEN—Writes without Ink. Send 3c stamp for sample. Union Novelty Co., Rutland, Vt.
DOCTORS [illegible] FREE. Ad's Box 1408, [illegible], O.
$350 A MONTH—AGENTS WANTED. 36 best selling articles in the world; one sample free. Address JAY BRONSON, Detroit, Mich.
$2500 a year. Agents wanted everywhere. Business strictly legitimate. Particulars free. Address J. WORTH & CO., St. Louis, Mo.
$3 GOLD PLATED WATCHES. Cheapest in the known world. Sample Watch Free to Agents. Address, A. COULTER & CO., Chicago, Ill.
$400 A MONTH. AGENTS WANTED. 250 of the latest novelties. Send for Catalog. VAN & Co., Chicago.
BEATTY Pianos, Organs best. [illegible] Look! startling news. Organs, 13 stops $65. Pianos only $130, cost $650. Cir. Free. Daniel F. Beatty, Washington, N. J.
CLOCKS E. INGRAHAM & CO.'S are superior in design and not equaled in quality, or as timekeepers. Ask your Jeweler for them. Manufactory—Bristol, Ct.
KIDDER'S PASTILLES. Sure relief ASTHMA. Price 35 cts. by mail. Stowell & Co., Charlestown, Mass.
PATENTS AND INVENTORS. EDSON BROS., Agents, 711 G St., Washington, D. C. U. S. and Foreign Patents. Established in 1858. Fee after allowance. Circ'l of instructions, etc., sent free.

SELF-INKING TRIUMPH PRINTING PRESS. $3.50; Outfit & Press, $8.50. Young America hand & self-inker, the best for business. Send 2 stamps for catalogue to D. W. WATSON, 73 Cornhill, Boston, Mass.
SUNSHINE A 16-page monthly, for one year, 1 fine Chromo; Box of Fine French Stationery; Centennial Puzzle; Pair Sleeve Buttons and Magic Pen. All for 25c. AGENTS WANTED. SUNSHINE PUBLISHING CO., 116 East Washington Street, Chicago, Ill.

DYKES' BEARD ELIXIR [illegible]
The preparation is [illegible] [illegible]

BOSTON WEEKLY TRANSCRIPT
The best family newspaper published; eight pages; fifty-six columns reading.
Terms—$2 per annum; clubs of eleven, $10 per annum, in advance.
SPECIMEN COPY GRATIS.
$10 to $25 a day sure made by Agents selling our Chromos, Crayons, Picture and Chromo Cards. 125 samples, worth $5, sent postpaid for 85 Cents. Illustrated Catalogue free. J. H. BUFFORD'S SONS, Boston. (Established 1830.)
WORK FOR ALL
In their own localities, canvassing for the Fireside Visitor (enlarged), Weekly and Monthly. Largest Paper in the World, with Mammoth Chromos Free. Big Commissions to Agents. Terms and Outfit Free. Address P. O. VICKERY, Augusta, Maine.
NASBY AS A BANKER, AND ON the President's Policy. Two of the richest, raciest pamphlets ever issued. Full of the rare Humor and profound Philosophy of the Sage of Confedrit X Roads. 10 cents each; three for 25 cents. Address BLADE, Toledo, Ohio.
STORIES. Five complete novels, by eminent writers, and four delightful stories, all for 25 cents. In book form, would cost $5.00. Address THE BLADE, Toledo, Ohio.
FREE Choice Standard BOOKS in all departments of literature—Poetry, Fiction, History, Biography, the Classics, etc.; the best and cheapest Books in the world. Catalogue free. Address THE BLADE, Toledo, Ohio.
BEFORE YOU subscribe for any other paper send for a specimen copy of THE TOLEDO BLADE. It is a Mammoth Eight-Page Weekly Paper of Sixty-four Columns, filled with carefully prepared reading matter of interest and value to people in all parts of the United States. Specimens free.
BOYS AND GIRLS
Wanted everywhere to get up clubs for THE HOME COMPANION—not a trashy paper, but one of the largest and best published for young folks. Over 200,000 delighted readers. Only 50 cts. a year, with premium picture. Splendid list of premiums. Complete outfit 10 cents, or sample copy FREE. E. L. THORPE, Publisher, 14 Bolivar St., Cleveland, Ohio.

Send for Reduced Price-List of MASON & HAMLIN CABINET ORGANS.
NEW and SPLENDID STYLES; PRICES REDUCED $10 to $50 EACH THIS MONTH (NOV. 1877). Address MASON & HAMLIN ORGAN CO., Boston, New York, or Chicago.

$1.00 $1.00
Osgood's Heliotype Engravings.
The choicest household ornaments. Price One Dollar each. Send for catalogue.
JAMES R. OSGOOD & CO., BOSTON, MASS.
$1.00 $1.00

THAT GIRL OF MINE.
THAT GIRL OF MINE. A Thrilling Love Story, uniform with "Theo." Paper cover 50 cents, Cloth $1.00.
THAT LOVER OF MINE. A Love Story. By author of "That Girl of Mine." Paper cover 50 cents, Cloth $1.00.
"THEO." A LOVE STORY. By author of "That Lass o' Lowrie's." Paper cover 50 cents, Cloth $1.00.
THE RED HILL TRAGEDY. By Mrs. Emma D. E. N. Southworth. Paper cover 50 cents, Cloth $1.00.
PRETTY POLLY PEMBERTON. A Love Story. By author of "Theo." Paper cover 50 cents, Cloth $1.00.
BESSIE'S SIX LOVERS. A Charming Love Story, uniform with "Theo." Paper cover 50 cents, Cloth $1.00.
THE AMOURS OF PHILLIPPE. A LOVE STORY. By Octave Feuillet. Paper cover 50 cents, Cloth $1.00.
Above Books are for sale by all Booksellers and News Agents, or copies will be sent per mail, post-paid, to any one, on any one remitting price to the Publishers,
T. B. PETERSON & BROTHERS, PHILADELPHIA.

THOMSON'S PATENT
GLOVE-FITTING CORSETS.
COMFORT
SURPASSES
The friends of this UNRIVALLED CORSET are now numbered by MILLIONS.
Prices are much reduced.
MEDAL RECEIVED AT CENTENNIAL.
Get the Genuine, and beware of imitations.
ASK ALSO FOR THOMSON'S UNBREAKABLE STEELS.
The best goods made.
See that the name of THOMSON and the Trade Mark, a CROWN, are stamped on every Corset & Steel.
FITS THE FIGURE PERFECTLY

SANDAL-WOOD.
A positive remedy for all diseases of the Kidneys, Bladder and Urinary Organs; also, good in Dropsical Complaints. It never produces sickness, is certain and speedy in its action. It is fast superseding all other remedies. Sixty capsules cure in six or eight days. No other medicine can do this.
Beware of Imitations, for, owing to its great success, many have been offered; some are most dangerous, causing piles, &c.
DUNDAS DICK & CO.'S Genuine Soft Capsules, containing Oil of Sandal-Wood, sold at all Drug Stores. Ask for circular, or send for one to 35 and 37 Wooster street, New York.

C. N. U. No. 49

WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS, please say you saw the advertisement in this paper.

Auburn Courier.

AUBURN, INDIANA, DEC. 13th, 1877.

Judge Martindale, of the Indianapolis Journal, has fallen heir to Morton's "place" in Indiana politics. He has donned the "bloody shirt"

It was Patterson, Conover and Mathews who assisted in the confirmation of Maj. Fitzsimmons as United States Marshal of Georgia. And Fitz. was in the rebel army too. What will our radicals do now, poor things.

A contemporary is authority for the statement that Wilber F. Story, of the Chicago Times, has a silver nose. At last he has the traditional silver spoon, and of course is in favor of resumption, and against remonetization as all bloated bond holders are.

Hamburg Butler was admitted to the United States Senate by the votes of Patterson and Conover, who claim to be Republicans.—Warsaw Republican.

Just think of Republicans admitting the hero, as they say, of the Hamberg Massacre. After all the horrible pictures they have painted about the affair.

The silly twaddle indulged in by some papers, against the holding of the Democratic State Convention at the Capital, should not influence the Central Committee one iota. It is mere nonsense, and is prompted only by a spirit of envy. Indianapolis is the proper place for it, and no other should be selected. Delegates have to pay their own expenses, and it would not be fair to drag them off to an extreme part of the State when we have a central point with ample hotel accommodations.

"Is this a foreign country?" asks an American Journal. Russia leather is made in Connecticut, Bordeaux wine is manufactured in California, French lace is woven in New York, Italian marble is dug in Kentucky, Marseilles linen is produced in Mussachusetts, English cassimere is made in New Hampshire, Persian art work comes from a shop in Boston, Spanish mackerel are caught on the New Jersey coast, and Havana cigars are rolled out by the million in Chicago. And French Bourbon whisky is made in New York.

The New York Herald, a Hayes paper, says: "If the Republican party attempts to hold another National Convention, that Convention will be its public funeral. He must be an over sanguine man who could think its nomination worth seeking. Since the death of Senator Morton, Indiana is as unalterably Democratic as any Southern State, and the Democrats will need only one of the large States in addition to those seventeen to elect their candidates With Hendricks as candidate, there is no doubt of the above.

A newspaper that is run entirely in the interests of the editor, that he may vent his spleen toward some individual, is a great injury to the place in is published in. This is the law as now set down by Bro. Parker, of the Kendallville News, and formerly of the Garrett News. Had he discovered this fact when he assumed the editorial chair at Garrett, he might have been to-day the only editor of that place. This experience was dearly purchased, but sts good.

Morton Monument.

TO THE PEOPLE OF DE KALB CO., IND.:

The undersigned having been appointed manager of De Kalb County for the Morton Monumental Association, I would respectfully ask the liberal minded citizens of De Kalb County to give this matter a favorable consideration. I invite the hearty co-operation of every person in the county. Do not let De Kalb be behind other counties in the State in contributing to the erection of a fitting monument to the great War Governor.

Soldiers, you remember the noble services of Gov. Morton in your behalf during the war. He was indeed your true and patriotic friend. Let us now pay this last tribute of respect to his memory.

Indiana has not honored her soldiers with a suitable monument as every other State that was true to the Union has done. Every patriotic citizen must desire to see something of this kind accomplished. Judging the future by the past, our legislature cannot be depended upon to pass an appropriation for this purpose, therefore the Association has determined to go before the people and raise money by subscription to erect a monument or memorial hall, under the dome of which a statue in bronze or marble is to be erected to the memory of Oliver P. Morton.

Subscription books will be placed in the hands of canvassers in each township and precinct, who will thoroughly canvass and solicit subscriptions.

GEO. W. GORDON,
Manager De Kalb County.

W. T. KNAPP, M. D.
Formerly of Chicago, Ill.,
HOMEOPTHIC PHYSICIAN,
AUBURN, INDIANA.

Office at Residence, Ralston Property, Seventh Street.

Special attention given to
CHRONIC DISEASES
AND
DISEASES OF CHILDREN.
Calls promptly attended, day or night, city or country. Consultation in German or English.

CORUNNA ITEMS.

—The stock markets are pretty lively

—James DeLong, we learn, has been ailing for several days.

—Hank Little, of your city, spent Sunday here with his wife and baby.

—Mart Shaffer is building a new residence in the east part of the village.

—Tom. Lipsett broke his poultry wagon last Saturday—loaded too heavy.

—Dr. Mercer paid a visit to friends in Ligonier last Saturday and spent Sabbath there.

—The M. E. Church now has an organized choir. When will the U. B. come to the point.

—Daniel Thomas and others, from near Fagler's Corners, brought their wheat here Monday.

—Adam Coonrad, formerly of this place but now a resident of Garrett, passed Sunday here.

—Orrin McNabb has opened a lunch room in the rear end of Williamson's saloon. He has bologna, oysters and sich and a feller can get a square meal cheap.

—Superintendent Barns was in the village last Friday. He called at the schools and examined the building and thinks there is no immediate danger in the structure.

—Orrin Miller was out of luck Monday morning. He placed his index finger on the edge of a buck saw where teeth were sharp and long. A physician was summoned and the wound done up in a bed-sheet.

—One of Wm. Webster's daughters, of Fairfield Center, crossed the river of death last Friday. We sympathize with the bereaved parents and her many friends in the loss of this one who was loved by all.

—Mr. Parker's daughter, Sarah, of Sedan, who has been suffering for a long period, passed to the other world the latter part of last week. She was a short time since, wedded to one Mr. Wyatt and lived near Newville, but came to her fathers house in anticipation of re-gaining her health and remained there until she died.

—The condition of the school house still seems to be the topic of conversation. Quite a number of our citizens visited the grounds on Sabbath last and had their say as to its safety. Our old grey-haired veterans, squinting over the top of a pair of 25c. specs dictating to our architects—the women sounding the walls with their parasol handle, and the middle-aged man endeavoring to oust out the corner stone, presented a sad spectacle. Some say the walls are bulged out two inches—it is those who have bias eyes, however, and others say you can't tear it down. We heard one fellow say, who had a foot like an elephants ear, that you might burn the inside out of it and then all the men in the county couldn't kick the walls down We have about come to the conclusion that the school house was built upon a solid rock, and you know, a house thus erected cannot fall.

—A large number of citizens met at the M. E. church last Saturday evening to decide upon an organ contest between M. F. Long, of Auburn, and Alexander, of Kendallville. Everybody from the latter place were there—excluding those who stayed at home—and they all had their put-in—except Peterson W. E. Pete wanted the thing turned up and examined, but the Red Ribbon Club voted this motion down. Finally, after enough wind to inflate a circus baloon had been exhausted by both parties, the Club took a standing vote on the two organs, the result of which was as follows: The Auburn organ, the whole audience. The Kendallville organ, one man. It would have puzzled them to get the good will of him if there had been room for him to sit down. The Kendallvillians did considerable playing on their organ while Mike won their graces with his "mouth organ," his "eloquence" and "attractive jestures," but he wiped them out all the same.

Butler Items.

—The trade in fat hogs has been very active for the past two weeks.

—The type said Smith instead of Hayes & Ocher, who have the fine meat shop.

—Mr. A. May, our poultry dealer, took in over five hundred chickens on Monday.

—The old cooper shop has been moved up flush with the road and remoddled and will be occupied by Mr. Sheimer as a blacksmith shop.

—We shall become correct speakers that is if there is any virtue in teachers in elocution. Miss Callie Viniard and Mr. Fertich have both told us how it was done.

—Mr. Johnston, our harness man, has extended his business by stocking a shop at Angola, in charge of Mr. Conner. Both the project and the manager are well timed.

—Mr. Edgerly, near town, is dangerously ill with pneumonia. His physician (Dr. Fanning) has little hopes of his recovery. At the time of the attack he was recovering from a previous illness.

—FIRE.—On Monday evening our town was again aroused by that terrible cry of fire! We turned out and found it to be a dwelling house in flames. It was occupied by the Misses Herons. They succeeded in saving the furniture, but the house was consumed The loss is partly covered by an insurance of $500.

Newville Items.

—Rev. Butler delivered a splendid lecture to the R. R. Club Friday evening last.

—W. Dean has returned from his western trip and reports business good where he stopped.

—We will have two christmas trees one at the U. B. and the other at the Christian church.

—The Red Ribbon meetings are again in full blast. Regular meetings every Friday evening.

—Johnson's gallery has removed to Mrs. Greenameyer's property, one door north of the "Corner" store.

—The personal property of the late Dwight Moody, of this township, will be sold at public sale Saturday next.

—D. H. Murray is doing a big business buying hogs this fall and is paying as much as the market will allow.

—Our citizens gave a very pleasant surprise to Prof. Oviatt last Monday evening in the way of a pound party, and all enjoyed themselves hugely.

—The bridge across the St. Joe is completed and is the best yet built in this part of the county. The only fault any one can find with it is the plank are not of one thickness, which makes it rough.

A. K.

Communication.

GARRETT, IND., Dec. 12, 1877.

DEAR COURIER.—We are glad to see a little "reformation" being brought about in our village. It has been known here for some time that respectable citizens could not attend divine services, without being annoyed by a class of "would-be" young men, who go there for the express purpose of laughing, whispering and even talking aloud, to annoy those who participate in the services. They think themselves very smart young men, but thank God the people are beginning to get their eyes open and behold this great evil, and are taking measures to check it by prosecuting the offenders. The first case of this kind was tried here last Monday, by H. C. Peterson, Deputy Prosecutor. Delos Prouty was the first arrested and brought before Justice Bacon for trial, charged with having disturbed a religious meeting. This young man seems to have been one of the "ringleaders" of this band of "out laws." He thinks himself a gentleman of respectability, and beasts upon his "profound learning," his "moral culture" and his "high social position." Poor fellow, he is a slave—vice and corruption have sapped his manhood and left him without a vestage of real sterling character. But when the hour arrived for his trial he came with a brilliant array of witnesses of his own class to prove his innocence, but it was of no avail, for in spite of all his prancing around, Bacon fined him five dollars and costs, amounting in all to about twenty dollars. The next one brought up was a party known as Mike, who clerks in a grocery. He was so contemptably mean that even the low class were not familiar enough with him to learn his name, and was so ashamed of his own name that he managed to keep it from the officers, which made it a little difficult to get him. He was finally brought before the court and took the same dose as the other. He, however, had a little more "brains" than the other and plead guilty, which made the cost a little less. We think by a few more such cases, this "rough element" can be greatly reformed. If the readers of the COURIER will remember an article that appeared in the above paper a few weeks ago headed "Communication," they will see at a glance that the above proceedings apply the remedy advocated in that communication.—And we would say in conclusion that we only hope this prosecution will continue, and that by a persistant course of this kind, a speedy reformation may be brought about in our midst.

M. L.

EXECUTOR'S SALE.

Notice is hereby given that the undersigned, Executor of the late will and Testament of Hugh Watt, Senior deceased, will offer for sale at public auction, at the late residence of the Testator, one mile south-east of Auburn, Indiana, on Saturday, January 5th, 1878, the personal property of said estate, consisting of horses, cows, one two horse wagon, and new open buggy, plows, and other farming implements, hay, and other articles too numerous to mention. Terms, all sums of three dollars and under, cash, all sums over three dollars a credit of nine months will be given, the purchaser giving his note with approved security waving valuation and appraisement laws with interest.

GUY PLUM, Executor.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court, in a cause wherein Samuel Swihart is plaintiff, and Samuel Geisinger, etux, is defendant, requiring me to make the sum of one hundred and seventy-two dollars, 172, and eighty-three, 83, cents, with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 29th, 1877.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M., and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House of DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate to-wit:

Town lots numbers seventy-eight, 78, and seventy-nine, 79, in Ensleys second addition to the town of Auburn, DeKalb County and State of Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose at public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. ST CLAIR, Sheriff,
By THOS. D. GROSS, Deputy.
Guy Plum Attorney for plaintiff.
Auburn, Ind. Dec., 5th, 1877. Pf. $7.50

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of an execution to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Levi Houser is plaintiff, and Noah Lung is defendant, requiring me to make the sum of one hundred and fifty-two dollars (152) and twenty cents, with interest on said judgment and costs, I will expose at public sale to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 29th, 1877.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House of DeKalb County, Indiana, the rents and profits, for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

A life estate in ten (10) acres of land of a square form in the south west corner of the east half of the south west quarter of section twenty one (21), township thirty-three, 33, north of range twelve, 12, east in DeKalb county Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said judgment, interest and costs, I will, at the same time and place, expose at public sale, the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said judgment, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation and appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff,
By THOS. D. GROSS, Deputy.
Penfield Attorney for plaintiff.
Auburn, Ind, Dec. 5th. Pf. $7.75

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Samuel Gowdy is plaintiff and John A. Scholfield, et al. are defendants, requiring me to make the sum of Four Hundred and Nineteen dollars and thirteen cents, with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, JANUARY 5th, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House in DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years of the following real estate, to-wit:

The south half of the west half of the northeast quarter of section ten [10], township thirty five [35], north of range fourteen [14, east, containing forty acres of land, more or less, in DeKalb County, Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
McBride, Morlan & Leas, Atty's for plaintiff.
Auburn, Ind., Dec. 13th, 1877,
Pr. fee $7.50

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court, in a cause wherein Stiefle & Ochs are plaintiffs and George M. Tappan is defendent, require me to make the sum of Two hundred and fifteen dollars[215] and fifty[50]cents with interest on said judgement and costs, I will expose to the highest bidder on

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 29th, 1877.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M. of said day, at the door of the Court House, in DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years of the following real estate to-wit:

The undivided one seventh (1-7) of one hundred acres off the north part of the southeast quarter of section twelve, 12, township thirty-four, 34, north of range fourteen, 14, east in De Kalb County Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interests and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St CLAIR, Sheriff.
Young & Ralston, Attorneys for plaintiffs
Auburn, Nov, 21st, 1877. Pf. $9.25,

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit in a cause wherein Joseph C. Silvers is plaintiff and John Rinehart and Christiana Rinehart are defendants requiring me to make the sum of three hundred and thirty nine (339) dollars and fifteen, 15, cents with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder, on SATURDAY, DECEMBER 22d, 1877.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House in DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

The west half of the south half of the south east quarter of section thirty-six, 36, township thirty-five, 35, north of range twelve, 12, east containing forty acres of land more or less in DeKalb County Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
Rose & Hartman, Attorneys for plaintiffs.
Auburn, Nov. 8th, 1877. Pf. $8.00.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Thomas Richardson is plaintiff and Robert Zacher, et al. are defendants require me to make the sum of one hundred and seventy-seven dollars, with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder on

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 15th, 1877.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House in DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

Town lot number seventy-two [72] in Ensley's 2nd addition to the town of Auburn, in DeKalb County and State of Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff,
By THOS. D. GROSS, Deputy.
A. A. Chapin, atty for plff.
Nov. 21st, 1877. Pf. $7.75,

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of an execution to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court, in a cause wherein Stephen W. Hackley is plaintiff, and Julius Proctor is defendant, requiring me to make the sum of One Hundred and Ninety-Five Dollars and Forty-Five cents with interest on said judgment and costs, I will expose at public sale to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 15th, 1877,

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M. of said day, at the door of the Court House of DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

Southeast quarter of the Northwest quarter of section twelve [12], township thirty-four [34] north of range fourteen [14], east in DeKalb County, Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said judgment, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place, expose at public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said judgment, interest and costs.

Sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation and appraisement laws.

J. C. StCLAIR, Sheriff.
Rose & Hartman, Atty's. for plaintiff.
Auburn, Indiana, Nov. 20th, 1877.
Pr. fee $7.75.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of an Execution to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein J. M. Combs et al. are plaintiffs, and Burgett & Freeburn, are defendants requiring me to make the sum of Four Hundred and Fourteen Dollars with interest on said judgment and costs I will expose at public sale to the highest bidder on SATURDAY, DECEMBER 15th, 1877.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m. and 4 o'clock p. m. of said day at the door of the Court House of DeKalb County, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate to-wit:

Lot number seventy-three (73) in Egnew's addition to the town of Butler, DeKalb county, Indiana,

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said judgment interest and costs, I will at the same time and place, expose at public sale, the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
Best & McClellan, Att'ys for Plaintiff.
Auburn, Indiana, Nov 20th, 1877.
Pr. fee $7.50.

Sheriff Sale.

BY virtue of an execution to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb County Circuit Court in a cause wherein Joseph Boyer et al. are plaintiffs and Joseph Jones et al. are defendants, requiring me to make the sum of Three Hundred and Forty-Four Dollars, and Twelve cents, with interest on said judgment and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 15th, 1877

Between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m. and 4 o'clock p. m. of said day, at the door of the Court House in DeKalb County, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

Lot number fifty-six [56], in the town of Lawrence, (now Sedan,) in DeKalb County, Ind.

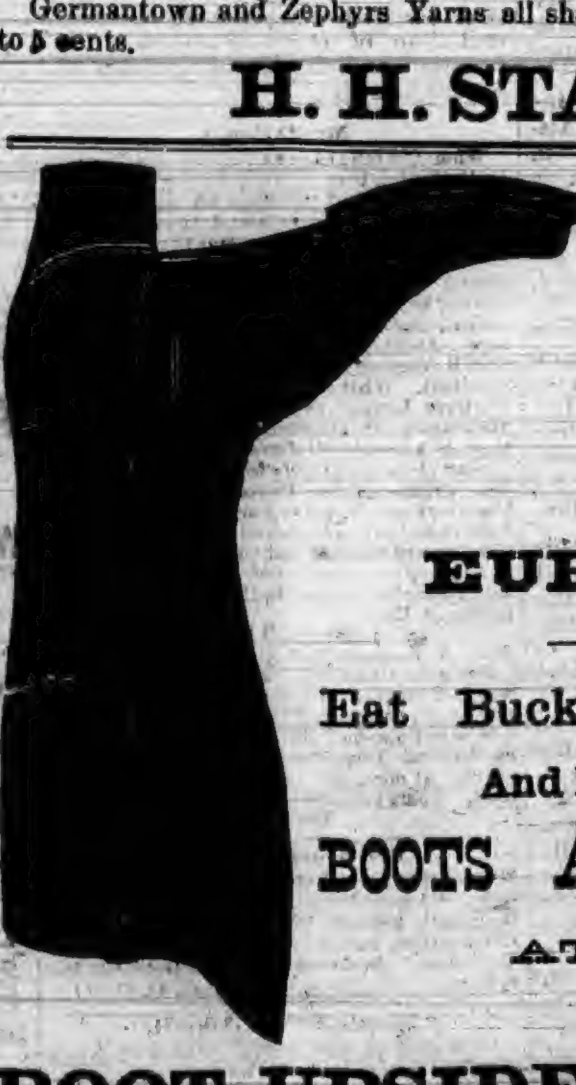
If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said judgment interests and costs, I will at the same time and place, expose the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said judgment, interest and costs.

Sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
McBride, Morlan & Leas, Att'ys for plaintiff.
Auburn, Ind, Nov, 20, 1877.
Pr. fee $7.50.

DAVENPORT THE DRUGGIST
Would call the attention of the public to his splendid stock of
PURE DRUGS AND MEDICINES!
Which have been selected with especial refference to the wants of this locality, and warranted fresh and genuine. Also to his fine stock of
HAIR OILS AND PERFUMERY.
The finest in the county. He also keeps a full stock of
Toilet Soaps, Face Powders, Combs, Brushes, Sponges, etc. Also Trusses and Supporters, in large varieties and a full Stock of DRUGGIST'S SUNDRIES.
SCHOOL BOOKS WALL PAPER AND CURTAINS!
The largest and most complete stock in Northern Indiana. Be sure to call on
DAVENPORT.
His stock is very complete and PRICES WAY DOWN. Also a full line of.
GOLD PENS, ALBUMS, POCKET BOOKS, BLANK BOOKS, INK and STATIONERY.
Be sure and call on
DAVENPORT, THE DRUGGIST,
AUBURN, IND.

LOOK AT THIS!
Never has our Millinery Department been so full and comlete and
PRICES LOWER.
Than has ever been known.
HATS. HATS.
Ladies and childrens untrimmed hats for 25c. 50c. 75c. and $1.00
" " well trimmed hats for 50c. 75c, and $1.00 and upward
Ladies silk ties 15c, 20c, 25c, and 50c
FUR AND FEATHER TRIMMINGS,
A good assortment. Ball and Silk Fringes, all prices.
FURS. FURS.
Our line of Furs has never been better. Children's sets 50c. 75c, and upward. Ladies Mink, full set 7, 12, and $18. Ladies Bever, sets 2, 2 50, $3 per set
CLOAKS.
A new lot of Ladies Cloaks just received for $4 50, 5, 6, and $7, and as high as $20
HAWK AND SKIRTS
A find assortment. Ladies and Children Unddrwear 35c, 40c, and 50 cents
NOTIONS.
Our Notion department is full. Gloves, hose, buttons, Misses knit sacques and hoods, etc.
DRESS GOODS DEPARTMENT.
Waterproof all styles 75c, 1 00, $1 25, per yard. Calico 5c, Gingham the best 10c, black alpacca 20c, 25c, 40c, and upward.
Germantown and Zephyrs Yarns all shades. Mottos and splits 2 to 5 cents.
H. H. STAMETS.



EUREKA!
Eat Buckwheat Cakes
And Buy Your
BOOTS AND SHOES
AT THE
BOOT UPSIDE DOWN!
And you will always have plenty of money and be happy—because they have $12000.00 worth of goods which they sell
20 Per Cent. CHEAPER
Than any other house in this county.
MEN'S GUM BOOTS $3.50
Save your money by trading at the
BOOT UPSIDE DOWN.

Auburn Courier.

Local and Miscellaneous.

A Cradle.

A very diminutive specimen of a man lately solicited the hand of a fine buxom girl. "Oh no," said the fair but insulting lady, "I can't think of it for a moment; the fact is, John, you are a little too big for a cradle, and a little too small to go to church with." We warrant all the solid silver and silver-plated ware to be of the double and triple plate and all stamped with the name of the Meriden Brittannia Co., the best and largest plating company in the world. Tea sets, $25 to $100; water sets, $15 to $50; castors, $4 to $30 Card and cake stands, pickle castors, knives, spoons, ladles, sugar shells, fruit knives, the best stock of plated, at Ward's Cheap Crockery store, No. 8 Columbia street, Fort Wayne, Ind.

Apples at Ralston's.

The wild goose flyeth.

Circuit Court next week.

Day-light shuts off at about 5:30.

Hank Wolf has started a shoe shop.

The last month of '77 is passing away.

Oysters cheap at Ralston's, 20, 25, 35c

The beautiful snow did'nt hold out long.

Now is the time that the porkers have to die.

Send us communications short and pointed.

Harry Rush, of Angola, was in town Monday.

The boys were skating on the creek Saturday.

The M. E. Social was largely attend last week.

A German paper will soon be started at Laporte.

New stock of queensware at Coop Ralston's.

The Eagle mills have reduced the price of flour.

The roads are yet in a terrible condition.

For Lancaster Almanacs, go to Willis & Co.'s

Traveling men seem to be plenty on the streets

We hear that Churubusco is to have a newspaper.

Christmas will soon be here, one week from next Tuesday.

Several cases of whooping cough are reported in the city.

The P. O. at Avilla was burglarized last week. $15 taken.

Return that basket you borrowed of G. C. Ralston.

Rev. W. O. Butler, of Butler, was in town Tuesday.

Santa Clause is pack ing up preparing for his annual trip.

Our schools will probably be closed during the holidays.

The Commissioners Court adjourned Tuesday until Dec. 20th.

Dr. Littlefield moved his family to Hudson last week.

Hank Lesh has been under the weather for several days.

Thos. Baldock is building a new sidewalk on Seventh-st.

Specialities in fine juvenile and miscellaneous books at Willis & Co.'s

Patent right men of all descriptions are in the city this week.

Mort Dawson, of Fort Wayne, was in the city this week, guest of Al.

Mr. David Tugwell, at Angola, was found dead in his bed last week.

For fine Chromoes at better than auction prices go to Willis & Co.'s

Mike Long talks of going into the agricultural business in the spring.

Johny Knoder will put a play upon the Garrett Stage about the holidays.

Look out for cheap candies at G. C. Ralston's, for the holidays.

Capt. John Jenkins is out again after a severe illness caused by fever.

If you want a can of good oysters go to G. C. Ralston's.

Our court docket will contain over four hundred cases the coming term.

The mail clerks on the Air Line road will be uniformed by the 25th inst.

Coop Ralston keeps nice fresh oysters always on hand by the can.

Several divorces will come before "yer" Honor next term of Court.

Give Coop Ralston a call if you want a can of fine oysters.

Hank Long, of Kendallville, was in the city Monday.

For toys and presents of almost any description, at Willis & Co.'s

The meat market near the Auburn House is again in motion.

The B. & O. and Grand Rapids roads, talk of a union depot at Avilla.

Its about time to send in the weight of your heavy porkers to the press.

When Kendallville teachers use too much "gad" on the scholars, they are fined $5 and costs.

The Winifred Club of Waterloo, have our thanks for an invitation to a dance at that place Jan. 1st.

The Excelsior Hardware store was burglarized last night and about $100 in revolvers and knives taken.

Great Reduction.

Flour at Eagle Mills at $1.50 per sack Corn Meal, 80c. per sack. Buckwheat, 85c. per sack. Chop Feed from $1.00 to $1.25 per cwt. All goods delivered in town.

Candidates for next election are being talked of in the north part of this county.

Don't fail to read the new advertisement of Kiblinger & Co. in another column.

The ladies in crossing the streets observe the military order: "Dress up in front; close up in rear."

"Ten night in a bar room," was acted out in one of our saloons last Monday evening.

The cheapest place to get your dry goods and groceries is at Schaab, Beugnot & Co's.

Diphtheria is prevailing in several localities in this part of the state. It is very fatal this year.

Os. Allen, of Newville had both hands somewhat injured by the acidental discharge of a gun.

Dr. T. G. Matheny, and family arrived here last week, locating in the house lately occupied by Dr. Littlefield.

Go to Willis & Co. and get one of the Bishops' Long Wool Dusters, the best dusters in the world.

Little Miss Bertie Bulkley gave a party to her little friends last evening at the residence of Mr. Davenport.

Dressmakers are not essentially ill-natured. The best of them, however, are always ready to rip and tear.

Bonnets are cheap this winter. A woman can go bare headed at a cost of from $5 to $15.

Schaab, Beugnot & Co. have the finest assortment of Clothing at lower prices than any other store in town.

The Columbia City Post reports the death of Robert A. Jellison, Auditor of Whitley county, week before last.

The Waterloo Press conjectures that the Garrett Heazald is for hard money, and there upon Charley smackes his chops.

Keep in mind the Hook and Lader dance on Christmas eve. The boys are making preparations for a large attendance.

When selecting Christmas presents, do not forget to examine the fine stock of gold pens and pencils at Willis & Co.'s

The temperance meeting under the management of Mr. Custer did not pan out very well. We are sorry as our city needs reform badly.

Miss Orpha Bodine, left last Tuesday for an extended visit to Toledo, in the family of her relative, Mr. D. R. Lock, known as Petroleum V. Nasby.

It is the only medical I would give my baby, a mother said, speaking of Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup. For sale by F. E. Davenport.

The hog dealers of this place, report a poor year for them in that business. The profits are so small that there is no money for the shipper.

Will our Sabbath School scholars be favored with a christmas tree or not? We should think something of the kind would please the little folks.

The fellow who borrowed James Anderson's hand-saw wants to waltz back with it shortly, or he'll have trouble. It is well known who has it.

A fellow can't get much inspiration out of butter-milk, but you bet its a safe drink, and by the way is a good thing to brace up on after a drunk.

John Sommers and Ike Cool left for Chicago Tuesday with two car loads of hogs. If they do not meet with success they will push on to the Black Hills.

The mince-pie season has arrived, and the small boy groans in the dead hours of night, as menageries walk over his bed and howl about his epigastrium.

Our red ribbon President has resigned. Bill was equal to the emergency, but he could'nt stand the racket of his flock. He rises and explains elsewhere in this issue.

Hollister, our enterprising restaurenteur, has our thanks for as good a can of oysters as we ever saw. He serves them up in any style and always pleases his guests.

TAKEN UP.—Taken up as an estray, last June, a bay bull, with a few white spots, and about two year old.

J. D. BELL.

Troy tp., Dec. 11, '77.

Anyone wishing to buy a fine new piano, now in use by Prof. Straub's class, can do so cheap, rather than ship it back. It is a magnificent Hallett & Davis instrument, and has no superior.

O. C. Boyer, of Franklin-tp., will sell at public sale, Tuesday, Dec. 18th, personal property consisting of horses, cattle, sheep, hogs, wagon, buggy, harness, hay, corn, oats, &c.

Cy Hare left Friday afternoon for Bryan, Ohio. He said he was going to purchase a car load of apples, and was in a jolly humor, singing as he left, "Mollie Darling."

All over the world Dr. Bull's cough syrup is making its way, and every place it reaches consumptive people are more seldom met. It is truly a blessing to humanity, and only costs 25 cents. Sold by F. E. Davenport.

In spite of the bad road the town was filled on Saturday last. Business with our merchants was brisk, and it really seemed that prosperous times had once more begun.

Another reduction at the Fruit House, Ft. Wayne. Raisens 6c. per pound. Oysters 12½c. per can. Citron 25c, per pound. Don't forget that the prices in everything are reduced for the Christmas trade.

A correspondent wants to know which is proper—"I see the sun rise," or "I see the sun rising." My dear, sir, go home before it rises and such a question as that will never agitate your brain.

We can safely assert that Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup is the best remedy coughs, cold, bronchitis, and all pulmonary complaints: Call on your druggist and try a bottle. The price is only 25 cents. Sold in every drug store.

How is this for low prices: Coffee A sugar 11½c., Extra Coffee sugar 10½c., Choice dried peaches 8½c., Eagle Mills Flour $1.50 per sack, at Schaab, Beugnot & Co's.

Dr. Barnum, the celebrated Veterinary Surgeon of Fort Wayne will be at the livery stable in Auburn next Wednesday, and will remain one week, to attend to all calls made for his professional services. The Doctor is a good one, and if you have any invalid horses give him a trial.

Farmers should be on the lookout for a notorious fraud who is traveling over this State selling cornshellers to farmers, and taking their notes for the same, which are afterwards changed to correspond with the number of shellers shipped. Buy your cornshellers of home merchants.—Bryan Argus.

It is asserted that forty-five drops make a drachm. This is the way druggists measure. But you take a fellow in a saloon who is about to measure out a dram of whisky and forty-five drops wouldn't be a drop in the bucket, if it does enable some to kick that innocent vessel occasionally.

It was Gen. Sheridan who rode twenty miles to the battle field, but lately people have come further than that to see the great slaughter in prices on boots and shoes at the Boot Upside Down, and have gone away with several pairs of them.

If you dream of a stuffed oyster-shell, dancing in its ulster, to the tune of "Hold the Fort," while a club-footed Indian looks on and chews gum, it is a sign that your little daughter is going to ask Uncle Charlie, or Davy, or whatever else his name may be, down to the party, and if the little one is too juvenile, ma will step in and entertain him just for fun, you know. How jolly.

NEW MUSIC—We have received a beautiful song and chorus entitled "Silver Grey" composed by S. Turney. It is said to be one of the prettiest songs now published. Any music dealer, will mail it to your address on receipt of price 30 cents.

Published by W. L. Thompson & Co., East Liverpool, Ohio.

Austin don't like pudding. He took a pretty good supply on board the other day, and in a short time he was leaning against the fence, languidly contemplating the aforesaid pudding which had taken up a harmless position on the other side. It provoked him so that he came up town and put boots and shoes down to bottom prices, out of pure revenge. And now if you want good bargains don't fail to call at the Boot Upside Down.

The members of the bar of DeKalb and adjoining counties are requested to meet at the court room, at Auburn, Ind., at 1 o'clock p. m. Tuesday, Dec. 18th, 1877, to take such action as may be deemed most appropriate to do honor to the memory of our late friend and colleague, Hon. Timothy R. Dickinson for many years the senior resident member of our bar.

JAS. I. BEST,	R. WES MCBRIDE,
J. L. MORLAN,	D. Y. HUSSELMAN,
L. J. BLAIR,	C. A. O. MCCLELLAN
WM. H. LEAS,	C. M. PHILIPS,
J. M. SOMERS,	FREEMAN KELLY,

In our report of the fire at Butler two weeks ago, the name of Adolph May was omitted. Mr. May was one of the greatest sufferers in that conflagation. His building was entirely destroyed and his billiard fixtures were injured by removal. The fire did not originate in the billiard room as was first stated. His total loss amounts to nearly $1,700, with no insurance, and falls particularly heavy at this time, although he is not discouraged, but is sending off large shipments of poultry every day or so.

Now as the naughty fly cannot leave its mark, our housholds should undergo a thorough renovating. We give the following receipt to both rich and poor gratis: One pint of linseed oil, one wine glass full of alcohol, well mixed together and applied with a linen rag, make a good furniture polish.

If you consult many of our leading physicians, they will advice you to use Lawson's Curative for rheumatism or neuralgia in preference to anything else They have witnessed its effects. It is equally as effective for diptheria or sore throat. It has saved many a one from postrated suffering. Sold by F. E. Davenport.

Diseases of the Lungs, Chest and Throat are so prevelent in our ever changing climate, that such a medicine as Dr. Marshals Lung Syrup is invaluable to the whole community. It cures almost instantly. Price 25 cents. Sold in every drug store.

Rail Road Accident.

We learn that Ira Crow, formerly a citizen of this place, was killed by a Baltimore train Tuesday, near Chicago Junction. Ira was at one time an employee at the Hub and Spoke Factory at this place, but for the last four years has been engaged on the road as brakeman.

The first of next January commences the eighth volume of the COURIER. We have labored with great diligence to establish a good paper at this place, and now have a large list of honest subscribers numbering probably as many as all the other papers combined Notwithstanding this however, we would be glad to state the new volume of 1878 two or three hundred new names and this can be easily accomplished by our friends taking a little interest in their democratic organ, the only one in the county.

The Concert.

Do not forget that a large class has been practicing for some time, under the direction of Profs. Straub & Reed and will give a concert Friday, [to-morrow] evening, at the Presbyterian church.

Prof. Morse, of Ft. Wayne, decidedly the best pianist in this part of the country, is down in the programme for several pieces. With solos, duets, quartetts and choruses, a delightful entertainment is promised and all should attend.

Church Music.

EDITOR COURIER.—I noticed recently quite an improvement in the singing in "our choir." That too without the increase of their "pay"—nor has any one became "jealous or envious." The thinning out did good—pruning always improves. Another suggestion, it may be criticised, I would make to the singers,—"our choir" included—which is, don't endeavor to improve the written music, sing it just as it is in the note book, for if you do you are not singing the composer's tune. Please don't have a slide from every note to the next following. Sometimes you give part of the syllable of a word a tone which belongs to the previous note. This shows your ignorance of written music.—Again, don't improve if you can, Webster's pronunciation of words, nor make words that are not in the hymn. To exemplify these errors let me say I once heard a choir (now I hope our choir will not get "envious" about it) try to sing the usual words set to the tune Boylston, but would invariably slide from one note to the next. As near as I can write it, it was thus:

Ow-er day a aro-rae thee grass-e-s,
For like the mor-ning flow-er-r-r;
When blas-ting wind swe-pore the field,
Zit with thers zin naa new-er-r-.

Our, and hour, has only one syllable and so has flower in this verse. Are, is not pronounced as if spelled air. The accent is not on the last sylable in the words morning, blasting, withers, &c. The, in music is not pronounced as if spelled thee. Keep on Dr. "Y" our choir is doing well and we will make somebody "jealeous."

Eternally Yours, X.

A Card.

Having to the best of my ability for the last several months discharged my duty as president of the Temperance organization of this place, I desire to publicly state that I will no longer act as such, and as publicly give my reasons, that all whether at home or abroad may act accordingly. The self-styled christian people of this place, are not temperance people in any true sense of the word. They make a profession, but will not do a thing, even to attending meetings when they can. Nor will they give the work even their countenance or moral support. Their churches can not be had for the purpose of holding meetings in, when full compensation is offered, nor will they contribute a cent to obtain another place. They will damn a liquor seller or a drinking man, but will not turn a hand or pledge a copper that these men may be convinced of their error. They will advise, direct, and order the president of the Temperance Club, and treat him as a lackey, drudge, or dog, and then lie to avoid any responsibility. I can not recieve their moral support and will not ask it longer. Some one else may. I may be to blame, and I hope for the good of the cause I may be.

All last week I endeavored to obtain a respectable hearing for Mr Custer of Mich., the best Temperance lecture that has been here for years, a gifted, modest gentleman. We had to go begging and paying for a place to speak, and after three efforts not a third of an audience was obtained, and the sum of five dollars and twenty cents contributed for his week's time, and expenses. Those of the Methodist friends who obtained the use of their church are entitled to the thanks and blessings of the temperance people, but those of the other churches who refused, and did nothing whatever, deserve the contempt and execration of all honest folks. The latter class can be readily known by their label—self-rightousness and hypocrisy.

To those who have given me their assistance and encouragement, I feel grateful, and will do what I can in my humble sphere to assist them hereafter in the good cause, but with those others I will have nothing to do, until I know by their work that they have reformed.

W. H. DILLS.

Was it mud you said?

Death of Hon. T. R. Dickinson.

Death has again appeared in our midst, and removed one of the most prominet characters of our county. Hon. T. R. Dickinson died last Saturday morning, at his residence in Waterloo, in the sixty-first year of his age. Some time ago both sides of his neck became enlarged and hardened, and in a few weeks had grown to such an extent that he deemed it advisable to go to Cleveland for treatment. He remained there a short time and returned some better. He went the second time, when the enlargement of the glands assumed a dangerous aspect, and he was finally brought home, where he lingered along, sometimes better, sometimes worse, until death ensued as above stated.

Mr. Dickinson had been a resident of this county about thirty years, and was engaged in the practice of the law, being the senior member of the DeKalb county bar at the time of his death. His genial manners and strong characteristics soon made him popular, and his position at the bar gave him great influence throughout the county. He was elected a member of the Legislature serving in the Senate in the sessions of 1861-63 if we are rightly informed. In person, he was always of a quiet retiring disposition, and had the peculiar faculty of attending to his own business, and indicating to others a similar course. He had his likes and dislikes, his enemies and friends. He was a most excellent citizen, a persistent worker, and an honest man. His last work was the organization of the Waterloo Cemetery Association, and in that cemetery from the time of its inception until he was gathered to its bosom, his indefatigable exertions to improve and beautify its grounds were the sole purpose of his life. How well he did his work the Cemetery of to-day will attest. Many a weary day did he labor within its sacred precincts to reap at last earth's greatest ambition—a grave in that loved, beautiful, silent city of the dead.

Cut Off.

Everybody is acquainted with French Pete who lives on Moses Brandon's farm a few miles east of town. Well, Pete met with a sad accident this week while choping wood. In some way he made a mis-stroke and cut about half of his foot entirely off. Pete was a hard working man and this accident will be a sad mishap for him.

MARRIAGE LICENSES issued from the office of the county Clerk, during the month of November, 1877: Louis Mutzfelt and Mary Pols, Henry Beams and Rebecca A. Johnson, John A. Stout and Jennia Sommerlott, Geo. F. Baltz and Matzena I. Boots, William R. Moore and Rosa J. Maxwell, Geo. E. Hammon and Caroline Dirrim, John DeWitt and Maria Loutzenheiser, Charles Kreger and Hannah Reese, Almon J. Jennings and Zella Waters, Hiram McEntaffer and Angeline McEntaffer, Henry L. Gurtner and Joanna Clark, Lycurgus Klotz and Lizzie B. McAnally, Henry L. Fulk and Susan F. Clark, John B. Moore and Catharine Edwards, Jefferson Seery and Ellen Strosh, Orrin Jones and Abigail L'Turnpaugh, David Dawson and Jessie M. Britton, John W. Baxter and Ella E. Chamberlain, Chas. Peters and Augusta Sodtman, Nich. Bontrager and Eliza Hantz.

A magnificent display of fine large oil chromos is now being made by Mr. A. Van Buren, in Ensley Building, next door to Lanning's. If you want to enjoy a real Art Gallery, don't fail to call. The display consists of the very best productions of the Boston Chromo Company, nicely framed in heavy black walnut. Many of the works of our best authors are reproduced as any amateur will discover. Those who can possibly spare money to buy even one of these handsome chromos should not fail to do so now, as the chance may not come again for years. Mr. Van Buren will be here a night or two longer, and he will receive you in his live wide-awake style and sell you pictures very low.

Assignment of mortgages should be Recorded.

Articles of agreement should be recorded.

Articles of Association should be recorded.

Leases of land should be recorded.

Mechanic's Liens should be recorded.

Deeds and mortgages of real estate should be recorded within forty-five days from date of execution.

Chattel mortgages should be recorded within ten days from date of execution.

Are your deeds recorded?

Are all old deeds in your posession received from previous owners of your land recorded?

Are all old mortgages released?

These are all required to protect your deeds.

Married.

MARRIED.—On Thursday eve, Dec. 6th, 1877, at the residence of the bride's parents, at Spencerville, by Rev. P. Ruhl. Mr. J. R. Culbertson to Miss M C Baltz, all of DeKalb county.

Deaths.

WEBSTER.—On Dec. 8th, 1877, at Fairfield Center, Jennie R. Webster of peritonitis, aged 20 years 7 months and 10 days.

There is no Death.

There is no death! The stars go down
To rise upon some fairer shore;
And bright, in heaven's jewelled crown,
They shine forevermore.

There is no death! An angel-form
Walks o'er the earth with silent tread;
And bears our best beloved away,
And then we call them "dead."

He leaves our hearts all desolate,
And plucks our fairest, sweetest flowers;
Transplanted into bliss, they now
Adorn immortal bowers.

Where'er he sees a smile too bright,
Or heart too pure for taint and vice,
He bears it to that world of light,
To dwell in paradise.

And ever near us, though unseen,
The dear, immortal spirits tread;
For all the boundless universe,
Is life—there is no dead!

DUNCAN.—On Dec. 10th, in Smithfield, Mrs. Mary Duncan, in the 72d year of her age.

Mrs. Duncan was the mother of Comisioner Duncan and the Duncan boys of Waterloo. The remains, after services at the Chapel, were buried in the Hamilton Cemetery.

DR. T. G. MATHENY,

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, office up stairs in McIntyre's block, Auburn, Ind. All calls promptly attended to.

NOTICE OF ADMINISTRATION.

Notice is hereby given, that the undersigned has been appointed by the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court of the State of Indiana, Executor of the will of Hugh Watt deceased, late of said county. Said estate is supposed to be solvent.

GUY PLUM, Administrator.

December 10th, 1877.

EXCELSIOR HARDWARE.

GRAND CLEARANCE SALE OF

STOVES, TINWARE, AXES, CROSS-CUT SAWS, &C., &C.,

That must be sold at some price. We have every kind of saws on the market and parties wanting anything in the

SAW, AXE, STOVE AND TINWARE LINE,

Will do well to call on us before buying elsewhere. We have the goods and can suit you in kinds, quality and the best of all we

GUARANTEE PRICES

Lower than the lowest. We have added Iron and Steele,

SEAT AND CARRIAGE SPRINGS,

and a general line of Carriage and Wagon Hardware,

WOOD WORK.

Sleigh and Sled Runners, Rims, Hubs and Spokes,

and a general line of Wagon, Carriage and Blacksmiths goods, and will sell just as low

And a Little Lower

Than you can buy the same quality of goods elsewhere. We buy for cash and sell for cash and therefore it is clear that we can compete with any house in the state selling Hardware. Come everybody and cary away goods at almost your own prices. This is no humbug, but mean just what we say. Come and see for yourselves Remember the place,

EXCELSIOR HARDWATE STORE,

North Side Public Square, AUBURN, IND.

W. H. KIBLINGER & CO.

AUBURN COURIER.

THURSDAY, DEC. 13, 1877.

THE NEWS CONDENSED.

THE EAST.

JAMES STURGIS, of Boston, extensively engaged in the East India trade, has failed. His liabilities are $250,000.

THE National Exchange Bank, of Troy, N. Y., has gone into voluntary liquidation.

THE WEST.

THE notorious outlaw, Frank Rande, was once an inmate of the Indiana penitentiary, at Michigan City, from which he emerged last spring, after serving a sentence of five years. He was one of the hardest and most unruly characters that ever entered that institution. His real name is Charles Arthur Van Zandt, Rande being one of the many aliases adopted by the desperado.

A HORRIBLE tragedy was recently enacted near Birmingham, Mich. A young man named Hinchman, during the absence from home of his father, shot and killed his mother and sister, and then set fire to the house and barn.... Numerous Indian depredations are reported in the Black Hills.... The officers of the late Protection Life Insurance Company, of Chicago, have been indicted for perjury in swearing to false statements of the condition of the company. L. P. Hilliard and A. W. Edwards, two very prominent citizens of Chicago, are among the indicted. The Grand Jury has also returned indictments against Henry Greenebaum, George W. Stanford and Eben F. Runyan, ex-members of the park boards, for conspiracy to defraud the city.... A shocking tragedy was enacted in Cleveland, Ohio, last week. A man named McGill became enraged at his wife because she refused to live with him, and almost literally shot her to pieces, putting nine pistol balls into her body.

FRANK RANDE, the outlaw, has at last revealed his name, which is Charles C. Scott. He says his residence is at Fairfield, Iowa, where he emigrated with his parents in 1859, when 12 years old, from Washington county, Pa. He says his first crime was that of burglary, committed at Ottumwa, Iowa, in 1871.

A DISPATCH from Bismarck states that Deadwood, in the Black Hills, is besieged by hostile Sioux, and that the whites are in imminent danger of massacre. Troops had been ordered to move from Fort Lincoln, Standing Rock, and Fort Snelling on forced marches.

A FIRE at Athens, Ohio, last week, burned eight business houses; loss, $30,000. The bridge over the Scioto river, at Chillicothe, was burned the same day; loss, $40,000.

IT is stated that Sitting Bull is desirous of returning to the territory of the United States; that he labored under a misapprehension of their errand when he treated with contumely the Commissioners who were sent out to interview him, and that he is now willing to apologize and throw off his newly-declared allegiance to the "Great Mother."....The German National Bank, of Chicago, of which Henry Greenebaum is President, has closed its doors. The directors of the bank issued a circular stating that, the deposits having shrunk from $1,157,000 in July to $183,000, they deem it advisable to discontinue business. The directors claim that the institution has assets enough to pay all obligations.

A SENSATIONAL tragedy was enacted in Chicago a few days ago. A constable named McElligott was shot and mortally wounded by Miss Alvina C. McKee while attempting to levy on an execution for $42 for the rent of the house in which the fair Alvina lived.

GOV. IRWIN, of California, in his message to to the Legislature, comes out strongly against Chinese immigration, and urges that steps be taken to put a stop to the unrestricted influx of Mongolians. He says their presence has initiated an irrepressible conflict in California, and that there is danger of their civilization overriding our own.

THE SOUTH.

SAMUEL BARTH, F. A. Saving, Charles Harvey and W. H. Strauss, late directors of the Union Banking Company, of Baltimore, have been indicted by the Grand Jury on a charge of conspiring to defraud.... The bodies of Antonio Nicrosi and Miss Aurelia Sharp were found in a cemetery at Montgomery, Ala., a pistol-ball hole in each head. A note from Nicrosi indicates that they were willing to die for each other. It is supposed Nicrosi shot her and then killed himself.... At Norfolk, Va., Benjamin Godfrey, aged 19, shot and instantly killed Miss Mollie E. Winingder, aged 17. Godfrey then shot himself, and will probably die. Jealousy.

WHILE seven negroes were rowing across the Mississippi river near New Orleans, in an old skiff, the planks of the frail craft parted and five of the luckless men were drowned.

GENERAL.

BUSINESS failures: White, Langstaff & Co., hardware, Memphis, Tenn., liabilities $140,000; Wood & Co., dry goods, Montreal, Can., liabilities $120,000, assets $25,000; Maxwell, Fry & Thurston, iron, Indianapolis, Ind., liabilities $60,000, assets $35,000; Duncan & Blackmore, commission, Indianapolis, liabilities $20,000; the liabilities of Conrad Poppenhausen, the Long Island railway magnate, whose failure was recently announced, are placed at $8,000,000, and his assets at $7,000,000.

HON. JOHN WELSH, the new Minister to England, has sailed for London.... Six of the Pittsburgh rioters have been sentenced to the penitentiary for terms varying from one year and ten months and a fine of $5,000 to a fine of $500 and a term of six months.

POLITICAL.

A WASHINGTON telegram of the 30th ult. says: "The Senate Committee on Commerce this morning decided to report all three of the New York Custom-House nominations, with the recommendation that they be not confirmed. The five Republican members of the committee were present, but four Democrats were absent. The vote by which the adverse report was ordered upon each of these nominations is understood to have been as follows: Against confirmation—Conkling, Spencer, Patterson and McMillan. In favor—Burnside."

THERE are four colored members in the new Legislature of Mississippi, three of whom are Democrats and one Republican. There is only one Republican in the Senate, while in the House there are ten.

EX-GOV. WILLIAM ALLEN is out in a letter declining the use of his name in connection with the Senatorship from Ohio.

THE people of Georgia have voted, by a majority of 40,000, to locate their State capital at Atlanta. The new constitution is adopted by about the same vote.... The Democrats of New Hampshire will hold their State Convention at Concord, Jan. 16.

TO A REQUEST, signed by every Republican member of the New York delegation save Mr. Chittenden, asking the President not to again send in the names of Messrs. Roosevelt and Prince as Collector and Naval Officer in New York, the President, a Washington telegram informs us, returned a courteous but peremptory refusal.

WASHINGTON.

THE Committee on Appropriations in the lower House of Congress refuses to provide money to pay the expenses of the commission to investigate the New York Custom House, on the ground that the President had no right to order such a commission; that the law makes it the duty of certain officers of the treasury to perform such service, and they should have been employed instead of outsiders.

THE following is the statement of the operations by the National Bank Redemption Agency for the month of November.

National-bank notes fit for circulation assorted and returned to banks of issue	$12,222,100
National-bank notes unfit for circulation assorted and delivered to Comptroller of currency for destruction and replacement with new notes	3,215,210
Notes of failed, liquidating, and reducing National-banks deposited in the treasury	737,300
Total	$16,275,390

THE public debt, according to the last monthly statement of the United States Treasurer, was reduced $1,323,634 during November.

A LARGE number of the President's nominations failed of confirmation at the extra session of the Senate, and Attorney General Devens has given it as his opinion that the failure to confirm the new officers appointed in place of old officers virtually reinstates for the time being, and until the future action of the appointing power.... The only Republicans voting with the Democrats for the confirmation of Fitzsimmons as Marshal of Georgia were Conover, Patterson and Stanley Matthews.

THE President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House have determined to stop the sale of liquors in the Capitol.... Fernando Wood is very busily engaged in preparing a tariff bill. It is stated that it will be sweeping in its character, and will make extensive reductions. It is reported that he contemplates reducing the tariff on silks from 60 to 30 per cent.

JUSTICE HUMPHREY, a Washington dispatch states, has rendered an opinion in the habeas-corpus case of Senator Patterson, discharging him from custody. This prevents Patterson from being taken back to South Carolina, unless Gov. Hampton shall make another requisition, which it is thought he will not do.... Gen. Ord, commanding the forces in Texas, was before the Committee on Military Affairs, the other day. He stated that the Mexican people and authorities on the lower Rio Grande were in sympathy with the raiders, and intimated that his present force was quite inadequate to guard the frontier and pursue and punish the raiders, as his orders require him to do.... Stilson Hutchins, lately of the St. Louis Times, has started a new Democratic paper in Washington, called the Post. John A. Cockerill, formerly of the Cincinnati Enquirer, and A. C. Buell, a prominent newspaper correspondent, are on the editorial staff.

THE Secretary of the Treasury has issued a call for the redemption of $6,000,000 of bonds of 1865, and $4,000,000 of registered bonds of 1870.... The War Department apprehends a general renewal of Indian hostilities in the far West and Northwest before spring.

THE TURKO-RUSSIAN WAR.

A BELGRADE dispatch says there is a rumor current that the Porte has offered, through the mediation of England, to cede old Servia to Servia and Epirus to Greece, if they will remain neutral.... A Constantinople dispatch says great excitement prevails in the city on account of the calling out of the reserves, and disturbances are expected. All servants of the palace have been armed with revolvers. There are great differences of opinion among the Ministers as to the expediency of making proposals for peace, but at present the war party prevails.

DETAILS of the losses in the fighting at Mitchka show that the Russians collected 2,500 Turkish dead.... Osman Pasha, beleaguered in Plevna, is said by deserters from his camp to contemplate a sortie of desperation if not relieved within a fortnight.

THE Turks claim to have captured Elena, in Bulgaria, after defeating the Russians in a hard-fought engagement. The Russian loss, according to Turkish accounts, was 3,000 killed and wounded, 300 prisoners, eleven guns and twenty-seven ammunition wagons. It is said the Russians have 280 guns in position before Erzeroum.

THE Russians admit a defeat and heavy losses at Elena. The Turkish advance was only checked by the timely arrival of Russian reinforcements.... A strong peace element is said to be developing in Constantinople.

GENERAL FOREIGN NEWS.

THERE is much discontent among the cotton operatives of England, and strikes are the order of the day.... Several hundred women, suffering in consequence of the stoppage of the iron works in the Forest of Dean district, which belongs to the Crown, have petitioned the Queen for assistance.

A PARIS dispatch says that at a meeting of 120 members of the republican Left it was decided to refuse to vote any part of the budget until the Government returned to parliamentary courses.... MM. Laisant and De la Rochette, members of the Chamber of Deputies, fought a duel, the other day. M. De la Rochette was wounded in the thigh.

THE leading London journals speak in commendatory terms of President Hayes' message. .... The Chinese authorities have torn up and abolished the railway recently built from Shanghai to Woosung.

A DISPATCH from Coquimbo, Chili, says the Pacific Steam Navigation Company's steamship Atalama has been lost. The crew numbered forty, and the passengers probably about fifty. Only eighteen persons were saved.

A PARIS dispatch announces that the hitherto obstinate MacMahon has at last yielded, and consented to accept a Ministry from the Left Center.... A dispatch from the City of Mexico says that ex-President Lerdo de Tejada has written letters stating that it is his intention to withdraw all pretensions to the Mexican Presidency. He intends to retire to France, desires that his name shall no longer be used for political purposes, and recommends Gen. Escobedo to the suffrages of his friends. These professions are not believed in by many of his political supporters.

PROCEEDINGS OF CONGRESS.

FRIDAY, Nov. 30.—SENATE.—The House joint resolution in relation to the Paris Exposition was amended and passed.... A number of bills were introduced and referred.... Consideration was resumed of the Kellogg case. Mr. Patterson delivered an elaborate set speech in reply to the severe attack made upon his course by Mr. Edmunds on Tuesday. A motion to recommit the Kellogg case was lost—29 to 29—the Vice President declining to exercise his prerogative, as the motion was lost by the failure to receive a majority of affirmative votes. At 2 o'clock Saturday morning a vote was taken on the original resolution to seat Kellogg, and it was adopted—Conover and Patterson voting with the Republicans in the affirmative. The vote stood 30 to 28. Mr. Thurman then moved that M. C. Butler be sworn in as Senator from South Carolina. Agreed to—yeas, 29; nays, 28—Conover and Patterson voting in the affirmative. Messrs. Kellogg and Butler were then sworn in as Senators.... The Senate, in executive session, confirmed the nomination of John M. Harlan, of Kentucky, to be Judge of the Supreme Court. A motion to reconsider was immediately entered, which would leave the question still open. The nomination of William Henry Smith, as Collector of Customs at Chicago, was returned without any recommendation.

HOUSE.—No business was transacted in the House.

SATURDAY, Dec. 1.—SENATE.—A resolution was presented by Mr. Wadleigh, Chairman of the Committee on Privileges and Elections, declaring J. B. Eustis entitled to a seat as Senator from Louisiana. It was placed on the calendar. Mr. Ingalls gave notice that he did not concur with the majority of the committee in submitting this report, and that he would hereafter present the report of the minority, signed by himself and two others—Messrs. McMillan, of Minnesota, and Cameron, of Wisconsin.... A bill was introduced by Mr. Voorhees granting pensions to soldiers of the Mexican war.... The Deficiency Appropriation bill was passed.... The Senate, in executive session, confirmed the nomination of Owen P. Fitzsimmons to be Marshal of Georgia, after an animated discussion, by six majority, the negative votes being all Republicans. The nominations of Roosevelt and Prince to be Collector and Naval Officer of the port of New York, were reported adversely by the Commerce Committee, of which Mr. Conkling is Chairman, and placed on the calendar.

HOUSE.—A bill was unanimously passed, under a suspension of the rules, appropriating $1,000 to each surviving officer of the lost war steamer Huron; $100 to each surviving seaman, and to the widows and children of the lost an allowance equal to a year's pay of their respective relatives.... A motion to suspend the rules and pass a bill to remove the disabilities imposed upon any person by virtue of the thirteenth section of the Fourteenth Amendment was lost—yeas, [illegible], nays, [illegible]—not two-thirds voting in the affirmative. A motion to instruct the Ways and Means Committee to revise the tariff so as to make it solely a tariff for revenue was rejected—yeas, 60; nays, 16.... Both Houses adjourned till 10 o'clock a. m., Monday, Dec. 3.

MONDAY, Dec. 3.—SENATE.—The extra session met at 10 o'clock, and after a session of an hour and a half adjourned. The regular session of the Senate began at noon, the President's message and the various department reports were read, and an adjournment was voted till Thursday, Dec. 6.

HOUSE.—Nothing was done in the House beyond hearing the message and accompanying documents read.

TUESDAY, Dec. 4.—SENATE.—Not in session.

HOUSE.—Bills were introduced and referred as follows: By Mr. Townsend (O.), to aid vessels wrecked or disabled in waters contiguous to the United States or Canada; by Mr. Dibrell, levying a tax on incomes; by Mr. Blair (N.H.), a joint resolution proposing an amendment to the constitution prohibiting the payment of any claims for damage growing out of the taking, use, or destruction of property during the Rebellion; by Mr. Hartzell, to substitute greenbacks for the issue of national banking associations, and to pay the full amount for all bonds deposited by them in the treasury in accordance with the terms of the contract expressed on the face of said bonds, the bonds so redeemed to be canceled; by Mr. Hubbell, dividing Michigan into three judicial districts; by Mr. Ellsworth, providing for general amnesty.... Mr. Frye, from the Judiciary Committee, reported back the bill prescribing an oath of office which eliminates from the statutes the law which prescribes the taking of the iron-clad oath. Passed. Also, a bill repealing Sec. 820 of the Revised Statutes, which provides for the disqualification of any juror who has without duress or coercion taken up arms in defense of any insurrection or rebellion against the United States, or who has given aid or comfort thereto. Passed.

WEDNESDAY, Dec. 5.—SENATE.—There was no session of the Senate.

HOUSE.—The House spent considerable time in wrangling over the jurisdiction between the Commerce and Railroad Committees on the subject of the respective control of the two committees over the river and harbor bills. The matter was settled by reference to the Committee on Rules.... Mr. Townsend, of Illinois, introduced a bill to repeal the existing statutes for the renewal of patents, and declaring it unlawful hereafter for the Commissioner of Patents to renew or extend any patent or design whatever. The bill was passed.... Mr. Harrison, of Illinois, introduced a bill to provide for an income tax. It proposes to levy upon the incomes of all United States citizens which may be over $1,000 and under $4,000 annually a tax of 1 per cent.; over $2,000 and under $3,000, 1½ per cent., and graduating the scale up to and including $25,000. Over $25,000 and under $35,000, a tax of 3 per cent; over $35,000 and under $50,000, 4 per cent., and 5 per cent. on all incomes in excess of $50,000.

THURSDAY, Dec. 6.—SENATE.—A number of petitions were presented and referred.... A resolution was introduced by Mr. Burnside, and adopted, asking the President to transmit to the Senate the correspondence had with our Ministers to France, England and Germany in regard to the Franco-Prussian war.... Mr. Ferry presented a petition of citizens of Michigan in favor of the passage of a bill to authorize the coinage of the standard silver dollar.... The silver men achieved a decided victory in the Senate, and developed an unexpected strength. Mr. Allison, who has charge of the House Silver bill, moved to make it the special order for Monday, Dec. 10. Mr. Morrill moved to postpone the matter to Jan. 11. This was rejected by the one-sided vote of 17 yeas to 40 nays. The motion of Mr. Allison was then agreed to by 41 yeas to 18 nays.... There was a lengthy debate, in executive session, upon the question of the relative rights of the President and Senate in the matter of official appointments. The President renominated the New York Custom House officers who fell by reason of the expiration of the extra session. A number of other nominations were sent in. John B. Hawley, of Illinois, was confirmed as Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

HOUSE.—In the House the only business of importance was the threefold report from the Elections Committee on the Colorado case—one to the effect that Patterson was entitled to the seat, another that Belford was the rightful claimant, and a third, signed by Mr. Cox, of Ohio, claiming that there was no legal election and remanding the question back to the people of Colorado.... The Post-Route bill was passed.... Mr. Joyce wanted to introduce a resolution censuring the Spaniards for their barbarities in Cuba, but Mr. Hale objected.

A Dissatisfied Witness.

She was a farmer's wife, and, as she took the witness stand in a case before Justice Brown, she had her hands clenched, her lips compressed, and the fire in her eye was evidence that she was burning to tell the truth.

"Well, tell the jury what you know about this case," said the lawyer.

She moved around a little, looked the jury square in the face, and, getting a good hold of the witness box, she began:

"I was out to the barn to ask my husband if he thought it was going to rain, and he said he guessed not, and I said I guessed not, when three or four men came. They were jawing and swearing, and it almost made my blood run——"

"Never mind all that," interrupted the lawyer. "Did you see any one strike a blow?"

"I guess I did see some one strike a blow, and three or four of them, and I was never so frightened in my life, and I wonder I didn't faint away, and I think this man they call Robinson was the one who struck first, and I'm almost sure of it, and if I'd been a man I'd have——"

"Do you swear that Robinson struck the first blow?"

"Yes, sir, I swear that I think Robinson struck the first blow, though I may be mistaken, of course, and of course I don't want to swear to a lie for no one, and I was excited and I don't know but some one may have hit him with an ear of corn and—"

"That will do," said the lawyer.

"Why—why, I haven't hardly commenced yet," she protested.

"Well, I've got all I want of such testimony."

"I say it's a mean trick to bring me into town over 'leven miles of mud road and then not let me swear!" she exclaimed as she stepped down.

"I guess I'm just as good as some other folks out my way, and I guess I've got just as good an education for swearing in court, even if we haven't got upholstered chairs in the house!"—Detroit Free Press.

Determined to Wed.

Two young lovers in Vermont, who would wed without their friends' knowledge, started for Westport the other day, but found afterward that they could not complete the journey until the next day. They couldn't go home unmarried, so they drove to Panton and asked the Rev. Mr. Brooks to unite them. He could not perform the ceremony without a license from the proper town official. That was unobtainable, as they were far from home. The bridegroom hit upon the idea of evading the law by going out of the State. So the three, with two witnesses, got into a boat and were rowed out into Lake Champlain, where the knot was satisfactorily tied.

THE TREASURY DEPARTMENT.

Synopsis of the Annual Report of Secretary Sherman.

The annual report of Secretary Sherman is a voluminous paper, and we have only room for a brief condensation of the arguments and statements. The Secretary says the total ordinary receipts of the year ending June 30, 1877, were $269,000,586.62; expenditures, $238,660,008.93, leaving a surplus revenue of $30,340,577.69. The net decrease of revenue, as compared with last year, was $18,481,452.54. There was an increase, however, in internal revenue, whisky and tobacco.

The first recommendation calculated to arrest attention is to the effect that Congress ought to supplement, by appropriate legislation or joint resolution, the Secretary's own assurance that the bonds will be paid, interest and principal, in gold coin, and not simply in coin. The next suggestion is that he be authorized to sell bonds either for coin or for its equivalent in United States notes, for the greater convenience of the general public, especially those living at a distance from any place where gold coin is to be found for sale.

In regard to resumption, the Secretary is positive that no new legislation is required. He virtually pledges himself to make greenbacks worth their face inside of thirteen months if left alone. He does not propose to retire from circulation the greenbacks, except so much as may be in excess of $300,000,000. He estimates that $100,000,000 in gold will be coin enough to keep that much paper money at par.

The Secretary sets forth the advantages of the national-bank system, which we pass by.

Upon the subject of savings banks the Secretary says:

"The attention of Congress is called to the great value to our fellow-citizens of the organization of some plan for the collection, safekeeping and profitable employment of small deposits by the people. How far this can be done without trenching upon the proper functions of the State Governments is a question of difficulty; yet it is important to secure, if possible, a general system throughout the United States. This can hardly be effected by the organization of a multitude of savings banks, depending upon the fidelity, integrity and skill of their officers, but the beneficial object of such banks might be secured by authorizing the deposit of small sums with any postal money-order office in the United States, and the issue of Government certificates, convertible on demand of the holder into 4-per-cent. bonds of the United States of such character, description and amount as will enable and induce prudent persons to convert their earnings into a public security of stable value. The money thus received could be employed in the redemption of outstanding bonds bearing a higher rate of interest. By some such system it is believed that the great body of our public debt, reduced to its smallest possible burden, could be distributed among our own people. With a slight modification of existing law this beneficial result would be secured."

Several of the subjects discussed relate to the mere mechanism of the Treasury Department, or to matters of comparatively trivial importance. The only remaining subject of special interest and vital to the general welfare comes under the head of coins and coinage. As the law now stands, silver coin for fractional currency shall be issued to an amount not exceeding $10,000,000 for an equal amount of legal-tender notes, and the aggregate of such fractional silver outstanding shall not exceed $50,000,000. The Secretary recommends the removal of the restriction upon the amount of legal tender that may be exchanged for such silver believing that the law of supply and demand can be trusted to regulate the matter. Trade dollars to the amount of $30,710,400 have been coined. In the exercise of his lawful discretion in the premises, the Secretary of the Treasury has ordered the suspension of the coinage of that anomalous piece of money, and in case another silver dollar is authorized he suggests that the trade dollar be discontinued. Having disposed of the preliminary matters of coinage, the Secretary enters upon an elaborate discussion of the question of remonetizing silver. Upon this subject he says:

"The question of the issue of a silver dollar for circulation as money has been much discussed and carefully examined by a commission organized by Congress, which has recommended the coinage of the old silver dollar. With such legislative provision as will maintain its current value at par with gold, its issue is respectfully recommended. A gold coin of the denomination of one dollar is too small for convenient circulation, while such a coin in silver would be convenient for a multitude of daily transactions, and is in a form to satisfy the natural instinct of hoarding.

"Of the metals, silver is of most general use for coinage. It is a part of every system of coinage, even in countries where gold is the sole legal standard. It best measures the common wants of life, but, from its weight and bulk, is not a convenient medium in the larger exchanges of commerce. Its production is reasonably steady in amount. The relative market value of silver and gold is far more stable than that of any other two commodities—still it does vary. It is not in the power of human law to prevent the variation. This inherent difficulty has compelled all nations to adopt one or the other as the sole standard of value, or to authorize an alternative standard of either, or to coin both metals at an arbitrary standard, and to maintain one at par with the other by limiting its amount and legal-tender quality, and receiving or redeeming it at par with the other.

"The importance of gold as the standard of value is conceded by all. Since 1834 it has been practically the sole coin standard of the United States, and since 1815 has been the sole standard of Great Britain. Germany has recently adopted the same standard. France and other Latin nations have suspended the coinage of silver, and, it is supposed, will gradually either adopt the sole standard of gold or provide for the convertibility of silver coin, on the demand of the holder, into gold coin.

"In the United States, several experiments have been made with the view of retaining both gold and silver in circulation. The Second Congress undertook to establish a ratio of fifteen of silver to one of gold, with free coinage of both metals. By this ratio gold was undervalued, as one ounce of gold was worth more in the markets of the world than fifteen ounces of silver, and gold, therefore, was exported. To correct this, in 1837, the ratio was fixed at sixteen to one, but sixteen ounces of silver were worth in the market more than one ounce of gold, so that silver was demonetized.

"It is urged that the free coinage of silver in the United States will restore its market value to that of gold. Market value is fixed by the world, and not by the United States alone, and is affected by the whole mass of silver in the world. As the enormous and continuous demand for silver in Asia has not prevented the fall in silver, it is not likely that the limited demand for silver coin in this country, where paper money is now and will be the chief medium of exchange, will cause any considerable advance in its value. This advance, if any, will be secured by the demand for silver bullion for coin to be issued by and for the United States, as well as if it were issued for the benefit of the holder of the bullion. If the financial condition of our country is so grievous that we must at every hazard have a cheaper dollar, in order to lessen the burden of debts already contracted, it is far better, rather than to adopt the single standard of silver, to boldly reduce the number of grains in the gold dollar, or to abandon and retrace all efforts to make United States notes equal to coin. Either expedient will do greater harm to the public at large than any possible benefit to the debtors.

"The free coinage of silver will also impair the pledge made of the customs duties, by the act of February, 1862, for the payment of the interest of the public debt. The policy thus far adhered to, of collecting these duties in gold coin, has been the chief cause of upholding and advancing the public credit, and making it possible to lessen the burden of interest by the process of refunding.

"The Secretary believes that all the beneficial results hoped for from a liberal issue of silver coin can be secured by issuing this coin, in pursuance of the general policy of the act of 1853, in exchange for United States notes, coined from bullion purchased in the open market by the United States, and maintaining it by redemption, or otherwise, at par with gold coin. It could be made a legal tender for such sums and on such contracts as would secure to it the most general circulation. It could be easily redeemed in United States notes and gold coin, and only issued when demanded for public convenience."

THE INTERIOR DEPARTMENT.

Secretary Schurz's Recommendations.

The most important portion of Secretary Schurz's report is that relating to the discussion of the Indian policy. After reviewing the events of the year, such as the Sioux and Nez Perces wars, the flight of Sitting Bull, and the visit of the Commissioners, Secretary Schurz makes the following remarks on the Indian policy:

While some progress has been made in the adjustment of difficulties, and the danger of disturbances on a large scale seems remote, it would be unwise to lose sight of the lesson taught by experience, that in these things appearances are sometimes deceptive, and that the general condition of our Indian affairs is by no means satisfactory. It is useless to disguise the fact that a perfect solution of the Indian problem—that is to say, so complete an absorption of the Indians in our social and political system that they no longer appear as an incongruous and troublesome element—is, in one day at least, fraught with perplexities which cannot be solved by a mere stroke of legislation.

In my opinion, our efforts should be mainly directed to the following points:

1. The first thing necessary is that we should keep good faith with the Indians in every respect. We should never promise them more than we are able and willing to perform, and then perform what we have promised.

2. The pursuit of hunting is, as much as possible, to be discouraged among the Indians. The excitement of the chase stimulates their warlike propensities. When the Indians cease to be hunters they will, in a great measure, cease to be warriors. To this end they should be permitted to possess only a limited supply of arms and ammunition, and their ponies should be exchanged as much as practicable for cattle.

3. As a number of Indian tribes are still depending in part, at least, upon hunting for their sustenance, their wants must be provided for in another way. They should be gradually gathered upon a smaller number of reservations, where agriculture and cattle-raising can be carried on with success, and where they can easily be supplied with their necessaries until they are self-sustaining. The Indian Territory has room for most of the Southwestern tribes, which should be gradually located there as they come under control of the Government. One or two reservations in the Northwest this side of the mountains, and a similar consolidation of reservations on the Pacific slope, to be determined on after more minute inquiry into local circumstances, will accommodate the Northern Indians. The interspersions of Indians and whites, which is so apt to lead to troublesome collisions, can, in this way, be considerably limited, and greater facilities will be afforded for the promotion of civilization. While Indians cannot be expected to become successful farmers at once, several tribes have already made appreciable progress in that respect, and others are likely to do so under favorable circumstances and judicious management.

4. The enjoyment and pride of the individual ownership of property being one of the most effective civilization agencies, the allotment of small tracts of land should be made to the heads of families on all reservations, to be held in severalty, under proper restrictions, so that they may have fixed homes. To protect the security of life and property among the Indians the laws of the United States, to be enforced by proper tribunals, should be extended over the reservations, and a body of police composed of Indians, and subject to the orders of the Government officers, should be organized on each of them. It is a matter of experience that Indians thus trusted with official duty can almost uniformly be depended on in point of fidelity and efficiency.

5. The establishment of schools for the instruction of the young is gradually being extended among the Indian tribes under our control as far as practicable. The attendance of Indian children should be made compulsory. One of the most important points is that they should be taught to speak and read the English language. Efforts have been made to establish and teach the grammar of Indian dialects, and to use books printed in those dialects as a means of instruction. This is certainly a very interesting and meritorious philological work, but, as far as the education of Indian children is concerned, the teaching of the English language must be considered infinitely more useful. If Indian children are to be civilized, they must learn the language of civilization. In this way a young generation may be raised up far more open to civilizing influences of a higher kind, and more fit for a peaceable and profitable intercourse with the white people.

6. At many of the agencies farmers are employed and salaried by the Government, but, in some if not in most cases, the farms have been worked by white men merely to raise crops for supplying the agencies and the Indians. They are to be turned to much greater advantage. The farms should be used, in the first place, for the instruction of the youths at school.

7. On the reservations the labor of white men is to be dispensed with and Indian labor to be employed as much as possible. Proper discrimination should be made in the distribution of supplies and annuity goods, and the granting of favors between those who work and those who live as idle vagabonds, so that honest effort might be encouraged by tangible recognition and reward.

Some of these reforms have for some time been in progress. Others are in course of preparation. Their accomplishment requires time and patient labor, and, above all things, an honest and efficient Indian service.

THE WAR DEPARTMENT.

Report of Secretary McCrary.

Hon. George W. McCrary, the Secretary of War, in his annual report, after alluding to the injurious effects of the constant interfering with the army by legislation, threatening reductions, urges an elastic system of organization which will be capable of extension in case of necessity to an aggregate force of 30,000 to 40,000 men. He considers that the necessities of the country demand a military force not less than that now authorized by statute, which should be capable, by increasing the numerical strength of the companies, of being raised to the standard necessary to meet any ordinary contingency. The report, in speaking of the Indian service, favors the placing of the feeding of all the Indian nations now provided with rations by the Government in charge of the Commissary Department of the army. On the subject of the retirement of officers from active service, the Secretary urges legislation which will remove the present limitation as to the number of officers who may be on the retired list at the same as at present. This number is 300. By a removal of the limitation the number will not be materially increased, as a careful inquiry shows that with the proposed changes there would be only about forty officers to add to the list. The Secretary does not favor any change in the portion of the statute which leaves the question of retirement to the President. It has always been urged by the younger officers of the army that it should be obligatory upon the President to retire officers at the age of 62.

In regard to the recent order directing the temporary suspension of the publication of the record of the battles in the Army Register, the Secretary of War says it was absolutely necessary, as the list, as furnished to the department, was in such confusion that it was impossible for the officials at the War Office to remedy it. He says that originally a request was sent to officers to furnish the department with a list of the battles in which their several regiments had been engaged. Some sent in answers giving a list of unimportant engagements; others sent in skirmishes; and others again a list of battles where their regiments were present, but did not participate; while a few confined their statements to such important engagements as might properly be designated as battles, and in which their commands were actually engaged. The general disposition seemed to be to claim more than was deserved, so that in order to correct the records their publication was temporarily suspended. These records will probably again appear in the Army Register of next year.

THE NAVY.

Secretary Thompson's Report.

The Secretary of the Navy, in his report, says: "The appropriations available for the present fiscal year, commencing July 1, 1877, are $13,962,691. The whole amount drawn from the treasury from July 1 to Nov. 1, 1877, is $6,343,497. Of this amount there is estimated to have been in the hands of the Paymasters and agents of the Government on Nov. 1, 1877, $978,038, besides $152,000 refunded, making a total of $1,130,038, which, deducted from the amount drawn, will show the actual expenditures from July 1 to Nov. 1, 1877, to have been $4,213,509. The estimates for the present fiscal year are $16,233,234, exclusive of $2,814,281 estimated for new buildings, repairs, and improvements at the several navy-yards. In the report of the Secretary of the Navy Nov. 25, 1876, the estimated amount for the pay of the navy for the present fiscal year was $7,300,000, the computation being based upon the number of officers and men borne upon the register. Congress, however, by the act of March 3, 1877, appropriated only $6,600,000, or $700,000 less than the estimate. This will necessarily produce a deficiency at the end of the fiscal year, unless Congress shall appropriate the amount, the payment of which to officers and men is so fixed by law that it can not be evaded. The amount appropriated for the deficiency at the extra session of Congress had reference only to the last fiscal year, ending June 30, 1877, and was based upon the amount ascertained to be due upon the books of the Fourth Auditor's office, whereas the deficiency here referred to is estimated for the present fiscal year, ending June 30, 1878."

A Noble Pair of Brothers.

In the town of Wells, Me., there are two brothers, one 77, the other 72 years of age, weighing nearly 500 pounds and measuring in height about twelve feet six inches combined, living about four miles from North Berwick, in the vicinity of Bragdon & West's mill. What is remarkable about these two men is that they were born in the house they now live in, and never went away from home. Both are married and have families. They have always lived on this place, and never divided any property, never kept any accounts, never quarreled, never had any hard words or disagreements. The farm contains upward of 800 acres of land, over 350 of which are heavily timbered. Their timber and wood tract is nearly a mile square, extending from their house, which sets isolated and in from the main road, back to the Boston and Maine track. There are hundreds of trees upward of a hundred feet high, and some of which measure from four to five feet in diameter at the butt. There are no such trees in this section of Maine as are owned by "Jack & Oliver," as they are known far and near. Their children, when they go to the store for goods, say to the merchant: "Charge to father." "Well, who is father?" "Why, Jack & Oliver."

A Boy Miner.

In the town of Auburn, Ore., gold diggings have been found under very peculiar circumstances. A boy had been fitted out by his father with the implements of mining, and set to work near the roadside, merely for amusement and to give the youngster something to keep him out of mischief. The ground was staked out formally in mining style, and some waste water was turned into sluices so as to wash the dirt. The boy worked for a few days faithfully, and, to everybody's surprise, at last panned out a small quantity of gold dust. Laborers were then employed, and the work was deepened and extended, gold continuing to be found, at last accounts, in profitable quantities.

THIRTY-FIVE memorials, containing over 5,000 names of persons residing in the valleys between Cairo, Ill., and Vicksburg, Miss., a distance of 600 miles, have been forwarded to Congress, invoking Government aid to rebuild the river shore levees to protect and reclaim alluvial lands.

UNDER the Illinois law there are thirty-four different grades of grain.

THE MARKETS.

NEW YORK.
BEEVES	$8 00	@11 50
HOGS	4 70	@ 6 75
COTTON	11¼	@ 11½
FLOUR—Superfine	4 75	@ 5 25
WHEAT—No. 2 Chicago	1 29	@ 1 30
CORN—Western Mixed	62	@ 63
OATS—Mixed	35	@ 41
RYE—Western	70	@ 71
PORK—New Mess	13 50	@14 00
LARD	8¼	@ 8½
CHICAGO.
BEEVES—Choice Graded Steers	5 25	@ 5 50
Choice Natives	4 75	@ 5 00
Cows and Heifers	2 25	@ 3 50
Butchers' Steers	3 25	@ 3 75
Medium to Fair	4 00	@ 4 50
HOGS—Live	3 65	@ 4 45
FLOUR—Fancy White Winter	6 75	@ 7 25
Good to Choice Spring Ex.	5 25	@ 5 50
WHEAT—No. 2 Spring	1 07	@ 1 08
No. 3 Spring	1 01	@ 1 02
CORN—No. 2	41	@ 42
OATS—No. 2	24	@ 25
RYE—No. 2	58	@ 60
BARLEY—No. 2	61	@ 62
BUTTER—Choice Creamery	30	@ 33
EGGS—Fresh	20	@ 21
PORK—Mess	11 75	@11 80
LARD	7¾	@ 8
MILWAUKEE.
WHEAT—No. 1	1 09½	@ 1 10½
No. 2	1 07	@ 1 08
CORN—No. 2	41	@ 42
OATS—No. 2	24	@ 25
RYE—No. 1	56	@ 57
BARLEY—No. 2	67	@ 68
ST. LOUIS.
WHEAT—No. 3 Red Fall	1 20	@ 1 21
CORN—No. 2 Mixed	41½	@ 42
OATS—No. 2	26	@ 27
RYE	55	@ 56
PORK—Mess	12 00	@12 25
LARD	7¾	@ 8
HOGS	3 50	@ 4 45
CATTLE	2 00	@ 4 70
CINCINNATI.
WHEAT—Red	1 18	@ 1 25
CORN—New	38	@ 40
OATS	29	@ 31
RYE	65	@ 66
PORK—Mess	11 80	@12 00
LARD	7¾	@ 8
TOLEDO.
WHEAT—No. 1 White Michigan	1 30	@ 1 31
No. 2 Red Winter	1 27	@ 1 28
CORN	45½	@ 46
OATS—No. 2	29	@ 30
DETROIT.
FLOUR—Choice White	5 60	@ 6 30
WHEAT—No. 1 White	1 29	@ 1 30
No. 1 Amber	1 27	@ 1 28
CORN—No. 1	48	@ 50½
OATS—Mixed	30	@ 31
BARLEY (per cental)	1 10	@ 1 60
PORK—Mess	12 75	@13 00
EAST LIBERTY, PA.
CATTLE—Best	5 00	@ 5 40
Fair	4 30	@ 4 60
Common	3 00	@ 3 75
HOGS	4 25	@ 4 60
SHEEP	4 00	@ 4 70

AUBURN COURIER.

T. C. MAYS, Publisher.

AGRICULTURAL AND DOMESTIC.

Around the Farm.

Decaying vegetable matter about the house, around the walls and in the cellar are prolific causes of disease in the farm-house.

Ill-treatment of cows, getting them heated, and then feeding the milk to children, is a practice liable to be attended with fatal results.

Bad ventilation, attended with impure air, causes catarrhal and skin diseases of our animals, especially when obliged to breathe the impurities of decaying manure. Better ventilation of sleeping-rooms is urged, and more out-door exercise for the farmer's wife.

Young chickens frequently go blind in one or both eyes. Glycerine is a sure remedy. One small drop applied to each eye will soon cause the eyes to open, or soften the edges of the lids so as to admit of their being easily opened with the point of a penknife.—Poultry Bulletin.

It is estimated that fifty head of poultry will make more than enough manure for an acre of land—700 weight of guano being the usual quantity applied per acre, and poultry manure being even richer than guano in ammonia and fertilizing salts. No other stock will give an equal return in this way, and these figures demand careful attention from the large farmer.

A Canadian writer in the columns of the Cultivator is making it appear that a farming family disposed to home industry might squeeze their sweetening out of the beet without any great waste. Grind the washed beets, boil down the juice and feed the pummace to cattle—that's the short of it. Of course there will be no fine pastry pulverized sugar to serve with fruit produced by such a rude performance.

Fertilizing Strawberries.—When stable manure cannot be obtained, superphosphate of lime may be used to advantage, if it be pure. Five hundred pounds per acre will suffice, spread broadcast and harrowed in; then sprinkle a little in each hole as the plants are set. Ashes are also a good fertilizer. Or, in place of ashes, muriate of potash will do as well. It contains 50 per cent. of pure potash, and is now quoted at $3 to $3.50 per 100 pounds, and less by the ton. The following formula is said to produce very large crops of strawberries: "One quart nitrate of potash, one quart glauber salts, and one quart sal soda," all to be dissolved in water, one barrel for three pounds of the mixture, which is enough for a bed forty or fifty feet square; apply early in the season, from a wateringpot, several times till the fruit sets.—Exchange.

I have increased the fertility of my land by feeding shorts, corn meal, brewers' sprouts, brewers' grains, and beef scraps, and buying some hay. Then, in order to keep up, or rather increase, the fertility of my soil, I feed shorts to my milch cows, because they contain phosphate of lime, ammonia and potash. I also feed brewers' grains, because the brewer has removed only the sugar from them, and I feed a little corn meal. These are fed to make, in the first place, more milk; in the second place, better milk, and, in the third place, more and better manure, because, by feeding these, I am enabled to keep more stock and make more manure, and enrich my land so that I can keep more stock, consume more shorts, more meal, more grains, more hay, and more manure. To this, I suppose, there is a limit, but I have not reached it yet.—Cor. New England Farmer.

About the House.

To Prevent Blisters.—A plaster composed of ground mustard, mixed with white of an egg in place of water, will prevent a blister upon the surface of the skin.

Chocolate Caramels.—One cupful sweet milk, two of sugar, one cupful molasses, one-half cupful Baker's chocolate, grated; flavor with vanilla to suit the taste; boil for one and a quarter hours; cool on buttered tins.

Cooking Cauliflowers.—Three answers were given the lady wishing to know how to make cauliflower white for the table, none of which show knowledge of the great secret, which is to boil it in two-thirds milk and one-third water, or even more milk if it can be spared.

To Clean Marble.—Take two parts common soda, one part pulverized pumice-stone, one part finely-powdered chalk; sift the mixture through a fine sieve and then mix with water; rub it thoroughly over the surface of the marble, and the stains will be removed; then wash the marble over with soap and water.

Loose but Sound Teeth.—Turkish myrrh diluted in water—at first a teaspoonful to a tumbler and gradually strengthened—and used as a wash four or five times a day, will generally give relief. There are only two causes for the above trouble, viz., calomel and soda, and the use of both must be stopped entirely.

Crust for Meat-Pies.—One quart of sifted flour, three table-spoonfuls of good firm lard, well chopped in, two and one-half cupfuls of sweet milk, one teaspoonful of soda, wet with a very little hot water and mix in with the milk; two teaspoonfuls of cream of tartar, sifted into the dry flour; little salt; work quickly, and not make very stiff.

Poached Eggs.—When the water has boiled in the frying-pan break the eggs separately in a saucer; remove the pan from the stove, and slip the eggs (one at a time) on the surface of the water; when all are in place the pan again on the fire, and boil about three minutes; take them out with a skimmer, drain well, lay them upon pieces of buttered toast, place on a hot dish, salt to taste; garnish with parsley.

To Press Ferns.—Gather before the sporangia break open and carefully place between the leaves of a large book, leaving several thicknesses of paper between each frond; put the book under heavy pressure and in a moderately warm place. The ferns should be changed at least every other day; if fertile fronds of the Osmundas are pressed, the change should be made much oftener.

A Paste for Family Use.—The Druggists' Circular gives the following recipe for a paste that may be used on postage stamps and gummed labels: Dextrine, two ounces; acetic acid, four drachms; alcohol, four drachms; water, two and a half ounces. Mix the dextrine, acetic acid, and water, stirring until thoroughly mixed; then add alcohol. For attaching labels to tin, first rub the surface with a mixture of muriatic acid and alcohol; then apply the label with a very thin coating of the paste, and it will adhere almost as well as on glass.

STANLEY.

Incidents of His Journey Down the Congo.

I have endeavored to take you rapidly through a few of our thousand and one experiences as we struggled through the dense darkness and mystery of the unknown into light. A few exciting contests I have briefly described—contests with human demons who delight in craft, fraud, treachery and cruelty, who regarded us much as we regarded the noble beasts that roved over the plains of Usukuma, as so many heads of seasoned game to be slaughtered and carved, and boiled and eaten. They attacked us with spears, assegays, poisoned arrows, and muskets, and at one time they actually surrounded our camp with hidden nets. They drove poisoned sticks into the ground, so that in the charge to scatter them from the neighborhood of our camp our people might have their feet pierced with these instruments of torture. On all sides death stared us in the face, cruel eyes watched us day and night, and a thousand bloody hands were stretched out to take advantage of the least carelessness. We defended ourselves like men who knew that pusillanimity would be our ruin—that mercy was unknown to these savages. Out of the charity and regard for my own people, and myself as well, on whom devolved the responsibility of taking the expedition through these savage regions, I wished naturally that it might have been otherwise, and looked anxiously and keenly for any sign of forbearance and peace, as I saw my African comrades drop one by one from my side in the oblivion of the terrible wilds. We thank Heaven that these dark days are over.

Yet we had some briefest intervals of pleasure even during that stormy period. One pacific tribe—the day after a desperate battle with a martial tribe above, who, it seemed had oppressed them greatly—warned by the huge drums that sounded the approach of strangers, turned out in dense crowds along the river banks, while the boldest of their warriors manned their enormous canoes and bore down on us, taking care to cry out the magic word, "Sennene!" which caused us to drop our guns and echo the happy word with such fervor of lungs that the thousands on the banks, who might have been a little distrustful, instantly distinguished its hearty sincerity, and repeated it with equal fervor, until for a time, even after they had ended, the forests across the river seemed to thunder mysteriously, "Sennene! Sennene!" We dropped our stone anchors abreast, and near enough to the vast crowds on the banks, and invited the warriors in the canoes to approach.

From childish shyness they would not come nearer than fifty yards or so, and two old women—ladies, I ought to call them—"manned" a small canoe, and, coming straight to my boat, they brought their tiny vessel alongside, and after an introductory laugh offered us palm wine and a couple of chickens! Presently the warriors, shamed out of their shyness—it was not fear—drew their canoes alongside—great enormous things, twice the length of our boat, and completely hid, almost crushed, the tiny canoe of the women; but the most pleasing sight to me, to which my eyes were constantly attracted, was the faces of the women, and the tiny messenger of peace and comfort to us in the midst of our days of trial. On looking into the great war-canoe of this tribe I observed with pleasure that there was not one spear or bow and arrow in any of them, which caused me, to confirm my opinion of their tact and delicacy, to look more attentively at the crowds on the bank, and there was not one weapon of war visible anywhere. Presently I observed one huge canoe make off for the shore, load gourds of palm wine and baskets of potatoes, and return, each man singing enthusiastically. The potatoes were for me, the palm wine for my people.

When I asked how it happened that they were so kind to strangers when we had fought three times the day before, they said that, though the drums above river summoned them to fight us, some of their people had been up river fishing among the islands the day before, and the drums had caused them to hide themselves and see what took place. They had seen us talk with the natives, offer clothes and beads, and seen them refuse all proffers and fight us. "They are always fighting us, and stealing our people, but we are not strong enough to kill them. This morning when you left that island where you slept last night we sent very early a canoe with two slaves—a boy and a woman in it—with potatoes and palm wine. If you were bad people you would have caught that canoe and made those two slaves your own, but when you allowed it to pass you, saying 'Sennene,' we knew that you were good people, and we did not beat our drum for war, but for peace. If you had taken that little canoe this morning you would have had to fight us now. You killed our enemies yesterday, and you did not injure our two slaves this morning. You are our friends."

A Plucky Locomotive Engineer.

A circumstance that happened yesterday, while not exactly thrilling or romantic, served to show the mettle of one of the oldest engineers on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad. This engineer is named Curtis Elliot, and his home is in this city. During his many years of exposure he has contracted a severe rheumatic affection, which rarely troubles him while on the road, but when it does the attacks are sudden and alarming. Last night he was making the run on the through western train from Martinsburg, W. Va., to Baltimore. When a little more than half-way over the distance he was attacted with rheumatism, and within half an hour his arms and legs were useless. Up to the very last moment of commanding his muscles he kept his hand upon the lever, and when at last he was powerless he directed the fireman in his movements. His condition was such that he should have left the cab and sought relief at the first stopping-place, but he would not. He said he would stay at his post and bring the engine into Baltimore if he died in the effort. The many passengers in the train were, of course, unaware that the man who controlled their safety was sitting in the cab, unable to stir hand or foot. When the train came into Camden Station Mr. Elliot had to be lifted out by friends and carried to a hack, out of which he had again to be carried into the house.—Baltimore American.

Cobbett's Curious Career.

Over eighty years ago, according to the London Telegraph, a sergeant in Lord Edward Fitzgerald's regiment of foot, while stationed in British North America, happened to pass the hut of a non-commissioned officer of artillery and was struck by the sight of a young English lass, the artilleryman's daughter, whose rosy and pretty face was bent low over the wash-tub. The thought at once struck him that she was the girl he wanted for a wife, and he shaped his campaign accordingly with the most satisfactory results. But the battery to which her father belonged was ordered elsewhere, and her lover at parting gave her a bag of golden guineas, telling her to spend what she needed and keep the rest for two years, when he would make her his wife. At the end of two years they met as agreed, but instead of being leaner the bag of gold had received accumulations from the thrift and industry of the faithful young woman. They were married, of course, lived happily, and had a great many children. This young sergeant was afterwards the famous William Cobbett, editor of the Political Register and member of Parliament for Oldham. This in itself might be an old story, for William Cobbett has been dead for close on forty-five years, but one of his daughters died in London a few days since at the advanced age of 82. She was born in Philadelphia in 1795, where her father was then selling books. Throughout her father's long and incessantly active public career Miss Cobbett was the custodian of his papers and his chief assistance as an amanuensis, and a large part of his most stirring compositions went to press in her handwriting, and her hand directed the lightnings that were sent forth against Ministers and members of Parliament. By relationship and association she was an interesting character, and by her death another living link has been lost from the chain of history.

Heller's Latest Joke.

Heller, as is well known, is an inveterate practical joker. One evening of this week while his sister was reading extracts from a book by the marvelous system of foresight, the magician warned the auditors that if they had any contraband correspondence about them it had better be destroyed, for it could be readily scanned by Miss Heller. Passing down the aisle a few moments after this observation, his coat-tails were tugged at by a very fine-looking middle-aged lady who whispered something in his ear.

"Certainly, certainly, madam, with pleasure," was the audible reply. And then, placing his hands on the shoulder of her male companion, Mr. Heller demanded that Miss Heller should read a letter that was in the gentleman's pocket. The latter became obviously nervous over the proposition, and would have left the hall, but that the audience, comprehending the situation, burst out in a roar of laughter and loudly called for the reading of the entire correspondence in his possession. This ludicrous call was earnestly seconded by the lady, which aroused the ire of the man; but, despite his efforts to appear indignant, he was obliged to contribute to the general hilarity by hardly-suppressed smiles. Miss Heller, during a lull in the excitement, gave the culminating point to the scene by reading an imaginary letter as follows:

Monday Morning, Nov. 12.

Dearest George: Meet me by moonlight alone on the Common when the clock strikes 9.

This was too much for the victim, who, amid the yells of the immense audience, started down the center aisle, closely followed by his wife, who merely stopped the pursuit for a moment to thank Mr. Heller, and then to give her head an ominous shake, and exclaim within the hearing of all, "It is just what I expected from the old deceiver!"—Boston Traveller.

An Automatic Horse.

Mr. J. H. Nolan, whose ingenuity and success as an inventor have already secured him a high standing in the mechanical world, has just invented a novel means of locomotion, which is in the form of an automatic or self-propelling horse, the locomotion being produced by the weight of the rider and the weight which is carried. The "horse," and its appliances are models of mechanical simplicity, and any amount of speed required can be secured, in fact it can be made to go a mile faster than the fastest trotting horse of the day. A small "horse" capable of carrying a man ten or twelve miles per hour, can be built at from $15 to $20; smaller one, which can be used by children for amusement and recreation, can be built at from $3 to $5. The "horse" can carry considerable weight in addition to the rider. The person sits in position as he would upon the live animal, with the feet in stirrups and reins in hands, in which position he can govern the speed and guide the "horse" at will. There was an exhibition made with one of these "horses" recently, in a hall in this city, and, although the room was small and unfavorable for either speed or ease of locomotion, a boy weighing sixty pounds propelled the "horse" at from six to seven miles an hour with the utmost ease. The experiment thoroughly established the practical value of the invention.—Boston Traveller.

Last summer the teacher who had been engaged for a school in Cayuga county, N. Y., stayed alone in the school-house every day, waiting for pupils who did not come. Her engagement was disliked by the people, but, by attending regularly she established a valid claim for wages.

WRECK OF THE HURON.

Thrilling Description of the Scenes on the Vessel Following the Catastrophe—A Remarkable Swimming Feat.

Had the life-saving-stations been manned, every life could have been saved. Nothing but a confident belief in help from shore caused the great loss of life. None but young men were saved, men who were able to stand the buffeting of the waves upon the wreck, and were afterward able to reach shore. No officer had a life preserver. They were all given to the men. Each officer that got in effected his escape by hard swimming.

Ensign Young, who started alone, left the wreck in the dark to go an unknown distance to the shore, with the sole idea of carrying a line to save his comrades, is the hero of the hour. This unprecedentedly cool, brave, unselfish deed is not the first great action of this naval hero. Once Young jumped overboard in midocean and saved a sailor who had fallen into the sea. Young is a very muscular man, stands about five feet seven, and weighs in the neighborhood of two hundred pounds. When he set out to find the shore he stripped off his clothes and floated on his back. He sank with every approaching wave, and husbanded his strength carefully for the next. If he had not lost his line he would certainly have opened up an avenue of escape for his comrades. Mr. Warburton thus explains how there was such a great loss of life. He says there was no panic on board, and two hours after the vessel sank he went below and changed his clothes. No one thought there was any immediate danger. He says: "The greater portion of the men were on the topgallant forecastle. Some were in the main rigging, and some in the mizzen rigging. Capt. Ryan, Mr. Palmer, and several men were in the first launch. We did not take those positions until about half-past 4, when it was dangerous to remain aft. We had been up to that time in the cabin and under the break of the poop, but the sea washing through the cabin sent us forward. In a short time the flood-tide came, and I was compelled to hold on to the pin-rail.

"The sea was so heavy that it was with difficulty that we held on, and we suffered a great deal from the sea washing over us. I held to the pin-rail on the starboard side, and every sea that came over me would wash me right under the rail, bruising my legs and feet. We remained there until just before daylight, when we discovered lights in the cabins on shore, that gave us assurance that we had been seen, and we of course expected that help would come to us almost any moment. After this Mr. Young started ashore in a balsa, but no one followed him. Soon after some who were still clinging to the vessel were washed off, and we who remained could see them drifting out to sea. Some jumped off to swim ashore, but were served in the same way, which caused us to believe that there was no chance of getting to the shore by swimming. Besides that, we expected to receive assistance from the shore, knowing that there were life-saving stations there. Most of the men held on to the vessel until they were exhausted, and, when they were washed off they had not strength to make a struggle to get to the shore. Those of us who were saved were confident that if those stations had been fully manned and in operation nearly every life would have been saved." Mr. Warburton was asked as to the whereabouts of the Captain at the time the vessel struck. He said: "The Captain was certainly awake at the time the vessel struck. As near as I can remember he and Mr. Palmer were in the first launch on the starboard side, which was fast to the davits and suspended. It was impossible to launch them. The Captain and the officers and men who were with him went there for protection from the sea, which finally came and carried the aft davit away, and the Captain was washed away and drowned. The boat was taken out from the vessel by another sea. This was between 4 and 5 o'clock. Another sea carried the boat back to the ship and threw it down from the cradle. Mr. Palmer was knocked out of the boat when it came back. The next sea carried the boat away entirely. Eight lives were lost from that boat. During all this time the men were very cool. There was no panic at any time. When I was carried off the ship I determined to make a start for the shore. I had been dashed so much against the pin-rail that my legs were bruised and it was with difficulty that I could make any progress. I took off my overcoat and moved to the starboard chains and there tried to take off the rest of my clothes, but before I could take off any of them I was washed off the ship to the outlying spars. I tried to get on top of them, and almost exhausted myself there, but could not succeed. I was washed away from the spars, and then started to swim for the shore without anything to support me. I was first carried by the tide out to sea, and thought I was going out all the time. My first intimation that I was nearing land was by seeing telegraph poles on shore, which I first thought were the masts of vessels. Every once in a while a wave would upset me in the water, send me some distance around and turn me over three or four times, and it was with great difficulty I reached the surface again, but I found these waves were sending me to the shore. When about three-fourths of the way from the wreck to the shore I picked up a part of an oar, which I put under my arms and so supported myself, which enabled me to keep my head above the water. I think that saved me. I was about to give up when my foot struck bottom. I then made another struggle to get nearer the beach, when the undertow carried me out. I would have been lost had not some fishermen rushed in the water and helped me ashore.

San Francisco Amusements.

A bull fight in San Francisco, intended to be a harmless modification of the Spanish sport, was unexpectedly sanguinary. A savage bull was selected for the purpose from a herd that had been running wild. Thousands of spectators assembled. Ramon Chevania, a Mexican, was the vaquero, and his task was to ride the bull. Chevania's red dress maddened the previously infuriated beast, and for ten minutes the former dodged and the latter lunged around the arena. At length Chevania got on the bull's back, clinging to a strap. At that instant a drunken butcher jumped into the inclosure, bent on the feat of plucking out one of the bull's eyes. He was himself gored and [illegible] seriously wounded and insensible. A dog was thrown in, and while the attention of the bull was thus diverted the butcher was rescued. The poor dog, however, was killed.

LIBERIA.

Report on the Condition of the African Republic.

The Department of State is in receipt of information from Liberia on the subject of the condition of that country and its adaptability for colonization. It is represented that the frequently-repeated statements as to the fertility of the soil and the beauty of the country are correct, but that the climate on the seacoast, is very dangerous to all but the natives. Horses, mules, and donkeys can not live there. Horses are found in the interior, but when brought to the sea-coast sicken and die. Although as to temperature constant summer prevails, yet the miasmatic influence, the result of the heavy rains alternating with hot sunshine, causes sickness during six months of the year, and during the remaining six months the power of the sun is such that it is almost impossible for any but natives to work. The mean temperature of the climate is about 85 deg., but on account of the dampness of the climate the heat is sultry, depressing, and weakening. There is still very little civilization and agricultural enterprise. Liberia has never produced sufficient food for her own consumption, and, although she could be a great rice-growing country, rice is imported from England and other countries and sold at $4 a bushel, twice the cost at which rice could be grown and sold there. Flour is $14 a barrel, butter $1 per pound, and hams from $5 to $8. Other provisions are proportionately high. There is not a plow in use in Liberia, and the agricultural implements are of the most primitive character, such as cutlasses, hoes, bill-hooks, etc. There are no public schools. The emigrant has to compete with the native labor. The natives are strong and hardy, and one of them will do the work of a horse at 50 cents a day. The settlers wanted in Liberia, as thoughtful and prominent Liberians recognize, are those who can afford and would prefer to pay their own expense of voyage and settlement. The back hilly country is said to be fine and healthy, but it is penetrable only by the footpaths which have been cut by the natives through the almost impenetrable forests, and everything must be borne on the heads and backs of native carriers, as there are no roads.

Doxology vs. Benediction.

The Rev. Dr. Skinner, of the First Presbyterian church of Cincinnati objected to the singing of the doxology by his congregation at the close of the services, as had long been the custom. He thought that the worshipers sang discordantly, and by his order the organist omitted that part of the devotions. Members complained to the Music Committee, whose Chairman ordered the singing of the doxology to be resumed. The organist hesitated which to obey, but concluded that his position depended more on the Music Committee than on the pastor. What followed is thus described by the Cincinnati Commercial: "During the reading of the last hymn at Sunday service the organist informed the choir that the doxology would be sung immediately after the close of the hymn. Dr. Skinner overheard the remark, and, as the last strain of the hymn died away, he sprung up in the attitude of delivering the benediction. There was a struggle to see which should get in his work first, the pastor with his blessing, or the organist with his doxology. They started off together, and there was a mingling of doxology and benediction for a moment, till the pastor paused and ordered the player to stop. The player insisted, but the tune was knocked out of time by a thundering order to 'Stop this moment!' and the frightened organist stopped. Then the pastor dismissed the congregation."

A Fatal Cellar.

A few weeks ago two travelers, who were breakfasting in an inn at Little Courcelles, near Paris, called for a bottle of wine, and the innkeeper sent a servant into the cellar to fetch it. After waiting a long time for the girl to return with the wine, and as the travelers were now impatient, the innkeeper himself made the descent into the cellar, but was not seen again. One of the travelers rose from the breakfast table in alarm, and ran down cellar to ascertain what had happened, and his companion waited in vain for his reappearance. There was now only one man in the tavern, and he was too wise to vanish from the scene so abruptly as the rest had done. He ran into the street and called in the neighbors. One of these, a physician, ventured as far as the door of the cellar, and pushed it open so as to give egress to the noxious gases imprisoned there. After the cellar had been partially ventilated the neighbors found on the floor the bodies of the four persons who had disappeared so mysteriously. Three of them were restored to consciousness, but the girl, who had led the way, died. On the previous evening the innkeeper had left a vat of must in the cellar, and the carbonic acid gas emitted from the fermenting liquid had poisoned the air.

The Mule Strike.

Once there was a mule. He had a pair of limber legs with heels at the end of them. Mule thought his master did not give him corn enough to eat. So one day, as the boss was passing behind him, he lifted up his heels and boosted him on the other side of the barn. This was what Mr. Mule called a strike. He thought he could get all the corn he wanted now. Presently he wanted water. He didn't get it, though. He wanted more corn. He didn't get that. He went to bed that night without his supper. The next day he did not have to work; he did not have to eat, either. He didn't have any company. All he had to do was to stand still and think. He couldn't think why that master of his did not come to feed him. The next day was the same, and the next. Before that mule had anything to eat again he had grown so gaunt and gentle that he was willing to keep his heels on the ground. The strike was ended.—Duquoin (Ill.) Tribune.

In October New Orleans exactly trebled its usual grain shipments.

[illegible]

A pet bear killed a negro child a Clarksville, Tex.

A number of New York hop-growers are shipping their own hops to London.

A Pittsburgh dairy turns out 5,000 pounds of butter daily.

Monroe county, Iowa, in one year mined 8,731,737 bushels of coal.

Advice to a tramp printer by Worcester Press—Go to the slug thou sluggard.

It cost the Japanese Government $50,000,000 to subdue the recent insurrection.

The Rome (N. Y.) Sentinel defines money as the missing link between man and his tailor.

Ohio has 381,000 acres of apple orchards, and raised this year 15,000,000 bushels of apples.

Sixteen-year-old boys earn easily $300 wagoning and selling wood in Texas during the winter.

The tax valuation of North Carolina has increased from $120,916,219 in 1870 to $148,564,557 in 1877.

Prussia has 140 Roman Catholic papers; Austria, 77; Bavaria, 77; Switzerland, 53; Saxony, 3; Baden, 12.

Bismarck's favorite dog, Sultan, was lately killed by some one who was supposed to be inimical to his master.

Eight hundred and fifty pounds of squashes from one hill is what has been done this season at Plymouth, N. H.

The spire of the Cologne Cathedral has a monster bell cast from twenty-two cannon captured in the campaign of 1870.

The shipbuilders of Italy claim that they can compete with any nation in solid, elegant vessels, both ornamental and useful.

When a friend observed to Piper that his hat was out of date, he replied that it might not be the mode, but it was certainly his tile.

A large quantity of rock fell from the face of Niagara falls a few days ago, altering the outline considerably by straightening the curve near the Canadian side.

Lord & Taylor,

NEW YORK.

WE INFORM THE LADIES OF AUBURN THAT OUR MAIL AND EXPRESS DEPARTMENT IS NOW SO THOROUGHLY ORGANIZED THEY CAN DO THEIR OWN SHOPPING IN NEW YORK WITHOUT THE EXPENSE OF TRAVELING THERE. WE SEND SAMPLES OF PIECE GOODS WITH PRICES PLAINLY MARKED, AND CATALOGUES OF LADIES', MISSES' AND CHILDREN'S FURNISHING GOODS BY MAIL TO APPLICANTS WHO SEND US THEIR PROPER ADDRESS, FREE OF CHARGE, AND IF THEY EXPLAIN CLEARLY THE KIND OF GOODS WANTED. WE SELDOM FAIL IN SUITING THEM. FROM THE PRINTED CATALOGUE THEY CAN ALWAYS MAKE SELECTION OF GARMENTS THAT WILL GIVE SATISFACTION, AND IT IS ONLY NECESSARY TO GIVE THE PROPER MEASUREMENTS TO INSURE SUCCESS.

OUR IMPORTATIONS

OF THIS SEASON GIVE US AN UNEQUALED STOCK OF GOODS.

BLACK SILKS, handsome and durable, all widths, $1.00 to $3.50. The GREAT AMERICAN INDESTRUCTIBLE SILK, $1.20, $1.25, and $1.50.

PLAIN COLORED SILKS, new shades, commencing as low as 75c. per yard, and at $1.00, same as quality of last season at $1.25.

Fancy Broche and Damasse Figures of the new Paris shades, from $2.00 upwards. Trimming Satins at $1.00, worth $1.25.

THE PRICES AT WHICH WE OFFER OUR SILKS ARE ONE-QUARTER TO ONE-THIRD LESS THAN LAST SEASON.

NOVELTIES IN DRESS GOODS

give a richer display of colorings and brilliant effects this season than for many years past, and we are receiving by every European Steamer fresh additions to our stock.

The mixed COSTUME CLOTHS range in price from 50c. a yard to $3.00, and on low-priced DRESS GOODS from 10c. a yard up, many of them being as effective as the heavier fabrics.

SHAWLS, MANTLES & WRAPS.

India Valley Cashmere Shawls from $100.00 up. India Filled Centers at $50.00 and up.

Real Decca, Chedda and Striped India Shawls, new designs, from $10.00 upwards. Also, full lines British, French and German Shawls in beautiful new styles, of the best and most reliable manufacture. Paris Mantles and Cloaks of the latest modes from $15.00 up, and Berlin from $4.00.

Ladies' and Children's Suits and Fine Under-Clothing.

These departments embrace everything pertaining to Female Costume, suited to all ages and circumstances. For full particulars see catalogues.

HOSIERY.

Ladies', Misses' and Children's Hosiery from $1.50 a dozen up to the finest goods. All the newest and prettiest designs in Hosiery are represented in our stock in Silk, Cotton and Merino.

"A thing of beauty is a joy forever," and beautiful stockings are now considered an indispensable part of female attire.

GLOVES.

Kid, Silk, Lisle Thread and Merino Gloves of the new colors and shapes, in great variety.

Lord & Taylor's Kid Gloves, 2 buttons, warranted, at $1.00 per pair; price last season, $1.50.

ALSO,

Lace, Cambric, Linen and Silk Handkerchiefs, and beautiful Neckerchiefs, all prices, from 25c. upward, and all kinds Dress Trimmings to match our Goods.

MOURNING DEPARTMENT.

French and English Crapes, Grenadines and Organdies, Bombazines, Henrietta Cloth, $1.00 up; French Cashmere, 50c. up; Biarritz Cloth, Serges, Australian Crapes and other desirable fabrics at very low prices.

We make up full suits of MOURNING from measure at short notice. Mourning Jet Jewelry and all small articles of Mourning in variety.

DOMESTIC AND HOUSEKEEPING GOODS.

Sheetings, Pillow Cloths, Blankets, Quilts, Comfortables, Flannels, and, in fact, every article required in this line, we always sell at manufacturers' prices.

White Goods and Linens, from the finest White Cambric to the best Linen Damask of all grades and qualities, and at satisfactory prices.

FURS.

Alaska Seal Sacques, from $55.00 up.
Alaska Seal Muffs, from $8.00 up.
Alaska Seal Boas, from $5.00 up.
Mink Muffs and Boas, from $12.50 a set upward.
Silk Fur-Lined Garments, from $65.00.
Alaska Sable Sets, from $7.50.
A good set of Furs as low as $5.00.

☞ Our Goods are all first-class. We make a point to fill all orders exactly and in the interest of purchasers. We guarantee all purchases to be satisfactory to buyers, and stand ready to remedy all errors. We invite orders, convinced that a first trial will insure to the regular custom hereafter.

All orders for Goods to be accompanied by the money, or where parties wish Goods will be sent by Express C. O. D. Where the remittance is too large, we always return the difference.

Broadway and Twentieth St.,
Grand, Chrystie and Forsyth Sts.,
NEW YORK.

FRUIT HOUSE PRICES!

Great Reduction on Sugars

All grades reduced 1 cent per pound; the lowest they have sold for fifteen years. Best white coffee sugar 10c, best coffee C 9c, choice yellow sugar 8c.

An immense stock of all goods for

CHRISTMAS AND NEW YEARS!

Candies, Nuts, Toys, Liquors and Cigars.

TEAS!

Fifty more chests of the choice 40c tea and 40 chests of the good 25c tea. We sell large amounts of these two teas; being good drawers, strong and well flavored We now sell more chests of tea in a month than we used to in a year, and this comes simply from our purchasing direct of the importers and selling direct to our customers, thereby saving the profit of the middle men, which is 20 to 40c on the pound.

Young Hyson Tea,	25, 50, 70, best 90 cents per pound
Gunpowder Tea,	60, 70, best 90 cents per pound
Imperial Tea,	40 60, best 90 cents per pound
Oolong Tea,	25, 60, best 70 cents per pound
Japan Uncolored Tea,	35, 50, best 70 cents per pound

COFFEE! COFFEE!

Our Best Rio, 22 cents. Good Fine Rio, 20 cents. Old Government Java, 30 cents.

SYRUPS.

Cuba 40 and 50 cents. New Orleans, 50 and 75 cents White Drips, 75 cts. and $1.

RAISENS, and ZANTEE CURRENTS for CHRISTMAS CAKE, CITRON, LEMON and ORANGE PEEL.

Valencia raisins per pound 8c, Best layers raisins 12½c. Zantee currents 9c Leghorn citron 35c. Orange and Lemon peal 30c.

CANDIES.

Toy candies of all kinds. Stick candy per pound 18c. French mixed 20c, Toy candy all sorts and varieties 30c. Toys for Santa Claus from a penny whistle to a nice album to make presents with a thousand different things to amuse the little ones—Dogs, cats, rats, mice, birds, elephants, lions, tigars, drums, wagons, horses, Chineese lanterns, pistol caps, &c., something for every little one in the country.

And for Christmas tree candles we have a large assortment of every color, from ½ cent to 2 cents each or 50c per box.

OILS, OILS, OIL!!

Coal Oil per gallon, 20 cents. Headlight Oil per gallon 25 cents. Lard Oil, per gallon, $1.00
Fish Oil per gallon, $1.00. Best Golden Machine Oil per gal. 70c. Machine Oil per gal. 30ct

Nuts for Christmas and New Years.

Brazil nuts 10c. Filberts, quart 15c. Almons, qurrt 25c. English walnuts, quart 15c. Pecans, quart 12 1-2c. Roasted pea nuts quart 5c.

Liquors of all Kinds for Medical use Whisky, Rum, Brandy, Gin, Wines and Ales.

Good old bourbon $1 and $1.25. 2 years old $1.40 and 1.50. Best old 76 for medical use $2.50. Sherry Wine as good as any in the country $1.50. Port wine best in the market $1.50. California Angelica wine best $1.50. Gin $1.50 and $2.50. Dublin and London Porter 22c. Scotch 22c.

TOBACCOS AND CIGRS.

A No. 1 smoking for 30c per pound. Choice fine cut 50c per pound. No. 1 Plug Tobacco 50c per pound.

We have a large assortment and can sell a good cigar at $1.25 per box. And a choice No. 1 cigar for $1.75 per 100.

FRESH OYSTERS LOWER THIS YEAR THAN MEAT—We sell a fine Oyste at 15c. No. 1 full count saloon oyster 20c. Large A standard 30c.

You can save at least 25 per cent. on the dollar at the

Fruit House, Fort Wayne, Ind

JOHN L. DAVIS,

OF THE

PIONEER HARDWARE STORE,

Would respectfully announce that he has made large additions in every department, and is prepared to turnish everything in the Hardwase line.

He keeps a full stock of

BUILDING MATERIAL.

Whichhe can sell at prices to suit the times. All kinds of

STOVES and TINWARE

on hand. He keeps a first-class TINMR and prepared todo all kinds of Eaves Trough hangnig Roofing, on short notice, and in a workmanlike manner.

MAIN STREET, OPPOSITE COURT HOUSE AUBURN, IND

JUST RECEIV'D

—AT—

J. ABRIGHT'S

Fine Gold and Plated Jewelry,
Ladies Gold Watches,
American Watches,

Rogers & Bro. Silverware,

A splendid line of imported Vases
Watch Chains, magnificent
Holiday Gifts, Lockets,
Ladies Sets, Gents

GOLD & SILVER SET

Sleeve and Collar Buttons, Jet
Shell and Horn Jewelry,
All at astonishingly

LOW PRICES.

Watches and Jewelry repaired on [illegible] style.

BOOK STORE

WILLSI & CO.!

Successors to C. P. Houser, having purchased the above named stock, we wish to say to the people of Auburn and vicinity that by the patronage that we hope to merit, we expect to build up a first-class

BOOK AND NEWS STORE,

that will be a credit to the place. We are adding a large variety of goods, and shall endeavor to keep on hand the novelties of the season. We solicit orders for

Books, Magazines, Papers, etc.,

which will be furnished promptly at the publishers prices by

WILLIS & CO.

October 11, '77—no11.

BOSS HARNESS SHOP.

I have purchased the harness stock of Geo. Nock, and added largely to every description of stock that is usually kept in my line of trade, such as

HARNESS, DOUBLE AND SINGLE!

Bufalo Robes, Lap Robes,
Horse Blankets, Collars,
Whips, Brushes, Combs,
Harness Oil, Axel Greese,
Fine Ready-made Harness,
Double and Single a Specialty.

Manufactured by the most experienced workman that can be found in Northern Indiana, I employ none other, none other need apply. I would say to all customer frends that I will warrant all stock and work that goes out of my shop as recommended. I us none but the best Oak tanned Leather. I would invite all in need of goods in my line to call at my shop before purchasing elsewhere Shop in Flukes old Tannery Building on corner Jackson and seventh St. As I am bound not be undersold in the same class of goods in Northern Indiana

Being an old farmer formily I keep a very effable experienced Foreman to see that all work is well done. Repairing done with neatness and dispatch.

J. E. SHILLING, Sole Proprietor.
W. SHEFFER, Foreman.

Geo. De Wald & Co.

FORT WAYNE, IND.

Have always on hand the largest and best stock of Dry Goods and Ladies Dress Goods in the city. Our ctizens when of visiting Fort Wayne, should not fail call and examine their stock

DRY GOODS.

They can make it to the interest of every person who trade with them. They buy for cash and sell for cash, keep the best goods and seil for one price. Also agents for the Domestic Paterons

Their store is located at No. 1 Columbia Street.

GEO. DEWALD & CO.

DOWN! DOWN! DOWN!

FROM 10 TO 25 PER CENT.

HARNESS, SADELES,
COLLARS, WHIPS, &c.,

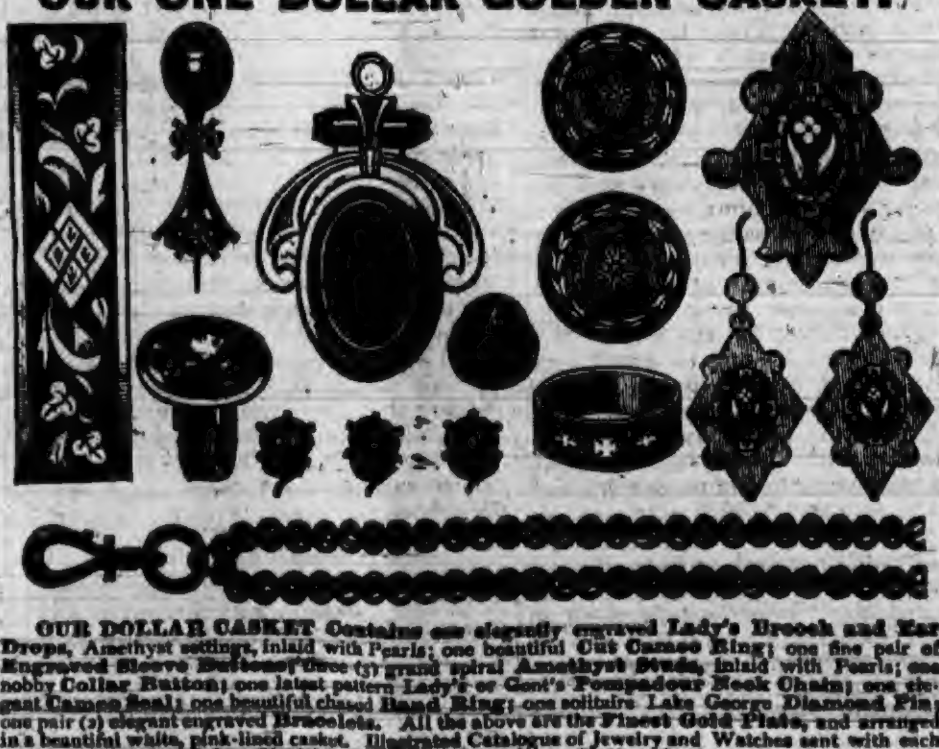
At my new shop on seventh street, opposite Court House, in old Post Office building. Come and see me and I will sell you a good article for less money than you ever heard of before. All work warranted.

G. RHODENBAUGH & CO

GOLDEN OPPORTUNITY.

In order to introduce our 40-page illustrated Catalogue (in book form) of Jewelry and Watches, with full information How to Become Agents, and Make Money, we will send, on receipt of One Dollar, by return mail, this Illustrated Catalogue, together with

OUR ONE DOLLAR GOLDEN CASKET.



OUR DOLLAR CASKET Contains one elegantly engraved Lady's Brooch and Ear Drops, Amethyst settings, inlaid with Pearls; one beautiful Cut Cameo Ring; one fine pair of Engraved Sleeve Buttons; three (3) grand spiral Amethyst Studs, inlaid with Pearls; one nobby Collar Button; one latest pattern Lady's or Gent's Pompadour Neck Chain; one elegant Cameo Seal; one beautiful chased Band Ring; one solitaire Lake George Diamond Pin; one pair (2) elegant engraved Bracelets. All the above are the Finest Gold Plate, and arranged in a beautiful white, pink-lined casket. Illustrated Catalogue of Jewelry and Watches sent with each casket. On receipt of One Dollar we will send one of these Dollar Caskets, by mail, post-paid, or Four Caskets on receipt of $3.50. Address,

GEO. G. JACOBY & CO., Importers of Jewelry and Watches,
177 Wisconsin Street, Milwaukee, Wis.

RAILROADS.

Lake Shore & Mich Southern R R

AIR LINE DIVISION.

On and after June 30 1877, trains will run as follows:

GOING WEST

	Special Ex.	Pacific Ex.	Accm.
Toledo	11 17 a m	12 01 a m	4 00 p m
Wauseon	12 18 "	1 07 "	5 20 "
Bryan	1 00 "	1 50 "	6 25 "
Butler	1 35 "	2 25 "	7 10 "
Waterloo	1 51 "	2 40 "	7 30 "
Sedan	2 00 "	2 48 "	7 40 "
Corunna	2 07 "	2 54 "	7 47 "
Kendallville	2 20 "	3 05 "	8 04 "
Ligonier	2 37 "	3 40 "	8 50 "
Goshen	3 [illegible] "	4 12 "	9 25 "
Elkhart	3 50 "	4 33 "	10 00 "

GOING EAST.

Elkhart	7 55 p m	9 50 p m	7 00 "
Goshen	8 10 "	10 10 "	7 35 "
Ligonier	8 25 "	10 42 "	8 08 "
Kendallville	8 40 "	11 17 "	8 45 a m
Corunna	8 50 "	11 21 "	9 00 "
Sedan	9 00 "	11 36 "	9 05 "
Waterloo	9 05 "	11 45 "	9 15 "
Butler	"	12 01 a m	9 35 "
Bryan	"	12 40 "	10 17 "
Wauseon	"	1 25 "	11 18 "
Toledo	"	2 40 "	12 20 "

CHAS. PAINE, Gen. Supt.
J. W. CARY, Gen Tic. Agt
J. R. CURTIS, Division Su

Pittsburg, Ft. W. & C. R. R

Condensed time card Nov. 11, 1877.

GOING WEST.

	No 1 Fast ex.	No. 7 Pac. ex.	No. 3 Nigh ex	No 5 Mail.
Pittsburgh	11 45 pm	9 00 am	1 50 pm	6 00 am
Rochester	12 53 am	10 15	2 58	7 45
Alliance	3 10	12 50 pm	5 35	11 00
Orrville	4 45	2 26	7 12	12 55 pm
Mansfield	7 00	4 40	9 20	3 11
Crestl'e ar.	7 30	5 15	9 45	3 50
" lv.	7 50	5 40	9 55
Forest	9 25	7 35	11 25
Lima	10 40	9 00	12 25 am
Ft. Wayne	1 20 pm	11 55	2 40
Plymouth	3 45	2 46 am	4 55
Chicago	7 00	6 20	7 58

GOING EAST

	No. 4 Night ex	No. 2 Fast ex.	No. 6 Pac. ex	No. 8 Mail
Chicago	9 10 pm	8 00 a.m	5 15 pm
Plymouth	2 48 am	11 25	9 02
Ft. Wayne	6 55	2 15 pm	11 30
Lima	8 55	4 10	1 30 am
Forest	10 10	5 20	2 31
Crestl'e ar.	11 45	6 55	4 20
" lv.	12 05 pm	7 15 pm	4 30	6 05am
Mansfield	12 35	7 44	5 00	6 55
Orrville	2 26	9 23	7 10	9 15
Alliance	4 00	11 15	9 00	11 20
Rochester	6 22	1 20 am	11 06	2 00pm
Pittsburgh	7 30	2 30	12 15	3 30

Trains Nos 3 and 6 run daily. Train No. 1 leaves Pittsburg daily except Sunday. Train No 4 leaves Chicago daily except Saturday. All others daily except Sunday.

F. R. MYERS,
Gen. Pass. and Ticket Agent.

Detroit, Eel River & Illinois R R.

TAKE EFFECT Nov. 19 1877.

GOING EAST.

Stations.	MAIL. No. 2.	ACCOM. No. 4.	LOCAL FT No. 8.
lv. Logansport	8 15am	7 30pm	6 30am
Mexico	8 57	8 28	7 40
Denver	9 06	8 00	8 25
Chili	9 17	9 12	8 47
Roann	9 35	9 37	9 35
Laketon	9 58	10 00	10 10
N. Manchester	10 08	10 17	10 35
Liberty Mills	10 17	10 30	11 00
Collamer	10 31	10 50	11 40
S. Whitley	10 36	10 58	11 59
Columbia City	11 04	11 31	12 50
Collen's	11 20	11 45	2 08
Churubusco	11 34	12 12	2 31
La Otto	11 47	12 43	3 25
Cedar Creek	12 06	12 53	3 45
Auburn Junct'n	12 22	1 12	4 25
Auburn	12 25	1 17	4 35
Butler	1 00am	2 00am	5 45pm

Going West.

Stations	No. 1.	No.	No. 7.
Logansport ar	7 00pm	1 00pm	6 30pm
Mexico	6 28	12 00	5 40
Denver	6 17	11 46	5 20
Chili	6 10	11 35	5 00
Roann	5 57	11 12	4 15
Laketon	5 48	10 50	3 30
North Manchester	5 38	10 35	3 00
Liberty Mills	5 27	10 17	2 35
Collamer	5 15	9 57	2 07
South Whitley	5 12	9 52	1 53
Columbia City	4 50	9 19	12 10
Collin's	4 32	8 58	11 29
Churubusco	30	8 38	10 55
La Otto	3 55	8 10	10 05
Cedar Creek	3 45	8 00	9 46
Auburn Junction	3 27	7 40	9 15
Auburn	3 22	7 35	8 30
Butler lv	2 45pm	6 55am	7 15

FRANK J. HECKER,
Gen. Sup't

Baltimore & Ohio Railroad.

IN EFFECT Nov. 18 1877.

GOING WEST.

STATIONS:	Express	Express	Cam'l A
lv New York	8 15am	8 55pm
Philadelphia	11 45	11 30
Baltimore	5 15pm	7 00am
Washington	6 55	8 40
Wheeling	3 25am	10 50pm	4 30pm
Bellaire	8 30am	11 15	4 50
Barnesville	10 10	12 35am	6 12
Cambridge	11 13	1 25	7 30
Zanesville	12 25pm	2 35	8 50
ar Newark	1 30	3 40	10 00
Columbus	3 20	5 20
Shawnee	4 30	10 10
lv Columbus	12 40
Newark	2 20	3 50	5 00pm
Mt Vernon	3 19	4 50	7 15
Mansfield	4 54	6 19	11 20
Shelby	5 11	6 47	12 25am
Monroeville	6 12	8 25	3 00
ar Sandusky	7 00	9 10	4 50
lv Chicago Junction	6 00	7 45	6 15
Republic	6 45	8 19	8 10
Tiffin	7 15	8 30	9 55
Fostoria	7 45	9 10	10 10
Deshler	8 50	10 00	1 35pm
Defiance	9 54	11 06	3 35
Hicksville	10 41	11 53	5 45
Auburn Junction	11 22	12 35pm	7 20
Garrett	11 40pm	1 05	8 00am
Avilla
Albion	12 17am	1 44	9 04
Milford Junction
Walkertown Junction	2 33	3 53	1 04
Chicago	5 40	7 00

GOING EAST.

Chicago	8 50am	9 40pm
Walkertown Junction	12 20pm	10 54pm	11 20am
Milford Junction			2 37pm
Albion	2 30	2 10	4 15
Avilla	2 49	2 30	4 55
Garrett	3 20	3 55	6 00am
Auburn Junction	3 28	4 03	6 18
Hicksville	4 07	4 42	7 42
Defiance	4 44	5 27	9 15
Deshler	5 45	6 23	11 35
Fostoria	6 47	7 23	2 10pm
Tiffin	7 15	7 54	3 20
Republic	7 36
Sandusky
Monroeville
Chicago Junction	8 40	9 30	1 23
Shelby Junction	9 15	10 06	2 58
Mansfield	9 44	10 37	3 55
Mt. Vernon	11 15	12 10pm	7 15
Ar Newark	12 15a m	1 15	9 20
lv Columbus	5 50	3 20
Shawnee
Newark	12 30am	2 05	5 55am
Lv Zanesville	1 35	3 10	7 10
Cambridge	2 37	4 08	8 14
Barnesville	3 38	5 06	9 20
Ar Bellaire	4 50	6 20	10 40
Wheeling	6 00	7 40	11 55
Washington	7 20pm	7 50am
Baltimore	8 40	9 20
Philadelphia	3 10am	1 45pm
New York	6 45	5 10pm

Zanesville Accommodation leaves Zanesville daily except Sunday at 6:40 a. m., and arrives a Columbus at 9:45 a. m.

Express trains run daily, other trains daily except Sunday.

L. M COLE, Gen. Tick. Agt.

Ft. Wayne, Muncie & Cin. R. R.

Muncie Route.

THE SHORT LINE TO INDIANAPOLIS,
—AND—
THE SOUTHWEST.

Time Card in effect Nov. 18, 1877.

GOING SOUTH.

STATIONS.	1. Mail.	2. Express.	6. Accom
FORT WAYNE	1 00 pm	8 00 pm	....
Bluffton	2 10	7 15 pm	....
Montpelier	2 47	7 57 pm	....
Hartford	3 17	8 24 pm	....
MUNCIE	4 35	9 20 pm	8 30 a m
Newcastle	5 00	....	9 00
Cambridge City	5 40	....	9 40
Connersville	6 25	....	10 25
Cincinnati	10 05 pm	....	12 35 p m
INDIANAPOLIS	[illegible]	11 50 pm
Louisville	10 05 pm	5 30 am
Terre Haute	[illegible]	[illegible]
St. Louis	7 30 am	6 [illegible] am

GOING NORTH

STATIONS		4 Express.	3 Accom.
St. Louis	....	5 45 am	....
Terre Haute	....	1 35 pm	....
Louisville	....	7 17 pm	....
Cincinnati	7 20 am	....	4 10 pm
Indianapolis	....	4 25 am	4 25 pm
Connersville	10 40 am	....	7 40 pm
Cambridge City	11 15 am	....	5 12 pm
New Castle	11 52 am	....	8 30 pm
Muncie	12 45 pm	8 20 am	9 40 pm
Hartford	1 30 pm	9 15 am	....
Montpelier	2 04 pm	9 45 am	....
Bluffton	2 42 pm	10 19 am	....
Fort Wayne	3 50 pm	11 25 am	....

All trains daily except Sunday. Trains run on Columbus time. Through cars attached to trains 1 and 4, and run between Fort Wayne and Indianapolis via Muncie.

GEO. W. MULLINS, Act'g Gen. Tick. Ag't.
W. W. WORTHINGTON, Gen. Supt.

Ft, Wayne, Jackson & Sag. R. R

Short Line Between

Michigan and the South.

Time card in effect Nov. 18—run by Chicago time

Going South.

Stations	Mail	Exp.	Fr't.
Saginaw	3 35 pm	7 15 am
Lansing	7 20 pm	10 00 am
Grand Rapids		6 30 am	11 50 am
Detroit	9 50 pm	7 00 am
Jackson	6 55 am	11 40 am	5 10 pm
Jonesville	8 10	12 50 pm	7 20
Bankers	8 28	1 07	7 47
Reading	8 44	1 20	8 15
Angola	9 45	2 12	9 45
Waterloo	10 28	2 47	10 50
Auburn	10 40	3 01	11 22
Auburn Junction	10 46	3 05	11 35
Ft Wayne	11 40 am	4 00 pm	1 00 am
Indianapolis	5 05 pm	11 20 pm
Louisville	10 50 pm	6 30 am
St. Louis	7 25 am	8 20 am

Going North.

St. Louis		6 45 pm
Louisville		7 15 pm
Indianapolis		4 25 am
Dep. Fort Wayne	4 15 pm	11 15 am	3 30 am
Auburn Junction	5 10	12 05 pm	3 00
Auburn	5 16	12 08	5 03
Waterloo	5 32	12 19	4 55
Ar Angola	6 35	12 57	5 26
Reading	7 35	1 40	7 15
Bankers	7 47	2 04	7 40
Jonesville	8 05	2 20	8 10
Jackson	9 20 pm	2 40	10 00 am
Detroit	1 35 am	6 30	1 00 pm
Grand Rapids	7 05 am	1 00	4 20 pm
Lansing		5 55 pm
Saginaw		9 12 pm

All trains daily except Sunday.

P. S. LOOMIS, Pres't
S. K. HOOPER Gen. Ticket Ag't.

JAS. CLIFFORD,

WATERLOO, IND.

Keeps constantly on hand the best and choicest brands of all kinds of

Wines and Liquors,

Cigars, Tobaccos, &c.

He also has, in connection with the above a first class

BILLIARD HALL.

To our citizens and the travelling public, we would say that this is the popular resort at W oo. First door south of the railroad

---

GOLD. Great chance to make money. If you can't get gold you can get greenbacks. We need a person in every town to take subscriptions for the largest, cheapest and best Illustrated family publication in the world. Any one can become a successful agent. The most elegant works of art given free to subscribers. The price is so low that almost every body subscribes. One Agent reports making over $150 in a week. A lady agent reports taking over 400 subscribers in ten days. All who engage make money fast. You can devote all your time to the business, or only your spare time. You need not be away from home over night. You can do it as well as others. Full directions and terms free. Elegant and expensive outfit free If you want profitable work send us your address at once. It costs nothing to try the business. No one who engages fails to make great pay. Address "The People's Journal," Portland Maine.

Dr. A. G. OLIN'S [illegible] all Diseases of a Private nature resulting from early abuse or infection of either sex. Seminal Weakness producing Emissions, Loss of Memory, Impaired Sight, Lost Manhood or Impotency, Nervous Debility, permanently cured; diseases of the Bladder, Kidneys, Liver, Lungs, Asthma, Catarrh, Piles, all Chronic Diseases, and DISEASES OF FEMALES, yield to his treatment. Dr. Olin has had a life-long experience, and cures where others fail. He is a graduate of the Reformed School, uses no mercury, has the largest practice in the U. S. LADIES requiring treatment with private home and board, call or write. Every convenience for patients. Send fifty cents for sample of Rubber Goods and circular of important information by express. DR. OLIN'S Female Pills, $3 per Box. Consultation free.

MARRIAGE GUIDE [illegible] pages, Secrets and information for the young and middle aged of both Sexes, on all subjects of a private nature. Valuable advice to the married and those contemplating marriage. How to be healthy and truly happy in the married relation. Everybody should get this book. Price 50 cents, to any address, sealed.

A PHYSIOLOGICAL

View of Marriage!

WOMAN AND MARRIAGE A Guide to Wedlock and confidential Treatise on the duties of marriage and the causes that unfit for it; the secrets of Reproduction and the Diseases of Women. A book for private, considerate reading. 260 pages, price 50 cts.

A PRIVATE MEDICAL ADVISER! On all disorders of a Private Nature arising from Self Abuse, Excesses, or Secret Diseases, with the best means of cure, 224 large pages, price 50 cts.

A CLINICAL LECTURE on the above disease and those of the Throat and Lungs, Catarrh, Rupture, the Opium Habit, &c., price 10 cts.

Either book sent postpaid on receipt of price; or all three, containing 500 pages, beautifully illustrated, for 75 cts. Address DR. BUTTS, No. 12 N. 8th St. St. Louis, Mo.

CHRONIC Diseases Cured. New paths marked out by that plainest of all books—"Plain Home Talk and Medical Common sense,"—nearly 1,000 pages, 200 illustrations by Dr. E. B. FOOTE, of 120 Lexington Avenue, N. Y. Purchasers of this book are at liberty to consult its author in person or by mail free. Price by mail $3.25 for the standard edition, or $1.25 for the popular edition, which contains all the same matter and illustrations. Contents free. Agents wanted. MURRY HILL PUBLISHING Co. 129 East 28th St. N. Y.

$45 PREMIUM WATCH AND CHAIN—a stem-winder. Free with every order. Outfit free. J. B. Gaylord & Co., Chicago, Ill.

$3 GOLD PLATED WATCHES. Cheapest in the known world. Sample Watch Free to Agents. Address, A. COULTER & Co., Chicago.

OPIUM and Morphine Habit absolutely and speedily cured. Painless; no publicity. Send stamp for particulars. Dr. Carlton, 187 Washington St., Chicago, Ill.

$2500 A YEAR. Agents wanted. Business legitimate. Particulars free. Address J. WORTH & CO., St. Louis, Mo.

Recorder's Office

THE AUBURN COURIER.

Devoted to the Interests of the Democratic Party and to the Collection of Local and General News.

Volume 7. AUBURN, DeKALB COUNTY INDIANA, DECEMBER 20th, 1877. Number 51.

The Auburn Weekly Courier

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY, BY

TOM. C. MAYS.

One Year, ...$2. | Six Months, ... $1.

Advertising Rates.

Space.	1m.	3m.	6m.	1y.
1 Square	3 00	5 00	7 00	12.00
¼ Column........	8 00	12 00	18 00	30 00
½ Column........	10 00	18 00	30 00	40 00
1 Column........	15 00	20 00	50 00	100 00

Local Notices 10 cents per line, first insertion 5 cents each insertion thereafter. Business cards Five Dollars.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY

TERMS OF COURT.

COURTS IN DEKALB CO.	COURTS IN STEUBEN CO
th Monday in February	1st Monday in Febr'y
rd Monday in May.	4th Monday in April.
th Monday in Septem'r	1st Monday in Sept'r
rd Monday in Decem'r	4th Monday in Nov'r.

ATTORNEYS.

H. C. PETERSON,

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public. Office over Davis' hardware store, Auburn, Ind.

J. W. RICKEL,

ATTORNEY AT LAW Auburn, Ind. Special attention given to collections. Office over First National Bank.

A. F. PINCHIN

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public, Butler, DeKalb Co., Ind. Insurance and real estate business promptly attended to.

GUY PLUM

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public. Office in the Court House. Special attention paid to the collection of claims. Also agent for Home Insurance Company.

D. D. MOODY. F. V. HOFFMAN.

Moody and Hoffman,

ATTORNEYS AT LAW. Office in Odd Fellows' building, opposite Court House, Auburn, Ind.

BEST and McCLELLAN.

ATTORNEYS AT LAW, Waterloo, Ind. Will practice in the Courts of DeKalb & Steuben counties. Liberal Advances Made on all first-class claims left in our hands for collection.

D. A. FRANKS. O. Z. HUBBELL.

Franks & Hubbell,

ATTORNEYS at law, will practice in DeKalb and adjoining counties. Special attention given to the collection of claims, settlements of decendent estates and conveyances. Office on Broadway opposite Haskins & Son's livery stable, Butler, Ind.

R. WES. M'BRIDE, J. L. MORLAN, W. H. LEAS

McBRIDE, MORLAN and LEAS

ATTORNEYS AT LAW, NOTARIES PUBLIC, COLLECTING AND INSURANCE AGENCY Office over Fisher's Clothing Store, corner of Wayne and Marion streets, Waterloo, Ind. Will practice in all parts of the State. Especial Attention given to collections in DeKalb, Steuben, LaGrange and Noble counties.

PHYSICIANS.

DR. J. A. COWAN,

PHYSICIAN & SURGEON, Auburn, Ind. Office on Main street, over Central Grocery.

DR. T. G. MATHENY.

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, office up stairs in McIntyre's block, Auburn, Ind. All calls promptly attended to.

W. S. ALLEN.

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, Office West of Court House, on Main Street, over Eldridge's store. Same office lately occupied by Dr. Cowan.

Dr. T. J. Dills,

Especial attention given to Diseases of the EYE and EAR. Rooms 1 and 2 Odd Fellows' building. Office hours—8:30 to 12 a. m.; 1 to 3 p. m. 7 to 8 p. m.

DR. TRITCH,

HOMEOPATHIC PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON Special attention given to Surgery and Chronic diseases. Office in Case's Block, Auburn Indiana.

DR. S. B. JOHNSTON.

DENTIST, WATERLOO, INDIANA. Does all work in the line of his profession at as low figures as possible. Special attention given to gold filling and making new teeth. All work warranted.

W. T. KNAPP, M. D.

Formerly of Chicago, Ill.,

HOMEOPTHIC PHYSICIAN,

AUBURN, INDIANA.

Office at Residence, Ralston Property, Seventh Street.

Special attention given to

CHRONIC DISEASES

-AND-

DISEASES OF CHILDREN.

Calls promptly attended, day or night, city or country. Consultation in German or English.

HOTELS.

BUTT'S HOTEL,

FORMERLY THE BIGLER HOUSE. JOHN BUTT & A. B. RICHARDS, Proprietors. Waterloo, Ind. Free omnibus to and from all trains Good sample rooms on first floor.

Central House,

MR. M. C. MARKEL, Prop. Corner Main and Seventh streets. Good Sample Rooms for Drummers.

MAYER HOUSE.

ENOCH ZOLLARS Proprietor, Corner Calhoun and Wayne Streets, Fort Wayne, Ind. Good Sample Rooms.

TREMONT HOUSE.

WASHINGTON, D. C. Accommodates three hundred guests. Terms $2.50 per day. Located corner Second street and Indiana Avenue, in full view of the Capitol City Hall. F. P. HILL.

SANDS HOUSE.

COR. WABASH AVE. & MADISON ST. CHICAGO, ILL. New House, elegantly furnished. Only $2.00 per day.

GEO. S PALMER, [Late of City Hotel,] Clerk. O. SANDS, Proprietor

---

BILL BRITTON

THE DRAY MAN

Will attend promptly to all orders for

DRAYING AND HAULING.

Keeping good teams and reasonab

EAGLE MILLS.

FLOUR, CORN MEAL, FEED, &c.

The reputation of the Eagle Mills, its excellent facilities for making good flour together with the advantages it possesses in the way of improved machinery enables the proprietor to announce that he is now prepared to meet all demands in the way of custom work. The Eagle Mill brand of flour will be found on hand at reasonable rates. Orders delivered in any part of town free of charge. P. W. SILVERS.

CARPETS

ELLSWORTH, ANDREW & Co.,

Offer a large and choice stock of Carpets in all the newest designs.

Body Brussels Carpets,
Tapestry Carpets,
Ingrain Carpets,
COTTON CHAIN CARPETS,
HEMP CARPETS,
RAG CARPETS.

Terry's Reps, Cretonnes, Lace Curtains, Shades, Wall Paper, Stair Rods.

OIL CLOTHS,

Mattings, Rugs and Mats, Druggets

And all goods pertaining to the carpet and upholestry business.

Lambrequins
A Specialty.

Prices Low to Compete with the Times

ELLSWORTH, ANDREW & CO.
26 East Berry Street,
Fort Wayne, Indiana.

J. G. FLEDDERMAN

No. 27, East Main-St.

FORT WAYNE, IND'A

as the largest and finest stock of

CLOTHS, COATINGS, CHEVIOTS,

AND

CassimereS

in Ft. Wayne. The finest line of

Made up Clothing

ever shown in Fort Wayne

Youths' and Children's Clothing!

Furnishing Goods, &c.

Merchant Tailoring

All work done in all the latest styles, prom attended. [illegible]

HURRAH.

THE NEW AMERICAN
SEWING MACHINE.
SIMPLEST & BEST.

A MAN CRAZY

Selling

SEWING MACHINES!

For 30 DOLLARS

Go and see them.

G. H. YESBERA, AGT

Notice for Stockholders' Meeting.

Notice is hereby given that according to the articles of association of the First National Bank of Auburn, Indiana, that the stockholders thereof are required to meet at the Banking house of said association, on the second Tuesday in January, annually, to elect a board of nine directors for the ensuing year, and to transact such other business as may come before said meeting. Therefore a meeting of the stockholders of said association will be held on Tuesday, January [illegible]th, 1878, at the banking house in Auburn, between the hours of 9 o'clock A. M., and 4 o'clock P. M., to elect a new board of directors and to transact such other business as may come up. JAS. V. HAZZARD, Cashier.

Auburn, Ind. Dec. 14th 1878.

$777 is not easily earned in these times but it can be made in three months by any one of either sex, in any part of the country who is willing to work steadily at the employment we furnish. $66 per week in your own town. You need not be away from home over night. You can give your whole time to the work, or only your spare time. We have agents who are making over $20 per day. All who engage at once can make money fast. At the present time money cannot be made so easily and rapidly at any other business. It costs nothing to try the business. Terms and $5 outfit free. Address at once,

H. HALLETT & Co., Portland, Maine.

October 11,—6m no11.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Samuel Gowdy is plaintiff and John A. Scholfield, et al are defendants, requiring me to make the sum of Four Hundred and Nineteen dollars and thirteen cents, with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, JANUARY 5th, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House in DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years of the following real estate, to-wit:

The south half of the west half of the north-east quarter of section ten [10], township thirty five [35] north of range fourteen [14] east, containing forty acres of land, more or less, in DeKalb county, Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
McBride, Morlan & Leas, Att'y's for plaintiff.
Auburn, Ind., Dec. 13th, 1877. Pr. fee $7.50

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court, in a cause wherein Stiefle & Ochs are plaintiffs and George M. Tappan is defendant, requiring me to make the sum of Two hundred and fifteen dollars[215] and fifty[50] cents with interest on said judgement and costs, I will expose to the highest bidder on

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 29th, 1877.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M. of said day, at the door of the Court House, in DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years of the following real estate to-wit:

The undivided one seventh (1-7) of one hundred acres off the north part of the southeast quarter of section twelve, 12, township thirty-four, 34, north of range fourteen, 14, east in DeKalb County Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interests and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff
Young & Ralston, Attorneys for plaintiffs
Auburn, Nov. 21st, 1877. Pf. $9.25

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit in a cause wherein Joseph C. Silvers is plaintiff and John Rinehart and Christiana Rinehart are defendants requiring me to make the sum of three hundred and thirty nine (339) dollars and fifteen, 15, cents with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder, on SATURDAY, DECEMBER 22d, 1877.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M., and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House in DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

The west half of the south half of the south east quarter of section thirty-six, 36, township thirty-five, 35, north of range twelve, 12, east containing forty acres of land more or less in DeKalb County Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
Rose & Hartman, Attorneys for plaintiffs.
Auburn, Nov. 8th, 1877. Pf. $8.00.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court, in a cause wherein Samuel Swihart is plaintiff, and Samuel Geisinger, etux, is defendant, requiring me to make the sum of one hundred and seventy-two dollars, 172, and eighty-three, 83, cents, with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 29th, 1877.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M., and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House of DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate to-wit:

Town lots numbers seventy-eight, 78, and seventy-nine, 79, in Ene'eys second addition to the town of Auburn, Dekalb County and state of Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose at public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
By THOS. D. GROSS, Deputy.
Guy Plum Attorney for plaintiff.
Auburn, Ind., Dec. 5th, 1877. Pf. $7.50

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of an execution to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Levi Houser is plaintiff, and Noah Lung is defendant, requiring me to make the sum of one hundred and fifty-two dollars (152) and twenty cents, with interest on said judgment and costs, I will expose at public sale to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 29th, 1877.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House of DeKalb County, Indiana, the rents and profits, for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

A life estate in ten (10) acres of land of a square form in the south west corner of the east half of the south west quarter of section twenty one (21), township thirty-three, 33, north of range twelve, 12, east in DeKalb county Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said judgment, interest and costs, I will, at the same time and place, expose at public sale, the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said judgment, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation and appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
By THOS. D. GROSS, Deputy.
Penfield Attorney for plaintiff.
Auburn, Ind. Dec. 5th. Pf. $7.75.

Astonishing Success.

It is the duty of every person who has used Boschee's German Syrup to let its wonderful qualities be known to their friends in curing consumption, severe coughs, croup, asthma, pneumonia, and in fact all throat and lung diseases. No person can use it without immediate relief. Three doses will relieve any case, and we consider it the duty of all Druggists to recommend it to the poor dying consumptive, at least to try one bottle, as 40,000 dozen bottles was sold last year, and no one case where it failed was reported. Such a medicine as the German Syrup cannot be too widely known. Ask your Druggist about it. Sample bottles to try sold at 10 cents. Regular size 75 cents. Sold by F. E. Davenport.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician retired from active practice, having had placed in his hands by an East Indian missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitas, Catarrh, Asthama, and all throat and lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for general debility and all nervous complaints, after having thouroughly tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, feels it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. The receipt will be sent free of charge, to all who desire it, with full directions for preparing and successfully using. Address with stamp naming this paper, Dr. J. C. Stone, 44 North Ninth Street, Philadelphia Pa.

Safe—Speedy—Sure.

The rapidity and certainty with which Dr. Morris' Syrup of Tar, Wild Cherry and Horehound cures diseases of the respiratory Organs and its reliability as a remedy for consumption long ago secured for it a foremost rank among medicine of its class. It is in fact the recognised specific for throat and bronchial disorders. It promptly checks a cough, no matter how long standing, and affords great relief in cases of asthama. It should not be mistaken for a mere palliation, since it not only affords immediate relief, but also removes all traces of the malady. It is a specific for croup. Trial size 10 cents. Large sizes 50 cents and $1.00. For sale by F. E. Davenport. Also Agents or Prof. Parker's Pleasant Worm Syrup which never fails. Pleasant to take, and requires no physic. Price 25 cents.

For Kansas and Colorado.

Take the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railroad, extending from Kansas City and Atichison, on the Missouri river, via Topeka, the capital of Kansas, through the fertile Arkansas Valley, to Pueblo, where direct connections is made with the Denver & Rio Grande Railway for Colorado Springs, Manitou, Denver, Cannon City, and all points of note on the Denver & Rio Grande. The track is excelled by that of no road in the West, and the passenger equipment embraces all the modern improvements for comfort and safety. Through express trains leave union depots, Kansas City and Atichison, daily, on the arrival of trains from the East, and run through to the Rocky Mountains, with Pulman Sleeping Cars attached. For maps, circulars and detailed information send to T. J. ANDERSON, Gen. Pass. Ag't., Topeka, Kan.

A Few Words of Wisdom.

For all who are seeking new homes in the West. If you are going to change your location, by all means you should keep on about the same latitude as where you formerly lived for in this way you will escape the severe climatic changes in the weather incident to the extreme North or South, having none of these things to contend with, your self and family are healthy and you become a producer at once, consequently soon independent; on the other hand should you listen to the many glowing accounts of the sunny South, or the mild climate of the North, and thus be induced to try your fortunes there, you will find the reality is not all your fancy painted it. If you go South it usually takes about two years to get acclimated to the climate, during which time, not being able to work, yourself and family are consumers, besides being constantly exposed to the malarial fevers which abound there, and the experience of many is that they return discouraged, leaving not a few loved ones beneath the sod in the sunny South. Therefore, in going West keep on about the same latitude which will insure health and happiness. There are most excellent lands in Northern Missouri on the line of the Hannibal & St. Jo. R. R. and in Kansas, Nebraska and Colorado, "just as cheap and good as the sun ever shown upon," why not accept a certainty rather than run the risk of losing all? Through day and sleeping cars are run from Toledo, Ohio, via the Wabash R'y and Quincy to St. Jo., Atchison and Kansas city, and from Chicago via Chicago, Burlington & Quincy R. R., whereby all arre furnished firstclass accomodations.

Send for map and time-table to J. A. S. Reed, 50 Clark street, Chicago, C. W. Boardman, Decatur, Ill., or T. Penfield, G. P. and T. A., Hanibal, Mo.

Growth and Force of Character.

The following admirable address was delivered by Mrs. Mattie C. Birdsell, late of Auburn, before the Horticultural Association at Richmond, last month:

As nature once again bursts into beauty, and new life seems to be opening all around us, developing itself in the bright green grass, the tiny bud, the opening flower, are we not reminded of the youthful mind, just opening to the grandeur and responsibility of life—for is there not a beautiful smile presented to our notice? The gardens need our watchful nursing care; yet how much more does the young mind need careful training and watchful care to fortify the youth against the temptations which assail him all along the pathway of life.

And while the body is growing let not the soul be neglected, out of which must spring the product of life—character—which is the soul morally viewed, or the habitual disposition of man in reference to conduct. Character is really a quality of the soul, and is the root out of which must spring all reputation that is worth the name. We see and hear much praise given to deeds of daring, both in the march and upon the field of battle, in our civil war—not only in our civil war, but history furnishes us with many examples of heroism and deeds of daring. But I dare claim for humanity a greater degree of true heroism, even than facing the cannon's mouth.

No man or woman has ever led a true and noble life but has had struggles with their own souls fiercer than any Gettysburg. If they have fought bravely and truly, they will come out crowned heroes, those that the world takes to note of; yet if they fail, the world is agape, and charity is not.

We see young men and maidens struggling for a livlihood, gaining, perchance, money, and what is greater worth, true manhood and womanhood, for in learning to labor we but add a jewel to our crown, whose brilliancy depends upon ourselves. Honor to those that endure to the end, and a brave hero is he who conquers even one low propensity, and with armor firmly clasped, marches over his fallen foe.

No man or woman ever arrived suddenly at the summit of wisdom. It is a rugged path that leads up the mountain of life. We are slipping constantly—many things tempt us aside. Are we scoffed at for these failures, or is there a kind hand stretched forth to help us regain our place in the ranks and march on? Such an act surely ennobles the character of one, while it saves and helps to build up the other.

The faculty, or I may say the habit, of observing character is by no means a general one; yet there are persons who have made this a study, judging most particularly the expressions of countenance as different ideas are conveyed by the speaker. And just here I will make remark No. 1. If good humor, frankness, intelligence, or any other amiable quality is indicated, the beauty of the face is hightened even more than by faultlessness of feature. It most certainly is true that certain expressions of feature gives us the impression of certain peculiarities of mind and disposition. The celebrated physiognomist Campanella, who made observations on human faces, and was wonderful expert in imitating such as were in any way remarkable, held that it was impossible for one assuming a particular expression to avoid the mental disposition connected therewith. When desirous of becoming acquainted with a person's feelings he imitated his expression, his carriage, and all other peculiarities of face and body, as nearly as possible, and then carefully observed what turn of mind he seemed to acquire by the change. Thus, he declared, he could enter into any person's thoughts as effectually as if he were converted into the man himself.

Others profess to be able to judge persons by their penmanship, claiming that their particular traits are visible in the curves, angles, and peculiar style of writing. I do not think however that they are able to distinguish the color of eyes, hair, or the shape of the nose.

But we wish now to look at character in is true and best light—not entertaining the absurd idea of the Scythians, who hearing of the fame of Alexander the Great were so impressed with his greatness they thought he must be a giant, and were astonised to to find him rather under than above their own size. The character of individuals make up the character of a nation. How many examples of self made men we find on the pages of history—those who have been instrumental in the world's civilization and Christianization. The great English philosopher, Sir, Isaac Newton, was the son of a yeoman. The distinguished astronomer Adams, the discoverer of Neptune, was the son of a small farmer on a very bleak spot of land, yet however sterile, the soil may be, that does not hinder the mind from growing. Sir Humphery Davy was a country apothecary's apprentice. Speaking of himself, he once said: "What I am I have made myself. I say this without vanity and in pure simplicity of heart."

We need not read English history to find examples of self-made men. We are all acquainted with Washington, Dr. Franklin, Adams, Clay, Webster, Lincoln, Greely, Wilson, and last but not least our present President, Ruthford B. Hayes. Not alone to the men belongs all this praise. There are also heroines whose power and influence have been of the most elevating character, some of the best examples being Elizabeth Fry, Joan of Arc, Harriet Beecher Stowe, Gail Hamilton, George Elliot. In all their cases individual application and resolution was the price paid for distinction. Excellence of any kind is always placed beyond the reach of indolence. It does not take qualities at all extraordinary to insure success. They may for the most part be summed up in these two—Common Sense and Perseverance. Studious attention and industry always mark the true worker. The greatest men are not those who "despise the day of small things," but those who improve them the most carefully. Some one who was no doubt successful said that "whatever was worth doing at all was worth doing well."

One great difference in men is the intelligence of their observation. "The wise man's eyes are in his head," says Solomon, "but the fool walketh in darkness." Knowledge is but the accumulation of small facts. With perseverance the very odds and ends of time may be worked up into results of much value. One hour every day taken from frivilous pursuits would, if profitably employed, enable a person of ordinary capacity to go far toward mastering a science; it would make an ignorant man well informed in a few years. Socrates said: "Let him that would move the world move first himself," or, as the old rhyme runs—

> "If every one would see to his own reformation,
> How very easily you might reform a nation."

One of the best tests of a man's, practical wisdom is how a man uses money, makes it, earns it, and spends it. While money ought by no means to be the chief motive to exertion, neither is it a trifling matter, it being to a large extent the means of physical comfort and social well-being. Indeed, some of the finest qualities of ourselves are closely related to the right use of money—such as generosity, justice, honesty, self-sacrifice, as well as economy, while they have their counterparts of avarice, fraud, injustice and selfishness.

Habits formed in youth are as we all know, much more lasting than those of later life; and here it may be observed how much the character may be strengthened by the cultivation of good habits. Man, it has been said, is a bundle of habits, and a habit is second nature. I think that in some measure happiness itself may become habitual. There is a habit of looking at the bright side of things. Dr Johnson said the habit of looking at the best side of a thing was worth more to a man than a thousand pounds a year. In this way the habit of happy thought may be made to spring up like any other habit. And to bring up men and woman with a genial nature, a good temper and happy frame of mind is perhaps of even more importance in many cases than to perfect them in much knowledge and many accomplishments.

There is a truthfulness in action as well as words. That boy was well trained who, when asked why he did not pocket some pears, for nobody was there to see him, replied, "Yes there was; I was there to see myself, and I don't intend ever to see myself do a dishonest thing."

One of the most marked tests of character is the manner in which we conduct ourselves toward others. A graceful behavior toward superiors, inferiors and equals, is a pleasure to others, and more especially to ourselves. There is a way of speaking a kind word, or of doing a kind thing, which greatly adds to their value. Then let us be kind, and seek the high objects of this life, form a true character, and work out the best development of body and spirit, of mind conscience, heart and soul. Money is power after its sort, it is true; but intelligence and moral worth are powers too, and far nobler ones.

At the conclusion of the essay President Bulla and Major W. L. John complimented it highly, and on motion it was ordered to be printed with [illegible] minutes.

NOTICE OF ADMINISTRATION.

Notice is hereby given, that the undersigned has been appointed by the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court of the state of Indiana, Executor of the will of Hugh Watt deceased, late of said county. Said estate is supposed to be solvent.

GUY PLUM, Administrator.

December 1[illegible]th, 18[illegible]

CHRISTMAS MEMORIES.

AGED ONE.

Good time, I suppose.
Perhaps not—who knows?

AGED TWO.

Very misty—can't remember
What took place in that December.

AGED THREE.

A dreamy vision through the fog
Of a rag doll and a woolly dog.

AGED FIVE.

Christmas trees and mince pies,
Less fog and clearer skies.

AGED SEVEN.

Dancing-pumps and flowing curls,
Incipient [illegible] with [illegible] girls.

AGED [illegible].

After the holidays going to school—
Awfully jolly—no more home rule.

AGED FOURTEEN.

Home for the holidays with the track
Of foreign rule upon my back.

AGED SEVENTEEN.

No more school! Oh, happy day,
A college man has his own way.

AGED NINETEEN.

Fifth vacation this half year,
Came home to be domesticated;
Doctors ordered country air,
And therefore I was "rusticated."

AGED TWENTY-THREE.

Palm trees and tropic glades,
Coral reefs and dusky maids.

AGED TWENTY-FIVE.

Orange blossom and misty veils—
Shot by the arrow that never fails.

AGED THIRTY.

Steady now; settled at last,
Work for the future—dream of the past.

AGED FORTY.

Wife and children 'round the hearth
Sweeten life and cheer the path.

AGED FIFTY.

Losing hair, alas! alas!
Begin to think "all flesh is grass."

AGED SIXTY.

Bald and grizzled now, but still
G'iding smoothly down the hill.

AGED SEVENTY.

Near the bottom of the slope,
Near the grim old river
That takes each worn-out gift of life
And bears it to the Giver.

DOLPHIN'S HOLIDAY STORY:

"I tell you, Burt, this business must be done to-night. Ain't I master of the show? Blame me if I'll stand the nonsense of this darnation Britisher any longer!"

"And I'll try my luck with his little English beauty at the same time," I heard McDougall add to himself as he crossed the stage and followed Burt out of the hall.

What could he mean?

Perhaps I mightn't have been too straight-laced. I had been too long in the profession for that. But the dark allusion to the bright little lady of our company at once filled me with suspicion. Maybe you've seen the sea-lion at the "Zoo," swaying himself right and left in anxious expectation of catching a palatable whiting from his keeper? Well, my anxiety impelled me to spring half out of my tub, to sway to and fro in a similar fashion, and to send a quick glance through the stage-door at the retreating figures of McDougall and Burt.

I could see the snow lay thick on the ground, and it was yet snowing. And across the lane I could just make out Abram Lake standing at the open door of his friend's shanty. Then the stage-door was slammed fast, and I should have been in complete darkness had not a faint light from a window opposite me relieved the gloom somewhat.

The sight of Abram Lake reassured me a bit. Somehow or other I had come to think he was well-inclined toward my favorite manager, Mr. Martin, and his young and pretty wife.

Who could help being won indeed by Bessie Martin? I couldn't, for one. There was such a tender, trustful look in her laughing blue eyes that one was compelled to surrender at discretion. She was frank to the verge of flirting, I now and then thought, when others were favored by her smiles and sweet speeches. And I sometimes felt an uncomfortable feeling come over me when Martin, poor man! bewildered over head and ears with hard work, seemed to neglect his fairy of a wife, and gave McDougall more opportunities than was prudent of being in Bessie's company.

McDougall, it could not be denied, was a good-looking, well-dressed man. Whether his attentions were agreeable to Bessie or whether she cheerfully endured them for politic reasons I couldn't quite make out. He used generally to be close handy when she—our one musician—deftly plied her busy fingers and drew the sweetest music possible from our rather-crazy piano, while I went through the tricks which used to draw hundreds every night to see the "performing dolphin" at Henryburgh. He would turn over the pages of her music-book, and, bending low, would always be whispering something in her ear. Had he been all the time leading up to the outrage which he might even now be attempting?

Were the differences that had existed between McDougall and Martin throughout our tour in the States on the point of being settled by violence? Martin had my heartiest sympathy. Still, it was impossible for me to do aught but wait and be on the alert for whatever might happen.

Faintly, as a distant chime, the merry tinkling of the sleigh-bells stole now and again into the silent hall, and told me the good folk of Henryburgh were speeding home from their bracing ride over the snow. Then all was quiet, till I heard the sound of footsteps in the lane, and the murmur of voices.

My heart almost ceased to beat, so anxiously was I listening. But for hours all was silence. Twelve o'clock, 1 o'clock chimed. The moonlight at length gleamed through the window, lighting up my little platform and the cannon which surmounted it, and which it was my crowning duty to fire as the finale of my performance of a night.

Two o'clock had not long struck when I heard a rustling noise outside, and soon after saw a black object appear at the window.

It was the face of Burt. Evidently the "business" was about to be attempted by McDougall's tool.

I instinctively leapt out on the stage. Simultaneously the window was raised by Burt, and he thrust his head in.

My mind was instantly made up. I was convinced that this burglarious visitation boded no good to Martin; and it flashed upon me there was only one means of awakening Martin's friend Abram Lake.

An inclined plank led up to my cannon. Up this I wobbled as Burt had almost entered the window. Quick as thought I snapped at the string with my teeth and gave a smart pull. The usual flash and report followed. And, looking up, I had the satisfaction of seeing Burt, his face white with the scare, hastily withdraw his body through the window, and disappear rather more suddenly than he came.

The stage door was opened a minute later. Happily my ruse had succeeded. By the light of the lantern carried by one of the new arrivals I recognized Mr. Martin and Abram Lake.

"Nothing's missing, Abram," said Martin—I can see his tall, manly figure and pale, bearded face before me now—holding up his lantern and giving a quick glance round, till his eyes rested on me with a kind of puzzled look. "But what the dickens does Dolph up there?"

"Wal, I guess Master Dolph hes been having a kinder rehearsal all to himself, and he's jest fired a volley, I bet, to rouse us, the young varmint! Anyway, it's kinder freezing in this hyre place; and I move we make tracks back to my friend Jaker's stove."

"Not yet, Lake; depend upon it, Dolph's not done this without good cause. Look! that window's open. Let's reconnoiter outside! Down, Dolph, down, sir!"

They were not absent long. The first thing Martin did on his return was to pat me on the head and hand me a second bountiful supply of fish when I was comfortably installed in my tub, Lake the meanwhile making it plain to me, from what he said to Mr. Martin, that they knew almost as much as I did as to McDougall's designs, and as to the attempt that had been made by Burt.

"Calculate," he said, "I'll jest have a shot at the durned thief if he tries his little game on again to-night. Durn me if thet warn't the cleverest performance thet fish hes gone through! It's clear thet the thief crept up the lane like a cat—ain't we seen his trail in the snow?—got up to thet window with a ladder, and was jest a going to sneak in when Dolph kinder scared him and roused us at the same time. I'll let all Henryburgh know it before noon. And all the week you'll hev crowded houses, Mister Martin."

"Ay, but you're reckoning without McDougall. He has the audacity to claim the show as his own. I may as well tell you my position in a few words, Lake. Dolph was originally the property of my governor, Mr. Bailey, an Englishman. I came across to the States as his manager, and found that Mr. Bailey had entered into partnership with this scoundrel, McDougall, who professed to know all the ins and outs of the show business in this country. Bailey, being suddenly called back to England, left me as manager, and by deed of attorney entitled me to receive half the profits of every exhibition on his behalf. But no sooner had he sailed than McDougall tried all he knew to get the show entirely into his own hands. He used his own name in the bills and in the advertisements. Over and over again he has tried to get possession of the treasury in full. Over and over again I have only frustrated his tricks by virtue of a magistrate's order. We had a few words after the performance to-night, and from the threats he let drop I feel sure he will make an attempt to remove Dolph bodily before morning. Hence your aid is very welcome, indeed, Lake!"

"Wal, sir, I won't stop to tell you now what made me offer you the help of Abram Lake. If you'll follow my advice you'll jest come back along with me to Dick Jaker's over the way. We shell be warmer than we are hyar. We will leave the door ajar and ketch the durned thief ef he tries it on again!"

So I was somewhat easier when they departed, for I knew keen ears would be listening for Burt's return, and I felt I could have a quiet doze in safety.

I must have slept some hours. Seven o'clock struck when I awoke. A little afterward I heard a door slam in the lane, and a cheery "Good morning, Dolph," in Mr. Martin's familiar voice, stole in at the window, telling me his watch was at an end.

There could be nothing to fear, surely, now. It was daylight. The people were out and about in the main street of Henryburgh. The sleigh-bells were ringing—ringing in Christmas, mayhap, for that evening would be Christmas eve, and I don't mind confessing the anticipation of a good glass of Christmas punch had something to do with my dozing off again—not for many minutes, though!

I awoke with a hazy notion that some one had broken into the hall. The next moment I was in complete darkness. Something had been thrown over my tub. In vain I attempted to thrust my head through. The tub, enveloped in matting, was lifted from the stage and borne out of the hall in spite of my struggles to escape. There could be no doubt I had at length fallen into the hands of the Philistines, and was being carried off bodily—whither I could not imagine.

* * * * * * *

We must have been fully two hours' drive from Henryburgh when an oath escaped my driver. Beyond question Burt was my captor. He lashed his horses into a mad gallop. The sleigh seemed to fly over the snow. Was he pursued? I listened intently, but could hear nothing but the smack of Burt's whip, and the thud-thud of the horses' hoofs and the whirring noise of the sleigh.

A shot! Fresh curses from Burt! Rescue seemed nigh; but, alas! our speed did but increase.

The flight and pursuit continued till the sleigh was brought to a sudden pause, and my heart gave a joyous leap when I recognized the voice of Abram Lake.

"Look ye, hyar, stranger," said Abram, in his quiet, resolute way, "if ye don't jest turn them horses round and kim back to Henryburgh with me, I'll send a bullet through your darned head! Ye'd best be quick, now. Look at this hyar warrant, and kim back with thet fish to Henryburgh!"

"Check, McDougall!" I chuckled as we shortly after returned to the hall, and Burt had the pleasure of restoring me to the stage before surrendering himself into the custody of the police.

But I was halloing before we were out of the wood! Mr. Martin presently entered with a face whiter than ever. It brightened up a little at the sight of me.

"Bravo, Lake!" he said, "I have to thank you, and I do so with all my heart, for bringing Dolph safely back. If I could only get a satisfactory telegram from the governor in England all might go well now."

"What telegram?"

"Oh, I forgot. You started in pursuit before the summons against me was issued. In answer to my charge against him for larceny, McDougall accused me of perjury, and the confounded Mayor committed me, giving me the option of paying $2,000 bail or going to jail. I was only let off for an hour or two by depositing all the ready cash I have, $800. If the answer to my telegram doesn't come soon, Lake, I shall have to go to prison, and the show will be in McDougall's hands."

"Worse! the villain may rob me of something far dearer than mere means of living!" muttered Martin to himself through his clenched teeth, unheard by any one save myself.

His fair little wife entered at that moment, and the dingy hall seemed to me all sunshiny, and I confidently looked up to see her glad smile reflected in his face. But his face was stern and white.

Presently I heard her sweet voice asking, "Whatever has happened, Will?" and I knew a little form was nestling up to him, and a pair of violet eyes were fondly questioning him.

Abram Lake had quietly slipped out into the lane and left them alone.

"Happened!" came the passionate reply, as if the stricken man could bear his trials no longer. "Only this. All I have lived and toiled for is slipping from me. The woman I loved—"

"Will!"

"Yes, you! Don't think your love-passages with McDougall have escaped my notice. He is my worst enemy; yet this morning I found you in earnest conversation with him."

"Yes, Will," was the impetuous reply of the young wife; "it was only this morning the villain appeared in his true colors. I confess I had taken his smiling face and attentions to mean mere courtesy. But he had the shamelessness to insult me with a base proposal to-day, Will. I only stopped to give him an indignant answer—indeed, that was all, Will, and then he hinted you were in peril, Will. What did he mean? Do tell me, dearest. Confide in me! Would that you had confided in me before! Then I should never, never have permitted the man to remain in my company a minute!"

"Can this be true?" was the doubtful response. "Where were you, then, when I returned home this morning?"

"Whar!" was the loud, bluff answer that called their attention to the gaunt form of Abram Lake, who had hastily entered holding a letter in his hand. "Why, the dear lady—the kindest sister of mercy that ever breathed on this hyar airth—was nursing my sick wife, Mr. Martin, and, thank God, she has brought her round. Guess I shouldn't hev gone heart and soul, man, into yer troubles—guess I shouldn't have rode till I was fit to drop from the saddle, if it hadn't been for that little angel thyar."

"My darling, forgive me!" was the softened appeal of the strong man, as he clasped the little loving woman to his heart, adding, with a kind of sobbing laugh, "Confound that Dolph! He's splashed some water in my eyes."

"Forgive me, Bessie!" he repeated, in a tremulous whisper. "The truth is, I have been utterly worn out in mind and body by the treachery of that cursed McDougall, and I didn't like to burden you with my troubles, darling."

"But you haven't told me of the peril you were in, Will," was the anxious appeal, after the kiss of forgiveness had been given.

"Guess this hyar telegraph will be yer best answer, sir," broke in Abram, as he handed the message to Mr. Martin.

With a hopeful look on his worn face the manager tore open the envelope and read:

> Have placed $4,000 to your credit. Draw at once on Goodwin & Co., of Henryburgh. Will come myself by next steamer. Keep McDougall out of the show till I come.

"Thank Heaven! We're well clear of this McDougall at last, Bessie. I'm in no peril now, dearest. Abram, I'll have this telegram posted throughout Henryburgh. We shall have the biggest house the town has ever seen. And you and my wife and Dolph shall spend a true English Christmas eve together!"—London Dramatic News.

Wrestling with a Grizzly.

After the ring had been cleared the Adrian brothers appeared with one of their performing bears. They have four in all, but only one performed yesterday. "Pete," as he is called, is a fine, healthy grizzly, not two years old, and as playful as a kitten. He waltzed, played old soldier, and went through a variety of tricks, ending with a wrestling match with one of the Adrian brothers. In this Master Bruin showed himself a match for his manly antagonist. He took a very fair hold of his antagonist, and after a struggle of several minutes threw him. Referee Coup decided it not a fair fall, and it was tried again. Mr. Adrian was then thrown the second time, but fell on one shoulder only, observing which the bear deliberately fell on him with his entire weight, thus bringing both shoulders to the ground and winning the fall.

The Adrian brothers offer $300 to any outsider, including Professors Miller and Bauer, or any other wrestler, to throw the bear.—New York Sun.

The winter season of Texas usually lasts from the first of December to the middle of February, and its most distinguishing feature is the "norther," a periodical wind totally unknown in other States. They occur on the average twice a week and last a couple of days. They are preceded by a warm, close, summerish atmosphere, and during their continuance the temperature not infrequently touches 17 deg. The cold is the severest imaginable, not steady, as in the North, but of a keen, searching, biting description.

The hat manufacturers of New York will ask Congress to reduce the duty on silk plush from 60 to 20 per cent. They say that silk plush cannot be made in the United States, and the present duty only hampers trade and increases the price of silk hats.

A NOBLE MEMORIAL.

Stewart's Working-Women's Hotel, in New York.

The great building founded by the late Alexander T. Stewart, and provided for in his will, known as the Working-Women's Hotel, is now so nearly completed that the New York Times gives the details of the structure and its internal arrangements. The building is a little more than 200 feet square, and seven stories in height. There are 503 private rooms, of which 115 are double, and all of them are furnished in the most elaborate style. Each room is connected by wire with the kitchen and dining-room, the janitor's and porter's rooms, as well as with the office. There are bath-rooms and water-closets on every floor, accessible from each room, and every apartment will have its own gas and hot and cold water. The dining-room will have a capacity for 600 persons at a time, and the parlor and reception-rooms will be very spacious and elegant, each of them having a first-class piano. The library will be arranged for the special comfort of the guests, will have 2,500 volumes on its shelves, and will contain a complete selection of newspapers and periodicals adapted to women. It is also intended to ornament all the public rooms with paintings, and statuary, and other works of art. The kitchen is to be a model in every respect, and will be presided over by a French cook. Everything will be marked down on the bills of fare at cost price, and the restaurant will not only furnish meals to the regular boarders, but to all the working-women who want to take food home. The hotel is so built that every room in it has well-lighted windows and good ventilation. The inner square is laid out in mosaic work, adorned with trees and flowers, and has a fountain in the center, and negotiations are now making for the purchase of a large tract in the rear of the hotel to be laid out as a park for the use of the guests. The building is as nearly fire-proof as it can be made, no wood being used except in the doors and window-frames. The basement floor is of stone, and the first, second, and third of marble, and between every second room there is a brick wall twenty-four inches thick. The main walls, even at the top of the seventh story, are thirty-six inches thick. Nothing seems to have been left undone that will minister to the comfort and convenience of the guests. They will, for the low price of $5 per week, really have better accommodations, furniture, food, attendance, and entertainment than they could have in any first-class hotel in this country at $5 per day. With regard to the internal management, the Times says:

> Any woman of good character will be accepted as a guest, but she must be a woman of good character. Each guest may have a single room, or two may take a double room together at double the price of a single room; or any guest who chooses may occupy a double room if she pays for it. The hotel will be well officered and watched. Of course, the Superintendents will be women. The same social regulations will prevail as prevail at all first-class hotels. Like them, the management will retain the right to discriminate against objectionable boarders and visitors. There will be plenty of reception rooms for the entertainment of the guests' company, and the same rules will be enforced for the prevention of disagreeable occurrences in the hotel as are enforced at all first-class hotels, and the same steps taken for checking them. It is sufficient to say that the same social supervision will obtain in the Women's Hotel as obtains in any really good hotel—no more and no less. The same business exactitude will be observed. Guests will be expected to be certain and prompt in the payment of their bills, or their apartments will be requested. It is not a charitable institution in any sense. It will be conducted on business principles. It is intended to help those who help themselves.

Weary Amid the Glitter.

A lady whose husband held one of the highest places in the Government stood in her magnificent home attired for her weekly reception. "How gladly would I give up all the finery, show and insincerity of this public place and go back to the rooms I lived in when we were first married. I would throw my silks and diamonds away and sit down to my supper of chip beef and tea at sunset, and afterwards take a long, quiet walk with Will, and rest on the stump in the moonlight and tell my little plans for the future, and what I had done every hour while he was gone, and know that we were alone in the world, living only for each other. Those days seem like days in heaven. I work harder now than any slave; often 300 calls to return in a single week, receptions or parties every night; see the same people, hear the same talk, eat the same things, come home disgusted, wonder what I am living for, where I will go when I die. 'Bettie, I must have Hon. —— and Secretary —— here to-morrow; I must get their influence; you must talk music to the Secretary, and you must ask Hon. —— about monolith; monolith is his hobby. Do your best, I need their help.' So it is always. Help, influence, power—a smile in my face, interest in my manner, living a lie; feeding my soul on husks."—Chicago Times' Washington Letter.

Western Appropriations for 1878.

The following are the estimates of the Treasury Department for appropriations that will be needed the coming year for work on Western Government buildings, harbor and river improvements, etc.:

For the Custom House and Sub-Treasury at Chicago	$500,000
Custom House at Evansville	45,000
Grand Rapids Postoffice	47,000
Lincoln (Neb.) Court House	10,000
St. Louis Custom House	500,000
Rock Island Arsenal (this includes the completion of the present projected shops and general maintenance)	[illegible],100
Indianapolis Arsenal	8,100
Des Moines rapids	85,000
Fort Madison (Iowa) harbor	20,000
Burlington harbor	25,000
River improvements opposite Dubuque	25,000
Rock Island rapids	50,000
Illinois river	145,000
Mississippi river, above the falls of St. Anthony	50,000
Minnesota river	60,000
Chippewa river	60,000
Wabash river	100,000
Chicago river	150,000
Calumet bay	50,000
Michigan City river	100,000

Suitable Gifts for the Girls.

About Christmas gifts. Perhaps your heart is better filled with generous impulses than is your purse with the wherewithal to gratify them. Well, then, you must fall back upon your own ingenuity and industry. Do you want to make a tidy for mother's pet chair? Take linen, used for stair-carpeting, and crotchet a bright border all around it. Then get a piece of Creton, half a yard will be enough, 25 or 37 cents a yard, and cut out the figures—birds, butterflies, buds and flowers decorate Creton gayly. Put these on your linen and button-hole stitch them on. Such tidies are very inexpensive and quite a new style and pretty. Perhaps you have a young married friend to whom such a gift would be very acceptable. Or, if you are artistic, and paint in oil or water colors, get a nice French china plate, decorate it with flowers, buds, ivy pattern, or any other device your imagination can supply. The plate will cost about 50 cents, and will be an elegant and acceptable gift.

A Colored Camp-Meeting.

From Macon, Ga., a correspondent sends a picture of a late camp-meeting near that place: "It is night, and, under an extensive leaf arbor, a swaying mass of black forms oscillate to every passing emotion, while torches of pine throw a yellow glare around and under the canopy, and cast long shadows on the ground outside the covering. In front of a rough stand used as a pulpit is a small inclosure, thickly strewn with leaves and pine straw, and in this inclosure the favored few lie in trances or about prophecies, and tell what wonders the Lord has done for their souls. Around this inclosure a multitude of men and women form the 'holy dance.' In this the men turn their faces outward and the women toward the center of the circle, and, taking hands, each steps in time to the hymn that all are singing. Their singing is wild and weird, and yet there is a charm in the song of the negro, who, untaught, sings in strict time and with full, round tones that seem to well up from the heart. It is like the mournful whoop of our 'whip-poor-will.' Your correspondent has seen a negro woman carried from the holy dance in such a 'trance,' as they call it, that her body was perfectly rigid, not bending in the least, although one man carried her head and the other her feet, and she lay in this condition several hours. While these poor, deluded creatures were wallowing in the straw before the pulpit at this camp-meeting, one old woman, very fantastically dressed, with a queer bonnet covered with plumes of various colors, broke from the altar in a holy frenzy, and ran shouting from under the shelter. Just outside the arbor she climbed to the top of a tall, burnt pine stump about five feet high, and there she stood, and, flapping her arms much as a fowl would its wings, she cried out: 'Hallelujah! Hallelujah! Glory to God! Glory! Glory! If I just had two wings and a few more feathers on my head I'd fly away to glory!'"

A Surplus of Labor in England.

Mr. Adam Badeau, United States Consul General at London, in a dispatch to the State Department at Washington, refers to the annual report of the Consul at Manchester, and invites particular attention to the influx of workmen from the United States to various points in Great Britain, whether as carpenters to Manchester, masons to London and Glasgow, or miners to Derbyshire, in consequence of a notion spreading among American mechanics that the labor market on the other side of the Atlantic is better than in the United States. He says that, unless the mechanic has previously obtained a contract insuring him employment, he now generally finds himself without either money or work; his condition rapidly becomes worse, and he is obliged to part with his clothing, in order to obtain food and lodging, until finally he appears at the nearest United States Consulate, half starved, and with hardly sufficient raiment to cover his nakedness, begging to be sent back to the United States. The Consul General urges the importance of bringing before American mechanics the improvidence of their course in seeking work from strangers and at a distance from home, without having positive assurance that they will be successful, and especially to warn such persons that the Consular officers of the United States are not authorized to grant them any relief whatever.

An Odd Little Story of Napoleon III.

It was a good many years ago, and all Paris was raving about the exquisite beauty and wonderful voice of a young girl who had just left the Conservatory to become not long after and continue till this day one of the brightest ornaments of the lyric stage. She was honored with an imperial command to sing at the Elysees, where she fascinated the Emperor, who, sending for her, favored her with an audience in the presence of the brilliant assembly, praised her singing, and asked her in what way he could be of assistance to her. The girl's only thought was that this interview, which so distinguished her, was so soon to come to an end, and stammeringly and with downcast eyes she said, "Sire, there is one thing you could do for me, but to ask it of you would be too presumptuous." The Emperor encouraged her. "Come, what can I do to serve you?" he repeated. "Sire," said she, "talk to me some more." The Emperor never was a brilliant conversationalist, and on this occasion had been rather less elegant and witty than usual. Not understanding that she was in earnest, he took it into his head that the brilliant young prima donna was quizzing him, and thereafter she was always in his bad books.

Locusts.

Concerning the commission to report on the depredations of the Rocky mountain locusts, the Secretary of the Interior, in his annual report, says: "It is believed that the diffusion of useful knowledge, the personal aid rendered by the Commissioners and their assistants, has already saved to the West many times the amount of the funds appropriated by Congress, while the survey that has been made of the locust area, the study of the migration, habits, parasites, and means of prevention, has laid the way for future investigations which will eventuate in the abatement of the evil."

The Last Day.

Two widowers were once condoling together on their recent bereavement of their wives, when one of them exclaimed, with a sigh, "Well may I bewail my loss, for I had so few differences with the dear departed that the last day of my marriage was as happy as the first." "There I surpass you," said his friend, "for the last day of mine was happier."

THE MISTLETOE BOUGH.

The mistletoe hung in the castle hall,
The holly-branch shone on the old oak wall;
And the Baron's retainers were blithe and gay,
And keeping their Christmas holiday.
The Baron beheld, with a father's pride,
His beautiful child, young Lovell's bride;
While she, with her bright eyes, seemed to be
The star of the goodly company.

"I'm weary of dancing now," she cried;
"Here tarry a moment—I'll hide, I'll hide!
And Lovell be sure thou'rt first to trace
The clew to my secret lurking-place."
Away she ran, and her friends began
Each tower to search, and each nook to scan;
And young Lovell cried, "Oh, where dost thou hide?
I'm lonesome without thee, my own dear bride!"

They sought her that night, and they sought her next day!
And they sought her in vain when a week passed away!
In the highest, the lowest, the loneliest spot,
Young Lovell sought wildly—but found her not.
And years flew by, and their grief at last
Was told as a sorrowful tale long past;
And, when Lovell appeared, the children cried,
"See! the old man weeps for his fairy bride."

At length an old chest, that had long lain hid,
Was found in the castle—they raised the lid,
And a skeleton form lay moldering there
In the bridal wreath of that lady fair!
Oh, sad was her fate, in sportive jest
She hid from her lord in the old oak chest.
It closed with a spring! and—dreadful doom—
The bride lay clasped in her living tomb!
—Thomas Haynes Bayley.

PITH AND POINT.

A Gentleman observed to another that an officer in the army had left his house without paying his rent. "Oh," exclaimed Frank Mathews, "you mean the left-tenant."

Enigma.—Take away my first letter, take away my second letter, take away my third letter, take away all my letters, and I shall always be the same. Answer—The letter-carrier.

One of his lady clerks in the Interior Department, being incorrectly told that she must pronounce "Schurz" like "shirts," replied, "If he is 'shirts' we clerks are 'under-shirts.'"

"What is the age of your little boy?" inquired a venerable gentleman of the mother of an impertinent youngster. "The sauce age, of course," replied the mother. The sage saw it.

"This country is settling rapidly," an Oregon man wrote to his friend in Iowa, the day after a land-slide carried away 260 acres of his farm and dumped it into the valley below.—Hawk-Eye.

An Indianapolis lawyer had the top of his ear chawed off in a fight about three weeks ago, and it didn't begin to hurt him until the day before yesterday. Pain hadn't got down to him until then.

"I'm afraid it is mixed goods," said the lady to the clerk. "Oh, no, madam, impossible," replied the polite gentleman. "All our camel's hair shawls are made of silk direct from the worm."

"Oh, for some new-coined name by which to call him! Oh, for some name no other lips could give!" was the prayer of Violet Fane, until she married him. Now she is content to call him Old Beeswax.

A young lady, in conversing with a gentleman, spoke of having resided in St. Louis. "Was St. Louis your native place?" asked the gentleman. "Well, yes, part of the time," responded the lady.

A lady in a neighboring city recently arrayed her Spitz dog in black crape for the death of a remote relative. After this sensible proceeding it is to be supposed that she sat down and composed a doggerel lament.

They were at a dinner party, and he remarked that he supposed she was fond of ethnology. She said she was, but she was not very well, and the doctor had told her not to eat anything for dessert, except oranges.

An old farmer, on being asked why a peacock that was strutting through the yard was like a figure 9, couldn't see the resemblance; but light broke in on him when he was told that it was because it was nothing without its tail.

Flufkins isn't very smart. He went to the theater to see Ristori, who was advertised to appear in two parts. After the performance Flufkins demanded his money back, because Ristori had appeared whole in both performances.

It is said that in the tramp-freemasonry a double cross on the gate-post signifies that the people of the house use a griddle on which but two buckwheat-cakes at a time are baked. Of course, no respectable tramp likes to wait long for his meals.

An energetic itinerant loomed up before us the other day with a patent contrivance for holding coin. When he discovered that he had wandered into a printing-office, the way he begged pardon and slid down stairs was a caution to peddlers.—Cincinnati Breakfast Table.

"What is the matter with you?" inquired a gentleman, who had called to see his neighbor, a German of Chicago. "Vell, I don't know—it is de gout; but vy should I have him?" "Perhaps," suggested his friend, "it is hereditary." "I dink it is hereditary; I remember my vife's uncle have him."

Woman—bless her bright eyes—can endure physical suffering with more fortitude than the strongest man, and she can miss a train without filling the depot with words that don't sound nice, but she can't go by a jeweler's window or a hair-store without stopping to feast her optics and wonder why she didn't come to town with a gold spoon in her mouth.—Breakfast Table.

Andrew Johnson.

The late President Johnson preserved all his papers, and died leaving them in the upper story of a shop in Greenville. Throughout his life he carefully saved all papers, and even took to Greenville complete files of three daily newspapers of New York, covering his Presidential term. Of telegrams alone he must have left more than a bushel in a compact form. He saved them all; none were considered of so little importance as not to be worth saving. He remarked once how little space a folded letter took up, and what small trouble to save them, and how important they sometimes became. His only surviving son now lives quietly in Greenville.

The longest railroad bridge in the world was opened for public travel near Dundee, Scotland, the other day. It spans the Tay at a point where it is two miles in width, and was built by the North British Railway Company; its cost was $1,750,000.

THE FRENCH ARMY.

War Footing of the Army—State Secrets Divulged by a German Paper.

The Militar Wochenblatt, a Prussian military journal under the management of Gen. Witzleben, has just published a remarkable study on the present condition of the military forces of France, by Count de Fircks, a Captain in the army. The author has conceded to the Avenir Militaire permission to translate and publish his works. The Paris Constitutionnel remarks on the publication in these terms: "What gives to the document a peculiar interest is that all the measures relative to the mobilisation of the army and putting it on a war footing are regarded by the French war administration as state secrets, a knowledge of which is rigorously prohibited from vulgar eyes. We have frequently protested against this mania of the military authorities; we have often [illegible] that it has the inconvenience of preventing our populations, and even our officers, from obtaining an exact account of our military situation. The publication of the article in the Militar Wochenblatt is the irrefutable condemnation of the system of impossible confidences and fantastical secrets. We do not mean to affirm that the Prussian journal has discovered the exact truth in everything, but it has approached sufficiently near the reality to show how vain and puerile are the efforts made to dissimulate a state of things which cannot fail, sooner or later, to be known to every one. The journal in question states that the result is that France, taking account of the cadres, but excluding the reserve of the territorial army, can put on a war footing the following forces:

	Men.	Horses.
Mobile army of campaign	677,500	133,400
Infantry of the reserve	167,500	20,000
Territorial mobile troops	179,000	11,000
Garrisons in France	671,000	14,000
Garrisons in Algeria	48,500	11,000
Total	1,736,500	209,400

"The number of pieces of ordnance of campaign, not including those in the stores, amounts to the following figures:

For the mobile troops of campaign	2,160
Infantry reserve corps	546
Territorial mobile troops	216
Garrisons in Algeria	36
Total	2,962

"At the present moment," continues the Militar Wochenblatt, "France possesses the requisite number of men and horses subjected to military service, effectively to put imposing forces on a war footing."

A Chinese Thanksgiving Dinner.

At 36 Mott street Chinamen gathered in the dining-room before the usual dinner hour, because the dullness of business at the cigar-stands and in the laundries caused many of them to suspend operations. There were seven small oblong tables, without cloths, arranged about the room. By the side of each china plate were a pair of chop-sticks, a spoon, and a minute china cup and saucer. The spoons were also of chinaware, pictured like the plates and cups. The bowl of each spoon was drawn out at one side into a handle three inches long. Beside one of the windows some dried ducks were suspended by their necks. They had been opened on the breast, and flattened with a broad weight, so that the plucked wings and part of the legs were pressed into the flesh of the back. They had been dried on the roof, and preserved without salt. In a large dish in the middle of each table was a stew which had been made of one of these dried ducks, cut up into small pieces. The guests helped themselves to the stew with a china ladle. Then they picked out the pieces of duck with their chop-sticks and sipped the liquid part from their china spoons. A large dish of rice, which had been boiled with so little water that the kernels had swelled almost to dryness when they were taken from the kettle, was placed beside the stew. The third and only other dish was composed of broad scalloped red leaves, served as a kind of greens. These leaves are dried in China and imported. There was no sugar or milk on the tables. The tea, which was made by pouring hot water over the dried leaves, was drank from the little cups. When a visitor to the dining-room asked how potatoes were dressed, the caterer laughed in scorn, and said: "No havum potate." The room was filled with Chinese patrons. The odor of burning opium issued from several rooms in the building, but was not perceptible in the dining-room. The little box of white sand bristling with half-burned Joss sticks had been placed on the floor under a side table. The walls were adorned with cheap American prints, and several Chinese pictures filled with symbolic mountains, trees and men.—New York Sun.

Debts of France and England.

A correspondent asks: "What country in the world has the largest national debt?" At the latest date for which statistics are now in hand, Great Britain had. That was in March, 1875, when the debt of that country was $3,876,000,000, reckoning the pound sterling at five dollars. In the preceding January the debt of France, according to the "Statesman's Year Book" for 1877, was $3,750,337,129, counting five francs to the dollar. This debt was then the second in magnitude. Some writers have stated the French debt to be as much as $4,500,000,000. Probably the true amount is somewhat above that first given, as in 1875 France must have had a good deal of floating and temporary indebtedness that had not at the time been converted into rentes, and the "Statesman's Year Book" gives only the capital of the rentes. But those who put the French debt at $4,500,000,000 must include municipal and other local indebtedness, much of which was incurred for war purposes during the late conflict with Germany. There is probably not much difference between the debts of France and Great Britain at the present moment.—Chicago Times.

A Grave Quarrel.

A funeral in Marysville, Cal., was the cause of a strange public family dispute. The widow of the dead man, John G. Briggs, had a grave dug in the Roman Catholic cemetery, and his brothers and sisters had another prepared in the city cemetery. A Protestant minister preached the sermon in Briggs' late residence, and the procession started—for which one of the two cemeteries no one knew. The road to both was for some distance the same. When the junction was reached, the inquiring undertaker was told by the widow to go to one, and by the brothers and sisters to go to the other. Then the widow descended from the carriage and walked beside the hearse to the Roman Catholic cemetery, while the other relatives left the procession and went home.

Curiosities of the English Language.

A writer in the Chicago Tribune says: "Our spelling is perfectly lawless. The moment we try to reduce it to rule we find the exceptions so numerous that the rule is worthless, and we abandon the attempt in disgust and despair. It is amenable to neither rule nor reason. Let us ask a few questions: Why but one p in copy and two in sloppy? One in proper and two in copper? One t in pity and two in ditty? One l in control and two in enroll? One z in lizard and two in lizzard? One f in olaf and two in [illegible] foretell, and two with e in gazelle? Why one o in prison and none in prism? Why a b at the end of one's thumb and none in drum? Why ea in speak and ee in speech? Why is there a t in witch and none in which? Why an o in touch and none in much? Why ou in scourge, u in urge, i in dirge, and e in merge? Why z in breeze and s in cheese, and why the letter e three times to one sound of e in either word? Of what use the y in play, the o in people, the ea in beauty, the o in you, the w in flow, the e in foe, the i in friend, the u in guide, the o in double, the ch in schism, the e in true, the ue in plague, the b in doubt? But there is no end to the questions we might ask. These are but samples, and easy ones at that. If o-n-e spells one, why not o-n-e-d-e-r wonder? If t-w-o two, why will not d-w-o do? Let us transplant a few more spellings. E-i-g-h-t might bother a child's peight; s-i-g-n is very fign; some f-o-l-k-s we can colks; I do not k-n-o-w why we spell know; on his t-o-n-g-u-e the sound rongue; how does o-p-a-q-u-e taque? H-e-i-g-h-t is hard to receight; i-n-d-i-c-t is quiet polict; s-i-s-l-e should make one smaisle; c-a-l-f might make one lalf; and l-a-u-g-h is too funny by haugh; the spelling of c-o-l-o-n-e-l might be called infolonel; I I will give t-h-r-o-u-g-h and that will dough, for we have had e-n-o-u-g-h of such stough."

Decrease of Population in France.

In a work just published by Dr. A. Proust, of Paris, some remarkable figures are given, showing the progressive decline in the number of births in his country. Beginning with the present century, the number of births per thousand of the population has ranged steadily downward; tabulated in successive periods of ten years each, the figures are 32.9, 31.7, 30.6, 28.7, 27.5, 26.1, 26.3. Most other European countries show, in the same period, a small but steady increase; the corresponding figures for Prussia are now 38.1; for England, 35. The rate of births for the United States is doubtless higher. On the other hand, France is not among the nations least successful in saving the lives of young infants, and occupies a position in this respect better than midway. In a table of deaths of infants (per thousand born) occurring before they were 1 year old, Bavaria is at one extreme, with 372 deaths; Scotland at the other, with only 156. England has 170; Belgium, 186; France, 216; Italy, 254; Russia, 311. Probably the record of Turkey, if it could be obtained, would exceed that of Bavaria; the reasons for the excessive mortality of infants in the last-named country are not, however, definitely ascertained; it is surmised that a national custom of wrapping babes very tightly in bandages may be among the causes.

Timber Lands.

All timber lands still belonging to the United States should be withdrawn from the operation of the Pre-emption and Homestead laws, as well as the location of the various kinds of scrip.

Timber lands fit for agricultural purposes should be sold, if sold at all, only for cash, and so graded in prices as to make the purchaser pay for the value of the timber on the land. This will be apt to make the settler careful and provident in the disposition of the timber.

A sufficient number of Government agents should be provided for to protect the timber on public lands from depredation, and to institute to this end the necessary proceedings against depredators by seizures and by criminal as well as civil action.—Report of the Secretary of the Interior.

A School-Boy on Woodchucks.

Woodchucks is a very curious animal. It is made of hair and eyes and has two front teeth, and can see a man with a gun when the eyes are shut and bolted. I have seen a dog shake a woodchuck till both were black in the face. A woodchuck can snivel up his nose and show his teeth and look as homely as I can without trying. They sit on one end and eat with the other. A woodchuck can get home faster than a gun can shoot. He is round all over, except his feet which are black. When eaten they retain the flavor of their nests, and seem to have been cooked without being pared. A fat woodchuck, when eat properly, is no laughin' matter. They come under the head of "domestic animals," and think there ain't no place like home when a dog goes for one of 'em.—Albany Journal.

A Reversal of Things.

Although the Mussulman is utterly indifferent to human life, which he destroyes without scruple, he preserves the lives of the lower animals solicitously. Though he considers the dog impure, and never makes a friend of him, he thinks it sinful to kill him, and allows the neighborhood and even the streets of his town to be infested by packs of masterless dogs whom we should get rid of in one day. The beggar does not venture to destroy his vermin; but puts them tenderly on the ground. There are hospitals in Cairo for superannuated cats, where they are fed at public expense.

THE ex-Empress Eugenie thinks that the chances of re-establishing the empire are now very slight, and blames De Fourton for his bad management. She also complains bitterly of the extortion practised upon her in causing her to spend heavy sums toward manipulating the late elections.

Justice in Turkey.

Turkish justice as described by an American traveling in the Orient: "To a Turk a court of justice, in the American acceptation of the term, is a thing unknown. They never finish a cause at the first hearing, nor do they render an immediate decision; but, after all the testimony has been offered, the Kadi (Judge) adjourns the further trial of the action until some future time, for the known purpose of affording the litigants an opportunity of making him presents. These he accepts from both parties, and in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred the decision is in favor of the person whose gift is the most valuable."

COL. E. Z. C. JUDSON, better known as Ned Buntline, was recently at York, Pa., on his way from Delaware county to Georgia. He is traveling with a carriage and pair of horses, and is accompanied by his wife and child.

DO NOT GO HOME Saturday night without a copy of THE CHICAGO LEDGER. You can get it at the news depots.

An Alpine Avalanche.

In the summer of 1864, a party of tourists, while visiting the Alps, climbed, with great difficulty, to an elevated and snow-covered plateau, in order to obtain a better view of Swiss scenery, and contrast the beauty and richness of midsummer below with the bleakness and sterility of midwinter around and above them. In play they rolled the moist snow into large balls, they crowded it over the edge of the plateau. In falling it struck softer snow, which immediately gave way, and soon an avalanche was tearing down the mountain side, burying and destroying everything in its course. As the handful of snow became the irresistible avalanche, so the hacking cough with sore throat and Catarrh, if neglected, speedily developes into that dread destroyer, Consumption. In the early stages, Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy will effect a cure, though if the blood be affected or impoverished it must be purified and enriched by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and the liver and bowels kept active by his Pleasant Purgative Pellets. Many who despaired of life and had been given up to die by physicians and friends owe their restoration to the above remedies.

ELY, Linn Co., Iowa, May 8th, 1877.

DR. PIERCE, Buffalo, N. Y.:

Dear Sir: I was prostrated some three years since with pleuro-pneumonia, which left me with a troublesome cough, that gradually grew worse until physicians gave me up to die with consumption. I tried several remedies that are advertised to cure consumption, but without obtaining any relief or benefit. Seeing your Golden Medical Discovery and Pleasant Purgative Pellets advertised, I concluded to try them, and I found them to be all that you claim for them. My restoration has remained complete for over two years. Inclosed find $1.50 for a copy of your Common Sense Medical Adviser. Ever gratefully yours,

JASON C. BARTHOLOMEW.

Invigorate, and Be Healthy.

The source of nine-tenths of the bodily ills of mankind is a deficiency of vital power. No portion of the physical machinery can efficiently perform its allotted duty if there is insufficient motive force in the system. Invigorate, therefore, in order to regain health. For the restoration of lost vitality, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters are the best tonic that can be selected, since they not only impart fresh vigor into the debilitated system, but overcome disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels which interfere with complete assimilation of the food, and thus perpetuate weakness. The Bitters likewise cure and prevent malarious fevers, remedy debilitating urinary troubles, and eliminate from the blood through the kidneys the impurities which originate gout, rheumatism and dropsy. Appetite, digestion, sleep—in short, every essential condition of health—are promoted by their use.

Mrs. General Sherman,

Wife of the General of the United States Army, says: "I have frequently purchased Durang's Rheumatic Remedy for friends suffering with Rheumatism, and in every instance it worked like magic." Send for circular to Helphenstine & Bentley, Druggists, Washington, D. C.

To Dyspeptics and Invalids.

Biscuits, rolls, bread, cake or pastry, made with DOOLEY'S YEAST POWDER, can be eaten with impunity and relished by the most sensitive dyspeptics as healthy and nutritious.

TO HOUSEKEEPERS.—The attention of heads of families is respectfully invited to the superior quality of BURNETT'S FLAVORING EXTRACTS. They are entirely free from the poisonous oils and acids which enter into the composition of many of the factitious fruit flavors now in the market. They are highly concentrated, have all the freshness and delicacy of the fruits from which they are prepared, and are less expensive.

I HAVE sold Hatch's Universal Cough Syrup for about three years. I keep all cough remedies that are considered standard in this section. None sell so well as the "Universal." My customers speak uniformly in its favor. I can refer any who may inquire to those who have been cured of the most severe chronic coughs. It is said also to be unfailing in all cases of croup. S. F. MASON, Webster, N. Y.

Sold by H. A. Hurlbut & Co., Chicago, Ill.

CHEW
The Celebrated
"MATCHLESS"
Wood Tag Plug
TOBACCO.
THE PIONEER TOBACCO COMPANY,
New York, Boston and Chicago.

Rheumatism Quickly Cured.

"Durang's Rheumatic Remedy," the great Internal Medicine, will positively cure any case of rheumatism on the face of the earth. Price, $1 a bottle, six bottles, $5. Sold by all druggists. Send for circular to Helphenstine & Bentley, Druggists, Washington, D. C.

ASK YOUR NEWSDEALER for a copy of THE CHICAGO LEDGER, the best story paper in the West.

IT will pay to read advt. "Florida Homes!"

FLORIDA HOMES!

Location elevated, fertile and healthy. Close to R. R. Stations and Northern Colonies. Price ONLY $1.25 PER ACRE. Cheap transportation. Settlers are delighted. Send stamp for State Map, Views, and Report Chicago Excursion. Brainerd T. Smith & Co., 98 LaSalle st., Chicago.

WORK FOR ALL

In their own localities, canvassing for the Fireside Visitor (enlarged), Weekly and Monthly. Largest Paper in the World, with Mammoth Chromos Free. Big Commissions to Agents. Terms and Outfit Free. Address P. O. VICKERY, Augusta, Maine.

The End of the World Near!

Or Antichrist, the beast of Rev. xiii. Containing a prophetic history from the Bible of all the wonderful events which are to happen during the next fifty years, including the first resurrection and translation in Nov., 1878; the forty years of retribution on all nations; the universal reign of Antichrist; the visible coming of Christ; the second resurrection, and restoration of the Jews to Palestine; the judgment; the world melted by fire and made into a beautiful Eden; and the Millennium. This is the most wonderful book on prophecy ever published. A large 12mo., pp. 336. Paper, 50c.; Board, $1; Cloth, $1.50. A large discount to Agents. Copy sent by mail on receipt of price. Address E. W. SWORMSTEDT, Publisher, No. 36 Emery Arcade, Cincinnati, Ohio.

DR. WARNER'S
HEALTH CORSET
With Skirt Supporter and Self-Adjusting Pads.
Unequaled for Beauty, Style & Comfort.
APPROVED BY ALL PHYSICIANS.
For Sale by Leading Merchants.
Samples, any size, by mail. In Satteen, $1.50; Coutil, $1.75; Nursing Corset, $2.00; Misses' Corset, $1.00.
AGENTS WANTED
WARNER BROS., 351 Broadway, N. Y.

THE GREAT REGULATOR.

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

PURELY VEGETABLE.

An Effectual Specific for Malarious Fevers, Bowel Complaints, Dyspepsia, Mental Depression, Restlessness, Jaundice, Nausea, Colic, Sick Headache, Constipation and Biliousness.

ASK the recovered dyspeptics, Bilious sufferers, victims of Fever and Ague, the mercurial diseased patient, how they recovered health, cheerful spirits and good appetite—they will tell you by taking Simmons' Liver Regulator.

This justly celebrated medicine Regulates the Liver, promotes digestion, and fortifies the system against malarial diseases.

Extract of a letter from Hon. Alexander H. Stephens: "I occasionally use, when my condition requires it, Dr. Simmons' Liver Regulator, with good effect. It is mild, and suits me better than more active remedies."

CONSTIPATION.

TESTIMONY OF THE CHIEF JUSTICE OF GEORGIA.—"I have used Simmons' Liver Regulator for constipation of my bowels, caused by a temporary derangement of the liver, for the last three or four years, and always, when used according to the directions, with decided benefit. I think it is a good medicine for the derangement of the liver—at least such has been my personal experience in the use of it."—HIRAM WARNER, Chief Justice of Georgia.

ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.
MANUFACTURED ONLY BY
J. H. ZEILIN & CO.,
PHILADELPHIA, PA.
Price, $1.00. Sold by all Druggists.

DELICIOUS!
WALTER BAKER & CO.'S
BREAKFAST
COCOA!
(IN TINS.)

This article meets all the requirements of a FOOD for DYSPEPTICS, being so delicate as not to disagree with the most sensitive, while for the HEALTHY it is a delightful beverage. It is the most ECONOMICAL preparation of Cocoa for consumers, as well as the most DELICIOUS.

WALTER BAKER & CO.'S
Vanilla Chocolates are said by CONNOISSEURS to excel all others in richness and EXQUISITE FLAVOR!!

☞ If your Grocer has not these goods, ask him to send for them.

EASTMAN COLLEGE.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., is the best and largest patronized school in the country. Course of study short, practical and profitable. Students in attendance from every State. Terms low. Refer to graduates in every city who have been assisted to business. Illustrated sixteen-page paper, giving particulars, sent free. Address
H. G. EASTMAN, LL.D., PRESIDENT.

THE CHEAPEST & BEST
ADVERTISING
TO REACH READERS OUTSIDE OF THE LARGE CITIES.

We represent over 1,000 Newspapers, having a weekly circulation of over 600,000 Copies, divided into six different lists, covering different sections of the country.

Advertisements received for one or more lists. For catalogue, containing names of papers and other information, and for estimates, address
BEALS & FOSTER,
41 Park Row (Times Building), New York.

BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES
FOR COUGHS AND COLDS
A Cough, Cold, or Sore Throat,
Requires immediate attention, as neglect oftentimes results in some incurable Lung disease. BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES are a simple remedy, and will almost invariably give immediate relief.
SOLD BY ALL CHEMISTS and dealers in medicines.

WEBER'S
METROPOLITAN CORSET!
THE ONLY CORSET COMBINING
Grace, Comfort and Beauty!

Is constructed on purely scientific principles. The back is whole boned and left open at the hips to be laced at pleasure of wearer, and is so gored in back that the fabrics and bones adapt themselves with marvelous accuracy to every curve and undulation of the finest type of figure. For sale by all leading merchants. Lady Agents wanted. Samples by mail on receipt of $1.50.
WESTERN DEPOT, KEITH BROS., Chicago, Ill.

A GOOD OFFER
$19.15 for $11.45

The Manager of THE INTER-OCEAN, of Chicago, makes the following offer to new subscribers:

On the Receipt of Only $11.45

We will send you THE WEEKLY INTER-OCEAN for one year, postage paid, price $1.65, "INDOOR AND OUT," an illustrated monthly publication, price $1.50, and an

ELGIN NATIONAL WATCH
Price, $16.00.

These Watches which we offer are made by the ELGIN NATIONAL WATCH COMPANY, of Chicago, and each is GUARANTEED by the Company's own MEDAL CERTIFICATE, which will accompany the same. The very superior value and workmanship of these Watches are too well known, and their reputation too firmly established to need any praise from us.

They are manufactured expressly for us, engraved "Inter-Ocean," put up in warranted silver hunting cases, and are good reliable timekeepers, no pains being spared by the Company to make them trustworthy and reliable.

THE INTER-OCEAN is a large, eight-paged, quarto newspaper, and one of the BEST AND MOST POPULAR published in the country. It has the largest circulation of any paper published west of New York.

Remit in money order or registered letter.
Address THE INTER-OCEAN,
119 Lake St., Chicago, Ill.

GUNS REVOLVERS. Price-List free. Address Great Western Gun Works, Pittsburg, Pa.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER.
Absolutely Pure.

All Grocers authorized to guarantee it full weight, and absolutely pure. To try it, send 60 cents for 1 pound can to be sent by mail free of postage.
ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., N. Y.

PRINTERS AND STATIONERS!

Send 50 cents and get a large sample package of our NOVELTIES in Ball Programmes, Visiting Cards, Wedding Stationery, Billet de Correspondence Envelopes and Note with monogram (something new), fine Cardboard, etc. Address THE NEWSPAPER UNION, 151 Fifth Ave., Chicago.

A Perfect Hair Dressing.
A Promoter of the Growth of the Hair.
A Preparation Free from irritating matter.

BURNETT'S
COCOAINE.

For preserving and beautifying the Hair, and rendering it dark and glossy.

The Cocoaine holds in a liquid form, a large proportion of deodorized

Cocoa-nut Oil,

prepared expressly for this purpose.

No other compound possesses the peculiar properties which so exactly suit the various conditions of the human hair.

It softens the hair when hard and dry.
It soothes the irritated scalp skin.
It affords the richest lustre.
It remains longest in effect.

It is the Best and Cheapest
HAIR DRESSING
IN THE WORLD.

DIRECTIONS.

Apply with the hand, or a soft brush, every other day, or as often as the case may require, rubbing it thoroughly into the roots of the hair.

To remove Dandruff, Scurf, &c., wash the head with BURNETT'S KALLISTON, rub dry with a towel, and apply the Cocoaine as directed.

PREPARED ONLY BY JOSEPH BURNETT & CO.
BOSTON.

Entered, according to Act of Congress, in the year 1861, by JOSEPH BURNETT & Co., in the Clerk's Office of the District Court of the District of Massachusetts.

PENSIONS—Soldiers suffering from wounds, injuries, or disease, can procure pension, and those who are pensioned can have their pensions increased, where their present rating is too low, as is the case in thousands of instances. Widows and children of soldiers who died in or out of the army, of disease contracted in service, are entitled to pension. Full bounty is due all soldiers discharged for wounds, rupture, or injury other than disease. Soldiers who were prisoners of war can secure pay for rations for the time so held. For full information, address, with stamp, McNEILL & BIRCH, Washington, D. C.

No fee till claim allowed.

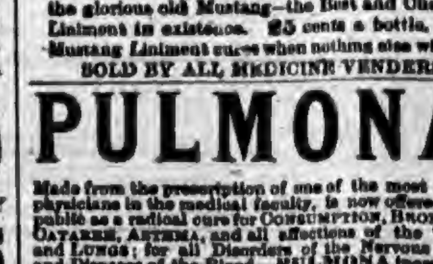
HUNT'S REMEDY
THE GREAT
KIDNEY MEDICINE

A positive remedy for Dropsy and all diseases of the Kidneys, Bladder and Urinary Organs. Hunt's Remedy is purely vegetable and prepared expressly for the above diseases. It has cured thousands. Every bottle warranted. Send to W. E. Clarke, Providence, R.I., for illustrated pamphlet. If your druggist don't have it, he will order it for you.

READ! A RARE OPPORTUNITY! Don't Miss this Chance! Upon receipt of only 25 Cents (currency or silver), we will send One Pair Elegant French Oil Chromos (companion pictures and very beautiful), and also The Cricket on the Hearth, the People's Favorite Literary and Family Journal, for FOUR MONTHS on trial. It is a mammoth 16-page, 64-column illustrated paper (size of Harper's Weekly), filled with splendid Continued and Short Stories, Sketches, Poems, Useful Knowledge, Wit and Humor, etc., etc. The largest, handsomest, best and cheapest paper of its class in the world. This Great Offer is made to introduce it into New Homes. Write Now. Address F. M. LUPTON & CO., Publishers, 246 Broadway, New York. READ!

DUNHAM PIANOS.
Dunham & Sons, Manufacturers,
Warerooms, 18 East 14th St.,
(Established 1834.) NEW YORK.
☞ Prices Reasonable. Terms Easy.

GRAFF'S TRADE MARK PATENTED
IMPROVED POTASH OR LYE
SOAP MADE IN ONE HOUR
WILL MAKE NINE POUNDS OF PURE SOAP IN ONLY ONE HOUR
PROF. BEDFORD'S LETTER SHOWING SUPERIORITY OF THIS ARTICLE OVER ALL OTHERS FOR SOAP MAKING SENT FREE BY MAIL ON APPLICATION TO H.M. ANTHONY 104 READE ST. NEW YORK.



BABBITT'S TOILET SOAP.

Unrivalled for the Toilet and the Bath. No artificial and deceptive odors to cover common and deleterious ingredients. After years of scientific experiment the manufacturer of B. T. Babbitt's Best Soap has perfected and now offers to the public The FINEST TOILET SOAP in the World. Only the purest vegetable oils used in its manufacture. For Use in the Nursery it has No Equal. Worth ten times its cost to every mother and family in Christendom. Sample box, containing 3 cakes of 6 ozs. each, sent free to any address on receipt of 75 cents. Address
B. T. BABBITT, New York City.
☞ For Sale by all Druggists.

THE GOOD OLD STAND-BY.
MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT.
FOR MAN AND BEAST.

ESTABLISHED 35 YEARS. Always cures. Always ready. Always handy. Has never yet failed. Thirty millions have tested it. The whole world approves the glorious old Mustang—the Best and Cheapest Liniment in existence. 25 cents a bottle. The Mustang Liniment cures when nothing else will.
SOLD BY ALL MEDICINE VENDERS.

PULMONA,

Made from the prescription of one of the most eminent physicians in the medical faculty, is now offered to the public as a radical cure for CONSUMPTION, BRONCHITIS, CATARRH, ASTHMA, and all affections of the THROAT and LUNGS; for all Disorders of the Nervous System, and Diseases of the Blood. PULMONA increases the strength and deepens the color of the pale blood. It checks Night Sweats within a fortnight. It subdues the CHILLS and FEVER. It diminishes Expectoration. It causes calm and refreshing sleep. It invigorates the appetite, and the invalid gains flesh rapidly. It is beyond comparison the best remedy known for CONSUMPTION and all affections of the THROAT, LUNGS and NERVOUS SYSTEM.

Extracts from Letters from Pastors of Churches.

PULMONA saved my daughter's life. * * *
REV. E. JONES, Remsen, N. Y.

We bless God for the benefits we have received from the use of PULMONA.
REV. P. WARREN, Canton, Pa.

Every one who I have recommended it to has benefited much by its use.
REV. C. D. HUMPHREYS, Racine, Wis.

A circular containing advice for the treatment of the diseases above mentioned, certificates of many astonishing cures, and full particulars of cases successfully treated will be sent free to applicants.

PULMONA may be obtained through Druggists, or orders may be sent to the Proprietor direct. Price, $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5. OSCAR G. MOSES, 18 Cortlandt Street, New York.

$50 to $12 a week with our popular Books, Bibles, Chromos & Maps. Goodspeed's Pub'g House, Chicago.

$12 A DAY at home. Agents wanted. Outfit and terms free. TRUE & CO., Augusta, Maine.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $5 free. Stinson & Co., Portland, Maine.

$66 a week in your own town. Terms and $5 outfit free. H. HALLETT & CO., Portland, Maine.

Books Old & New wanted and sold. Immense Catalogue. American Book Exchange, 55 Beekman St., N. Y.

WONDER box, contains 57 useful articles; six 3c stamps. Miss Eva Grant, Middleboro, Mass.

3 new vocal and 2 new instrumental pieces Sheet Music, 10c. Globe Music Co., Middleboro, Mass.

$3300 A YEAR. How to Make it. [illegible] COE & YONGE, St. Louis, Mo.

$200 a month. Agents wanted to represent Child & Pratt, Cincinnati, O.

A [illegible] Kendall & Co.'s Thermometers. They are the best, cheapest and most reliable.

$400 A MONTH. AGENTS WANTED, 250 of the latest novelties. Send for Catalog. VAN & Co. Chicago.

$2500 a year. Agents wanted everywhere. Business strictly legitimate. Particulars free. Address J. WORTH & Co. St. Louis, Mo.

$350 A MONTH—AGENTS WANTED 36 best selling articles in the world; one sample free. Address JAY BRONSON, Detroit, Mich.

$3 GOLD PLATED WATCHES. Cheapest in the known world. SAMPLE WATCH FREE to Agents. Address, A. COULTER & CO., Chicago, Ill.

BEATTY Piano, Organ best. ☞ Look! startling news. Organs 12 stops $55. Pianos only $130, cost $650. Cir. Free. Daniel F. Beatty, Washington, N.J.

CLOCKS E. INGRAHAM & CO.'S are superior in design and not equaled in quality, or as timekeepers. Ask your Jeweler for them. Manufactory—Bristol, Ct.

YOUNG MEN! Learn Telegraphy and earn from $45 to $100 a month. Small salary while learning. Situations furnished. Address, with stamp, R. VALENTINE, Manager, Janesville, Wis.

WATERPROOF COVERS, Awnings, Tents, Signs, Window Shades, &c. MURRAY & BAKER, 100 E. Desplaines St., Chicago. ☞ Send for Illustrated Price-List.

$10 to $25 A DAY SURE made by Agents selling our Chromos, Crayons, Picture and Chromo Cards. 125 samples, worth $5, sent, postpaid, for 85 Cents. Illustrated Catalogue free. J. H. BUFFORD'S SONS, Boston. [Established 1830.]

NASBY AS A BANKER, AND On the President's Policy, Two of the richest, raciest pamphlets ever issued. Full of the rare Humor and profound Philosophy of the Sage of Confedrit X Roads. 10 cents each; three for 25 cents. Address BLADE, Toledo, Ohio.

STORIES. Five complete novels, by eminent writers, and four delightful stories, all for 25 cents. In book form, would cost $3.00. Address THE BLADE, Toledo, Ohio.

FREE Choice Standard BOOKS in all departments of literature—Poetry, Fiction, History, Biography, the Classics, etc.; the best and cheapest books in the world. Catalogue free. Address THE BLADE, Toledo, Ohio.

BEFORE YOU subscribe for any other paper send for a specimen copy of THE TOLEDO BLADE. It is a Mammoth Eight-Page Weekly Paper of Sixty-four Columns, filled with carefully-prepared reading matter of interest and value to people in all parts of the United States. Specimens free.

MAGIC LANTERNS VIEWS [illegible] MILLIGAN

☞ BOOK AGENTS TAKE NOTICE! ☜
BETSEY BOBBET COME AGAIN!
New Book Ready for Agents, by
JOSIAH ALLEN'S WIFE:
"SAMANTHA AT THE CENTENNIAL."
Send for Circulars to AMERICAN PUBLISHING CO. Hartford, Ct.; Cinn., O.; Chicago, Ill.; Newark, N. J.

AGENTS WANTED FOR
Creative Science;
Or, MANHOOD, WOMANHOOD, AND THEIR MUTUAL INTER-RELATIONS; LOVE, ITS LAWS, POWER, ETC.
Agents are selling from 15 to 25 copies a day. Send for specimen pages and our extra terms to Agents, and see why it sells faster than any other book. Address NATIONAL PUBLISHING CO., Chicago, Ill.

HULL & SCOTNEY, General Commission Merchants, 346 N. Water St., Philadelphia, and wholesale dealers in Butter, Cheese, Eggs, Poultry, Game, Potatoes, Apples, Grain, Flour, Fur, Wool, Cotton, Peanuts, Broom Corn, Foreign and Domestic Fruits, and, in fact, we can sell any and everything at the highest market price, make prompt returns, and LIBERAL CASH ADVANCES made on all shipments except perishable articles. To show that we do an extensive business, any game dealer in Philadelphia will tell you we handled more game last season than all other Houses in Philadelphia put together. Send for Price-List, Stencil, &c., &c. REFERENCE CASH, or we refer you to any responsible House in our city.

10,000 A YEAR.
It is estimated that this number die yearly in the United States of
CONSUMPTION.
ALLEN'S LUNG BALSAM will at once allay the pain and irritated parts, stop the cough, and prevent what would be consumption. All persons with weak Lungs, or afflicted with Cough, should at once test the merits of this good Cough and Lung Balsam.
Sold by all Medicine Dealers.

KEEP'S SHIRTS.
KEEP'S Patent Partly-made Dress Shirts, best quality, only plain seams to finish, 6 for $7.
KEEP'S Custom Shirts to measure, best quality, 6 for $9, delivered free. Guaranteed perfectly satisfactory.
RED FLANNEL UNDERWEAR.
Undershirts and Drawers, best quality, $1.50 each.
White Flannel Undervests, best quality, $1.50 each.
Canton Flannel Vests & Drawers, ex. heavy, 75c. each.
Twilled Silk Umbrellas, paragon frames, $3 each.
Best Ginghams, patent protected ribs, $1 each.
Circulars and Samples mailed free on application. Shirts only delivered free. KEEP MANUFACTURING COMPANY, 165 and 167 Mercer Street, New York.

MARY J. HOLMES.
The new novel, MILDRED, by Mrs. Mary J. Holmes, author of those splendid books—Edith Lyle—West Lawn—Tempest and Sunshine—Lena Rivers—etc., is now ready, and for sale by all booksellers. Price, $1.50. It is one of the finest novels ever written, and everybody should read it.
G. W. Carleton & Co., Pub'rs., New York.

AGENTS WANTED!
FOR PARTICULARS, ADDRESS
WILSON SEWING MACHINE CO.
829 Broadway, New York City;
Chicago, Ill.; New Orleans, La.;
or San Francisco, Cal.

JACKSON'S BEST
SWEET NAVY CHEWING TOBACCO
was awarded the highest prize at Centennial Exposition for its fine chewing qualities, the excellence and lasting character of its sweetening and flavoring. If you want the best tobacco ever made, ask your grocer for this, and see that each plug bears our blue-strip trade-mark, with words Jackson's Best on it. Sold wholesale by all jobbers. Send for sample to C. A. JACKSON & CO., Manufacturers, Petersburg, Va.

SANDAL-WOOD.
A positive remedy for all diseases of the Kidneys, Bladder and Urinary Organs; also, good in Dropsical Complaints. It never produces sickness, is certain and speedy in its action. It is fast superseding all other remedies. Sixty capsules cure in six or eight days. No other medicine can do this.
Beware of Imitations, for, owing to its great success, many have been offered; some are most dangerous, causing piles, &c.
DUNDAS DICK & CO.'S Genuine Soft Capsules, containing Oil of Sandal-Wood, sold at all Drug Stores. Ask for circular, or send for one to 35 and 37 Wooster street, New York.

WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS, please say you saw the advertisement in this paper.

Auburn Courier.

AUBURN, INDIANA, DEC. 20th. 1877.

Several of our Republican exchanges are throwing mud at Hayes. They threw a good deal for him last fall, and we conclude that it is a mere matter of mud throwing after all.

Just for the sake of the Albion New Era, we hope that Governor Williams will re-call Senator Voorhees and appoint some one else. We can't afford to ignore the displeasure of the New Era in this State, and it's too bad that it should waste its sweetness on the desert air.

Candidates for the different State offices are coming to the front. We learn that Hon Edgar Henderson of Anderson will be a candidate before the Democratic State convention for State Treasurer Mr. H. has filled several important positions, one as a member of the Legislature with great credit to himself and constituents. We believe his name would contribute strength and prestige to the State ticket, and his genial and cultivated manners, and live, energetic action would accomplish good results in the campaign.

If the Government stamps 412½ grains of silver with the words "One Dollar," and forces them upon the people when they are at 7 per cent. discount with gold and over 4 per cent. below greenbacks, it stamps a lie upon the coin, and legalizes a cheat and fraud upon those whom it forces to accept it.—[Exchange.

When the government defined a dollar to be 412½ grains of silver and agreed to pay holders of government bonds a matter of two thousand millions of dollars it legalizes a cheat and a fraud to require the people to redeem the bonds in dollars worth more than 412½ grains of silver.

The act of 1869 was a just and honorable measure. It said the bonds should be paid in the currency of the country. It was the same currency in which the farmer was being paid for his produce, the laborer for the sweat of his brow. But backed by the money power of the east, the Republican party repudiated the currency of the country, and by an act, required the bonds to be paid in coin. Still this was not enough for the money sharks, and another concession was made in their favor. Silver, one of the standards of value, was demonetized, that is its value as money, swept away, and the Shylocks rejoiced when their bonds were paid in glittering gold only. And now the wealthy sit in their palaces surrounded by every comfort, look out through plate glass windows upon the gloom and distress, which sits like a pall upon the country, and absorb the life-blood of the people in their thirst for gold. How long will the masses throw their cap and cheer to the echo in favor of such legislation? They have it in their power to strike down this infernal monopoly, and they alone can do it. Let us have greenbacks for all, one currency for all. You wonder why we have hard times, why the poor is still growing poorer, why the man who buys notes prospers, while the note maker is pressed to the wall. These capitalists are consuming your substance and spreading desolation throughout the land. Legislation for years past has been all in their behalf, and you sit supinely by and wink at your own destruction. Let us have something done for the poor man.

Weamer ignorantly misconstrues or else purposely lies, we don't know which, nor don't care, when he says the COURIER admits that the rebel soldiers who have taken the place of Union soldiers in the House are Democrats. We did not say rebel soldiers had taken the place of Union soldiers. We said and still say that there are as many Union soldiers in the employ of the House, as there ever was under Republican rule. Why should one Union soldier hold a position for years to the exclusion of all others. The soldiers discharged by the Democratic officers have been in for years, and they are now succeeded by others, one of whom we know went through the country with a hand organ, while such loyal shriekers as Weamer ignored their claims.

Weamer says if he is rightly informed the place we expected to fill at Washington is now filled by a rebel soldier. We don't know our successor, but we do know, and Mr. Baker will bear us out, that we repeatedly told him while there, we prefered to stay at home this winter, and did not want our former position. Now, perhaps Weamer and Parker know more about this matter than we do, "if they are rightly informed." We could say some naughty things about our neighbor if we are "rightly informed," but we prefer to act the man, rather than scrape up mean things for political effect. If the man for whom Weamer shrieked and howled last campaign, will put a rebel general in his Cabinet, why should he squeal when a rebel soldier, perhaps forced into the ranks, gets a place in a Democratic House? Answer.

An old Baltimore negro who had emigrated to Liberia years ago, ordered a quantity of Dr. Bulls Cough syrup a short time ago, stating that although coughs and colds were not frequent in Africa, he would not like to be without it in his family. For sale by F. E. Davenport.

Commissioners' Proceedings.

The Board of Commissioners met in session on December and transacted the following business:

PETITIONS.

By John A. Campbell and others, for a ditch in Franklin, Troy and Stafford townships. Viewers appointed, J. J. Van Auken, G. W. Swartz and W. L. Blair.

By Jacob Crise and others, for a drain in Stafford township. Viewers appointed, J. J. Van Auken, S. W. Swartz and W. L. Blair.

By C. K. Baxter and others, for a drain in Waterloo. Viewers appointed, J. J. Van Auken, R. N. Crooks and S. S. Reed.

By Cyrus Sponhower and others, for a drain in Jackson township. Viewers appointed, J. J. Van Auken, Joseph Shryock and Wm. Whetsel.

By Levi Pifer, for a highway in Wilmington township, commencing at N. W. corner of section 29, running south on section line to Newville road. Viewers appointed, Peter High, James Henderson and John S. Boots.

By G. W. Van Horn, for a highway in Wilmington township. Dismissed because of unsufficient notice.

By A Lockwood and others, for two bridges across Bush Creek, on the road north and south near the west line of section 21, in Union township. Granted, and Com. Blair to superintend the work.

By Lyman Chidsey, for a sluice way in Union township. Granted, and Com. Goetschius to superintend work.

The petitions of S J. Tarney, Jackson township, R. M. Lockhart, Franklin township, A. Johnson and others, Richland township, John Cool, Jackson township, G. D. McGowan and others, Union and Wilmington townships, Wm. Boyd and others, Wilmington township and D. P. Hale and others Concord township, were continued

REPORTS.

Viewers report favorably on petition of Countryman and others, for a road in Newville township. Remonstrances filed by Lewis Cole and others. Reviewers appointed, Isaac Cool, Frank Beard and Jas. McClellan to assess damages on Feb. 7th, 1878.

Viewers report in favor of petition of Henry Zerkle and others, for ditch in Waterloo. Motion to dismiss overruled. Remonstrance filed and reviewers appointed, Jas. Goetschius, C. Sheets and W. Teeters.

Viewers report unfavorably on petition of Fred Gfellar and others, for road in Smithfield township, and report approved.

Viewers report in favor of petition of John Carr and others, for a highway in Jackson township. Approved.

Viewers report favorably on petition of Jacob Balty and others, for drain in Concord township. Ordered established.

Viewers report in favor of petition of Fred Krebl, for drain in Fairfield township. Ordered established.

Viewers report favorably on petition of Geo. Dennison and others. Ordered established.

Viewers report unfavorably on petition of Jacob Kahn and others, in sec. 17 Union township. Dismissed.

Viewers report in favor of petition of Owen Hensinger and others, for drain in Union township, east of Auburn. Motions to dismiss were overruled. Remonstrances filed. Reviewers appointed, Jacob Meyers, Philip Parnell and Amos Britton.

The school trustees of Garrett and Waterloo submitted reports which were placed on file.

Viewers report favorably on the petition of S. Hoverstock, for drain in Franklin township. Remonstrances filed. Ordered that the reviewers assess benefits and damages.

Liquor licenses were granted to Ed. Eldridge, Auburn, J. W. Wagoner and J. R. Prouty, Garrett. C. Baker, Junction, and R. Till, Waterloo.

CORUNNA ITEMS.

—Lipsett & Co. are doing a good business in the way of packing and shipping poultry, butter and eggs, &c.

—There is talk about town that there will be a dance here in the hall on Christmas night. We do not know how much truth there is in the report.

—The United Brethren of this place, commenced a series of meetings at their church on Monday evening. Mr. Dennis, of Waterloo, is conducting the meetings.

—Notwithstanding the bad roads, Corunna presents a lively appearance, and the amount of hogs, wheat and other articles of produce daily shipped form this point will compare favorably with any other town of twice its size on the Air Line.

—I would say for the benefit of the organ agents perambulating the country that M. F. Long, of your place, has the inside track here, and unless they can produce as good an organ for less money, they need not muddy the wheels of their respective rigs in coming.

—The oyster supper under the management of the R. R. C., mentioned some time ago in the COURIER, was to have been given next Friday evening, but owing to the inclemency of the weather muddy roads, &c., it was finally agreed that it would be more labor than benefit, and has been indefinately postponed.

Go and see those nice pictures at Willis & Co's. You can get them handsomely framed in walnut at very low figures.

Butler Items.

—Butler House is vacant.

—Gum boots are the rage.

—Worse'n worse. Roads on Monday.

—Rev. Dr. Barnett departed for home Monday.

—Mrs Egnew was in Ohio recently attending the funeral of a nephew.

—Tramps had better look out, some of the boys who are out nights have big guns.

—It took four horses to think of going any where last week unless you went on foot.

—Tramping on the railroad is approved of by some of our leaders in Society at the present time. Bad roads, you know.

—Mr. Crane, our grocer, returned last week from burying his father-in-law. Mrs. Crane has been quite ill since her return.

—Rev. Butler began a series of meetings at Bigrun Chapel, two miles east of town, last Sabbath evening. We understand that there is a good attendance.

—Mr. Fisher, our furniture man, manufactures, and has on hand as fine a display of extension tables as one will see in any market, both in Ash and Walnut.

—It is a mistake, and ladies, you should always keep to the right when meeting persons on the walk. The rule applys to all, and thereby prevents confusion.

—The condition of Mr. Edgerly was much improved up to Monday. Dr. Fanning has now strong hopes of his recovery, though at his age it is precarious.

—The Disciples had a pleasant affair on Wednesday evening at their church in the way of a mush and milk festival. We "took it in" some, that is the provender.

Mrs Egnew returned last Friday from a two weeks stay in Cleveland Ohio, where she was caring for a daughter-in-law, who is afflicted with acute rheumatism.

—Kehrer & Stone our enterprising druggist's have a new safe of the best kind. It adds largely to the business appearance of their place. It is a McNeal & Urban.

—During the warm weather of last week we noticed a disposition to relapse into summer habits. A young couple "was courtin on the front steps" at a late hour.

—Rev. Nelson Barnet, a brother to the Doctor whose charge is at Troy, N. Y. has been visiting friends in this vicinity. They had several days in the field gunning. Rare sport.

—We pride our-selves on the business like order prevading our post office. Tom, why don't you choose a lady to manage, you then would combine business efficiency and cleanly taste.

—We are certain that our copy said plainly Johns in the item of Harness in Angola. Stocked by Mr. Johns of this place. Now it would not seem probable, but is a fact, that compositors attain to the average age of other mortals.

—Wednesday evening of last week our efficient Marshal, with a corps of assistants, searched the town for a couple of cracksmen, who made an attempt to enter the residence of Mrs. Oches. Mrs. Ocnes, who was sick at the time, discovered a finger through the shutters in the effort to remove the fastenings. She alarmed her husband who drove the rascals off They made good their escape.

—The display of Holiday goods at Kehrer & Stones drug store is very fine, and goes in price from a toy costing 5c, to an article of real elegance and utility of five dollars value The stock includes exquisite toilet articles, fit to grace the boudoir of the most refined, and furnishes an opportunity for swains or husbands to gladen the hearts of wife or sweet-hearts. The center table is not forgotten in the collection.

—Mr. Thompson the former proprietor of the burned Waverly House, left town very abruptly on Tuesday evening of last week. His cause in the matter of his going was iregular to say the least. He had rented a hotel at Edgerton, but from the fact that he arrived before daylight with his goods, the owner of the house refused him admittance, believing that all was not "square," so he ploded on to Archibald a place of former residence. His goods were however detained at Edgerton, by Mr. Haskins our livery man, who was a creditor to the amount of $500, the matter was adjusted by Thompson securing Haskins by mortgage on town property in Fayette, Ohio.

German Syrup.

No other medicine in the world was ever given such a test of its curative qualities as Boschee's German Syrup. In three years two million four hundred thousand small bottles of this medicine was distributed free of charge by Druggists in this country to those afflicted with Consumption, Asthama, Croupe, Severe Coughs, Pneumonia and other diseases of the throat and lungs, giving the American people undeniable proof that German Syrup will cure them The result has been that Druggists in every town an village in the United States are recommending it to their cutomers. Go to your Druggist F. E. Dvenport, and ask what he knows about it. Sample bottles 10 cents. Regular size 75 cents. Three doses will relieve any case.

For sale by F. E. Davenport.

NOTICE.

NOTICE is hereby given that at the regular meeting of Auburn Lodge No. 116 I. O. O. F. on Wednesday evening, January 2nd, 1878, there will be elected three Trustees, to serve one year, or until their successors in office are elected and qualified. By order of the Lodge.

S. T. GALLOWAY, P. Secretary.

LaOtto Items.

—Bob Stewart or Avilla, visited with C. H. Bruce, last Sunday.

—An agitation of the pedal extremities will take place at Bruce's Hall, Tuesday evening, Dec. 25th. The "fellers" are all invited to come and bring their "gals."

—"Duke" Martin, formerally a resident of Auburn, but now of Delphas, Ohio, was here over Sunday. "The Noble Duke" is on his way to Auburn to attend Court.

—The roads are that bad that farmers are compeled to "coon it" along on fences if they wish to go to town. Let us hear from some other township.

—Mrs. Kinzie met with quite a serious accident one day last week, while walking up the railroad from her dwelling. In stepping from the track out of the way of an approaching train, her foot slipped, pitching her against the rapidly moving train which threw her some distance, severely injuring her head and one shoulder. We are happy to state that she has almost recovered from her injuries

—There is some talk of a saloon being opened up here. We don't want a saloon, we never asked for a saloon, don't come, we've got enough hell here without that. OURIVIER.

In Memoriam.

The Odd Fellows lodge at Spencerville, sends the following resolutions, for publication.

WHEREAS, It has seemed good to the Almighty Disposer of events to remove from our midst, the little son of our worthy and esteemed brother, John M. Henderson, and

WHEREAS, The intimate relations long held by the father of the deceased with the members of this society, renders it proper that we should place upon record demonstrations of our heart felt sympathy for the bereft; therefore

RESOLVED, That we, with the friends, deplore the loss of little William Riley, with deep feelings of regret, softened only by the confidence that his spirit is with those who are enjoying perfect happiness in a better world.

RESOLVED, That we tender to the afflicted parents, our sincere condolence, and our earnest sympathy at the loss of the little son, in whom their future hopes rested.

RESOLVED, That the members of this society, in all brotherly love, try to mitigate the grief inflicted by this act of Divine Providence.

RESOLVED, That a copy of these resolutions be transmitted to the parents of the deceased, and to each of the papers of the county for publication.

D. M. ALLEN, Sec'y. M. T BISHOP, N. G.

FOR THE CURE OF RHEUMATISM
AND NEURALGIA.

This marvelous preparation has cured hundreds of the most distressing cases of Chronic Rheumatism and Neuralgia, even when all other remedies have failed. It is fast becoming the

Acknowledged Antidote

for these diseases and can be relied upon by sufferers to relieve them of their pains and effect a permanent cure.

Do Not Give Up

your case as hopeless and settle down to the conviction that no medicine will help you; all we ask is a fair trial of the CURATIVE, and that you bear in mind that the nature of these diseases require persistent and faithful application to insure a perfect cure. In every community where the CURATIVE has been placed will be found many witnesses who will testify to what it has done for them.

Diphtheria, Sore Throat, Burns, Scalds, Bruises, Sprains, Wounds, Cuts, Chilblains, Inflammation, Headache, Toothache, Catarrh, Dyspepsia, Sour Stomach, can positively be cured by the free use of the CURATIVE. Send to us for testimonials if you have any doubts.

Sold by all Druggists.

Price $1.00 per Bottle, 6 for $5.00.

PREPARED BY

Lawson Chemical Co., Cleveland, O.

DANIEL Z. HOFFMAN.

NOTARY PUBLIC, writer of deeds, mortgages, &c., making abstracts and looking up titles, attending to collecting. Also agent for Niagara Fire Insurance Company. Office with County Recorder, Auburn, Ind.

NOTICE.

NOTICE is hereby given that at the stated communication of Cedar Encampment No. 65, I. O. O. F. on Friday evening January 11th, 1878, there will be elected three Trustees to serve one year, or until their successors in office are elected and qualified. By order of the Lodge.

S. T. GALLOWAY, Scribe.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Jacob Sibert is plaintiff and John McClellan is defendant requiring me to make the sum of one hundred and sixty-three dollars and seventy-five cents, ($163.75) with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, JANUARY 12th, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House in DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

Part of out lot number six, (6), in Kuhlman's second addition to the town of Auburn, DeKalb county, Ind., commencing at a point on the south line of said out lot, one hundred and forty (140) feet west of the south east corner of said lot, and running thence west seventy (70) feet on said south line, thence north ninety (90) feet to the north line of said lot, thence east seventy (70) feet on the north line of said lot, thence south ninety (90) feet to the place of beginning.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
By THOS. D. GROSS, Deputy.
Rose & Hartman, Attorneys for plaintiff.
Auburn, Dec. 19th, 1877. Pf. $8.75.

ROOT & COMPANY
46 and 48 Calhoun Street.
FORT WAYNE, IND.

BLACK SILKS Superb stock, most of them bought at auction sales and will be sold cheap. Prices, 65c, 75c, 85c, $1.00, 1.15, 1.25, 1.30, 1.50 per yards.

CASHMERE SILKS Black silks, brilliant color warranted to wear, $1.50, 1.65, 1.75, 2.00, 2.25, 2.50, 3.00 per yard.

COLORED SILKS All the popular shades for dresses and trimmings at greatly reduced prices. 75c, 85c, 1.00, 1.15, 1.25, 1.40, 1.50 per yard.

CHENEY'S American gros grain silks, 22 inches wide, in all the new dark shades, warranted to ware and give satisfaction. Price 1.50 per yard.

BLACK CASHMERES Full lines of all our popular numbers. The best value in the city at 60c, 68c, 75c, 85, 90c, 1.00 1.25, per yard.

COLORED CASHMERES In seal brown, navy blue, myrtle green, plum color, drabs, bargains at 60c, 75c, 85.c 1.00 per yard.

BOURETTE CLOTHS Niegnse and matalasse effects. Knickerbockr and snow flake goods for overdresses. Suits, etc., 25c, 35c, 50c, 75c, 1.00, 150 per yard

MOURNING GOODS Large choice stock cashmeres, black merinos, henriettas, Austrailian crepes, bombazines, tamise cloths, baratheas, matalasse, etc., etc.

COURTAULD'S ENGLISH CREPE 3-4 4-4 5-4 6-4 wide, cut on the bias at 75c, 85c, 1.00, 1.25, 1.50, up to 8.00 per ya Also crepe vails, al sizes, best goods 2.50 to 9.00 each.

UNDERWEAR for gentlemen, ladies, and infants wear. All sizes from smallest to the largest. The largest stock and lowest prices in the city.

HARRIS KID GLOVES is the best kid glove sold. In 2, 3, 4, 6 buttons. Prices reduced. Also 2 and 3 button kids at 75c, 1.00, 1.25 and 1.50 per pair.

HOSIERY KID GLOVES for wear, complete stock, newest styles and lowest prices. Balbriggan hosiery for ladies and gentlemen.

CLOAKS, SUITS, SHAWLS, Paris and New York styles. Immense stock to select from. New styles open daily.

CARPETS, this department is the most prosperous in our etablishment; choice styles and low popularprices do the business

HOUSEKEEPING GOODS of all kinds, table linens, and demasks, towels and towelings, quilts, napkins, table covers, piano covers, etc.

Root & Company.

EXCELSIOR HARDWARE.

GRAND CLEARANCE SALE OF
STOVES, TINWARE, AXES, CROSS-CUT SAWS, &C., &C.,

That must be sold at some price. We have every kind of saws on the market and parties wanting anything in the

SAW, AXE, STOVE AND TINWARE LINE,

Will do well to call on us before buying elsewhere. We have the goods and can suit you in kinds, quality and the best of all we

GUARANTEE PRICES

Lower than the lowest. We have added Iron and Steele,

SEAT AND CARRIAGE SPRINGS,

and a general line of Carriage and Wagon Hardware,

WOOD WORK.
Sleigh and Sled Runners, Rims, Hubs and Spokes,

and a general line of Wagon, Carriage and Blacksmiths goods, and will sell just as low

And a Little Lower

Than you can buy the same quality of goods elsewhere. We buy for cash and sell for cash and therefore it is clear that we can compete with any house in the state selling Hardware. Come everybody and cary away goods at almost your own prices. This is no humbug, but mean just what we say. Come and see for yourselves Remember the place,

EXCELSIOR HARDWATE STORE
North Side Public Square, AUBURN, IND.
W. H. KIBLINGER & CO.

BOOK STORE

WILLIS & CO.!

Successors to C. P. Houser, having purchased the above named stock, we wish to say to the people of Auburn and vicinity that by the patronage that we hope to merit, we expect to build up a first-class

BOOK AND NEWS STORE,

that will be a credit to the place. We are adding a large variety of goods, and shall endeavor to keep on hand the novelties of the season. We solicit orders for

Books, Magazines, Papers, etc.,

which will be furnished promptly at the publishers prices by

WILLIS & CO.

October 11, '77—no11.

JUST RECEIV'D
—AT—
J. ABRIGHT'S

Fine Gold and Plated Jewelry.
Ladies Gold Watches,
American Watches,

Rogers & Bro. Silverware,

A splendid line of imported Vases
Watch Chains, magnificent
Holiday Gifts, Lockets,
Ladies Sets, Gents

GOLD & SILVER SET

Sleeve and Collar Buttons, Jet
Shell and Horn Jewelry,
All at astonishingly

LOW PRICES.

Watches and Jewelry repaired on [illegible] and in good style.

Auburn Courier.

Local and Miscellaneous.

H H O O

Thomas Ogden having arrived from England, went several mornings to our postoffice to ask for letters addressed to Thomas Hogden. Our postmaster replied there was none for him. Mr. Ogden becoming impatient, said: "You are looking among the "Haitches," sir. You should look among the "Hoes." We warrant all the solid silver and silver plated ware to be of the double and tripple plate, and all stamped with the name of the Meriden Brittannia Co., the best and largest plating company in the world. Tea sets $25 to $100 water sets $18 to $60; castors $4 to $50. Card and cake stands, pickel castors, knives, spoons, ladles, sugar shell, fruit knives, the best stock of plated, at Ward's Cheap Crockery Store, No. 9 Columbia street, Fort Wayne, Ind

There can be no doubt that the Cincinnati Commercial correctly represents the sentiments of nearly the entire Northwest upon the financial question, when it says: "We do not want a Wall street silver dollar coined, but a people's silver dollar—a Mississippi Valley dollar—a dollar with an eagle it, whose right wing shall fan Washington City while the left wafts the dust along the streets of San Francisco, and his tail spreading over Hudson's Bay, while his beak is dredging the mud islands from the stream between the jetties at South Pass.

The musical concert last Friday evening, was a delightful affair. The songs of Prof. Straub and the class were well received. The selections so grandly rendered on the piano by Prof. Morse, of Fort Wayne, was the great feature of the programme. Though the music was of a high classical character, somewhat in advance of the musical cultivation of the audience, yet the admirable execution, the delicate touch and the faultless time of the performer, was noticable to all, and he was unhesitatingly accorded a high rank as a musical artist.

The report in the Chicago papers that M. C. Hudson is to take charge of the road from Newark to Sandusky and Chicago is not true in every particular. We understand Mr, Hudson will have the general management of the Chicago Division, and W. C. Quincy the Lake Erie and Central Ohio Divisions as formerly. Mr. C. Hudson is well spoken of as a good railroad man; but the employes, generally, will much regret to lose Mr. Quincy from this Division. It is said his duties will extend further Eastward. Railroad officials generally, consider Mr. Quincy one of the most competent railroad men in the country. He has our best wishes.—Garrett Herald.

In speaking of the death of the late Mrs. Duncan, the Waterloo Press says: "Mary Baxter was born in Washington county, Pennsylvania, May 12 1804. They removed to Ohio, where they resided a number of years, settling in this country in 1852. She lived with her husband 45 years, until his removel by death in 1870. Mrs Duncan was the Mother of sixteen children, twelve of whom she raised to manhood and womanhood, and nine of them surviving her. All the surviving children were privilaged to attend the funeral services which were held at Barkers Chapel, Tuesday; and the remains were buried beside her husband, and among her departed kindred, in the Hamilton Cemetery.

Gravel Roads.

Now that a sea of mud surrounds us, is it not about time to seek some measure which will obviate this condition of things. Are we to stand idly by and see these things repeated year after year, without an effort to bettter our condition? Here such a thing as a gravel road is unknown almost unheard of, and yet there are counties within a few miles, which are reaping a rich reward from their industry in this direction. Wabash, Huntington and other counties have the means of communication between the country and town, which afford them a fine trade, which, our people are cut off from a large patronage, and the farming element are lying dormant from unfavorable roads. There is but one way to remedy this, and that is, the construction of proper roads. The Legislature came to the relief of the people in this particular, by the enactment last term, of an excellent law for the building of these roads, and it only remains for us to take advantage of it. As it is a little dumping is done here and there, and with this exception which does more harm than good, our public highways are abandoned to their fate. The farmers and the merchant are directly interested in this matter, and through them should come, without farther delay, an active earnest effort for improvements of this kind. There are certainly gravel beds sufficient within the limits of the county to meet this demand, and we trust that early spring will see an organized effort all over the county to push forward a work so universally needed.

Instead of using opiates or narcotics, which paralize the brain for a short time but do not remove the cause of the pain, we should advise such a remedy as Lawson's Curative. It is simple, safe and effective. Pain from rheumatism, neuralgia, inflamations, lame back, headaches, etc., cannot exist when the Curative is properly used properly. For sale by F. E. Davenport.

Rain, Rain!

Court this week.

Sneak thieves are around.

Trade was good Saturday.

Albion has had a small fire.

The roads are good—and muddy.

The livery horses want exercise.

Geo. Baldock is carrying a pet finger.

Bill Burlingame is under the weather.

Pete Brandon buried his baby yesterday.

Mr. Grubb has resumed business again.

Two colts were sold at Sheriff's sale Monday.

Prof. Straub's concert was well patronized.

New and desirable box papers at Davenport's.

Billy Little has sold his boot and shoe shop.

Do not fail to read the fine address on first page.

New goods coming in at the New York Store.

Fred Kimbal, of Wallen, was in the city this week.

W. Gregg has vacated the little room on the corner.

Dr. J. H. Ford purchased Si Lock's gun and dog.

"Shiner" is not dead. He came to light last week.

The Commissioners visited the poor farm Friday last.

Grandpa, Si Lock, of Waterloo, was in town Saturday.

Joe. Stafford's little child was badly scalded last Friday.

Jno. Ray has opened a repair shop over Pommert's.

A tramp printer roosted at the calaboose Tuesday night.

Three horses side-by-side to one wagon is the style now.

Michael Long and A Lockwood had a little Justice business Monday.

The citizens of Angola are aroused over a grave snatching affair.

Reub. Seward is now engaged in the blacksmith shops at Garrett.

D Z. Hoffman amputated part of a little finger in a straw cutter.

Two loads of potatoes on the streets Monday. 25 cents per bushel.

If you want cheap goods, go to the New York Store. They sell at cost.

The weather has been favorable for hanging on the gate a few days back.

The First National Bank will be closed on Christmas and new years days.

Joe Rainier was a happy man Tuesday morning. It was a ten pounder.

The Catholics of Garrett will hold a fair at their church during the holidays.

Hair oils and perfumery, a splendid assortment at low prices, at Davenport's.

The Presbyterian Sabbath School will have a Christmas tree and shining star.

Wheelock & McKay have finished the bridge in the north-east part of the county.

The Herald says that a Building Association has been fully organized at Garrett.

The Sheriff and his deputy have had bad roads to serve supoenas, for this term of Court.

Filo Lockwood has invented a new boxing for shade trees. See the old Kinsey property.

Hook and Ladder dance on Christmas eve. A number of firemen from abroad will be in attendance.

Miss Laura Walters, of Bucyrus, O, arrived here last Saturday on a visit to her sister Mrs Penfield.

Two buildings east of the Court House in Albion, were burned Tuesday of last week. Loss about $2,500.

Books for the Holidays.

Davenport, the druggist, has a splendid stock of books for the holidays.

The Butt and Long Hotels at Waterloo are simply models in neatness, and unsurpassed in their accommodations.

Reub Stevens, who has been in jail for several weeks, is quite ill. Bleeding at the lungs is the cause of his illness.

Two boys stole several chickens of Mrs Leasure, and one of them lit out. The father of the other adjusted matters.

Marshal Galloway is putting a stop to the yells and whoops of our young boys on the streets every evening. That's right.

A thief tried to gain enterance into Chris. Baker's and Sherlock's business rooms, at the Junction, last Friday evening.

If your wife has a female friend that you want to get rid of, make love to her. It never fails to produce the desired effect.

Mr. O. H. Widney, of Concord tp., reports the weight of one of his porkers at seven hundred and ten pounds. Who can beat that?

The patent medicine men take advantage of the sunshine and are perched on our prominent business corners nearly every day.

Sam. Weaver gave a shooting match Saturday and we learn that a match was given the same day near Garrett, the prize being an ox.

Nothing like Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup. It cures the worst cases of colds promptly and effectually. Try it price only 25 cents per bottle. Sold in every drug store.

At Cost.

Abright is bound to sell out every toy he has at cost. Call and see his stock and get presents for the holidays at your own prices.

Silver and plated ware of all kinds at Abright's. He has just received some very fine styles which will be sold cheap.

Are you aware that you can buy good gum boots at the Boot Upside Down for $3.50. A new style with loop strap has just been received.

A nice new book is about as appropriate a gift as can be made for the holidays. Willis & Co. have a fine selection at fair prices.

We would like our subscribers to pay up as promptly as they can by the end of the year. Let us commence the new year as near even as possible.

We notice a very handsome display of toys at Willis & Co's. book store. In selecting presents for the holidays you will do well to call there.

Have you seen those beautiful garnett sets at Abright's. They are just coming into style, and are very elegant, just the thing for holiday presents.

Our friend Mr. Gibson at the City Bakery has now exclusive control of the baking department, and is ready with increased facilities to supply the demand for good bread. tf.

The Butler itemizer for the Auburn Courier dishes up the doings of this place, that come before his observation in good style.—Butler Record.

That fellow, Hawkins, for a time a resident of Butler, has been found guilty of killing his wife, and will get about 20 years in the penitentiary in Canada.

The Methodist people are preparing a christmas circle for the Sunday school scholars. Nothing delights the young so much as a circumstance of this kind.

Chicago Junction is becoming famous killing men by the cars. One was killed there last Friday, and Dr. Spooner informs us that another was crushed there Monday night.

It was a brother of Ira Crow, instead of Ira, as we stated last week, who was killed by the cars at Chicago Junction. And he was not killed at all, but is doing well with one leg less.

A patent medicine man made an effort to "skip out" and leave his board bill, but our landlord at the Central House was too cute for him and he was brought back to skip no more.

The is some complaint about tobacco chewers following their habit of expectorat in church edifices. It is religously naughty to do so and we have been told that no gentleman would do it.

Taken Up.—Taken up as an estray, last June, a bay bull, with a few white spots, and about two year old.

J. D. Bell.

Troy tp., Dec. 11, '77.

Dr. Barnum, veterinary surgeon, of Fort Wayne, is in town. What work he has already done in this county, has given excellent satisfaction. Bring on your horses.

We are in receipt of an invitation to a dress ball at Fort Wayne, to be given on the 27th, by the A. C. L. L. D. P. A., which initials stands for Allen County Licensed Liquor Dealers' Protective Association.

No clue yet to the partias who robbed the Excelsior Hardware store last week, but we learn the section boss on the Saginaw road found a number of paper boxes on that road toward Waterloo, which once contained knives.

We sold the celebrated pacing horse White Stockings, last week, realizing about $400 in the sale. We have been offered large sums for him in the past, and only part with him now on account of the bad roads.

The managers of the De Kalb House at Garrett, have abandoned it, and it is now unoccupied. The furniture cost 2800, and it has been offered to Mr. Cowan for 2000. If he does not purchas the goods will be moved.

The crossing on Fourth street was taken up for some reason last summer and was not put back again It should be put back at once as it is very inconvenient to the citizens of that end of the city.

The "Saturday Night" had a special reporter at the concert last Friday evening. His note-book when opened out, was as long as a fence board, and we are in-Klined to believe that a rich and spicy article about one inch long will appear in their next edition.

Great Reduction.

Flour at Eagle Mills at $1.50 per sack Corn Meal, 30c. per sack. Buckwheat, 85c. per sack. Chop Feed from $1.00 to $1.25 per cwt. All goods delivered in town.

With increasing cold weather comes those dreadful coughs and colds, which are so easily and effectually cured with Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup. It is always warranted to give satisfaction. Price only cents. Sold in every drug store.

Public squares are a great blessing to the community. We can say the same for Dr. Bull's Baby syrup, it is the best remedy for all diseases babyhood has to encounter. Price 25 cents. For sale by F. E. Davenport.

For the Holidays.

Davenport, the druggist, has the best stock of gold pens in town. The best and cheapest albums, fine brushes, excellent handkerchief perfume.

We call attention to the card of D Z. Hoffman, Esq., who will attend to writing deeds and mortgages, making abstracts and collections, &c. His long experience as County Recorder, gives him a great advantage in these matters, and the public will do well to keep this in mind.

It keeps us busy to keep up with the reductions made every week by the Ft. Wayne Fruit House. Stick candy down to 15c per pound; French mixed candies 18c per pound, the lowest these candies have been sold for years, which is done to give customers the benefit of the christmas holiday trade.

Mr. Baker's bill, exempting purchasers of patent right articles for their own use from any royalty to the owners of the patent, we are glad to announce, passed the with but 40 dissenting votes. We hope to see it pass the Senate and become a law of the land. Let Mr. Baker see to it.—Goshen Democrat.

This muddy weather everybody should be well supplied with good wear for the feet, as more colds are contracted by exposure in this way than any other. There is no need of it when you can go to the Boot Upside Down and buy boots and shoes at your own prices. If you don't believe he sells good goods cheap, give him a call and learn his prices.

Our people at the Junction have a good restaurant, grocery and meat market all combined. This will make things more convenient for them and they should give this place of business their earnest support. Goods can be purchased there as cheap as anywhere and quality just as good. The institution is managed by James Sherlock.

A fowl that costs twelve cents a pound dressed will cost sixteen cents when undressed, or in other words, the dressing costs four cents, and a nine pound four ounce fowl, dressed, will when not dressed weigh seven pounds nine ounces, so that a dressed fowl will weigh a pound and a half less when undressed. Happy new year.

New process of bolting flour by which all glutinous matter is removed from the grain, making it far more sweeter and purer than the ordinary flour. This process is now being introduced by Messrs. Furgeson & Watson, at Hudson and they are receiving orders for their flour from all parts of the country. For sale by G. C. Ralston.

The ladies of the Presbyterian church will give a Christmas dinner and supper in the vacant room in Ensley's block, for the purpose of making the final payment on the church seats. A cordial invitation is extended to all, and is hoped a liberal patronage will be given. Dinner 40c, Supper 35c, including oysters. Children half fare.

Mrs. R. Elton.

W. Martin was in the city this week.

One or two papers have made the statement that the creditors of Hon. John B. Stoll, publisher of the National banner at Ligonier, have closed him out, and that he has made an assignment. We are glad to learn that this is a false rumor, and that Mr. Stoll is all right. Great care should be taken in giving publicity to such statements, as they often inflict great injury on worthy persons.

Messrs. Ohmer are here packing the furniture of the De Kalb House for shipment, which will be closed after Saturday Next. We regret to see that these gentlemen have been forced to take this step, as it may be a drawback to the town; but it is the only means they could pursue and save themselves We can say for them and their agent, Mr. Taggart, that there was no better kept hotel in the whole of Northern Indiana. We hope that the De Kalb will not remain unoccupied long, although we have several other good hotels in Garrett.—Herald.

A Van Buren street resident awakened suddenly the other night, jumped from the bed, fell over the crib, upset two chairs and spilt the contents of the water bucket. "What in the world is the matter with you Frank," exclaimed his wife, completely aroused with the racket. He listened a moment and said "Well, I guess it was that darned old clock." He thought he had heard the fire bell.

A young fellow and his girl from near Cournna, attended the concert last Friday evening. He was not acquainted with gas lights and when the Janitor put on the force and the lights illuminated the room suddenly, he grabbed his coat and hat and broke for the door like a circus horse for the dressing room, leaving his fair dulcenia to face the audience and bear the burden of laughter from the boys in the rear end of the house.

The Columbia City Post gives an account of the killing of a Mr. Strong in that county, by the falling of a tree. It says they had nearly sawed down a tree, when unexpectedly it commenced falling sooner than they anticipated. Before Mr. Strong had time to get out of the way, the tree struck another, the force of which split off the part unsawn at the stump, the butt running backward over the stump caught him between a log, tearing one leg entirely off and left the other leg only hanging by a small shred of flesh and skin. He, also sustained severe injuries about his face and head. Fortunately, when the tree struck the ground the log was lifted away from his body. He died in a few hours.

Meeting of Attorneys.

Circuit court adjourned last Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, and thereupon the members of the bar met and organized by calling Judge Tousley to the chair and appointing Clerk Moss secretary. On motion the Chair appointed a committee of three, consisting of Messrs. Dills, Best and McBride to draft proper resolutions of respect in memory of Hon. T. R. Dickinson, deceased a late member of this bar.

Remarks were made by Messrs. McBride, Best, Dills and Blair, and on motion the following resolutions were adopted.

Whereas, Death has recently invaded the precincts of our bar, and summoned into the presence of the Supreme Judge of all, one who has for many years been its senior resident member, and;

Whereas, We desire to place some tribute to the memory of our dead friend and colleague, therefore, be it

Resolved, That in the death of Hon. Timothy R. Dickinson, who was admitted to the Bar of the De Kalb Circuit Court Nov. 1st, 1847, and died Dec. 8th, 1877, this Bar has lost a valued and honored member, and the community, a good, patriotic and useful citizen.

Resolved, That we earnestly commend, and will strive to emulate the careful, pains-taking and conscientious manner in which he ever strove to discharge every duty devolving upon him as an attorney, as well as in every other capacity, and the uniformly courteous and obliging manner which characterized his intercourse with others.

Resolved, That we extend to the family of our deceased colleague, our warm sympathy in this their bereavement.

Resolved, That the family of decedent be requested to furnish his portrait to be hung in the court room, and that the same be draped in mourning for thirty days hereafter.

Resolved, That a record of this meeting and a copy of these resolutions be presented to the De Kalb Circuit Court at its next meeting, and said court be requested to cause the same to be spread upon its order book, and that a copy of the same be furnished by the Clerk to the family of the deceased.

R. W. McBride,
Jas I. Best,
W. H. Dills.

Assignment of mortgages should be Recorded.

Articles of agreement should be recorded.

Articles of Association should be recorded.

Leases of land should be recorded.

Mechanic's Liens should be recorded.

Deeds and mortgages of real estate should be recorded within forty-five days from date of execution.

Chattel mortgages should be recorded within ten days from date of execution.

Are your deeds recorded?

Are all old deeds in your possession received from previous owners of your land recorded?

Are all old mortgages released?

These are all required to perfect your title.

Annual Meeting.

The annuall meeting of the stockholders of the Agricultural Association, was held in Agricultural Hall, Waterloo, on Monday last. T. C. Mays presided, and J. A. Barnes acted as Secretary. Full reports of the Secretary and Treasurer were read and, on motion, were accepted and ordered placed upon the records. From the former, we learn that the receipts of the Association from all sources, duringing the past year, were $3,965.10; and the expenditures were $3,953.91. This small balance, however, has been already exhausted. The expenditures include a considerable reduction of the interest bearing debt, which is now given at $868.10. Permanent improvements have also been added to the grounds, during the year, to the value of $386.10. The total number of shares of stock issued is given at 898, representing $8,450. Dividends not yet drawn amount to $580.62, making a total of $9,030.62, leaving yet unsold of the $10,000 of stock allowed by the constitution, $969.38. The total number of entries, at the late fair, was 1,891, against 1,507 for the previous year, showing an increas of 384. Under all the circumstances, the year just closed can be said to have been fairly a successful one to the Association.

The election of officers brought out a very large vote, probably the largest one ever cast at an annual meeting, and the voting by proxy, which has prevailed heretofore, was not permitted. The result was as follows:

James N. Chamberlain, President;
Philip B. Nimmons, Vice President;
James A. Barnes, Secretary;
Miles Waterman, Treasurer.

DIRECTORS.

J. D. Kelly, — Edward Kellam,
T. C. Mays, — A. S. Leas,
R. N. Crooks, — B. B. Long,
C. D. Knisely, — B. F. Greenwood,
Cyrus Bowman, — John Parnell,
John Leas, — L. J. Blair,
W. B. Adrms, — A. D. Moore,
John Buchanan, — David Gratz.

The Directors adjourned to meet on the first Saturday in January, at which time an executive committee will be elected.

EXECUTOR'S SALE.

Notice is hereby given that the undersigned, Executor of the late will and Testament of Hugh Watt, Senior deceased, will offer for sale at public auction, at the late residence of the Testator, one mile south-east of Auburn, Indiana, on Saturday, January 5th, 1878, the personal property of said estate, consisting of horses, cows, one two horse wagon, and new open buggy, plows, and other farming implements, hay, and other articles too numerous to mention. Terms, all sums of three dollars and under, cash, all sums over three dollars a credit of nine months will be given, the purchaser giving his note with approved security waving valuation and appraisement laws with interest.

Guy Plum, Executor.

WHAT IS THE LATEST ?

CUSTOME MAD

Artic Coats, Ulsters, Broadwy
OverCoats, Winter Suits,
Diagonal Coats
And Vests.

SAM, PETE & MAX.

FORT WAYNE.

LOOK AT THIS!

Never has our Millinery Department been so full and comlete and

PRICES LOWER

Than has ever been known.

HATS. HATS.

Ladies and childrens untrimmed hats for 25c. 50c. 75c. and $1.00
" " well trimmed hats for 50c. 75c, and $1.00 and upward

Ladies silk ties 15c, 20c, 25c, and 50c

FUR AND FEATHER TRIMMINGS,

A good assortment. Ball and Silk Fringes, all prices.

FURS. FURS.

Our line of Furs has never been better. Children's sets 50c, 75c, and upward. Ladies Mink, full set 7, 12, and $18. Ladies Bever, sets 2, 2 50, $3 per set

CLOAKS.

A new lot of Ladies Cloaks just received for 4 50, 5, 6, and $7, and as high as $20

HAWK AND SKIRTS

A find assortment. Ladies and Children Unddrwear 35c, 40c, and 50 cents

NOTIONS.

Our Notion department is full. Gloves, hose, buttons, Misses knit sacques and hoods, etc.

DRESS GOODS DEPARTMENT.

Waterproof all styles 75c, 1 00, $1 25, per yard, Calico 5c, Gingham the best 10c, black alpacca 20c, 25c, 40c, and upward.

Germantown and Zephyrs Yarns all shades. Mottos and splits 2 to 5 cents.

H. H. STAMETS.

AUBURN COURIER.

THURSDAY, DEC. 20, 1877.

THE NEWS CONDENSED.

THE EAST.

A PENITENTIARY convict named Collins, alias Thorpe, was hung in the prison at Auburn, N. Y., last week, for the murder of a colored convict named Howard, in September last.... A fire at Millerstown, Pa., last week, destroyed $200,000 worth of property.

AT the late municipal election in Boston the Republican ticket was elected by a majority of 3,181.

[illegible], an extensive stock dealer, of Pittsburgh, Pa., has filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy. His liabilities are about $110,000. His assets are large, but the exact amount is as yet unknown. They consist in part of land in Illinois, Kansas, and one or two other Western States.

THE WEST.

STILL another Chicago bank has gone by the board. The German Savings Bank—Henry Greenebaum, President—closed its doors on Friday, the 7th inst. It is said that depositors will be paid dollar for dollar.

BANKRUPTCIES: The Simpson Bank of Lawrence, Kan.; the La Salle County Savings Bank, of Ottawa, Ill.; John G. Hodge & Co., wholesale stationers, San Francisco, Cal., liabilities $280,000.

THE report of the commission appointed to settle the dispute as to the location of the front door of the Chicago postoffice has been rendered, and is of a nature to satisfy all parties. It retains the Dearborn street entrance, provides for two public entrances to the postoffice on Clark street and one on Adams street, and recommends that the dumping and wagoning be done on Jackson street. ..The St. Elmo murderer is to have his trial at Galesburg, Ill., in February. The theory of insanity has already been advanced by the defense.

THE Rev. Dr. Harris, rector of St. James' Episcopal Church, Chicago, has been elected Bishop of the new Diocese of Quincy, Ill.... Miss McKee has been committed for murder without bail, for the recent shooting of Constable McElligott, at Chicago.

THE receipts of hogs at Chicago for five days recently reached the enormous number of 283,500, having a value of $1,500,000...:Mrs. Kate Tyrrell, confined in the penitentiary at Lincoln, Neb., for forgery, burned a hole through the floor of the female department into the guard-room, made rope of a blanket torn into strips, and escaped to the hall of the warden's house. While trying to unlock the only door between her and liberty she was discovered and taken back.

THE Braidwood (Ill.) miners have resumed work with an evident determination to make up for lost time. In one day, lately, they mined 161 cars of coal, or 1,932 tons.....The convention of the Illinois Dairymen has closed its sittings at Elgin, after a season of most interesting and profitable discussion of topics connected with the important branch of agricultural industry which the association aims to promote.

AN immense meeting was held in the Tabernacle at Chicago on the 13th inst., at which resolutions were passed insisting upon the restoration of the silver coinage to the position it held before the passage of the act of 1873.

THE SOUTH.

LOUISVILLE had a destructive fire last week. The extensive whisky house of Cochrane & Fulton was completely destroyed, involving the loss of some $300,000....Ex.-Gov. Pinchback, of Louisiana, has addressed an open letter to Gov. Nicholls resigning his place as a United States Senator from that State.

NEAR Liberty, Ky., last week, Thomas Moore and United States Special Bailiff George D. Ellis killed one another. Moore has been wanted by the authorities for a year past on an indictment charging him with illicit distilling. Ellis met him by chance Sunday night while riding towards Liberty, Ky., with a man named Dwyer. Ellis called "surrender!" and Moore answered by firing a bullet through his body. Ellis returned the shot, Moore disappearing in the bushes. Next morning his body was found frozen stiff in death.

IT is reported from Louisville, Ky., that Edward Wyatt and Frank Webster, United States special bailiffs, have been wounded by moonshiners. The eye of the former was shot out, and the latter was shot through the head. Capt. F. B. Webster, United States Deputy Marshal, with a posse, was attacked by triple his number of moonshiners in ambuscade. Officer Wyatt received sixteen shots in his face.

GENERAL.

TWO OCEAN disasters are reported by cable. The British steamer European, from the Cape of Good Hope, was wrecked in a fog off the French coast. No lives were lost. A collision occurred in the English channel, off Beachy head, between an English steamer and an unknown vessel. But one man was saved.

THE troubles on the Mexican border are assuming a shape that may lead to really serious complications. One of the two parties of troops which recently crossed the Rio Grande in pursuit of depredators has been heard from, dispatches from the border telling of an encounter between Col. Young's command and a number of Mexican Indians, in which two of the latter were killed and three wounded. The camp and property of the Indians were completely destroyed.

A NAVAL engineer, Lieut. Wise, reports favorably on the official explorations of the Isthmus of Darien, with a view to the project of an inter-oceanic canal, connecting the Pacific and the Atlantic in Central America. Lieut. Wise estimates the cost of the proposed work as not excessive.

THE Rev. J. J. Bloomer, pastor of St. Patrick's Catholic Church, in Elmira, N. Y., has been committed to jail for contempt of the Recorder's Court, in refusing to answer a question put by the court in reference to a case of alleged bigamy. The pastor stands on the ground of professional confidence, not church discipline.

FIRES: Memphis, Tenn., loss $50,000; Toledo, Ohio, loss $40,000; Biddeford, Me., loss $25,000; New Castle, Ont., loss $40,000....The new west-bound freight rates established by the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad, to correspond with those of the all-rail trunk lines, show the following figures to Chicago: First-class, 90 cents per 100 pounds; second-class, 72 cents; third-class, 55 cents; fourth-class, 42 cents. First-class to Quincy is $1.17, and to St. Louis the same.

WASHINGTON.

THE House Committee on Education and Labor have decided to report adversely upon the bill introduced by Judge Buckner for the establishment in the District of Columbia of a National University for Women....Judge McArthur has granted a motion for a new trial in the case of ex-Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Sawyer, and ex-Commissioners of Customs Haines and Brooks, some weeks ago convicted of conspiring to defraud the Government.

A WASHINGTON dispatch states that the evidence in the naval inquiry into the causes of the loss of the Huron has all been taken. A formal decision will not be made for some time. It is stated that the decision of the court will be that the Huron was lost by an error of judgment in the commander. His course was right, and he had the fullest confidence in his observations, which probably were correct, but he failed to take sufficiently into account the fact that his vessel was very long, drew a comparatively small quantity of water, and offered little resistance to the sea, which in the gale was setting in so strongly toward the land. The ship was heading right, but had been forced out of its course by the gale and the tide.

HON. JOHN M. HARLAN has formally qualified as a Judge of the United States Supreme Court, and now occupies a seat on that bench as the successor of Hon. David Davis, of Illinois....An effort to restore the franking privilege to Congressmen looms up in Congress, and nobody seems to care....Secretary Schurz, referring to the reports that he contemplated resigning his position and taking the mission to Berlin, says that he has no such intention. He is well satisfied with his present position, and thinks he is doing well in it.... There has been a caucus of some of the prominent silver men of both houses, including Senator Jones, Judge Kelley, Bland and others, at which it was agreed that, during the long holiday recess, one Senator and one Representative should be deputed to call public attention to the Silver bill, and to create public sentiment in its favor....We are informed by Washington dispatches to the Western press that it is the intention of the administration to leave the whole question of settling the Mexican troubles to Congress. The Cabinet may pass upon the question of the recognition of Diaz, but beyond that it does not expect to do anything, preferring to leave the responsibility upon the shoulders of the representative body. There it promises to be a fruitful source of discussion.

JUDGE LORING, of the United States Court of Claims, has retired on full pay, on account of age, and the President has appointed J. Bancroft Davis to succeed him.... After an exciting canvass the nominations of Mr. Hayes for officers at the port of New York were rejected by the Senate by a vote of 32 against confirmation to 25 in favor....Gen. Sheridan has been before the House Military Committee to testify regarding the condition of affairs along the Rio Grande. He gave it as his opinion that there is no danger of a war with Mexico, and that the troops already stationed on the border, together with those to be sent there, will be sufficient to preserve order.

THE TURKO-RUSSIAN WAR.

A BUCHAREST dispatch says: "A Russian statement is published here which says that it is better to continue the war than to conclude a patched-up peace, which will sooner or later make another war necessary. Russia must obtain autonomy for the Christian population, independence for Roumania and Servia, increase of territory for Montenegro, and for Russia possession of Batoum and Kars, and the free navigation of the Dardanelles."

THE London correspondent of the Chicago Tribune telegraphs that "public interest in the war was never higher in England than now. Everything points to some decisive events before New Year's day, and, should the Turks be overpowered and unable to prevent a general Russian advance upon Adrianople, there is no telling what action Great Britain may be forced to take. That she is quietly preparing for possible active interference in behalf of Turkey is certain. In Asia the Turks have evacuated Batoum, and the fall of Erzeroum is daily looked for, as reinforcements cannot now reach Mukhtar Pasha. The Servians are said to have crossed the frontier at Jacosa, and fortified themselves on Turkish territory. The total loss of Russia up to Nov. 17 amounted to 74,858 men. Baker Pasha (Col. Valentine Baker) is appointed to the command of a division under Mehemet Ali."

THE most important event of the war in Europe so far is the fall of Plevna, the chief stronghold of the Turks north of the Balkan mountains. After a severe engagement before the town on Sunday, the 9th inst., Osman Pasha, who was wounded, surrendered unconditionally. On Saturday, the 8th, says a special cable dispatch of the 11th, "after Osman Pasha had found his escape impossible, his army starving and perishing with cold, and no hope of success, he sent a parlementaire to the Russian headquarters with a special letter addressed personally to the Grand Duke Nicholas as Chief of the army investing. The Grand Duke declined either to accept the letter or to receive the parlementaire, and directed him to be escorted to the headquarters of Prince Charles as Commander-in-Chief of the allied armies besieging Plevna. The purport of the letter was a request for favorable terms of capitulation, and an especial request from Osman Pasha to be allowed to surrender his sword to the Grand Duke Nicholas. This being impossible, the parlementaire returned. On Sunday another desperate assault was made on the Russian right, in which Osman Pasha himself was wounded, and about 3,000 Turks put hors de combat. Nothing remained but unconditional surrender, and thus closed one of the bravest defenses of modern times."

A CONSTANTINOPLE dispatch says it is reported that the Council of State has determined that Christians shall hereafter be eligible to Governorships and other administrative functions of the Turkish provinces....The Egyptian contingent in the Turkish army will be increased by 12,000 infantry, 1,000 cavalry and four batteries.

DETAILS of the surrender of Plevna show that 40,000 soldiers under arms and 20,000 sick and wounded in hospital fell into the hands of the Russians. The sufferings of the Turks in the beleaguered town were actually awful. Cold, disease and famine decimated the ranks and reduced the soldiers to living skeletons. To aggravate their sufferings, there were no doctors, and no medicine could be obtained... During the operations against the citadel of Antivari, the Prince of Montenegro has been inhabiting a house belonging to a Mohammedan Bey in the town of Antivari. On Sunday an attempt was made to assassinate the Prince in the house, which was mined and blown up. The Prince was fortunately absent at the time. One of his body guard was killed and six injured.

THE Czar visited Osman Pasha after his surrender and returned to him his sword, expressing admiration for his bravery and soldierly qualities.

GENERAL FOREIGN NEWS.

BY way of Tucson, Arizona, we get the following intelligence from Northern Mexico: Gen. Epitacio Huerta, Commanding General of Sonora under Diaz, is ordered to Mexico, and all the Federal garrisons in Sonora are concentrating in Guaymas, the frontier towns being left unprotected. Discontent is general in Sinaloa, Sonora, and Lower California, there having been a revolution of opinion in favor of Lerdo. Important news is expected soon.

PARIS telegrams of the 8th state that a serious hitch has occurred in the negotiations for the formation of a Ministry satisfactory to the Left. MacMahon seems to have recanted at the last moment, and now insists upon reserving to himself the selection of the three most important Ministers—those of Foreign Affairs, War and Marine.

THE Spanish Government is in trouble again with the Basque provinces, whose ancient liberties there has been an attempt to curtail, since they participated in Don Carlos' rebellion.

A PARIS dispatch of the 11th says: "On Sunday night the crisis assumed a new shape. Marshal MacMahon determined on a policy of resistance, and a new Ministry was submitted by him. It remains to be seen whether the Constitutionalists in the Senate will accede to the demand of a second dissolution."

THE last revolution in Ecuador has collapsed after eighteen hours' hard fighting in Quito, where it is estimated 400 persons were killed and a large number wounded....The new United States Minister to the Court of St. James was cordially welcomed on his arrival at Liverpool by a number of leading Englishmen. ....The death is reported of Sidney Smirke, the distinguished English architect.

A PARIS dispatch says: "A deputation of the Right has waited upon Marshal MacMahon and assured him that it was utterly impossible to form a ministry from their ranks, and that all further attempts in that direction would be useless. The members of the delegation, while professing the strongest wish to support the Marshal, were most emphatic in their expressions of necessity of coming to terms with the moderate republicans and ending the crisis. The Marshal was deeply moved, and after some conversation with the deputation, among whom were some of his staunchest friends, for whose opinion he has great respect, said there was no other course left open to him but to resign. His friends were appalled at the prospect and besought him not to take this step. On the condition of his retaining the Presidency they authorized him to do whatever he pleased in order to terminate the crisis. The Marshal still hesitated and reiterated his unwillingness to retain office, under the circumstances, but the delegation urged their views with great force, and pointed out the danger to conservative interests of plunging the country into an uncertain future by resigning at the present time. Finally the Marshal yielded and promised to summon a Ministry from the moderate Left. Marshal MacMahon at once put his resolution into effect, by communicating with M. Dufaure, giving him carte blanche to form a Ministry."

THE new French Cabinet is constituted as follows: M. Dufaure, President of Council and Minister of Justice; M. De Marcere, Interior; M. Waddington, Foreign Affairs; M. Bordoux, Public Instruction; Gen. Borel, War; Admiral Pothuau, Marine; M. Leon Say, Finance; M. Teisserenc De Bort, Commerce; M. De Freycinet, Public Works.... A dispatch from Berlin says the German corvette Leipzig has been sent to support the claims of the German envoy against Nicaragua. ....The Russian official figures of the final fight at Plevna make the Russian losses only 55 officers and 1,389 men, while the Turks are said to have lost 4,000 men in killed and wounded.

PROCEEDINGS OF CONGRESS.

FRIDAY, Dec. 7.—SENATE.—The House bill for the relief of the sufferers by the wreck of the steamer Huron was passed.... Mr. Mitchell, of Oregon, delivered a long speech in support of his bill to extend the time for the completion of the Northern Pacific railroad.

HOUSE.—The proceedings in the House were exceedingly dull. Mr. Stephens introduced a bill amendatory of the act incorporating the Texas Pacific Railroad Company; Mr. Cox, of New York, offered a bill to reorganize the life-saving service, and Mr. Wood, Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, reported a concurrent resolution for the adjournment of Congress for the Christmas holidays, from the 15th of December until Jan. 10, which was passed.

MONDAY, Dec. 10.—SENATE.—The case of J. B. Eustis, of Louisiana, was called up, and after a brief debate the resolution declaring him entitled to a seat in the Senate was adopted by a vote of 49 yeas to 9 nays, the latter being Messrs. Allison, Cameron (Wis.), McMillan, Hamlin, Howe, Ingalls, Morrill and Saunders. Mr. Eustis was then sworn in and took his seat.... A number of bills were introduced and referred. Among them were the following: By Mr. Plumb, to declare certain lands heretofore granted to railroad companies forfeited, and to open the same for settlement; by Mr. Johnston, amendatory of the supplementary act to incorporate the Texas Pacific railroad, and to aid its construction; by Mr. Christiancy, to provide for challenges to jurors in trials for bigamy and polygamy in the Territory of Utah.... Mr. Matthews made a four hours' speech in favor of his silver resolution.

HOUSE.—A large number of bills were introduced, among the lot being another income-tax bill, by Mr. Turner; a bill by Willis, of New York, restoring the tax on tea and coffee, and looking toward tariff reform; a bill by Mr. Joyce, adjusting the salaries of Postmasters; and a joint resolution proposing an amendment to the constitution providing for the election of Senators by direct vote of the people....Mr. Wood, Chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, reported the usual resolutions for the distribution of the President's annual message among the various committees. The resolutions, after some discussion, were adopted.

TUESDAY, Dec. 11.—SENATE.—The morning hour was nearly all occupied by the reception of petitions in favor of woman suffrage, for a law in relation to the liquor traffic, and in relation to tariff matters....Among the bills introduced and referred were the following: By Mr. Davis, of Illinois, to establish a Court of Appeals; by Mr. Kellogg, authorizing mail steamship service between New Orleans and certain ports named....Mr. Conkling introduced a resolution for the appointment of a committee to inquire into the border troubles with Mexico....A discussion upon Mr. Matthews' silver resolution took up the balance of the day's session, which was participated in by Messrs. Kernan, Beck, Wallace and Allison.

HOUSE.—Mr. Whitthorne introduced a bill providing for the removal of the bodies of those lost on the Huron to the Naval Cemetery at Annapolis, which was passed....The day was passed in action upon Senate amendments to the Deficiency Appropriation bill. They were all disposed of, and the bill was sent back to the Senate.

WEDNESDAY, Dec. 12.—SENATE.—Mr. Edmunds submitted a resolution authorizing a committee to consider the state of the law respecting the ascertaining and declaration of the result of elections of President and Vice President of the United States, and also to consider and report upon the best manner of electing those officers and the duration of their terms of office. Agreed to.... Mr. Dawes, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported adversely on the petition to give the use of the Senate chamber to the women for the purpose of presenting arguments for a Sixteenth amendment....Mr. Davis, of West Virginia, presented a resolution in regard to the militia....The Senate insisted upon its amendments to the Deficiency Appropriation bill, and a conference committee was appointed....Consideration was then renewed of Mr. Matthews' resolution on the silver question, pending which the Senate went into executive session.

HOUSE.—Mr. Morrison took the Speaker to task for filling vacancies on committees, where the members had not been excused by the House....Mr. Stephens introduced a bill repealing the iron-clad oath required of pensioners....Mr. Harris called up the Colorado contested-election case, discussion upon which occupied the entire day.

THURSDAY, Dec. 13.—SENATE.—Mr. Cameron, of Wisconsin, presented the petition of David T. Corbin, of South Carolina, asking that his claim to a seat from that State may be inquired into and decided upon its merits....Mr. Dawes introduced a bill to authorize and equip an expedition to the Arctic seas. Referred....Mr. Voorhees submitted a resolution on the subject of the finances, and gave notice that he would call it up on Tuesday, Jan. 15, for the purpose of submitting some remarks thereon.... At the expiration of the morning hour consideration was resumed of the resolution of Mr. Matthews to pay bonds in silver. The discussion on this subject was taken part in by Messrs. Bayard, Allison, Hill, Dawes and Beck, and continued until 4 o'clock, when the Senate went into executive session. The doors were opened at 6:30, and the Senate adjourned.

HOUSE.—The regular order of business, consideration of the Colorado contested-election case, was resumed. Speeches were made upon the case by Messrs. Butler and Hale, and by Mr. Patterson on his own behalf. Mr. Patterson was then admitted and sworn in by a vote of 118 to 110. Adjourned.

His Own Brimstone.

A Universalist was once trying to prove to the untutored mind of a negro woman that such a place as hell was a simple absurdity. "Aunty, do you believe that all the people who go to bad places are burned in a lake of brimstone?" "Certain I does," promptly replied the tinted theologian. "Well, now, don't you see, aunty, there isn't brimstone enough down there to keep the fire going all the while?" This seemed to be a poser for a little while. She had never entered into a calculation of the amount of combustible material necessary for the process. Her countenance soon brightened, however, and she replied, "Why, honey, don't you know that everybody who goes there carries his own brimstone with him?"

IN San Francisco the engineer of a steamship from China took to a hotel, with his family, a Chinese woman, and insisted on her sitting at the dinner table with the rest. The head waiter refused to seat the party. Then the manager of the house offered them seats, but the waiter would not take their orders.

STRANGE CASE.

A Needle Works Its Way from a Woman's Foot to Her Hip.

[From the Louisville (Ky.) News.]

A young woman named Melissa Shipp, whose residence is in Martin county, Ind., arrived in the city by the Ohio and Mississippi road, this morning, for the purpose of receiving medical advice. About three years ago, while walking across the carpet of her room at her father's residence in her bare feet, she stepped upon a piece of broken needle, which penetrated the hollow of the left foot, sinking deeply into the flesh. Herself and mother made repeated efforts to draw the fragment from the wound, but without success. Finally a piece of bacon-rind was bound on the punctured part, and in a day the pain subsided, and a week later the wound seemed perfectly healed.

Miss Shipp continued to go about and attend to her domestic duties for several months after the accident, entirely free from pain. Gradually, however, her ankle began to pain her, and this continued for two or three months, she at times suffering intensely. She supposed, as did her friends, that the pain was caused by acute rheumatism or a sprain, and bathed the part affected in tepid water and soothing liniments. After about three months of suffering the pain began to subside, and a month later had entirely ceased.

She suffered no more for about fifteen months, when the acute pain again set in, this time in the knee. For two or three months the same treatment was followed as when the ankle was affected, the young lady and her parents still supposing the pain was the result of acute rheumatism. Then the pain began to subside, and in three months had entirely disappeared.

For nearly a year Miss Shipp's health was excellent, and she supposed she had entirely recovered from her singular affliction. But she was mistaken. About six weeks ago the pain returned with great acuteness, this time in the hip. Her sufferings at times were intense, and the remedies formerly used seemed wholly without efficacy in her emergency. On Wednesday last, however, the secret of all her suffering was explained. While adjusting a skirt after arising from bed, she discovered that a small spot near the hip-bone was particularly sensitive, and her mother, being called to examine it, felt the sharp point of something in the flesh, and protruding through the inflamed skin. A pair of tweezers was obtained and the obstruction removed, when it was found to be about half an ordinary-sized needle, so corroded by rust as to be but little thicker than an ordinary horse-hair. The fragment had traveled the entire length of the limb, from the center of the foot to the hip-bone.

The young lady suffered very greatly after the needle was withdrawn, and is still a sufferer, and comes to the city to consult a skillful surgeon and seek such relief as medical science can afford. The case is certainly a very remarkable one.

Pensions.

At the close of the year ending June 30, 1877, there were on the files of the office 42,809 original army invalid claims; 19,344 invalid increase; 32,713 army widows' original; 814 widows' increase; 975 original navy invalid; 62 navy invalid increase; 524 navy widows' original; and 2 navy widows' increase claims.

To that number were added during the year 16,532 original army invalid; 11,214 army invalid increase; 5,269 original navy widows'; 780 army widows' increase; 271 original navy invalid; 117 navy invalid increase; 97 original navy widows'; and 16 navy widows' increase claims.

Seventeen hundred and seventy-one original army invalid, 132 original navy widows', 4 army widows' increase, 6 original navy invalids', and 1 original navy widows' claims were taken from the rejected files and reopened, making a grand total of 61,112 original army invalid; 21,558 army invalid increase; 38,114 original army widows'; 1,598 army widows' increase; 1,252 original navy invalids; 179 navy invalid increase; 622 original navy widows'; and 18 navy widows' increase claims for disposal.

The yearly value of claims allowed during the year is $1,348,384.84, as follows: Army invalid, $472,453.22; increased pension to invalids, $369,996.12; army widows, etc., $446,292; increased pensions to army widows, $16,504; navy invalids, $16,528.50; increased pension to navy invalids, $2,877; navy widows, etc., $10,260; increased pension to navy widows, $9,060; survivors of the war of 1812, $5,568, and widows of the soldiers of said war, $12,096.

During the year the following amounts were paid for pensions: To army invalids, $12,955,544.15; to army widows, etc., $13,348,383.57; to navy invalids, $199,619.40; to navy widows, etc., $322,926.63; survivors of the war of 1812, $934,657.82; to the widows of the soldiers of said war, $361,548.91, making a total of $28,122,683.48.—Report of the Commissioner of Pensions.

Destruction of Forests.

The rapidity with which this country is being stripped of its forests must alarm every thinking man. It has been estimated by good authority that, if we go on at the present rate, the supply of timber in the United States will, in less than twenty years, fall considerably short of our home necessities. How disastrously the destruction of forests of a country affects the regularity of the water supply in its rivers necessary for navigation, increases the frequency of freshets and inundations, dries up springs, and transforms fertile agricultural districts into barren wastes, is a matter of universal experience the world over. It is the highest time that we should turn our earnest attention to this subject, which so seriously concerns our national prosperity.

The Government cannot prevent the cutting of timber on land owned by private citizens. It is only to be hoped private owners will grow more careful of their timber as it rises in value. But the Government can do two things:

1. It can take determined, and, as I think, effectual measures to arrest the stealing of timber from public lands on a large scale, which is always attended with the most reckless waste; and, 2. It can preserve the forests still in its possession by keeping them under its control, and by so regulating the cutting and sale of timber on its lands as to secure the renewal of the forest by natural growth and the careful preservation of the young timber.—Annual Report of the Secretary of the Interior.

Caoutchouc-Making on the Amazon.

Narrow paths lead from the hut through the thick underbrush to the solitary trunks of the India-rubber trees; and, as soon as the dry season allows, the woodman goes into the seringal with a hatchet in order to cut small holes in the bark, or rather in the wood of the caoutchouc tree, from which a milky-white sap begins to flow through an earthenware spout fastened to the wound. Below is a piece of bamboo which is cut into the shape of a bucket. In this way he goes from tree to tree until, upon his return, in order to carry the material more conveniently, he begins to empty the bamboo buckets into a large calabash. The contents of this are poured into one of those great turtle shells which on the Amazons are used for every kind of purpose. He at once sets to work on the smoking process, since, if left to stand long, the gummy particles separate, and the quality of the India-rubber is hurt. This consists in subjecting the sap, when spread out thin, to the smoke from the nuts of the Urucury or Uauassa palm, which, strange to say, is the only thing that will turn it solid at once. An earthenware "bowl without bottom," whose neck has been drawn together like that of a bottle, forms a kind of chimney when placed over a heap of dry red-hot nuts so that the white smoke escapes from the top in thick clouds. The workman pours a small quantity of the white rich milk-like liquid over a kind of light wooden shovel which he turns with quickness, in order to separate the sap as much as possible. Then he passes it quickly through the dense smoke above the little chimney, turns it about several times, and at once perceives the milk take on a grayish-yellow color and turn solid. In this way he lays on skin after skin until the India-rubber on each side is two or three centimeters thick, and he considers the plancha done. It is then cut upon one side, peeled off the shovel, and hung up to dry, since much water has got in between the layers, which should dry out if possible. The color of the plancha, which is at first a bright silver gray, becomes more and more yellow, and at last turns into the brown of caoutchouc as it is known in commerce. A good workman can finish in this way five or six pounds an hour. The thicker, the more even, and the freer from bubbles the whole mass is, so much the better is its quality and higher the price.—Scribner for December.

A Great Wheat and Corn State.

Eli Perkins, in a letter from Cerro Gordo county, Iowa, to the New York Sun, writes as follows:

You in the East can have no possible conception of the magnitude of the Western crops. Take this county, Cerro Gordo—and there are ninety-eight other counties in the State just as large—I find the yield of wheat alone will be over 1,000,000 bushels. It will be 150 bushels to each man, woman and child in the county, 300 bushels to every male, and about 500 bushels to every able-bodied man, and pork and corn in the same proportion. It is safe to say that every able-bodied man in Cerro Gordo county raises enough to support fifty men. There are many wheat-fields here that produced last season forty-five bushels to the acre. The average yield is twenty-eight bushels. Three years ago, when I visited Northern Iowa, I could buy plenty of wild prairie land for $5 per acre. The same land is now selling for $20 and $30, and the price is marching straight to $50. There are a great many farms in Central and Southern Iowa worth $75 per acre. Do you ask me which is the richest State in the Union? I answer, Iowa. She has no waste land, but few lakes, no mountains, no barren ridges. She has 30,000,000 acres of black garden soil, throwing out 5,000,000 acres for roads, river-beds, and three small lakes. This whole 30,000,000 acres will be worth in the market, in less than twenty-five years, an average of $60 per acre; or the farm-land of the State will be worth $1,800,000,000—enough to pay the national debt. The farm-lands of Iowa are worth more than the farm-lands of all New England. I saw eighty acres of ground yesterday along the Burlington, Cedar Rapids and Northern road that I could have bought four years ago for $4 an acre. This year the owner raised 2,418 bushels of wheat on it, and sold it for 90 cents per bushel, making $2,176.20 off of $320 worth of land. This seems an incredulous story, but it is literally true. The crops are not one-tenth harvested here. Not one bushel of corn in 500 is husked. The snow has fallen about six inches deep, and the farmers are waiting for a thaw. About one-fourth of the wheat is thrashed. Two hundred car-loads went to St. Louis last week from this vicinity to be shipped to England, via New Orleans. The north and south railroad lines in Iowa are transporting immense quantities of wheat and flour from Iowa and Minnesota to Burlington and St. Louis, to go down the Mississippi.

A Dream of Anglo-Saxondom.

The story is everywhere the same—the Anglo-Saxon is everywhere a conqueror. Always acquiring and never relinquishing, he suffers no limit to be put to his possessions. It is not without the range of probability that within fifty years the whole of the continents of North America, Africa, and Australia will be entirely in the possession of men of Anglo-Saxon blood, besides the British isles, quite a third of Asia, New Zealand, nearly all of the island of Polynesia, and such fragments of territory in other parts of the globe as are already in British possession. This vast area will include more than half of the fertile and productive soil of the globe. It will dominate all the seas of the world, affording a coast line greater in extent that the shores of all the remaining countries of the globe. It will contain nearly all of the vacant and unoccupied lands to which the crowded populations of other countries must resort. It will present, in short, almost a monopoly of the undeveloped resources of the globe. —J. Edgar Chamberlain, in December Galaxy.

Emigration to Liberia.

The American Colonization Society has sent to Liberia since the close of the war 3,137 colored persons. It is now preparing to dispatch another expedition on the 2d of January next. The number of emigrants will depend, to a considerable extent, on the means yet to be contributed for the purpose. The society is constantly receiving urgent applications for passage and settlement. These, with other movements, especially in South Carolina and Florida, represent, it is estimated, a quarter of a million of men, women and children. New York Tribune.

The St. Louis Custom House Swindle.

St. Louis is much excited over the investigation of the work done on the Custom House now building there. It is strongly suspected that the great piers upon which the building is to stand, and which are required by the contract to be of solid stone, are really hollow, the central cavity having been fraudulently filled with shale and concrete by the contractor, with the connivance of Walsh, the superintendent. The case derives interest from the fact that Walsh, who is "highly connected" in St. Louis, and who has intimate personal relations with the United States Judge before whom the inquiry is being conducted, has been doing all in his power to prevent the piers from being bored in order to test their composition. Bliss, the United States attorney, who is conducting the investigation, was put to a vast amount of trouble before he could get authority from Washington to pierce the stone; and finally, having obtained the authorization, he was interfered with by Walsh's men when he went to the Custom House to begin the boring. He succeeded, however, in cutting through the surface of two or three of the piers before his operations were discovered, and found that they were actually filled with concrete and other foreign substances. As the Custom House party had sworn in court that the piers were perfectly solid, there is evidently a good case of perjury to be made out against them. Walsh, the superintendent, has had a great deal to say in St. Louis public enterprises for many years, and there are rumors that he has only escaped investigation on some previous occasions through the influence of powerful friends.

"Too Good Friends to Quarrel."

Annie Louise Cary told a Chicago Tribune reporter that Clara Louise Kellogg, while singing a duet with her in San Francisco, broke down in a cadenza, and that a trifling quarrel was the consequence. She also said: "I caught cold while traveling to Denver. Miss Kellogg and I have peculiar and different ideas about the ventilation of cars. She always wants the Pullman car to be warm, and I always like to have plenty of fresh air." The reporter asked Miss Kellogg about the matter, and she said: "I don't want to quarrel with Miss Cary; in fact, we are too good friends to quarrel, but what she says is false. I had sung that cadenza eighty or ninety times, and always sang it as it was written, and she had been in the habit of singing it with others who sang it differently, and that is how it was." "Then she broke down?" "Certainly. I sang it as it written, and she didn't. I held my temper, but she got angry, and to soothe her I said that the audience would never know that she failed. That's all there was to it." As to the difference of opinion about car ventilation, Miss Kellogg said: "Why, she complained that the car was too warm, and what did she do? She went out on the back platform and sat on a camp-stool. Worse than that, she left the doors open, and it got so cold that I had to pull my dress up and put my wraps on. She did actually. No wonder she took cold. Why, I had to have a curtain put up so as to keep from freezing. We had just left the equable climate of California, and were coming over the mountains where it was real cold. And would you believe it? She slept that night with the ventilator opened. She did."

Sitting Bull Again.

Sitting Bull comes to the front again, this time as the victim of a mistake in not understanding the offer of our Government to quiet his turbulent spirit and insure peace. The band of Sioux with Sitting Bull in Canada have recently stated—so the Canadian authorities learn—that they did not refuse to go back to their old haunts across the border, but that, in the excitement of the short interview with Gen. Terry, owing to their belief that he had fought them in the battle at Bear-Paw mountain, they did not understand what the American Government Commission desired, so they went off in a huff. It is now inferred that they would otherwise have been willing to come to terms. The truth is, we suppose, that Sitting Bull, for the time being, was a mad Bull, and unanswerable.—Chicago Journal.

THE MARKETS.

NEW YORK.

BEEVES	$7 25	@11 80
HOGS	4 75	@ 6 50
COTTON	11¼	@ 11½
FLOUR—Superfine	5 00	@ 5 25
WHEAT—No. 2 Chicago	1 32	@ 1 34
CORN—Western Mixed	62	@ 65½
OATS—Mixed	35	@ 41
RYE—Western	73	@ 74
PORK—New Mess	13 25	@13 50
LARD	8¼	@ 8½

CHICAGO.

BEEVES—Choice Graded Steers	5 25	@ 5 60
Choice Natives	4 60	@ 5 00
Cows and Heifers	2 25	@ 3 60
Butchers' Steers	3 25	@ 3 75
Medium to Fair	3 90	@ 4 40
HOGS—Live	3 60	@ 4 35
FLOUR—Fancy White Winter	6 75	@ 7 25
Good to Choice Spring Ex.	5 25	@ 5 50
WHEAT—No. 2 Spring	1 08	@ 1 09
No. 3 Spring	1 03	@ 1 04
CORN—No. 2	43	@ 44
OATS—No. 2	25	@ 26
RYE—No. 2	55	@ 56
BARLEY—No. 2	60	@ 61
BUTTER—Choice Creamery	28	@ 30
EGGS—Fresh	20	@ 22
PORK—Mess	11 85	@11 90
LARD	7¾	@ 8

MILWAUKEE

WHEAT—No. 1	1 11½	@ 1 13
No. 2	1 08	@ 1 09
CORN—No. 2	44	@ 45
OATS—No. 2	25	@ 26
RYE—No. 1	56	@ 57
BARLEY—No. 2	65	@ 66

ST. LOUIS.

WHEAT—No. 3 Red Fall	1 22	@ 1 23
CORN—No. 2 Mixed	46	@ 47
OATS—No. 2	27	@ 28
RYE	55	@ 56
PORK—Mess	12 00	@12 15
LARD	7½	@ 7¾
HOGS	3 70	@ 4 35
CATTLE	2 50	@ 5 00

CINCINNATI.

WHEAT—Red	1 18	@ 1 25
CORN—New	40	@ 41
OATS	30	@ 33
RYE	63	@ 65
PORK—Mess	11 80	@12 00
LARD	7¾	@ 8

TOLEDO.

WHEAT—No. 1 White Michigan	1 31	@ 1 32
No. 2 Red Winter	1 30	@ 1 30½
CORN	47	@ 50½
OATS—No. 2	28	@ 30

DETROIT.

FLOUR—Choice White	5 60	@ 6 50
WHEAT—No. 1 White	1 30	@ 1 31
No. 1 Amber	1 26	@ 1 27
CORN—No. 1	[illegible]	[illegible]
OATS—Mixed	30	@ 31
BARLEY (per cental)	1 21	@ 1 60
PORK—Mess	12 60	@12 75

EAST LIBERTY, PA.

CATTLE—Best	5 10	@ 5 50
Fair	4 50	@ 5 00
Common	3 00	@ 4 00
HOGS	4 20	@ 4 45
SHEEP	3 25	@ 4 25

AUBURN COURIER.

T. C. MAYS, PUBLISHER.

AGRICULTURAL AND DOMESTIC.

Around the Farm.

COUGH IN HORSES.—Cedar twigs, chopped fine and mixed with their grain, will act as a speedy cure for a cough in horses.

TOMATOES FOR COWS.—Tomatoes, as food for cows, improves both the quality and quantity of the milk, and gives the cream and butter a rich golden color.

SPRAINS AND BRUISES IN HORSES.—Dissolve an ounce of camphor in eight ounces of spirits of wine; then add one ounce spirits of turpentine, one ounce spirits of sal ammonia, half an ounce of oil of origanum and a table-spoonful of laudanum. Rub in a quarter of an hour with the hand, four times a day.

TO TAN A SKIN WITH THE FUR ON.—Flesh and clean the hide; wash out in luke-warm water, salt and soap. Take one gallon rain water, one gill sulphuric acid, a little salt and a small piece of alum; put the hide in this bath; let it remain one-half hour, then wash out well in warm rain water and soap; rub dry, and grease with neat's-foot or other good oil.—Western Farm Journal.

KILLING RATS.—The following cheap and simple method of extermination is said to have been successfully employed by Baron Von Backhofen and his neighbors for some years past: A mixture of two parts of well-bruised common squills and three parts of finely-chopped bacon is made into a stiff mass, with as much meal as may be required, and then baked into small cakes, which are put down for the rats to eat. Several correspondents of the German Agricultural Gazette write to announce the complete extirpation of rats and mice from their cow-stalls and piggeries since the adoption of this simple plan.

A DRINKING VESSEL FOR CHICKS.—Make air-tight a fruit or oyster can. On one side, half an inch from the bottom, punch three holes, each one-quarter of an inch in diameter. Before these holes solder to the can a piece of tin to form a trough one inch deep. Upon the side opposite, at the top, solder also a ring by which to hang the can to the side of the coop. Fill it by immersing it for a few moments in a pail of water. The secret is in the air holes' being in the trough, so that water can escape only when they are uncovered. So long as the trough is clean the water will be pure. Chicks must be kept supplied with water, and it must be in vessels not deep enough to drown them.—Fancier's Journal.

THE farmer who calculates to make his living by farming cannot afford to lose a knowledge of the best methods in practice, and he cannot hope to learn these methods by his own experience even if that experience be a rich one. He cannot afford to lose the money which he certainly will by selling his produce blindly, without knowing the conditions of the market and the things which affect its rise and fall. If he is successful without taking a paper, it is because he gets his information from those who do. Any farmer who may have taken this paper for even a short period can recall the numberless ways in which he may have taken advantage of hints and facts noted in the various departments, and turned them to his profit.—Detroit Free Press.

MANY of our neighbors' cherry trees are becoming knotty, and dying. A lady narrated in our hearing, a few evenings since, her experience with a tree of the same description. A large tree, of the common red variety, stood beside the kitchen door. The body and limbs were knotty and rough, the fruit scanty and worthless; the dead leaves in fall were continually drifting over the porch and walk; in fact, in the good house-wife's eyes, the tree was simply a nuisance, and she importuned her husband to remove it. He refused to do this, however, and she determined to kill the tree. First, a barrel of beef brine was poured about the roots, and this was followed by boiling suds, every wash-day. The result was satisfactory, but far from that anticipated. The following season the tree was loaded with superior fruit, and was free from all knots, or other defects. The enormous crop and changed appearance of the tree might not have been attributable to the application of the brine and soap-suds, yet we believe the experiment to be worthy of trial. Our own trees have never been troubled in that way.—Moore's Rural.

About the House.

FEED milk to children.

FRESH poultry has bright eyes.

ROASTING meats is extravagant.

DO NOT make your bread too light.

FAT is not cheap at the price of meat.

FISH will broil in from five to ten minutes.

STALE bread may be steamed into freshness.

SCALDED skim-milk will go as far as fresh milk.

"MIDDLINGS" flour contains the best elements of wheat.

ADD pea or bean-meal to your bread flour for nourishment.

SALMON and sturgeon are red-blooded, and are as nutritious as meat.

SALT meats should be simmered; they should not be fiercely boiled.

FOUR ounces of lime to a gallon of water will be all that is necessary for keeping milk sweet.

VEGETABLES supply the place of meat. Vegetables should be cooked, if possible, in water in which meat has been cooked.

IN washing fine flannels, make the soap into a jelly with warm water and dry quickly. Do not put too near the fire when drying. To keep shirts from shrinking, stretch them on a board.

NEW-YEAR'S MARBLE CAKE.—White Part—Whites of four eggs, one cup white sugar, half cup of butter, half cup sweet milk, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one teaspoonful of vanilla or lemon, and two and a half cups of sifted flour. Black Part—Yolks of four eggs, one cup brown sugar, half cup molasses (Porto Rico), half cup butter, half cup sour milk, one teaspoonful cloves, one teaspoonful cinnamon, one teaspoonful mace, one nutmeg, one teaspoonful soda, and two and a half cups sifted flour. Put in the cake-dish alternately, first one part and then the other. The dish should be lined with buttered paper.

AN ECONOMICAL CHRISTMAS PUDDING.—Soak some dried apples all night, in the morning chop them very fine. Put a teacupful of them into a pint of molasses and put them upon the back of the stove, where they will keep slightly warm for an hour or two. After that add to them one cup of chopped suet, one cup of water, one cup of chopped raisins, a pinch of salt, a teaspoonful of cinnamon, three half pints of flour, and two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Put the flour in last and stir all together thoroughly. Boil two and a half hours in a bowl or tin pudding mold. This may be eaten with wine sauce, and is a very good imitation of a genuine plum pudding.

The Finest Church in America.

The great Catholic cathedral on Fifth avenue, which has now been nearly twenty years in building, promises soon to be completed. The building has been repeatedly delayed by the absence of funds to carry on the necessary work, but it is calculated the requisite help will be forthcoming to accomplish the remainder of the design, which is pure Gothic. The main exterior of the cathedral, the roof included, is already finished, and all that remains to be built up outside are the towers on the Fifth avenue front, the parapet around the side aisles, and the pinnacles connected therewith. The grading of the surrounding land will be the last piece of labor, and that will not involve much cost. Standing within the main aisle of the cathedral, the impression it gives is one of harmonious vastness. The great clustering pillars, larger than those of the Cathedral of Notre Dame in Paris, have nothing like an appearance of bulk or heaviness as the pillars of Notre Dame have. They do not seem in the least to interfere with the view, and, though each section of a pillar weighs eight tons, they look as light and graceful in the coup-d'œil as so many single slender columns of about twelve inches in diameter.

The whole interior at the present moment is covered with scaffolding which, at the extreme elevation of the ceiling, resembles a spider's web, so great is the height of the roof from the ground floor. The plastering appears to have been almost entirely done, and the coloring of the ceiling, intended to give it the appearance of stone, was the only work going on in the afternoon of yesterday. It has a triforium like Notre Dame away near the spring of the roof, but it is hardly likely it will ever be used in these modern days for the same purposes it was intended in the early time of Gothic ecclesiastical architecture. There will be at least ten side chapels, and the main altar will have a space around it, giving ample room for large and impressive effects in the matter of decoration.

The Cathedral of Notre Dame in Montreal and the celebrated cathedral in Mexico have hitherto put in rival claims for pre-eminence as ecclesiastical structures on the continent of America; but, though each in its way is vast and imposing, neither can attempt to compare in beauty of material and design with that on Fifth avenue.

The raising of this temple to the worship of God has been, like most efforts in the same line of the Catholics in this country, slow and painful, but bound, as it would seem, to be solid and successful. The money has come in in a rather sluggish stream, but none the less surely, and the cathedral will inevitably be finished and prove the greatest ornament of the city.

The cathedral has so far cost about $1,500,000. A vast amount of brick-work has been done in its construction, but not a trace of it is visible to the eye.

The foundation-stone was laid by Archbishop Hughes, in the summer of 1858. The towers are at present raised 150 feet to the base of the spires, which will ascend 285 feet higher.—New York Herald.

A Woman's Spite.

One of the queerest manifestations of feminine rancor that we have heard of lately is reported from Rochester. A married woman named Maggie Connors announced to a policeman that she was about to steal a pair of shoes in order to be sent to the penitentiary. He endeavored to dissuade her, but she carried out her intention by pilfering from a store a pair of rubber over-shoes. With this trophy in her possession Maggie made her appearance at the police office and entered a complaint against herself. Remonstrance was useless. She declared that if not convicted and sent up she would commit some other crime. So a fine of $10 was imposed, with the alternative of sixty days in the penitentiary. And then the motive for this strange performance came to light. The woman had been quarreling with her husband and chose this method of wreaking vengeance upon him. It is to be hoped that Mr. Connors will refuse to pay the fine, and let his ingenious spouse serve out her sixty days at hard labor.—Troy Times.

A Dog's Age.

If you want to buy a dog the following piece of information may prove of service: The way to tell the age of a dog approximately is to examine the upper front teeth. Until eighteen months old these are rounded on the edge; at the end of two years they begin to square off, and gradually wear down and shorten, until, when the animal has entered the sixth year, they are nearly even with the gums. The appearance of the eye is also an indication of age, and all dark-colored dogs show their years by the growth of white hairs about the muzzle.

The Navy.

Secretary Thompson, in his annual report, says the active list of the navy is composed of 829 officers of the line, 594 officers of the staff, and 249 warrant officers. The retired list comprises 135 officers of the line, 103 officers of the staff, 27 warrant officers, and 4 professors of mathematics. There were in the service on the 24th day of November, 1877, 7,012 enlisted men and boys.

OUR EXPORTS AND IMPORTS.

A Balance of $[illegible] in Our Favor the Last Ten Months.

Following is a comparative statement of the imports and exports of the United States for the month ended October, 1877, and for the ten months ended the same, compared with like data for the corresponding period of the year immediately preceding. Corrected to Nov. 30, 1877:—

	Merchandise.	For October.	For Ten Months Ended Oct. 31.
1877	Exports—Domestic	$37,549,542	$474,766,186
	Foreign	1,321,580	9,910,826
	Total	$38,871,092	$484,677,010
	Imports	41,329,379	418,126,792
	Excess of exports	[illegible]	[illegible]
1876	Exports—Domestic	[illegible]	[illegible]
	Foreign	745,704	11,[illegible]
	Total	$50,446,127	$458,862,784
	Imports	[illegible]	[illegible]
	Excess of exports	$15,915,479	$93,649,941
	Gold and Silver—(Coin and Bullion).
1877	Exports—Domestic	$1,698,583	$34,092,400
	Foreign	317,379	10,135,484
	Total	$2,016,962	$44,227,916
	Imports	1,668,896	19,785,970
	Excess of exports	$352,066	$25,041,946
1876	Exports—Domestic	$1,284,784	$42,962,600
	Foreign	1,246,490	6,611,071
	Total	$2,531,264	$50,563,671
	Imports	5,514,618	15,693,624
	Excess of exports	......	$34,870,047
	Excess of imports	$2,983,364	......
	Total Merchandise and Specie.
1877	Exports—Domestic	$59,349,925	$506,488,687
	Foreign	1,639,039	20,045,239
	Total	$60,981,964	$529,504,926
	Imports	43,496,274	432,921,763
	Excess of exports	$17,985,690	$96,583,164
1876	Exports—Domestic	$50,979,120	$499,912,190
	Foreign	2,089,271	19,214,235
	Total	$52,971,391	$519,126,425
	Imports	40,069,276	380,606,437
	Excess of exports	$12,902,115	$138,519,988

Christmas and the Children.

In all the celebrations and observances of Christmas, it remained for the good-humored, materialistic Germans to bethink them of rendering it a period of peculiar pleasure for children. By the Germans Christmas is esteemed the "Children's Festival;" and with them originated the world-famous myth of Saint Nicholas, alias Santa Claus, alias Kris Kringle, the patron of Yule-tide and the friend of all proper boys and prettily-behaved little girls.

Happily the reform in the observance of the day, which began in Germany, reached and was copied in other portions of Europe. Christmas is now, as well, "Children's Day" in England and France; in toys and confections for the period the children are distinctly remembered in Italy, and in America the Christmas tree, the Stockings hung by the chimney with care, and the harmless, merry games and innocent glee of childhood supplant much of the boisterous carousal which once tended to render the day rollicking and riotous.

It was formerly the custom, and is still the practice in some of the small villages of North Germany, to commission a personage known as Knecht Rupert, corresponding with our Santa Claus, to distribute all the presents made by parents and friends of the children. Disguised by a mask, wearing an enormous flaxen beard, clad in a long white robe, and shod in tall buskins, Knecht Rupert went from house to house, was received by the parents with great ceremony, called for the children, and, after the strictest investigation into their deserving, dispensed gifts accordingly. Santa Claus, we all know, deports himself differently. When busiest he is invisible, and generally he is amiable, forgiving of the shortcomings to which child-humanity is liable, but now and then does not hesitate to leave a rod, in token of his estimate of some particularly unruly lass or ungovernable lad.

The Yule Log.

In accordance with the scriptural teaching that "Christ is the true light which shall lighten every man that cometh into the world," and the "Light of Lights" promised in the prophecies to the Gentiles, the Christmas, or Yule festival, was also called by the early Christians "The Feast of Lights." In the ancient days of both the Western and Eastern churches (and to the present in the Church of Rome) large and highly-ornamented wax-candles are burned in the Christmas celebration. Out of this custom, most probably, grew the introduction of the Yule block, clog or log, in the rural districts of England, after the Christian religion had there become established.

Except in church observances, the use of the Christmas candle is now obsolete. The Yule log, for the fire of Christmas eve, in many portions of England and Scotland, is still gathered early in autumn and preserved for the purpose, or, in its stead, when the log or block cannot be obtained, an enormous lump of coal is laid by for the occasion and purpose. The same custom prevails in certain sections of Virginia and other of the Southern States, the inhabitants of which are of English descent. This was notably the case in the rural districts of Eastern Virginia during the existence of slavery. The preservation of the block for the "back-log" of the Christmas fire was a matter of no small concern with plantation negroes; and white boys and black extemporized Christmas cannon of large, dry logs of wood, drilling holes in, and charging them with gunpowder, and exploding by percussion or ignition. The first of these Christmas guns was usually fired off at midnight of Christmas eve; and from this time until morning, bad luck to the man, woman or child in the vicinity who could not sleep, even amid the noises of battle.

A Hard Winter Predicted.

The predictions that the present winter will be an exceedingly cold one are based by Astronomer Royal Smith, of the Royal observatory, Scotland, upon observations of earth thermometers for over thirty-nine years. He finds that between 1837 and 1876 three great heat waves from without struck Great Britain; the first in 1845-46, the second in 1858-59, the third in 1867-68. The next one will probably come in 1879-80, within the limit of half a year each way. The periods of minimum temperature, or greatest cold, are not in the middle time between the years of these great heat waves, but are comparatively close upon them on each side, at a distance of about a year and a half. Hence, the next cold wave is due at the end of the present year, and frigid weather may be expected.

The True Bostonian Spirit.

An old tramp, with his face shrunken with hunger, was overturning the contents of an offal wagon down Main street, last Tuesday afternoon, trying to fish out a lunch, when a policeman came along and asked: "Why don't you go to work sawin' wood, or diggin' clams, or somethin' and earn enough to get you a square meal, and not be stuffin' yourself with this [illegible] garbage? Bum-by, 'afore you know it, you'll be dead, and the city 'ill have to send your corpse up to the Brighton abattoir." The old outlaw stepped down on the sidewalk, and, as he wiped his tangled whiskers, he said: "Pretty tuff times, boss, when er man hes ter git his wittles out of er swill wagon! I hain't used to sich business as this, and don't you forgit it; my father was one of the richest men on this continent once; he owned more'n half the city of Boston, and I was brought up in the lap of luxury, as it ware; I graduated at Harvard College, and know'd twenty different languages; knowed all about astronamy; could tell ye how fur the planits Satan, Versuvious, Juniper and Venice was from the earth, and could repeat the whole Bible from the first chapter of Adam clear through to the landing of Noah's ark on Plymouth rock." Then the policeman looked as if he was going to drop down dead for a moment, then he rallied and struck across the street, muttering: "Well, I aware, I never heered anything equil that for ignerence, never."—Boston Traveller.

To be Printed in School Books.

Reader, your eyesight is worth more to you than any information you are likely to gain from this book, however valuable that may be. You are, therefore, earnestly cautioned:

1. To be sure that you have sufficient light, and that your position be such that you not only avoid the direct rays upon your eyes, but that you also avoid the angle of reflection. In writing, the light should be received over the left shoulder.

2. That you avoid a stooping position and a forward inclination of the head. Hold the book up. Sit erect also when you write.

3. That at brief intervals you rest the eyes by looking off and away from the book for a few moments.

And you are further cautioned to avoid as much as possible books and papers printed in small type, and especially such as are poorly printed; also, to avoid straining or overtaxing the sight in any way. Boys may need to be reminded of the great importance of thoroughly cleansing the eyes with soft, pure water both morning and evening.

Steam Power.

According to the statement in the Polytechnic Review, the aggregate steam motive power at present in use in the world is 3,500,000 horse-power employed in stationary engines, and 10,000,000 horse-power in locomotive engines, making a total of 13,500,000 horse-power. This force is maintained without the use of animal food, except by the miners who dig the coal and provide the fuel, and the force maintained in the muscles is to that generated by the product labor as about one to 1,000. This steam-power is equal to the working force of 25,000,000 horses, and one horse consumes three times as much food as one man; the steam-power, therefore, is equivalent to the saving of food for 75,000,000 human beings. Again, three power-looms, attended by one man, produce daily seventy-eight pieces of cotton fabric against four pieces produced by one loom worked by one man in 1800, and so the list might be indefinitely extended of what is accomplished by the use of steam-power and labor-saving machinery.

Pins.

The quantity of pins now produced daily in England is said to be 50,000,000, of which Birmingham produces 37,000,000, leaving some 13,000,000 to London, Warrington, Stroud, and Dublin, where the article is also made. The weight of wire consumed annually in the pin manufacture of England is set down at about 1,275 tons, one-eighth of this being iron wire, used in the production of mourning and hair pins. The consumption of brass wire amounts to 2,500,000 pounds, valued at nearly $600,000, and of iron wire some 345,000 pounds, worth about $36,000—to these values being added, of course, those for wages, paper, ornamental envelopes, boxes, wear and tear of machinery, manufacturers' profits, etc. Mourning, hair, entomological, and japanned pins—that is, those stuck in rows—realize a larger profit than pins sold by weight. Taking it altogether, the pin manufacture of the United Kingdom is not overestimated, it is thought, at the aggregate amount of $1,000,000. In the United States, the weight of pins produced in a year is set down at 1,120,000 pounds.

Patents.

During the year ending June 30, 1877, 19,991 applications for patents were filed. The number of patents issued, including reissues and designs, was 14,459; the number of caveats filed was 2,658; 1,008 patents were allowed but not issued, because the final fee was not issued; 1,257 applications for registration of trade-marks were received, 968 trade-marks were registered; 324 labels were registered. The total receipts of the office from all sources were $714,964.73; the total expenditures were $609,043.24, leaving an excess of $105,921.44.—Report of the Commissioner of Patents.

A New Motive Power.

On the corner of Church and Barclay streets, says the New York Evening Mail, is a model of a steamship, which, the inventor claims, will be propelled by the motion of the sea. The pitching of the vessel is to be utilized by an iron platform extending from the keel at the stern of the ship, the pressure of the water giving it a vibratory motion; a hinged keel the whole length of the ship is expected to communicate power to the machinery when the vessel rolls.

ALL SORTS.

IOWA has thus far expended $1,250,000 on her State Capitol.

A WOMAN in New Albany, Ind., has been married eight times.

THE total cost to the State of New York of suppressing the railway riots was $290,000.

FORTY-TWO days per year are deducted for good conduct from the terms of Virginia convicts.

IRISH people in Boston have the past year sent to their home friends, through one office alone, $114,579.

SCHOOL savings banks, first introduced by Prof. Laurent in 1866, have proved very successful in France.

IT is observed that modern history affords no example of a man of 80 who was so important to his country as was Thiers.

WADE HAMPTON is soon to be married to a beautiful and wealthy widow, prominent as one of the leaders of Louisville society.

THE first foundry in Pittsburgh was erected in 1808. The first cannon made west of the Alleghanies was cast in this foundry in 1811.

INDIAN custom makes the squaw property, as much as a pony or a blanket, and the right of the husband to kill his wife is never disputed.

SENATOR DAVID DAVIS is said to be one of the most popular men in Congress. He is a teller of stories, and is sought for dinner-parties.

MESSRS. FLOOD & O'BRIEN, the great mine owners of Nevada, propose to send to the Paris Exhibition one solid brick of silver four feet square.

HAWK shooting forms quite a business in Custer county, Col. Sixty cents per head is paid by the County Treasurer. One man brought in sixty a few days ago.

A CAVE has been discovered near Wytheville, Va., which is said to rival the Mammoth cave of Kentucky in extent and beauty.

MR. JOHN MCCULLOUGH, the actor, who has been calling upon the President, says that Mr. Hayes has a remarkably thorough acquaintance with the works of Shakspeare.

THERE is a crusade against dancing in Baltimore social circles. Many young ladies who are church members are dropping the amusement from their party engagements.

THE Russian debt was, in 1831, 220,000,000 roubles; in 1847, 315,000,000; in 1860, 515,000,000; in 1875, 700,000,000. In 1878 it will have reached 1,193,809,956 roubles, equal to $501,557,700.

THROUGH the prosperity of its tobacco industry Lynchburg, Va., now boasts a population of 17,000, a property valuation of $6,530,476, and many handsome buildings in what used to be the suburbs.

THE Bulgarians are the most ignorant people of Europe. Their ferociousness is said to have originated the well-worn term "bugaboo" with which Vienna parents formerly threatened their offspring.

IT is believed by the Chinese that the inventor of ink is charged with keeping an account of the manner in which all ink is used here below, and that for every abuse of it he records a black mark against the offender.

PAPA WRANGEL, as the Berlin gamins called the old General to his face, persisted to the last in lying on a sofa in full uniform instead of going to bed, saying that a soldier must always hold himself in readiness to wait on his sovereign.

COL. INGERSOLL'S recent lecture in Albany has roused a protest from the clergy of that city, which protest is addressed to the President of the Young Men's Association, under whose auspices the lecture was given. The association has consequently passed a resolution disclaiming its belief in Col. Ingersoll's views of religion.

THE DEAD BEE.

Where honeysuckles scent the way,
I heard thee humming yesterday;
Thy little life was not in vain,
It gathered sweets from other's gain,
And somewhere in a dainty cell
Is stored delicious hydromel.
O poet! in thy calm retreat,
From joy and grief extracting sweet,
Some day thy fancy's wings must fold
And thou lie motionless and cold.
Perhaps thy garnered honey then
May be the food of living men.

—Fletcher Bates, in Scribner's Monthly.

AN iron mountain, 10,500 feet high, and rivaling the famous iron mountain of Missouri, has been discovered in Colfax county, New Mexico. The ore is almost entirely pure iron, and in connection with the immense quantities of coal found in Colfax county this huge deposit of iron ore must at no distant day become the source of industries which will gather and support a large and thriving population.

FROM the census taken at the close of last year, it appears that France was divided in 1876 into 362 arrondissements, 2,863 cantons, and 36,056 communes, with a total population of 36,905,788. This population was made up as follows: 18,373,639 males, of whom 9,805,761 were unmarried; 7,587,259 married men, 980,619 widowers; 18,532,149 females, of whom 8,944,386 were unmarried, 7,567,080 married women, and 2,020,683 widows.

TROUBLE AHEAD.

Merry Christmas! girls and boys,
Santa Claus, with team and toys,
Now is starting on his way
With his overladen sleigh—
Never heeding cold or wetting,
Not a single town forgetting;
But a puzzled look he bears
As he moves among his wares;
And I doubt if ever yet
Was Santa Claus in such a pet.
Now he purses up his lips,
Snaps his rosy finger-tips;
All in vain he scans his store,
Names the children o'er and o'er—
Just one boy deserves a switch,
And he has forgotten which.

NEXT to wine, cider is the liquor most consumed in France, but, within the last twenty years the consumption has fallen from forty-two to thirty-five gallons per head annually. Its use is now confined to the northwestern departments. The consumption of beer steadily increases, but is almost entirely confined to the departments contiguous to Belgium. Experience has demonstrated that white wines are much more likely than red to act on the nervous system.

WM. DOOLEY, an amateur detective in search of two cattle thieves, found them at church at White Sulphur, Ky., whereupon, pistol in hand, he informed preacher and congregation that they were all under arrest. While everybody looked astonished, he picked out his men, marched them out of the building at the muzzle of his weapon, and, turning on the step, shouted to the minister that he could go on with the benediction.

A YOUNG man at a rifle-match in Portland, Ore., when his turn came at the target, shot a bystander through the heart. The killing may have been accidental, but the two men were bitter enemies, and there is doubt on the subject.

PERHAPS about the best pay ever given a doctor was that of Dr. Willis, a "mad doctor," who, for attending the demented Queen of Portugal, received £10,000, and £1,000 a month during his stay. George III., then mad, said in surprise to Willis that he was astonished to see a respectable man like him playing such a part. "Why, sir," replied Willis, "our Lord himself went about healing the sick and doing good." "Yes," replied the King, "but he wasn't paid £1,500 a year for doing it."

Mormondom.

An observer in Utah says that John Taylor, who, before Brigham Young's death, was regarded as a fanatic, has caused general surprise since he obtained control by his conservative disposition and his determination to act on a line of policy different from Brigham's. He declared that there should be no oppression in church affairs, and that the people should be left free to contribute their tithings as they saw fit. He ruled that there should be kept a full account of all the receipts and expenditures of church money, and this account should be regularly reported at the conferences. He has commenced a rigid examination of all the church books, and he promises to bring to light every hidden or mysterious affair connected with the church finances.

Actors' Salaries.

The following are the salaries paid to some of the leading stock actors of the New York theaters:

	Per week.		Per week.
John Gilbert	$175	Charles Thorne	$200
Montague	250	Charles Fisher	125
Effie Germon	100	Stoddart	125
Rose Coghlan	175	Davidge	100
Katherine Rogers	175	Harry Beckett	200
O'Neil	125	Clara Morris	200
Fanny Morant	140	Coghlan	350

Lord & Taylor,

NEW YORK.

WE INFORM THE LADIES OF AUBURN THAT OUR MAIL AND EXPRESS DEPARTMENT IS NOW SO THOROUGHLY ORGANIZED THEY CAN DO THEIR OWN SHOPPING IN NEW YORK WITHOUT THE EXPENSE OF TRAVELING THERE. WE SEND SAMPLES OF PIECE GOODS WITH PRICES PLAINLY MARKED, AND CATALOGUES OF LADIES', MISSES' AND CHILDREN'S FURNISHING GOODS BY MAIL TO APPLICANTS WHO SEND US THEIR PROPER ADDRESS, FREE OF CHARGE, AND IF THEY EXPLAIN CLEARLY THE KIND OF GOODS WANTED. WE SELDOM FAIL IN SUITING THEM. FROM THE PRINTED CATALOGUE THEY CAN ALWAYS MAKE SELECTION OF GARMENTS THAT WILL GIVE SATISFACTION, AND IT IS ONLY NECESSARY TO GIVE THE PROPER MEASUREMENTS TO INSURE SUCCESS.

OUR IMPORTATIONS

OF THIS SEASON GIVE US AN UNEQUALED STOCK OF GOODS.

BLACK SILKS, handsome and durable, all widths, $1.00 to $3.50. The GREAT AMERICAN INDESTRUCTIBLE SILK, $1.20, $1.25, and $1.50.

PLAIN COLORED SILKS, new shades, commencing as low as 75c. per yard, and at $1.00, same as quality of last season at $1.25.

Fancy Broche and Damasse Figures of the new Paris shades, from $2.00 upwards. Trimming Satins at $1.00, worth $1.25.

THE PRICES AT WHICH WE OFFER OUR SILKS ARE ONE-QUARTER TO ONE-THIRD LESS THAN LAST SEASON.

NOVELTIES IN DRESS GOODS

give a richer display of colorings and brilliant effects this season than for many years past, and we are receiving by every European Steamer fresh additions to our stock.

The mixed COSTUME CLOTHS range in price from 50c. a yard to $3.00, and on low-priced DRESS GOODS from 10c a yard up, many of them being as effective as the heavier fabrics.

SHAWLS, MANTLES & WRAPS.

India Valley Cashmere Shawls from $100.00 up. India Filled Centers at $60.00 and up.

Real Decca, Chedda and Striped India Shawls, new designs, from $10.00 upwards. Also, full lines British, French and German Shawls in beautiful new styles, of the best and most reliable manufacture. Paris Mantles and Cloaks of the latest modes from $15.00 up, and Berlin from $8.00.

Ladies' and Children's Suits and Fine Under-Clothing.

These departments embrace everything pertaining to Female Costume, suited to all ages and circumstances. For full particulars see catalogues.

HOSIERY.

Ladies', Misses' and Children's Hosiery from $1.50 a dozen up to the finest goods. All the newest and prettiest designs in Hosiery are represented in our stock in Silk, Cotton and Merino.

"A thing of beauty is a joy forever," and beautiful stockings are now considered an indispensable part of female attire.

GLOVES.

Kid, Silk, Lisle Thread and Merino Gloves of the new colors and shapes, in great variety.

Lord & Taylor's Kid Gloves, 2 buttons, warranted, at $1.00 per pair; price last season, $1 50.

ALSO,

Lace, Cambric, Linen and Silk Handkerchiefs, and beautiful Neckerchiefs, all prices, from 25c. upward, and all kinds Dress Trimmings to match our Goods.

MOURNING DEPARTMENT.

French and English Crapes, Grenadines and Organdies, Bombazines, Henrietta Cloth, $1.00 up; French Cashmere, 50c. up; Biarritz Cloth, Serges, Australian Crapes and other desirable fabrics at very low prices.

We make up full suits of MOURNING from measure at short notice. Mourning Jet Jewelry and all small articles of Mourning in variety.

DOMESTIC AND HOUSEKEEPING GOODS.

Sheetings, Pillow Cloths, Blankets, Quilts, Comfortables, Flannels, and, in fact, every article required in this line, we always sell at manufacturers' prices.

White Goods and Linens, from the finest White Cambric to the best Linen Damask of all grades and qualities, and at satisfactory prices.

FURS.

Alaska Seal Sacques, from $65.00 up.
Alaska Seal Muffs, from $6.00 up.
Alaska Seal Boas, from $5.00 up.
Mink Muffs and Boas, from $13.50 a set upward.
Silk Fur-Lined Garments, from $35.00.
Alaska Sable Sets, from $7.50.
A good set of Furs as low as $5.00.

☞ Our Goods are all first-class. We make a point to fill all orders exactly and to the interest of purchasers. We guarantee all purchases to be satisfactory to buyers, and stand ready to remedy all errors. We invite orders, convinced that a first trial will insure us the regular custom hereafter.

All orders for Goods to be accompanied by the money, or where parties wish Goods will be sent by Express C. O. D. Where the remittance is too large, we always return the difference.

Broadway and Twentieth St.,
Grand, Chrystie and Forsyth Sts.,
NEW YORK.

DAVENPORT THE DRUGGIST

Would call the attention of the public to his splendid stock of

PURE DRUGS AND MEDICINES!

Which have been selected with especial refference to the wants of this locality, and warranted fresh and genuine. Also to his fine stock of

HAIR OILS AND PERFUMERY.

The finest in the county. He also keeps a full stock of

Toilet Soaps, Face Powders, Combs, Brushes, Sponges, etc. Also Trusses and Supporters, in large varieties and a full Stock of DRUGGIST'S SUNDRIES.

SCHOOL BOOKS WALL PAPER AND CURTAINS!

The largest and most complete stock in Northern Indiana. Be sure to call on

DAVENPORT.

His stock is very complete and PRICES WAY DOWN. Also a full line of,

GOLD PENS, ALBUMS, POCKET BOOKS, BLANK BOOKS, INK and STATIONERY.

Be sure and call on

DAVENPORT, THE DRUGGIST,
AUBURN, IND

FRUIT HOUSE PRICES!

Great Reduction on Sugars

All grades reduced 1 cent per pound; the lowest they have sold for fifteen years. Best white coffee sugar 10c, best coffee C 9c, choice yellow sugar 8c.

An immense stock of all goods for

CHRISTMAS AND NEW YEARS!

Candies, Nuts, Toys, Liquors and Cigars.

TEAS!

Fifty more chests of the choice 40c tea and 40 chests of the good 25c tea. We sell large amounts of these two teas; being good drawers, strong and well flavored We now sell more chests of tea in a month than we used to in a year, and this comes simply from our purchasing direct of the importers and selling direct to our customers, thereby saving the profit of the middle men, which is 20 to 40c on the pound.

Young Hyson Tea,	25, 50, 70, best 90 cents per pound
Gunpowder Tea,	60, 70, best 90 cents per pound
Imperial Tea,	40 60, best 90 cents per pound
Oolong Tea.	25, 60, best 70 cents per pound
Japan Uncolored Tea,	35, 50, best 70 cents per pound

COFFEE! COFFEE!

Our Best Rio, 22 cents. Good Fine Rio, 20 cents. Old Government Java, 30 cents.

SYRUPS.

Cuba 40 and 50 cents. New Orleans, 50 and 75 cents White Drips, 75 cts. and $1.

RAISENS, and ZANTEE CURRENTS for CHRISTMAS CAKE, CITRON, LEMON and ORANGE PEEL.

Valencia raisins per pound 6c. Best layers raisins 12½c. Zantee currents 9c Leghorn citron 25c. Orange and Lemon peal 30c,

CANDIES.

Toy candies of all kinds. Stick candy per pound 18c. French mixed 20c. Toy candy all sorts and varieties 30c. Toys for Santa Claus from a penny whistle to a nice album to make presents with a thousand different things to amuse the little ones—Dogs, cats, rats, mice, birds, elephants, lions, tigers, drums, wagons, horses, Chineese lanterns, pistol caps, &c., something for every little one in the country.

And for Christmas tree candles we have a large assortment of every color, from ½ cent to 2 cents each or 50c per box.

OILS. OILS. OIL!

Coal Oil per gallon, 20 cents. Headlight Oil per gallon 25 cents. Lard Oil, per gallon, $1.00
Fish Oil per gallon, $1.00. Best Golden Machine Oil per gal. 70c. Machine Oil per gal. 30c

Nuts for Christmas and New Years.

Brazil nuts 10c. Filberts, quart 15c. Almons, qurrt 25c. English walnuts, quart 15c. Pecans, quart 12 1-2c. Roasted pea nuts quart 5c.

Liquors of all Kinds for Medical use Whisky, Rum, Brandy, Gin, Wines and Ales.

Good old bourbon $1 and $1.25. 2 years old $1.40 and 1.50. Best old 76 for medical use $2.50. Sherry Wine as good as any in the country $1.50. Port wine best in the market $1.50. California Angelica wine best $1.50. Gin $1.50 and $2.50. Dublin and London Porter 22c. Scotch 22c.

TOBACCOS AND CIGRS.

A No. 1 smoking for 30c per pound. Choice fine cut 50c per pound. No. 1 Plug Tobacco 50c per pound.

We have a large assortment and can sell a good cigar at $1.25 per box. And a choice No. 1 cigar for $1.75 per 100.

FRESH OYSTERS LOWER THIS YEAR THAN MEAT—We sell a fine Oyste at 12½. No. 1 full count saloon oyster 20c. Large A standard 30c.

You can save at least 25 per cent. on the dollar at the

Fruit House, Fort Wayne, Ind

JOHN L. DAVIS,

OF THE

PIONEER HARDWARE STORE,

Would respectfully announce that he has made large additions in every department, and is prepared to furnish everything in the Hardwase line.

He keeps a full stock of

BUILDING MATERIAL.

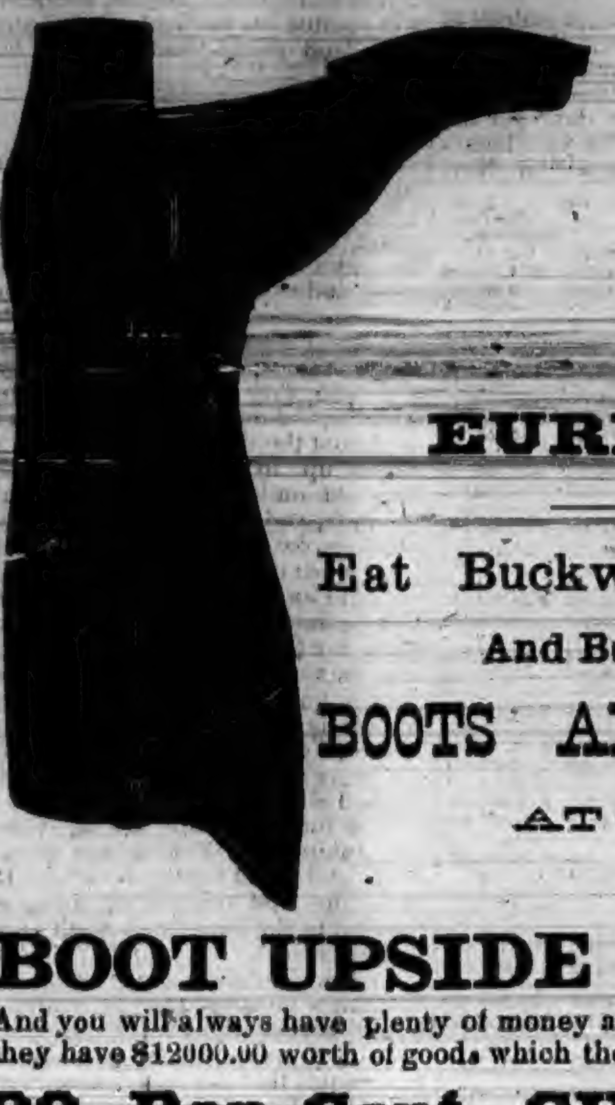
Whichhe can sell at prices to suit the times. All kinds of

STOVES and TINWARE

on hand. He keeps a first-class TINMR and prepared todo all kinds of Eaves Trough hangnig Roofing, on short notice, and in a workmanlike manner.

MAIN STREET, OPPOSITE COURT HOUSE AUBURN, IND

AUSTIN ALWAYS ALIVE!



EUREKA!

Eat Buckwheat Cakes

And Buy Your

BOOTS AND SHOES

AT THE

BOOT UPSIDE DOWN!

And you will always have plenty of money and be happy—because they have $12000.00 worth of goods which they sell

20 Per Cent. CHEAPER

Than any other house in this county.

MEN'S GUM BOOTS $3.50

Save your money by trading at the

BOOT UPSIDE DOWN.

BOSS HARNESS SHOP.

I have purchased the harness stock of Geo. Nock, and added largely to every description of stock that is usually kept in my line of trade, such as

HARNESS, DOUBLE AND SINGLE!
Bufalo Robes, Lap Robes,
Horse Blankets, Collars,
Whips, Brushes, Combs,
Harness Oil, Axel Greese,
Fine Ready-made Harness,
Double and Single a Specialty.

Manufactured by the most experienced workman that can be found in Northern Indiana, I employ none other, none other need apply. I would say to all customer frends that I will warrant all stock and work that goes out of my shop as recommended. I us none but the best Oak tanned Leather. I would invite all in need of goods in my line to call at my shop before purchasing elsewhere Shop in Flukes old Tannery Building on corner Jackson and seventh St. As I am bound not be undersold in the same class of goods in Northern Indiana

Being an old farmer formily I keep a very effable experienced Foreman to see that all work is well done. Repairing done with neatness and dispatch.

J. E. SHILLING, Sole Proprietor.
W. SHEFFER, Foreman.

DOWN! DOWN! DOWN!

FROM 10 TO 25 PER CENT.

HARNESS, SADELES,

COLLARS, WHIPS, &c.,

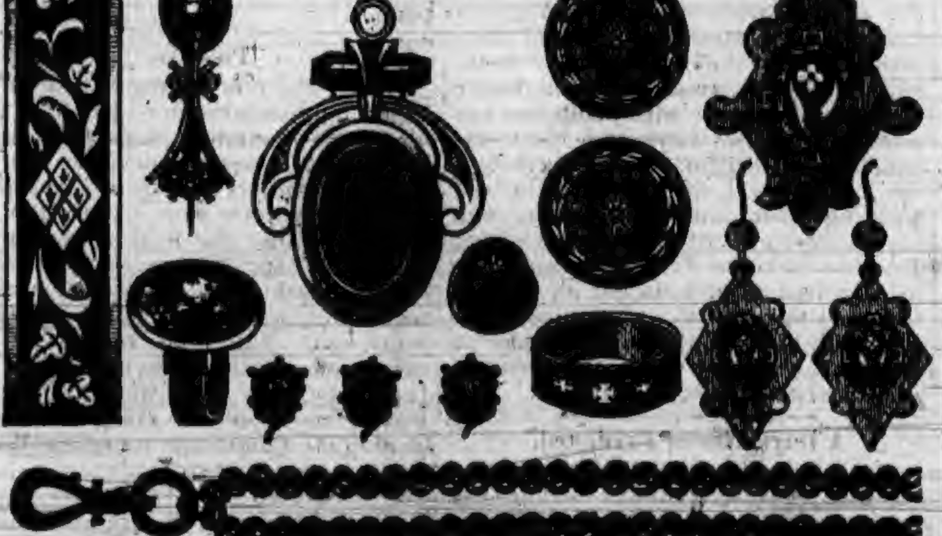
At my new shop on seventh street, opposite Court House, in old Post Office building. Come and see me and I will sell you a good article for less money than you ever heard of before. All work warranted.

G. RHODENBAUGH & CO

GOLDEN OPPORTUNITY.

In order to introduce our 40-page illustrated Catalogue (in book form) of Jewelry and Watches, with full information How to Become Agents, and Make Money, we will send, on receipt of One Dollar, by return mail, this Illustrated Catalogue, together with

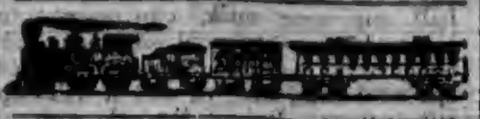
OUR ONE DOLLAR GOLDEN CASKET.



OUR DOLLAR CASKET Contains one elegantly engraved Lady's Brooch and Ear Drops, Amethyst settings, inlaid with Pearls; one beautiful Cut Cameo Ring; one fine pair of Engraved Sleeve Buttons; three (3) grand spiral Amethyst Studs, inlaid with Pearls; one nobby Collar Button; one latest pattern Lady's or Gent's Pompadour Neck Chain; one elegant Cameo Seal; one beautiful chased Band Ring; one solitaire Lake George Diamond Pin; one pair (2) elegant engraved Bracelets. All the above are the Finest Gold Plate, and arranged in a beautiful white, pink-lined casket. Illustrated Catalogue of Jewelry and Watches sent with each casket. On receipt of One Dollar we will send one of these Dollar Caskets, by mail, post-paid, or Four Caskets on receipt of $3.50. Address,

GEO. G. JACOBY & CO., Importers of Jewelry and Watches,
117 Wisconsin Street, Milwaukee, Wis.

RAILROADS.



Lake Shore & Mich Southern R R

AIR LINE DIVISION.

On and after Nov. 18 1877, trains will run as follows:

GOING WEST

	Special Ex.	Pacific Ex.	Accm
Toledo	11 05 a m	12.01 a m	5 20 p m
Wauseon	12 12 "	1 07 "	6 35 "
Bryan	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Butler	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Waterloo	1 50 "	2 40 "	8 57 "
Sedan	"	"	"
Corunna	"	"	9 17 "
Kendallville	2 15 "	3 05 "	9 30 "
Ligonier	2 55 "	3 40 "	"
Goshen	3 25 "	4 12 "	"
Elkhart	3 50 "	4 35 "	"

GOING EAST.

Elkhart	1 10 p m	9 50 p m	"
Goshen	1 30 "	10 10 "	"
Ligonier	1 58 "	10 42 "	"
Kendallville	2 23 "	11 17 "	6 00 a m
Corunna	"	"	6 15 "
Sedan	"	"	"
Waterloo	2 57 "	11 45 "	6 33 "
Butler	3 12 "	12 01 a m	6 54 "
Bryan	3 45 "	12 40 "	7 36 "
Wauseon	4 25 "	1 25 "	8 34 "
Toledo	5 40 "	2 40 "	10 00 "

CHAS. PAINE, Gen. Supt.
J. W. CARY, Gen Tic. Agt
J. E. CURTIS, Division Su

Pittsburg, Ft. W. & C. R. R

Condensed time card Nov. 11, 1877.

GOING WEST.

	No 1 Fast ex.	No. 7 Pac. ex.	No. 3 Night ex	No 5 Mail.
Pittsburgh	11 45 pm	9 00 am	1 50 pm	6 00 am
Rochester	12 53 am	10 15	2 55	7 45
Alliance	3 10	12 50 pm	5 35	11 00
Orrville	4 45	2 26	7 12	12 55 pm
Mansfield	7 00	4 40	9 20	3 11
Crestl'e ar.	7 30	5 15	9 45	3 50
" lv.	7 50	5 40	9 55
Forest	9 25	7 35	11 25
Lima	10 40	9 00	12 25 am
Ft. Wayne	1 30 pm	11 55	2 40
Plymouth	3 45	2 46 am	4 55
Chicago	7 00	6 30	7 58

GOING EAST

	No. 4 Night ex.	No. 2 Fast ex.	No. 6 Pac. ex	No. 8 Mail
Chicago	9 10 pm	8 00 am	5 15 pm
Plymouth	2 46 am	11 25	9 00
Ft. Wayne	6 55	2 15 pm	11 30
Lima	8 55	4 10	1 30 am
Forest	10 10	5 20	2 37
Crestl'e ar.	11 45	6 55	4 20
" lv.	12 05 pm	7 15 pm	4 30	6 05am
Mansfield	12 35	7 44	5 00	6 55
Orrville	2 26	9 38	7 10	9 15
Alliance	4 00	11 15	9 00	11 20
Rochester	6 22	1 20 am	11 06	2 00pm
Pittsburgh	7 30	2 30	12 15	3 30

Trains Nos 3 and 6 run daily. Train No. 1 leaves Pittsburg daily except Sunday. Train No 4 leaves Chicago daily except Saturday. All others daily except Sunday.

F. R. MYERS,
Gen Pass. and Ticket Agent.

Detroit, Eel River & Illinois R. R.

TAKE EFFECT Nov. 19 1877.

GOING EAST,

Stations.	MAIL No. 2,	ACCOM. No. [illegible]	LOCAL FT No. 8,
lv. Logansport	8 15am	7 30pm	6 00am
Mexico	8 57	8 25	7 40
Denver	9 06	9 06	8 25
Chili	9 17	9 12	8 47
Roann	9 30	9 37	9 35
Lakeston	9 53	10 00	10 10
N. Manchester	10 08	10 17	10 35
Liberty Mills	10 17	10 30	11 00
Collamer	10 31	10 50	11 40
S. Whitley	10 38	10 58	11 50
Columbia City	11 05	11 31	12 50
Col'en's	11 20	11 45	2 08
Churubusco	11 34	12 12	2 31
La Otto	11 57	12 42	3 25
Cedar Creek	12 06	12 53	3 46
Auburn Junct'n	12 22	1 12	4 28
Auburn	12 25	1 17	4 35
Butler	1 00am	2 00am	5 45pm

Going West,

Stations	No. 1,	No. [illegible]	No. 7,
Logansport ar	7 00pm	1 00pm	6 50pm
Mexico	6 26	12 08	5 40
Denver	6 17	11 46	5 20
Chili	6 10	11 35	5 00
Roann	5 57	11 12	4 15
Laketon	5 43	10 50	3 38
North Mancester	5 28	10 36	3 00
Liberty Mills	5 27	10 17	2 35
Collamar	5 15	9 57	2 01
South Whitley	5 12	9 52	1 53
Columbia City	4 50	9 16	12 10
Collin's	4 38	8 58	11 27
Cherubusco	[illegible]	8 38	10 55
La Otto	3 55	8 10	10 05
Cedar Creek	3 45	8 00	9 48
Auburn Junction	3 27	7 40	9 15
Auburn	3 22	7 38	8 20
Butler lv	2 45pm	6 55am	7 15

FRANK J. HECKER,
Gen. Sup't

Baltimore & Ohio Railroad.

GOING WEST.

STATIONS:	Express	Express	Cum'l-A
lv New York	8 15am	8 55pm
Philadelphia	11 45	11 30
Baltimore	5 15pm	7 00am
Washington	6 55	8 40
Wheeling	8 25am	10 50pm	4 30pm
Bellaire	8 40am	11 16	4 50
Barnesville	10 10	12 25am	6 12
Cambridge	11 13	1 23	7 30
Zanesville	12 25pm	2 35	8 50
ar Newark	1 30	3 40	10 00
Columbus	2 30	5 30
Shawnee	4 30	10 10
lv Columbus	12 40
Newark	2 20	3 50	5 00pm
Mt Vernon	3 19	4 50	7 15
Mansfield	4 54	6 19	11 25
Shelby	5 31	6 47	12 33am
Monroeville	6 13	8 25	3 00
ar Sandusky	7 00	9 10	4 50
lv Chicago Junction	6 00	7 40	6 15
Republic	6 48	8 19	8 19
Tiffin	7 15	8 30	9 55
Fostoria	7 45	9 10	10 00
Deshler	8 50	10 08	1 35pm
Defiance	9 53	11 06
Hicksville	10 41	11 53
Auburn Junction	11 24	12 35pm
Garrett	11 40pm	1 05	m
Avilla
Albion	12 17am	1 44
Milford Junction
Walkertown Junction	2 53	3 53
Chicago	5 40	7 00

GOING EAST.

Chicago	8 50am	9 40pm
Walkertown Junction	12 26pm	10 54pm	11 20am
Milford Junction			2 37pm
Albion	2 30	3 10	4 15
Avilla	2 49	3 30	4 55
Garrett	3 20	3 55	6 00am
Auburn Junction	3 28	4 05	6 18
Hicksville	4 07	4 42	7 48
Defiance	4 54	5 27	9 15
Deshler	5 48	6 23	11 35
Fostoria	6 47	7 23	2 10pm
Tiffin	7 15	7 54	3 20
Republic	7 36
Sandusky
Monroeville
Chicago Junction	8 40	8 30	1 25
Shelby Junction	9 15	10 06	2 55
Mansfield	9 44	10 37	3 58
Mt. Vernon	11 18	12 10pm	7 15
ar Newark	12 15am	1 15	9 00
lv Columbus	5 50	2 20
Shawnee
Newark	12 30am	2 05	5 55am
Lv Zanesville	1 35	3 10	7 10
Cambridge	2 37	4 08	8 14
Barnesville	3 38	5 15	9 20
Ar Bellaire	4 58	6 20	10 40
Wheeling	6 00	7 40	11 55
Washington	7 20am	7 50am
Baltimore	8 40	9 20
Philadelphia	2 11am	1 45pm
New York	6 45	5 10pm

Zanesville Accommodation leaves Zanesville daily except Sunday at 6:40 a. m., and arrives a Columbus at 9:45 a. m.

Express trains run daily, other trains daily except Sunday.

L. M. COLE, Gen. Tick. Agt.

Ft. Wayne, Muncie & Cin. R. R.

Muncie Route.

THE SHORT LINE TO INDIANAPOLIS,
—AND—
THE SOUTHWEST.

Time Card in effect Nov. 18, 1877.

STATIONS.	GOING SOUTH. 1. Mail.	3. Express.	5. Accom
FORT WAYNE	1 00 pm	6 00 pm	......
Bluffton	2 10	7 15 pm	......
Montpelier	2 47	7 57 pm	......
Hartford	3 17	8 24 pm	......
MUNCIE	4 15	9 20 pm	6 20 a m
Newcastle	5 12	......	8 10
Cambridge City	[illegible]	......	8 45
Connersville	[illegible]	......	10 30
Cincinnati	10 00 pm	......	12 35 p m
INDIANAPOLIS	6 05	11 20 pm
Louisville	10 05 pm	3 30 am
Terre Haute	10 24 pm	1 56 am
St. Louis	[illegible]	[illegible]

STATIONS	GOING NORTH	6 Express.	4 Accom.
St. Louis	......	8 45 am	......
Terre Haute	......	1 35 pm	......
Louisville	......	7 17 pm	......
Cincinnati	7 30 am	......	4 10 pm
Indianapolis	......	4 55 am	4 25 pm
Connersville	10 40 am	......	7 40 pm
Cambridge City	11 15 am	......	[illegible]
New Castle	11 53 am	......	8 50 pm
Muncie	12 41 pm	8 27 am	9 40 pm
Hartford	1 38 pm	9 15 am	......
Montpelier	2 04 pm	9 41 am	......
Bluffton	2 43 pm	10 10 am	......
Fort Wayne	3 50 pm	11 20 am	......

All trains daily except Sunday. Trains run on Columbus time Through cars attached to trains 1 and 4, and run between Fort Wayne and Indianapolis via Muncie.

GEO. W. MULLEN, Act'g Gen. Tick. Ag't.
W. W. WORTHINGTON, Gen. Supt.

Ft, Wayne, Jackson & Sag. R. R

Short Line Between

Michigan and the South.

Time card in effect Nov. 18—run by Chicago time

Going South.

Stations	Mail	Exp.	Fr't.
Saginaw	3 35 pm	7 15 am
Lansing	7 20 pm	10 00 am
Grand Rapids		8 30 am	11 40 am
Detroit	9 50 pm	7 00 am
Jackson	6 55 am	11 40 am	5 10 pm
Jonesville	8 10	12 50 pm	7 20
Bankers	8 28	1 07	7 47
Reading	8 44	1 20	8 15
Angola	9 45	2 12	9 45
Waterloo	10 28	2 47	10 50
Auburn	10 40	3 01	11 32
Auburn Junction	10 46	3 05	11 35
Ft Wayne	11 40 am	4 00 pm	1 00 am
Indianapolis	6 05 pm	11 20 pm
Louisville	10 50 pm	8 30 am
St. Louis	7 25 am	6 30 am

Going North.

St. Louis		8 45 pm
Louisville		7 18 pm
Indianapolis		4 25 am
Dep. Fort Wayne	4 15 pm	11 15 am	1 30 am
Auburn Junction	5 15	12 05 pm	3 00
Auburn	5 18	12 08	3 08
Waterloo	5 32	12 19	4 05
Ar Angola	6 35	12 57	5 35
Reading	7 35	1 40	7 15
Bankers	7 47	2 04	7 40
Jonesville	8 05	2 30	8 10
Jackson	9 20 pm	3 40	10 00 am
Detroit	8 35 am	6 30	1 00 pm
Grand Rapids	7 05 am	1 00	4 20 pm
Lansing		5 35 pm
Saginaw		9 13 pm

All trains daily except Sunday.

P. G. LOOMIS, Pres't
S. K. HOOPER Gen. Ticket Ag't.

JAS. CLIFFORD.

WATERLOO, IND.

Keeps constantly on hand the best and choicest brands of all kinds of

Wines and Liquors,

Cigars, Tobaccos, &c.

He also has, in connection with the above a first class

BILLIARD HALL.

To our citizens and the traveling public, we would say that this is the popular resort at Waterloo. First door south of the railroad

GOLD. Great chance to make money. If you can't get gold you can get greenbacks. We need a person in every town to take subscriptions for the largest, cheapest and best illustrated family publication in the world. Any one can become a successful agent. The most elegant works of art given free to subscribers. The price is so low that almost every body subscribes. One Agent reports making over $150 in a week. A lady agent reports taking over 400 subscribers in ten days. All who engage make money fast You can devote all your time to the business, or only your spare time. You need not be away from home over night. You can do it as well as others. Full directions and terms free. Elegant and expensive outfit free If you want profitable work send us your address at once. It costs nothing to try the business. No one who engages fails to make great pay. Address "The People's Journal," Portland Maine.

Dr. A. G. OLIN'S Private Dispensary, 187 East Washington St., Chicago, Ill., for the cure of all Diseases of a Private nature, resulting from early abuses or infection of either Sex. Seminal Weakness producing Emissions, Loss of Memory, Impaired Sight, Lost Manhood or Impotency, [illegible] permanently cured; diseases of the Bladder, Kidneys, Liver, Lungs, Asthma, Catarrh, Piles, all Chronic Diseases, and DISEASES OF FEMALES, yield to his treatment. Dr. Olin has had a life-long experience, and cures where others fail. He is a graduate of the Reformed School, uses no mercury, has the largest practice in the U. S. LADIES requiring treatment with private home and board, call or write. Every convenience for patients. Send fifty cents for sample of Rubber Goods and circular of important information by express. DR. OLIN'S Female Pills, $5 per Box. Consultation free.

MARRIAGE GUIDE 175 pages. Secrets & information for the young and middle aged of both Sexes, on all diseases of a private nature. Valuable advice to the married and those contemplating marriage. How to be healthy and truly happy in the married relation. Everybody should get this book. Price 50 cents, to any address, sealed.

A PHYSIOLOGICAL View of Marriage!

WOMAN AND MARRIAGE A Guide to Wedlock and confidential Treatise on the duties of marriage and the causes that unfit for it; the secrets of Reproduction and the Diseases of Women. A book for private, considerate reading. 260 pages, price 50 cts.

A PRIVATE MEDICAL ADVISER! On all disorders of a Private Nature arising from Self Abuse, Excesses, or Secret Diseases, with the best means of cure. 224 large pages, price 50 cts.

A CLINICAL LECTURE on the above diseases and those of the Throat and Lungs, Catarrh, Rupture, the Opium Habit, &c., price 10 cts.

Either book sent postpaid on receipt of price; or all three, containing 500 pages, beautifully illustrated, for 75 cts. Address DR. BUTTS, No. 12 N. 8th St. St. Louis, Mo.

CHRONIC Diseases Cured. New paths marked out by that plainest of all books—"Plain Home Talk and Medical Common Sense,"—nearly 1,000 pages, 200 illustrations by Dr. E. B. Foote of 120 Lexington Avenue, N. Y. Purchasers of this book are at liberty to consult its author in person or by mail free. Price by mail $3.25 for the standard edition, or $1.50 for the popular edition, which contains all the same matter and illustrations. Contents free. Agents wanted. MURRAY HILL PUBLISHING CO., 129 East 28th St. N. Y.

$45 PREMIUM WATCH AND CHAIN—a stem-winder. Free with every order. Outfit free. J. B. Gaylord & Co., Chicago, Ill.

$3 GOLD PLATED WATCHES. Cheapest in the known world. Sample Watch Free to Agents. Address, A. Coulter & Co., Chicago.

OPIUM and Morphine Habit absolutely and speedily cured. Painless; no publicity. Send stamp for particulars. Dr. Carlton, 187 Washington St., Chicago, Ill.

$2500 A YEAR. Agents wanted. Business legitimate. Particulars free. Address J. WORTH & CO., St. Louis, Mo.

M Boland

Recorders Office

THE AUBURN COURIER.

Devoted to the Interests of the Democratic Party and to the Collection of Local and General News.

Volume 7. AUBURN, DeKALB COUNTY INDIANA, DECEMBER 27th, 1877. Number 52.

The Auburn Weekly Courier

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY, BY

TOM. C. MAYS.

One Year, ... $2. | Six Months...... $1.

Advertising Rates.

Space.	1m.	3m.	6m.	1y.
1 Square	3 00	5 00	7 00	12 00
¼ Column	8 00	12 00	15 00	20 00
½ Column	10 00	18 00	30 00	40 00
1 Column	15 00	30 00	50 00	100 00

Local Notices 10 cents per line, first insertion 5 cents each insertion thereafter. Business cards Five Dollars.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY

TERMS OF COURT.

COURTS IN DEKALB CO.	COURTS IN STEUBEN CO
th Monday in February	1st Monday in Febr'y
rd Monday in May.	4th Monday in April.
th Monday in Septem'r	1st Monday in Sept'r
rd Monday in Decem'r	4th Monday in Nov'r.

ATTORNEYS.

H. C. PETERSON,

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public. Office over Davis' hardware store, Auburn, Ind.

J. W. RICKEL,

ATTORNEY AT LAW Auburn, Ind. Special attention given to collections. Office over First National Bank.

A. F. PINCHIN

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public, Butler, DeKalb Co., Ind. Insurance and real estate business promptly attended to.

GUY PLUM

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public. Office in the Court House. Special attention paid to the collection of claims. Also agent for Home Insurance Company.

D. D. MOODY. F. V. HOFFMAN.

Moody and Hoffman,

ATTORNEYS AT LAW. Office in Odd Fellows' building, opposite Court House, Auburn, Ind.

BEST and McCLELLAN.

ATTORNEYS AT LAW, Waterloo, Ind. Will practice in the Courts of DeKalb & Steuben counties. Liberal Advances Made on all first-class Claims left in our hands for collection.

R. A. FRANKS. O. Z. HUBBELL.

Franks & Hubbell,

ATTORNEYS at law, will practice in DeKalb and adjoining counties. Special attention given to the collection of claims, settlements of decendent estates and conveyance. Office on Broadway opposite Haskins & Son's livery stable, Butler, Ind.

R. WES. M'BRIDE, J. L. MORLAN, W. H. LEAS

McBRIDE, MORLAN and LEAS

ATTORNEYS AT LAW, NOTARIES PUBLIC, COLLECTING AND INSURANCE AGENCY Office over Fisher's Clothing Store, corner of Wayne and Marion streets, Waterloo, Ind. Will practice in all parts of the State. Especial Attention given to collections in DeKalb, Steuben, LaGrange and Noble counties.

DANIEL Z. HOFFMAN.

NOTARY PUBLIC, writer of deeds, mortgages, &c., making abstracts and looking up titles, attending to collecting. Also agent for Niagara Fire Insurance Company. Office with County Recorder, Auburn, Ind.

PHYSICIANS.

DR. J. A. COWAN,

PHYSICIAN & SURGEON, Auburn, Ind. Office on Main street, over Central Grocery.

DR. T. G. MATHENY.

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, office up stairs in McIntyre's block, Auburn, Ind. All calls promptly attended to.

W. S. ALLEN.

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, Office West of Court House, on Main Street, over Eldridge's store. Same office lately occupied by Dr. Cowan.

Dr. T. J. Dills,

Especial attention given to Diseases of the EYE and EAR. Rooms 1 and 2 Odd Fellows' building. Office hours—9:30 to 12 a. m.; 1 to 3 p. m. 7 to 8 p. m. Fort Wayne, Ind.

DR. TRITCH,

HOMEOPATHIC PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON Special attention given to Surgery and Chronic diseases. Office in Case's Block, Auburn Indiana.

DR. S. B. JOHNSTON.

DENTIST, WATERLOO, INDIANA, Does all work in the line of his profession at as low figures as possible. Special attention given to gold filling and making new teeth. All work warranted.

W. T. KNAPP, M. D.

Formerly of Chicago, Ill.,

HOMŒOPATHIC PHYSICIAN,

AUBURN, INDIANA.

Office at Residence, Ralston Property, Seventh Street.

Special attention given to

CHRONIC DISEASES

-AND

DISEASES OF CHILDREN.

Calls promptly attended, day or night, city or country. Consultation in German or English.

HOTELS.

BUTT'S HOTEL,

FORMERLY THE BIGLER HOUSE. JOHN BUTT & A. B. RICHARDS, Proprietors. Waterloo, Ind. Free omnibus to and from all trains Good sample rooms on first floor.

Central House,

MR. M. C. MARKEE, Prop. Corner Main and Seventh streets. Good Sample Rooms for Drummers.

TREMONT HOUSE.

WASHINGTON, D. C. Accommodates three hundred guests. Terms $2.50 per day. Located corner Second street and Indiana Avenue, in full view of the Capitol City Hall.

F. P. HILL.

SANDS HOUSE.

COR WABASH AVE. & MADISON ST., CHICAGO, ILL. New House, elegantly furnished. Only $2.00 per day.

Geo. S. PALMER, [Late of City Hotel,] C. 84.

O. SANDS, Proprietor

BILL BRITTON

THE DRAY MAN

Will attend promptly to all orders for

DRAYING AND HAULING.

Rattling good teams and reasonable.

EAGLE MILLS.

FLOUR, CORN MEAL, FEED, &c.

The reputation of the Eagle Mills, its excellent facilities for making good flour together with the advantages it possesses in the way of improved machinery enables the proprietor to announce that he is now prepared to meet all demands in the way of custom work. The Eagle Mill brand of flour will be found on hand at reasonable rates. Orders delivered in any part of town free of charge.

P. W. SILVERS.

CARPETS

ELLSWORTH, ANDREW & Co.,

Offer a large and choice stock of Carpets in all the newest designs.

Body Brussels Carpets,
Tapestry Carpets,
Ingrain Carpets,
COTTON CHAIN CARPETS,
HEMP CARPETS,
RAG CARPETS.

Terry's Reps, Cretonnes, Lace Curtains, Shades, Wall Paper, Stair Rods.

OIL CLOTHS,

Mattings, Rugs and Mats, Druggets

And all goods pertaining to the carpet and upholstery business.

Lambrequins

A Specialty.

Prices Low to Compete with the Times

ELLSWORTH, ANDREW & CO.
26 East Berry Street,
Fort Wayne, Indiana.

J. G. FLEDDERMAN

No. 27, East Main-St.

FORT WAYNE, IND'A

as the largest and finest stock of

CLOTHS, COATINGS, CHEVIOTS,

AND

CassimereS

in Ft. Wayne. The finest line of

Made up Clothing

ever shown in Fort Wayne

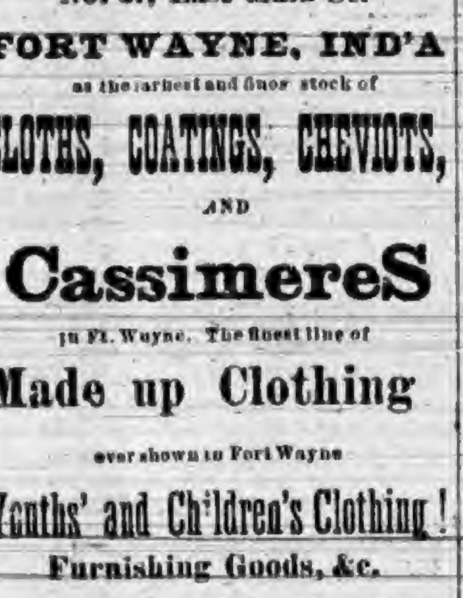
Youths' and Children's Clothing!

Furnishing Goods, &c.

Merchant Tailoring

All work done in all the latest styles, prompt attended.

HURRAH.



A MAN CRAZY

Selling

SEWING MACHINES!

For 30 DOLLARS

Go and see them.

G. H. YESBERA, AGT

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician retired from active practice, having had placed in his hands by an East Indian missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitas, Catarrh, Asthama, and all throat and lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for general debility and all nervous complaints, after having thouroughly tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, feels it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. The receipt will be sent free of charge, to all who desire it, with full directions for preparing and successfully using. Address with stamp naming this paper, Dr. J. C. Stone, 44 North Ninth Street, Philadelphia Pa.

Safe—Speedy—Sure.

The rapidity and certainty with which Dr. Morris' Syrup of Tar, Wild Cherry and Horehound cures diseases of the respiratory Organs and its reliability as a remedy for consumption long ago secured for it a foremost rank among medicine of its class. It is in fact the recognised specific for throat and bronchial disorders. It promptly checks a cough, no matter how long standing, and affords great relief in cases of asthama. It should not be mistaken for a mere palliation, since it not only affords immediate relief, but also removes all traces of the malady. It is a specific for croup. Trial size 10 cents. Large sizes 50 cents and $1.00. For sale by F. E. Davenport. Also Agents for Prof. Parker's Pleasant Worm Syrup which never fails. Pleasant to take, and requires no physic. Price 25 cents.

A Leaf From History.

The wild frolics of the political acrobats, who, in defiance of the teachings of history, propose a repetition of the often tried, but always unsuccessful attempt, to force the exchanges of a debtor nation into so small a compass that they shall be effected by gold on the first of January 1879, are strongly suggestive of the vagaries of Shakespear's maddest madmen—Glendower—whose colloquy with Percy runs thus:

Glen—I can call spirits from the vasty deep.

Percy—Why, so can I; and so can any man. But will they come when you do call for them?

Glen—Why, I can teach you, cousin, to command the devil.

Percy—And I can teach thee, coz. to shame the devil, by telling truth. Tell truth and shame the devil. If thou hast power to raise him—bring him hither, and I'll be sworn I've power to shame him hence. O, while you live, tell truth and shame the devil.

John Sherman—the Senator in 1868—acted the part of Percy—told truth, &c. —John Sherman—Secretary of the Treasury in 1877—acted the role of Glendower, proposes to call "spirits from the vasty deep" in the form of borrowed specie to effect our exchanges. True, he "may call, and so may any man, but will it come."

But, for argument's sake, grant that by lessening production and consumption to a minimum, and offering more seductive usury than any other nation since the bankruptcy of Turkey, Egypt and the South American republics, we can secure a call loan—for, fix the matter as we may, outside of production or repudiation, debtor nations can get gold from foreigners on no other terms; thirty years bonds to the contrary not withstand. What next? Then comes the farther foreclosures of mortgages—the transformation of our farmers from freehold proprietors, like the French, to tenants like the Irish, with attendant absentee landlordism, as clearly delineated and advocated a few days since by the New York Times. What then? Whre is the sheriff's posse that will crowd back our educated farmers to the barbarian vassalage of the middle ages? Recent experience has shown the difficulty of enforcing a matter of much less import.

On this point, the teaching of history is not only suggestive, but autocratically distatorial. It show us that England, after the conquest of Nepoleon, although not a debtor nation, and insignificant then as compared with us now in population, production and commerce, with a magnificent army flushed with the victory of Waterloo, almost failed in crowding a similar measure down the throats of the British people at the point of the bayonet.

Eminent historians assure us that the British throne trembled to its foundations and was only held in place by the muskets of the army under the direction of the Duke of Wellington, and Lord Sidmouth.—The N. Y. Grocer's Price-Current.

The Butt and Long Hotels at Waterloo are simply models in neatness, and unsurpassed in their accommodations.

"WHOA!"

Jake Willard and the Blind Horse—A Laughable Story.

For twenty-three years old Jake Willard had cultivated the soil of Baldwin county, and had drawn therefrom a support for himself and wife. He is childless. Not long ago Jake left the house in search of his cow. His route led him through an old worn out patch of clay land, of about six acres in extent, in the center of which was a well twenty-five or thirty feet deep, that at some time, probably, had furnished the inmates of a dilapidated house near by with water. In passing by this spot an ill wind lifted Jake's "tile" from his head and maliciously wafted it to the edge of the well, and in it tumbled.

Now Jake had alwas practiced the virtue of economy, and he immediately set about recovering the lost hat. He ran to the well, and finding it was dry at the bottom, he uncoiled the rope he had brought with him for the purpose of capturing the cow, and after several attempts to catch the hat with a noose, he concluded to save time by going into the well himself. To accomplish this he made fast one end of the rope to a stump hard by, and was quickly on his way down the well.

It is a fact, of which Jake was no less oblivious than the reader hereof, that Ned Wells was in the dilapidated building aforesaid, and that an old blind horse with a bell on his neck, who had been turned out to die, was lazily grazing within a short distance of the well.

The devil himself or some other wicked spirit put it into Ned's cranium to have a little fun, so he quietly slipped up to the old horse and unbuckled the bell-strap, approaching with a slow, measured "ting-a-ling" to the edge of the well.

"Dang that old blind horse!" said Jake, "he's comin' this way sure! and ain't got no more sense than to fall in here. Whoa, Ball."

But the continued approach of the "ting-a-ling" said just as plainly as words that "Ball" wouldn't whoa. Besides, Jake was at the bottom resting, before trying to "shin" it up the rope.

"Great Jerusalem," said he, the old cuss will be atop of me before I can say Jack Robinson. Whoa! Dang you, Whoa!

Just then Ned drew up to the edge of the well, and with his foot kicked a little dirt into it.

"Oh, Lord!" exclaimed Jake, falling upon his knees at the bottom. "I'm gone now, whoa. Now I lay me down to sleep—w-h-o-a, Ball—I pray the Lord my soul to—w-h-o-a, now. Oh, Lord, have mercy upon me."

Ned could hold in no longer, and fearful Jake might suffer from his fright, he revealed himself.

Perhaps Ned didn't make tracks with his heels from that well. May by Jake wasn't up to the top of it in short order, and you might think he didn't try every night for two weeks to get a shot with his rifle at Ned.

Meeting of the DeKalb County Bar.

The members of the DeKalb county Bar met in the Court room at 3:30 p. m.

The meeting organized by electing J. I. Best Chairman and R. Wes McBride Secretary.

It was moved by J. E. Rose that a committee of five members of the bar be appointed to prepare a constitution and By-Laws and submit a plan for the organization a County Bar Association.

The motion was adopted and the Chair appointed J. E. Rose and W. L. Penfield, of Auburn; W. T. Bope, Butler; L. Covell, Garrett, and R. Wes McBride, Waterloo.

On motion of W. L. Penfield, J. I. Best was also made a member of the committee, and its Chairman.

The following resolution was then adopted:

RESOLVED, That the surviving relatives of Hon. Reuben J. Dawson and Hon. Egbert B. Mott, deceased members of this bar, be requested to furnish portraits of said persons, to be hung in the Circuit Court room, and that the Secretary be instructed to communicate to them the wishes of this meeting.

On motion of J. E. Rose, the meeting adjourned to meet at 1 o'clock p. m. Friday, Jan. 4th, 1878.

JAMES I. BEST, President.
R. WES MCBRIDE, Sec'y.

Astonishing Success.

It is the duty of every person who has used Boschee's German Syrup to let its wonderful qualities be known to their friends in curing consumption, severe coughs, croup, asthma, pneumonia, and in fact all throat and lung diseases. No person can use it without immediate relief. Three doses will relieve any case, and we consider it the duty of all Druggists to recommend it to the poor dying consumptive, at least to try one bottle, as 40,000 dozen bottles was sold last year, and no one case where it failed was reported. Such a medicine as the German Syrup cannot be too widely known. Ask your Druggist about it. Sample bottles to try sold at 10 cents. Regular size 75 cents. Sold by F. E. Davenport.

From the Logansport Pharos.

THE IMMORALITY OF THE SOUL.

BY MAJOR M'FADIN.

We will now leave the account of early times for the present, while I give you some proofs of the immortality of the soul out side of the Bible. In all ages of the world the belief was prevalent that man or the soul lived hereafter. The most of the ancient philosophers, and even the different Indian tribes of the present day, held the same belief. Socrates, the great philosopher, believed in the immortality of the soul, and in the height of his fame is one of best witnesses Christianity can summons to its cause. A little examination will convince us that the doctrines of Socrates were by means original discoveries. It is commonly, but erroneously, supposed that idolatry is the early commencement of religion among people, upon which they improve as they advance in knowledge and civilization, until they attain a better and more rational faith. The fact, however, is that all false religions are corruptions of a true faith, which was common to mankind in the first ages. This was the opinion of St. Paul, who was well acquainted with classic history, for speaking of the heathen, he says: 'When they knew God the glorified Him not as God, neither were they thankful, but became vain in their imaginations, and their foolish hearts were darkened.' In this he is sustained by history, and the opinion of the ancients themselves. The best philosophers of the Greeks and Romans, in later ages, had a high reverence for the opinions of antiquity; and the higher up the stream of moral sentiments the purer does it become, which is a strong indication that it flowed originally from a pure fountain. Thus we find, before the time of Socrates, records not faint nor few of the same doctrines which he systemized. Auaxagoras, his great Master, undoubtedly taught that a pure, intelligent, active mind was the first cause of all things,' for of this Aristotle and Plato both assures us; and indeed it is thought by many, that we should name a school of philosophy after Homer, who lived at least four hundred year before our sage, and among whose poetic fictions much remarkable truth is apparent. In one of the fragments called Orphia,—because by some supposed to have been written by Orpheus, but more correctly attributed to Cecrops, a philosophic founder of a colony in Attica, 1556 years before Christ, or more than a thousand years before Socrates,—we find this sentence: 'There is one Power, one Deity, one Great Governor of all things.' The reader is aware also, that the learned Greeks, (as Pythagoras and Herodotus,) before and about the Socratic period, were accustomed to travel in Egypt, as the then treasure-house of ancient wisdom, and there, though the common people were so degraded as to worship beasts and birds.

What some of these doctrines were, we may learn from a verse sung in the mysteries of Eleusis, which were copied from those of Egypt: 'Pursue thy path rightly and contemplate the king of the world. He is One and of Himself alone; and to that One all things have owed their being. He encompasses all things. No mortal hath beheld Him, but he sees all things.' Over the statue of Isis, the chief deity of Egypt, was this wonderful inscription: 'I am all that has been, and all that shall be, and no man hath ever lifted my vail.' I need not ask the reader to mark the paralleism between this and the words of God to Moses, 'I am that I am.' This view of the subject is made still more clear from chronology, which fixes the date of the Phenician colonies under Ivachus who settled Greece, about fifty years after Abraham, who lived in the days of Shem, the son of Noah, and one of the survivors of the old world, according to Moses. The same historian gives us reason to believe that the worship of the true God was then prevalent in Egypt, (for he declares that the reigning Pharoah worshiped him,) and probably universal; for Melchisedek, (whom man suppose, with much reason, to have been Shem,) was the royal priest of Jehovah. And though there is much absurd contradiction in the Chinese chronology, they also, like the Brahmins of India, fix the religious opinions in a very remote antiquity; while their god Fo or Foi seems to have been no other than Noah. Our own Indians, too, who hold the Unity and spirituality of God are declared by the late venerable Boudinot whose work entitled 'The Star in the West,' proves his laborious researches among them, to have very distinct traditions of the deluge. Thus then, we find the opinions of all mankind coming upward to one period—a period when truth prevailed, The moral philosophy of Socrates may thus be supposed to be the gathered fragment of a better and revealed religion, which were too mighty, not to have survived the convulsions of the iron ages which preceded him.

Socrates and Plato, and others of the ancients, believed that Divine Providence was administered by inferior agents of the Great Deity.

Thus it is that in studying the chracter and opinions of Socrates, for whom unassisted reason did the most, we are most convinced of the necessity of revelation. All that he knew, which was valuable, was derived from it; and he was himself most fully persuaded, that what he desired yet to know, he could only learn from a heavenly instructor. Alas! that many who profess such a veneration for the sage of Athens, should neglect to learn from him this most important lesson which he taught. Socrates was a good witness to sustain the Christian in his consoling belief that he shall live again, beyond this vale or tears, "and that he will travel through the dark valley and shaddow of death, and fear no evil," and I will never forget the words of an eloquent blind preacher, who said that Socrates died like a philosopher, but "Jesus Christ died like a God.

A Good Dog.

Gabe took a whitewashing contract a week or two ago, and agreed to receive as part pay a dog, a pup, which its owner said, could out hunt any dog on earth.

"Am it good on de possum? asked Gabe,

"Possum?" was the reply; "you just try that dog on a possum or a coon either and see."

"Den de contrack may be 'sidered and settled," said Gabe, and he went to work finished the job, received the dog and, yesterday as there was no church at Gabe's place of worship he took the pup and went out to try it.

This morning when the man who formerly owned the dog came out of the front door just after breakfast, he found Gabe seated on the sidewalk, the dog with him.

"Hello Gabe," said the gentleman.

"Mornin' sah," replied Gabe, "Ise fotched de dog back, sah."

"What's the matter?"

"Oh, nuffin. I doesn't tink I kin 'ford to keep him."

"Why, isn't he a good dog?"

"Good nuff for de kine, but it ain't my kine. You say he am a good coon dog?"

"Certainly."

"Well, you see, him and me went huntin' de coon last night and the dog raised a tremendious racket at de tree, an' I tink he got a coon dead suah. What you tink I find?"

"What?"

"Nuffin. Den he barked up anoder tree. What do you tink I find dis time?"

"A coon?"

"Same as afore. Den de dog jes' went crazy roun' annoder tree an' I tink mebbe I didn't vestigate the odder ones nuff, so I climb up dis one and look all roun' and de dog fly roun' like a mule in a hailstorm. I tink mebbe it's possum and I took a dead limb an thrashed away. What you tink I find?"

"Nothing again?"

"Mistake again. When I pick myself up off'n de groun' dar was about fifty hornets, takin' de census ob de ole man's body and I nebber felt so ligious in my life as I did just about dat time, but I didn't hab time to stop and pray, as I thought it was necessary for de ole man to git back to de house, and I took a good many callers wid me what wasn't inwitted, and de ole woman, and Tilly, and de boy won't be out for a week."

"But what became of the dog?"

"Oh, he war huntin'."

"He did hunt, did he?"

"Yes sir, dat's what saved him."

"What did he find?"

"Foun' a hole under de barn whar I couldn't get him. I don't 'spose I kin afford to keep de dog, sah, an' I came to ax dat de contrax might be rewoked.

Assignment of mortgages should be Recorded.

Articles of agreement should be recorded.

Articles of Association should be recorded.

Leases of land should be recorded.

Mechanic's Liens should be recorded.

Deeds and mortgages of real estate should be recorded within forty-five days from date of execution.

Chattel mortgages should be recorded within ten days from date of execution.

Are your deeds recorded?

Are all old deeds in your possession received from previous owners of your land recorded?

Are all old mortgages released?

These are all required to perfect your title.

AUBURN COURIER.

THURSDAY, DEC. 27, 1877.

CALENDAR FOR 1878.

1878	Sunday	Monday	Tuesday	Wednes.	Thursd.	Friday	Saturday	1878	Sunday	Monday	Tuesday	Wednes.	Thursd.	Friday	Saturday
Jan...	...	...	1	2	3	4	5	July..	...	1	2	3	4	5	6
	6	7	8	9	10	11	12		7	8	9	10	11	12	13
	13	14	15	16	17	18	19		14	15	16	17	18	19	20
	20	21	22	23	24	25	26		21	22	23	24	25	26	27
	27	28	29	30	31	...	...		28	29	30	31	...	...	...
Feb...	...	...	...	...	...	1	2	Aug...	...	...	...	...	1	2	3
	3	4	5	6	7	8	9		4	5	6	7	8	9	10
	10	11	12	13	14	15	16		11	12	13	14	15	16	17
	17	18	19	20	21	22	23		18	19	20	21	22	23	24
	24	25	26	27	28	...	...		25	26	27	28	29	30	31
Mar...	...	...	...	...	...	1	2		...	...	...	...	...	...	...
	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	Sept...	1	2	3	4	5	6	7
	10	11	12	13	14	15	16		8	9	10	11	12	13	14
	17	18	19	20	21	22	23		15	16	17	18	19	20	21
	24	25	26	27	28	29	30		22	23	24	25	26	27	28
	31	...	...	...	...	...	...		29	30	...	...	...	...	...
April.	...	1	2	3	4	5	6	Oct...	...	...	1	2	3	4	5
	7	8	9	10	11	12	13		6	7	8	9	10	11	12
	14	15	16	17	18	19	20		13	14	15	16	17	18	19
	21	22	23	24	25	26	27		20	21	22	23	24	25	26
	28	29	30	...	...	...	...		27	28	29	30	31	...	...
May...	...	...	...	1	2	3	4	Nov...	...	...	...	...	...	1	2
	5	6	7	8	9	10	11		3	4	5	6	7	8	9
	12	13	14	15	16	17	18		10	11	12	13	14	15	16
	19	20	21	22	23	24	25		17	18	19	20	21	22	23
	26	27	28	29	30	31	...		24	25	26	27	28	29	30
June...	...	...	...	...	...	...	1		...	...	...	...	...	...	...
	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	Dec...	1	2	3	4	5	6	7
	9	10	11	12	13	14	15		8	9	10	11	12	13	14
	16	17	18	19	20	21	22		15	16	17	18	19	20	21
	23	24	25	26	27	28	29		22	23	24	25	26	27	28
	30	...	...	...	...	...	...		29	30	31	...	...	...	...

JANUARY.

The god Janus, after whom the month of January was named, was represented by the Romans as a man with two faces, one looking backward and the other forward. This implied that he stood between the old and the new year, with a regard to both. It was the custom of ancient Rome to proclaim the first of the month, and to post a notice of the occurrence in some public place, so that the people might be apprised of the religious festivals in which they were expected to take part. This first of the month came to be styled the Kalendae, or kalends, from the Greek verb Kaleo, I proclaim; and the placard announcing it was called Fasti Calendares. Hence a book of accounts referring to days was subsequently called Calendarium; whence the name Calendar, now in general use. The division of the year into twelve months has obviously been determined by the moon's revolutions. The lunar month is strictly 29 days, 12 hours, 44 minutes and 3 seconds. There are twelve such periods, and rather less than 11 days over in the year. Several attempts had been made by civilized nations to divide the year in accordance with these revolutions, but to very little effect till Julius Cæsar reformed the Calendar and decreed that the year should consist of 365 days, followed by one of 366. The general idea of Cæsar was that the months should consist of 31 and 30 days alternately, and this was accomplished in the bissextile or leap year, consisting, as it did, of twelve times thirty and six over.

ECLIPSES FOR THE YEAR 1878.

There will be four eclipses this year, as follows:

I. An Annular Eclipse of the Sun, Feb. 2. Visible in Australia and at the South Pole.

II. A Partial Eclipse of the Moon, Feb. 17. Visible in the United States in the morning; middle, at Boston, 6h. 30m.; at New York, 6h. 16m.; at Washington, 6h. 4m.; at Charleston, 5h. 20m.; at Chicago, 4h. 32m.

III. A Total Eclipse of the Sun, July 29. Visible throughout the United States as a Partial Eclipse in the afternoon. Except in Alaska, Utah, Texas, and Cuba the Eclipse will be Total. Middle, at Boston, 5h. 58m.; at New York, 5h. 44m.; at Washington, 5h. 32m.; at Charleston, 5h. 18m.; at Chicago, 4h. 50m.

IV. A Partial Eclipse of the Moon, Aug. 13. Visible when the Moon rises in the evening. Ends: At Boston, 9h. 50m.; at New York, 9h. 38m.; at Washington, 9h. 27m.; at Charleston, 9h. 13m.; at Chicago, 7h. 48m.

RATES OF POSTAGE.

LETTERS, prepaid by stamps, 3 cts. each ½ oz. or fraction thereof, to all parts of the United States; forwarded to another Postoffice without charge, on request of the person addressed; if not called for, returned to the writer free, if indorsed with that request. If the stamp is omitted, the Letter is forwarded to the Dead Letter Office, and returned to the writer. For Registering letters the charge is 10 cts. additional. Drop or Local letters 2 cts. each ½ oz., prepaid. Stamped Postal Cards, furnished only by Government, 1 ct. each; if anything else is pasted on a postal card, letter postage is charged. Postage on all Newspapers and Periodicals sent from newspaper offices to any part of the United States, to regular subscribers, must be paid in advance at the office of mailing.

FOREIGN POSTAGE.—To France, Germany, Austria, Hungary, Belgium, Denmark (including Iceland and the Faroe Islands), Egypt, Spain (including the Balearic Isles, the Canary Islands, the Spanish possessions on the northern coast of Africa, and the postal establishments of Spain upon the western coast of Morocco), Great Britain (including the Island of Malta), Greece, Italy, Luxembourg, Norway, the Netherlands, Portugal (including Madeira and the Azores), Roumania, Russia, Finland, Servia, Sweden, Switzerland and Turkey, for prepaid letters, 5 cts. per ½ oz. Unpaid letters, 10 cents. Postal Cards, 2 cts. each. Newspapers, not over four oz., 2 cts. each. Books, other printed matter, patterns, legal documents, photographs, etc., 2 cts. for each 2 oz. Registration fee on all correspondence, 10 cents.

THE NEWS CONDENSED.

THE EAST.

SEVEN steamers left New York for Europe in a single day recently, taking heavy shipments of breadstuffs.... It is reported from New York that Bixby & Co., manufacturers of blacking, have suspended, with liabilities amounting to $145,000; assets, $94,000.

A SMALL fraction of the money stolen by the New York ring has at last found its way back to the city treasury. The City Chamberlain has received from the Attorney General a check for $444,082, being the amount realized from the settlement of the suits against Peter B. Sweeny and Elbert A. Woodward.

AT Boston, Mass., a few days ago, John Cronin, 8 years old, was shot in the head by Henry Hickey, 11 years old, and died in a few minutes. The boys were in an upper room at play, when the Cronin boy scratched Hickey in the face and started to run down stairs. The latter followed to the head of the stairs and fired the fatal shot with a revolver.... The ringleader of the railway rioters of last July, in and about Albany, N. Y., John Van Hoesen by name, has been sentenced to seven years' imprisonment.

A FRIGHTFUL disaster, caused by the explosion of a boiler in a candy factory and the immediate igniting of the building, occurred in New York, on the evening of Dec. 20. From New York papers we glean the following particulars of the calamity: "The people in the neighborhood of Barclay street and College place were startled by an explosion that sounded like the discharge of a cannon. The concussion broke many hundreds of window panes, some of them two or three blocks away, and instantly extinguished every gaslight burning within an equal radius. The rattle of window sash and the crash of broken glass was accompanied by a shock like that of an earthquake. This was followed by the crash of a falling building, and the people on Barclay street saw almost the whole inside of the five-story building, No. 63 Barclay street, torn out and shot up into the air with almost indescribable violence. The fountain of debris, according to the testimony of eye-witnesses, rose fully thirty feet above the roof, and before it had fallen the shell of the building, with such of its inner framework as was not torn away, was enveloped in flames. Thousands of people at once gathered, and in five minutes the engines were on the ground. The spectators were startled a minute after by seeing a man emerge from the flames and appear on the rafters that supported the second floor. He was a horrible sight. His hair and beard were burned off, his head blistered and smeared with blood, and his clothing on fire. He stood for a moment, as if irresolute, and the crowd yelled, 'Jump! Jump!' He glanced back once, and seeing certain death behind, leaped to the ground. He was badly injured, but still alive when the ambulance took him to the hospital. A ladder was shortly placed against the broken front, when out of the burning interior came three men and two boys, their clothes on fire and their wounds bleeding. They made their way down the ladder and were carried off for treatment. Two or three only escaped from the Barclay street door. One boy was dug out by the firemen before the flames had entirely swallowed up the apparatus. Officer Dunlap, of the Twenty-seventh precinct, was the first man to clamber up the ladder. At the second story he found a young woman, one of the employes in the confectionery establishment. He caught her just as she was falling back, she having probably inhaled smoke or flames, and, telling her to cling around his neck, he swung her on his back and descended the ladder. Reaching the ground, the officer carried her to a store near by, but she was dead when he arrived there. Meantime the flames spread through the entire store, and burst out at the doors and windows of the College place front. Barclay street, College place, Park place, and Greenwich street were occupied by the engines. Three more alarms were rung, and soon nearly twenty engines were deluging the burning building with water. Notwithstanding all efforts the flames gained rapidly. Within an hour the great candy store was a heap of ruins. The interest from the first had centered in the probable loss of life. So few were known to have escaped, and so many were known to be in the building at the time of the explosion, that the most alarming rumors were set afloat. It was learned, however, before the fire was over, that many persons, how many was uncertain, had escaped by the College place entrance. Some were also known to have escaped through the back yards and over the roofs into the neighboring buildings to the west, so that a reasonable hope existed that the most had been saved. The curious desire to gaze upon suffering and death was felt by many, and the police, who were present in large numbers, had all they could do to keep an avenue open from the store doors where the injured lay to the ambulances as they drove rapidly up. Every ambulance in the city had been ordered to the scene, and as fast as possible the sufferers were taken to the hospital."

ANOTHER life insurance swindler has come to grief. The jury in the case of T. S. Lambert, President of the American Popular Life, of New York, charged with swearing to false reports of the condition of the company, has returned a verdict of guilty.

THE WEST.

THE leading bankers of Milwaukee have united in a circular announcing that on and after Jan. 1, 1878, a deduction of $2,000 will be made upon each balance drawing interest, and upon all balances in excess of that sum the rate of interest will be reduced to 2 per cent.

THE Lake Forest (Ill.) University has been destroyed by fire, supposed to be incendiary. Loss, $60,000; insurance, $15,000.... W. T. Smith, on trial at Madison, Wis., charged with forging a money order, has been acquitted.

A DEADWOOD dispatch says: "A bottle of petroleum has reached this city from an oil well that was discovered a few weeks ago eight miles from Jenny's stockade and 100 miles south of Deadwood. The petroleum is pronounced by experts to be superior to that of West Virginia."

HON. J. T. FARLEY, Democrat, has been elected to the United States Senate by the California Legislature, to succeed Senator Sargent.

A TELEGRAM from Helena, Montana, says: "Father Genin arrived at the Marias river last night, and sent a messenger to inform the military commander at Benton that Sitting Bull had crossed the line and was camped at the Bear Paw mountains with a large force of Sioux and Nez Perces. Thomas Todd arrived from Fort Benton last evening and confirmed the above report. He also states that the Indians are burning the prairies south of the Bear Paw."

THE SOUTH.

A DISPATCH from Osceola, Mo., says a mob of armed and masked men took possession of that town at night, recently, arrested everybody on the streets at the muzzles of revolvers and shot-guns, then went to the Court House, seized all tax books for this and past years in the County Clerk's and Treasurer's offices, and carried them away. The trouble grew out of a railroad tax which had been levied to pay certain judgments against the county for past-due interest on railroad bonds.... Three thieves lately robbed a store at Falkville, Ala. A posse of citizens got on their trail, shooting two and capturing the other.... The Tennessee Senate Finance Committee have recommended the compromise of the State debt at 50 cents on the dollar, the bonds to bear 6 per cent. interest.

ON the 15th inst., Gov. Hubbard, of Texas, telegraphed to President Hayes as follows: "I am officially informed that citizens of Mexico, in connection with citizens of El Paso county, of Mexican birth, were fighting all day yesterday, in Texas, with a detachment of State troops who were aiding our civil authorities. The Mexican force being too strong to be repelled by the Texas troops, and it being impossible to raise a civil posse from the citizens, who are nearly all of Mexican blood and sympathy, and having no reinforcements within several miles, I ask for the aid of such United States troops as may be nearest to the scene of action to repel this invasion of our territory." Other dispatches of the same date are to the effect that "five rangers and a merchant named Ellis were killed by the Mexicans yesterday. State troops are intrenched on San Elizario, surrounded by a mob of several hundred Mexicans from both sides of the river. The Governor has telegraphed orders to recruit men from the nearest points in Texas and New Mexico to aid the State troops."

BY direction of the War Department all available troops have been ordered by Gen. Sheridan to the scene of the difficulty at El Paso, Tex., to assist the State militia in keeping peace.

THE Texan Rangers who were besieged in El Paso county by the Mexican mob were compelled to surrender, having exhausted all their ammunition. Three—Atkinson, McBride and Judge Howard—were at once shot, and the remainder held as prisoners. Gov. Hubbard asserts that the trouble was participated in by a large number of citizens of Mexico as well as by Mexicans owing allegiance to the United States.... Maj. Thomas M. Vincent, who has been on duty as Assistant Adjutant-General at the War Department for fifteen years, has been ordered to the Department of Texas. This new assignment is made for the reason that the Government desires to have an officer of deliberate judgment, and great experience with complicated questions on duty at this time on the Texas frontier.... The command under Col. Young and Lieut. Bullis has returned. They report having experienced very hard weather on their return trip, their blankets and clothing being drenched since the 8th inst.

WASHINGTON.

A DISPATCH to the Chicago Tribune says the Senate's executive session of the 14th was the scene of an exciting dialogue between Senators Gordon and Conkling. The account says: Gordon was bitterly opposing the confirmation of Wade, a Republican, as Collector of the Third district of Georgia. Mr. Thurman interrupted to say that, if the relations of the North to the South were to pass in review at length on every confirmation, business could not be expedited. At this Mr. Conkling and several others spoke out, as is usual in a session where business is pressing, "Go on with the calendar." At this Gordon exclaimed in a very offensive manner: "The Senator from New York is issuing orders to the Chair." Mr. Conkling, after asking Gordon to repeat, replied: "If the Senator from Georgia means to say that I issue orders to the Chair, he says what is not true, and, lest the Senator should not understand me, I repeat that, if he means to intimate that I issue orders to the Chair, he says what is not true." This was spoken with great emphasis by Conkling. Gordon retorted, "This is a matter that can be settled outside of this chamber." Conkling replied, "Yes, or we can settle it now," and he then again repeated his first remark to Gordon, and the latter only said it was a matter to settle outside the chamber. Messrs. Thurman, Hamlin, and other Senators undertook to smooth the matter over and effect an immediate reconciliation, saying that Conkling's exclamation, "Go on with the calendar," was the usual one, and there was no cause for Gordon's feeling, but both Conkling and Gordon sat still under these attempts to smooth the matter over, and said nothing.

THE Senate has confirmed the nomination of Mr. McCormick, lately of the Treasury Department, to be United States Commissioner General at the Paris Exposition.

IT is reported from Washington that, soon after the holidays, the President will send to Congress a message devoted to the setting forth of his views in regard to appointments for the civil service, and insisting strongly upon the position he has heretofore occupied.

THE President has signed a pardon for John A. Joyce, who was convicted at St. Louis of conspiracy to defraud the United States of taxes on distilled spirits. The pardon is full and unconditional. Joyce, it will be remembered, was sentenced to $2,000 fine in addition to his imprisonment.... Washington dispatches state that the "administration has no fears that the affair at El Paso will develop into a difficulty between Mexico and the United States. There is no disposition at the capital to magnify the border troubles to that extent, and it is believed that the Mexican Government is equally anxious to maintain friendly relations."

POLITICAL.

A WASHINGTON dispatch says information has been received there from Columbia, (S. C.), to to the effect that "Senator M. C. Butler's efforts to have all further criminal proceedings against Senator Patterson stopped have resulted in a failure, owing to the opposition of Gov. Hampton. The prosecution will be pushed vigorously, and Hampton's friends are determined, if they cannot have Patterson brought into the State for trial, to force him out of the Senate by exposing his alleged corrupt transactions.'

GENERAL.

THE case of alleged improper sale of stamps by the Postmaster at Stockton, Me., which was carried before the United States Court at Portland as a test case, has resulted in the conviction and sentence of J. F. Frye, Postmaster. The court is reported as holding that under the present Postal laws Postmasters making illegal sales of stamps by discount or exchange for goods can be punished

AT Silver Springs, twenty-five miles from Cheyenne, W. T., a man of Company A, Third cavalry, named Kennedy, while under the influence of liquor, threatened the life of a Sergeant of his company named Schaffer, but was prevented at the time from carrying his threat into execution. Shortly after arriving in camp in the evening Kennedy procured a carbine, went to the tent where he supposed Schaffer would be found, and, opening the flap, fired at the first man he saw, killing him instantly, but instead of Schaffer it proved to be John A. Van Molt, First Sergeant of the company. Kennedy was immediately disarmed and put under charge of a guard. Great excitement prevailed among the men of the company, by whom Van Molt was greatly respected, and sometime during the night the guard was overpowered, a blanket being thrown over his head, and at daylight next morning the body of Kennedy was found suspended to the ridgepole of the guard tent by the neck, life being extinct.

THE naval court of inquiry appointed to investigate the Huron disaster locates the responsibility primarily upon Commander Ryan, presumably on account of his having put to sea in disregard of the weather warnings of the Signal station; blames Lieut. Palmer navigating officer, for errors in navigation, and the deck officers for not having ascertained the accuracy of the perpendicular soundings reported to them from time to time. The ship is found to have been in every respect staunch and seaworthy.

FAILURES: H. W. Wetherell, wholesale millinery, Chicago, liabilities heavy; Kelley, Morley & Co., coal dealers, Chicago, liabilities not stated; Joseph l'Earl, dry-goods merchant, Bloomington, Ill.; the Cosmopolitan Savings and Exchange Bank, San Francisco, Cal.... The concentration in large numbers of hostile Sioux in the British Northwest Territory, together with the inadequacy of the Canadian police of that region to restrain or control the movements of the unruly savages, has suggested the necessity of the construction by the United States Government of a large and permanent military post near the boundary line. It is understood that Gen. Terry has already selected the site for such a post, and that its construction will be recommended to Congress.

J. B. JONES, Major commanding the Texas State forces on the Rio Grande, telegraphs Congressman Mills, at Washington, that 150 of the mob engaged in the San Elizario affair were Mexican citizens from Mexico, and that they had been drilled by a regular Mexican officer for days previous to the fight.

THE TURKO-RUSSIAN WAR.

THE Porte has issued a circular addressed to the leading European powers, in which it expresses a desire for peace and requests their mediation.... A proclamation has been issued by the Servian Government announcing that its army has been ordered to cross the Turkish frontier.... A dispatch from Plevna says: "The immediate cause of Osman Pasha's abandoning the intrenchments was the breaking out of an epidemic among the troops. There were forty or fifty dead bodies a day in Plevna. There were no men available to bury them, and the mortality was increasing."....

A Russian official dispatch dated Bogot, Dec. 13, says sixty battalions of Turks attacked the forces of the Grand Duke Vladimir all along the line, directing, however, their principal efforts against the left and center. They attacked Metchka six times, but were each time repulsed with great loss. At 1 p. m. the Thirty-fifth Division of the Twelfth Russian Army Corps appeared on the scene, and, attacking the Turks on their flank, compelled them, with the co-operation of the rest of the Russian forces, to retire upon Krasna, their retreat to Jovan Ciftlik being cut off. The Grand Duke Vladimir narrowly escaped a ball. Suleiman Pasha, describing the same affair, claims that he carried some of the intrenchments of Metchka, but was unable to hold them, owing to the fire from the heights and the arrival of Russian reinforcements. He consequently withdrew to his original position after a seven-hours' battle.

A CORRESPONDENT at Plevna gives the following account of the meeting between Osman Pasha and his conquerors: "The Grand Duke Nicholas rode up to Osman's carriage, and for some seconds the two chiefs gazed into each other's faces without the utterance of a word. Then the Grand Duke stretched out his hand, shook the hand of Osman Pasha heartily, and said, 'I compliment you on your defense of Plevna. It is one of the most splendid military feats in history.' Osman smiled sadly, rose painfully to his feet in spite of his wound, and said something which I could not hear. He then reseated himself. The Russian officers all cried 'Bravo! Bravo!' repeatedly, and all saluted respectfully. There was not one among them who did not gaze on the hero of Plevna with the gravest admiration and sympathy. Prince Charles, of Roumania, who had arrived, rode up and repeated unwittingly almost every word of the Grand Duke, and shook hands with Osman, who again rose, and bowed this time in grim silence. He wore a loose, blue cloak, with no apparent mark on it to designate his rank, and a red fez. He is a large, strongly-built man. The lower part of his face is covered with a short, black beard without a streak of gray, and he has a large Roman nose and black eyes."

THE Turks burned and evacuated Elena, and the position has been reoccupied by the Russians.... The Servians have begun active operations by marching on Kassova.... Achmet Eyoub Pasha has withdrawn his force from Schipka pass to Kezanlik.

A TELEGRAM from St. Petersburg, which is of a semi-official character, says: "The statement that Germany and Austria have refused Turkey's request for mediation has produced a favorable impression here. The universal sentiment is that, after the great sacrifices of Russia, peace on the conditions foreshadowed in the Porte's circular would be illusory, and that the questions raised by this sanguinary war must be definitely and exhaustively solved."... Col. Wellesley, British military attache, says that Osman Pasha had less than 30,000 men at Plevna, and in his sortie lost 6,000 killed alone. The wounded must have been 8,000 more.... The Russian loss to Dec. 13 was 77,668 men.

A BUCHAREST dispatch says that Prince Gortschakoff has instructed the Russian representatives abroad to observe the greatest possible reserve relative to the conditions of peace which Russia might be disposed to advance.... Orders have been given in Russia for the immediate mobilization of 80,000 more troops. New battalions are continually crossing the Danube.

DISPATCHES of the 20th from the seat of war in Bulgaria state that "Gen. Gourko has taken [illegible] on the direct road to Sofia.... The Servians have carried the strongly-fortified position at Mramor, advancing to the siege of Nisch and Widin. Suleiman Pasha is in full retreat, and the Russians have advanced to Ahmedli."....

A dispatch from London of the 20th says: "Meetings of the British Cabinet are held daily, and there is a settled impression that preparations for war are intended. At Woolwich and other arsenals orders have been received to stop the discharge of men, and take back those discharged under previous order. While war may not be intended, there is absolutely no doubt whatever that England is to be put in readiness for war should the latter be necessary."

A VIENNA correspondent telegraphs that Suleiman Pasha, with 10,000 men, has arrived at Constantinople from Varna. He goes to Adrianople to take command of the army of Roumelia. Suleiman's circuitous route is explained by the fact that, in consequence of the ice and snow in the Balkan passes, heavy material is more easily transported by railway to Varna, and thence by sea to Constantinople, than by the more direct route. It is thought, also, that a portion of the troops from the Quadrilateral have gone to Roumelia by land direct, as the Czarowitch reports Turkish forces outside of Rutschuk and on the Lower Lom withdrawn.

GENERAL FOREIGN NEWS.

AN insurrection has broken out in the province of Amyro, in Crete. Turkish families and the inhabitants of other provinces have sought refuge in the fortress. The Governor of Crete has sent troops to suppress the insurrection.... It is believed that the Russian Minister is negotiating with Denmark with a view to proposing Prince Waldemar, of Denmark, or Prince John of Glucksburg, as ruler of Bulgaria.

THE feeling in France is improving. The Chamber of Deputies has voted appropriations asked for by the Ministry, and the leading organ of the Republicans, Republique Francaise, compliments the message of the President, in which he declares his intention to obey the popular will as expressed in the late elections.

GEN. D'AURELLE DE PALADINES, a French life Senator, is dead. He was born Jan. 9, 1804.... The iron-workers of Sheffield, England, have received notice of a reduction of wages after the holidays.... A strike has occurred among the men employed on the Lachine canal enlargement, in Canada, caused by a cutting down of wages. Some 2,500 men quit work.

THE English Parliament will convene Jan. 17. It is expected the Ministry will ask for authority to place the army on such a footing as will enable England to speak with authority in the settlement between Russia and Turkey.... In the French Senate the bills for voting the four direct taxes and two-twelfths of the budget were passed unanimously, and in the Chamber M. Dufaure introduced a bill for the abolition of the law relative to press offenses. The legislation which was refused while MacMahon remained resistant has now been granted, and both houses have adjourned for the present, the Chamber to reassemble Jan. 8.

JAMES BALLANTYNE, the well-known Scotch author, died recently in Edinburgh.

TEN persons were killed in Edinburg, Scotland, by the falling of the wall of a hotel that had been partially destroyed by fire.

PROCEEDINGS OF CONGRESS.

FRIDAY, Dec. 14.—SENATE.—The Vice President laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Interior, calling attention to the law in regard to the compensation for Government advertising, and the complaints daily received as to the inadequacy of such compensation. He suggests that the law be so amended as to allow the department to pay the same for advertising as the papers received from private individuals. Referred to the Committee of Civil Service and Retrenchment.... Mr. Cameron, of Wisconsin, called up the House joint resolution relating to reservoirs to promote the navigation of the Mississippi. Passed.... At the expiration of the morning hour, consideration was resumed of Mr. Matthews' resolution declaring it to be the right of the Government to pay its bonds in silver, and Mr. Hereford made a speech upon it, after which the Senate went into executive session.... At the reopening of the doors the Deficiency Appropriation bill was taken up and passed, as amended by the conference committee.... On Mr. Edmunds' motion, and by unanimous consent, it was ordered that the Vice President declare the Senate adjourned on Saturday immediately after the reading of the journal, and that no business should be transacted.... The Vice President announced as the committee to inquire into the practicability of promoting commercial intercourse with Mexico and maintaining peace on the Rio Grande frontier, Messrs. Conkling, Hamlin, Howe, Jones of Nevada, Cameron of Pennsylvania, Eaton and Maxey.... The Post-Route bill was passed.... The bill providing for the burial of the naval officers and men lost on the Huron was then passed and the Senate adjourned.

HOUSE.—The report of the conference committee on the Deficiency Appropriation bill was agreed to, and the bill was passed.... The Senate amendments to the Paris Exposition bill were agreed to.... Mr. Wood presented a resolution instructing the several committees having in charge matters relating to Indian affairs, naval affairs, military affairs, postoffices, public lands, etc., to inquire into any errors, abuses, or frauds in the administration of the laws affecting such branches of the public service, with power to send for persons and papers, sit during the recess, etc. The Republicans filibustered against the passage of this resolution until the adjournment of the House.

SATURDAY, Dec. 15.—SENATE.—A number of bills were signed by the Vice President.... On motion of Mr. Thurman, the Senate went into secret session to consider the difficulty between Messrs. Gordon and Conkling. After the doors were opened the following paper was presented and unanimously agreed to: WHEREAS, A misunderstanding having arisen between the Hon. Roscoe Conkling and the Hon. John B. Gordon in the course of the executive proceedings of the Senate yesterday, and mutual understandings thereon having been arrived at, as set out in the following paper, it is ordered that said paper be entered at large on the legislative journal of the Senate: During an executive session of the Senate held yesterday words were uttered both by Senator Gordon, of Georgia, and by Senator Conkling, of New York, which were mutually felt to be unkind and offensive. Reports of the incident appear in the papers of this morning which are inaccurate and unjust to both speakers. Upon careful inquiry as to what was said by each speaker, and what was understood to be said by the other, it is certain that the first offensive words were inspired by an honest misunderstanding of what had been innocently said by the other speaker. One harsh remark provoked another, as too often happens, but all that was offensive was the outgrowth of misapprehension. Since such was the fact, we, who are the mutual friends of both Senators, are of the opinion that it is due alike to the Senate and the speakers that whatever was felt to be unkind or offensive in the remarks of either should be treated as if never uttered, and we are now authorized to state, are mutually and simultaneously withdrawn. (Signed) H. Hamlin, M. W. Ransom, Timothy O. Howe, and J. E. McDonald.... The Senate then adjourned until January 10, 1878.

HOUSE.—Mr. Wood and the majority endeavored during nearly the whole day's session to have his investigation resolution adopted, but it was finally postponed until after recess.... Mr. Schleicher, from the Committee on Foreign Affairs, offered a resolution authorizing the committee to sit during the recess in the investigation of the Mexican border trouble. Adopted.... The Senate amendments to the Post-route bill were taken up and concurred in.... Resolutions to pay extra employes in the Doorkeeper's Department were offered, discussed, and agreed to, and the House adjourned until Jan. 10.

IT is agreed on all hands that if the station near the scene of the wreck of the unfortunate Huron had been manned many lives would have been saved.

BILLS BEFORE CONGRESS.

THE LIFE-SAVING SERVICE.

Mr. Cox, of New York, has introduced in the House a bill to organize the life-saving service. It provides, amongst other things, for the establishment of additional life-saving and life-boat stations on the coast of Virginia and North Carolina, and two complete and one life-boat stations on the coast of Lake Michigan, and two life-boat stations on the coast of Lake Huron. The President may appoint a general superintendent of the life-saving service who shall, under the immediate direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, have general charge of the service, and whose compensation shall be $4,000 per annum. The Secretary of the Treasury shall appoint an assistant to the general superintendent at a salary of $2,500 per annum. The compensation of keepers of life-saving and life-boat stations hereafter shall be $500 per annum, and they shall have the powers of inspectors of customs, but shall receive no additional compensation for the duties performed as such.

THE AGRICULTURAL BUREAU.

Mr. Henderson, of Illinois, has presented a bill to make the Agricultural Bureau a Department, and place it on an equal footing with the other departments.

TEXAS PACIFIC RAILROAD.

Mr. Stephens, of Georgia, has introduced a bill amendatory of the Texas Pacific Railroad acts. It authorizes the construction of the main line from Fort Worth to Ship's channel, bay of San Diego. The amount of bonds allowed by the bill is $25,000 per mile, and for difficult and mountainous sections $35,000 per mile—all secured by first mortgage on the road, and on all the 18,000,000 acres of land granted by the United States and acquired from the State of Texas—the aggregate bonds issued are not to exceed $38,750,000. The bonds to be payable, principal and interest, in gold, and to run fifty years. Authority is given for the extension of the road eastward to the Mississippi river by one or more branch lines, and provision is made for securing the Government against loss.

CHINESE IMMIGRATION.

Representative Shelley, of Alabama, has a bill to regulate Chinese immigration. It proposes to levy a per-capita tax of $254 upon every subject of China immediately upon entering the United States, either from China or any other country, after the 1st day of January, 1879, excepting officers or duly-accredited agents of the Chinese Government, and their families or servants, coming to the United States in some official capacity. Every Chinese subject entering the United States without paying the tax to be imprisoned at hard labor for five years.

REORGANIZING THE NAVY.

Representative Harris, of the Naval Committee, has a scheme for the creation of a new navy. He proposes to provide for a board of competent engineers and naval constructors, whose duty it shall be to superintend the building of this navy according to a definite plan. The first cost is to be $50,000,000, of which $5,000,000 are to be appropriated annually. No further appropriations are to be made for the repair of vessels in cases where the cost of the repairs would exceed 40 per cent. of the value of the vessels. This plan proceeds upon the assumption that the United States now practically has no navy. Nothing has been built since the war except the sloops of war, and it is said of them by competent naval men that "they can neither fight nor run away with the flag."

ANOTHER PACIFIC RAILROAD.

Representative Willis, of Kentucky, has introduced a bill for the construction of the Texas and Pacific road, from Fort Worth to San Diego, and from Memphis to Jefferson, Tex., providing for a trunk line, postal and military route from the Mississippi river to the Pacific. The railroad company is authorized to issue bonds, the total amount of which for the entire line is not to exceed $37,000,000. The cost of the road is not to exceed $17,000 per mile, except for 250 miles through New Mexico and Arizona. The bonds have fifty years to run, bearing 5 per cent. gold interest, and the payment of which the Government is to guarantee. The bill also requires the Texas and Pacific Company to complete the branch from Shreveport to Vicksburg at its own cost. Senator Johnston, of Virginia, has introduced a similar bill in the Senate. It expresses the views of a majority of the members in Congress from the South.

How One Mouse Saved Another Mouse.

Our attention was attracted by several lusty squeaks from the inside of a pail almost full of water, into which a half-grown mouse had fallen. The alarm had hardly died away when four or five mice appeared on the scene, and began clambering to the top of the pail. For several moments after gaining the top of the pail and catching sight of the mouse in the water, a squeaking confab was held. First one mouse and then another would cling to the rim of the bucket with his hind legs, and, while almost touching the water with his nose, squeak out consolation or advice to the immersed; but while all this was going on the swimming powers of the unfortunate mouse in the pail were rapidly giving out. At last a happy thought seemed to strike the biggest mouse, and, almost without a squeak, he firmly fastened his fore feet on the edge of the pail, and let his body and tail hang down. The drowning mouse saw it, and, making a last desperate effort for life, swam to the spot, seized the tail of his brother mouse, and, amid squeaks of delight from all the mice present, was hauled high and dry out of the water and over the edge of the bucket.—Corinne (Utah) Record.

A Postage Wrangle.

Solicitor Freeman, of the Postoffice Department, has rendered a decision of considerable interest to publishers of newspapers. The Postmaster at Cincinnati has assumed that weekly Cincinnati Gazettes sent out to Postmasters free in return for specific services rendered the newspaper company, in keeping up its posters and other similar matters, were not papers to regular subscribers within the meaning of the law, and that every such paper must be prepaid at transient rates. He claimed that to attempt to circulate such papers at news rates was a violation of law and subjected those engaged to fine and imprisonment. The matter was brought to the attention of the Postmaster General and submitted to the Solicitor, who decided immediately that the Cincinnati Postmaster was altogether exceeding his authority, and he was ordered to withhold no more papers of this kind. The position taken was that payment in services was as much a bona fide subscription as payment in money.—Washington Cor. Chicago Tribune.

Hanged for a Bet.

There are not wanting instances of persons who have hanged themselves, or suffered themselves to be hanged, from motives of curiosity or amusement. A remarkable case of this latter description formed the subject some years ago of one of those many curious investigations which have taken place from time to time at Bow street.

On April 15, 1812, two men were charged before the Magistrates under the following curious circumstances: A constable who was passing along Hampstead road on the previous evening observed a stout man six feet high hanging by his neck from a lamp-post attached to a wall, having been tied up and "turned off" just before by a short man. The officer rushed to the spot, and, when he arrived there, the handkerchief by which the tall man was suspended gave way, and he fell to the ground. His eyes were protruding from their sockets, and he was nearly "gone;" but, on recovering himself sufficiently to stagger on his legs, he immediately struck the officer so violent a blow on the nose as nearly to knock him down. Both men were with difficulty secured, when they explained that the tall man who was being hanged was simply paying "a debt of honor."

The two had been "tossing" in the afternoon, first for money, then for clothes; the tall man, having won the other's jacket, trousers and shoes, they agreed to toss up which should hang the other. The short man won the toss, and forthwith proceeded to hang the tall man on the lamp-post. The tall man urged that had he won the toss he would in like manner have assuredly hanged the short man; but the Magistrates, expressing their horror and disgust at the whole story, sentenced both prisoners to find bail for their good behavior. Not having bail they were committed to Bridewell.—Pall Mall Gazette.

A New Phase of the Legal-Tender Law.

A case is pending in the Supreme Court of Massachusetts which will involve the legality of the reissue of the greenbacks, and this case, will, beyond question, be carried to the Supreme Court of the United States. Mr. Edward Atkinson, writing in the New York Bulletin, says:

"I also beg leave to call your attention to the fact that all the original legal-tender acts have been repealed by the repealing section of the Revised Statutes of 1874; and, as some changes were made in the revised section, relating to legal tenders, the Revised Statutes must be considered the only act now in force, whence will arise the question whether an act passed in 1874, in time of profound peace, is not condemned upon the same reasoning by which the court sustained the acts of 1862 and 1863."

The present authority by which the greenbacks are reissued is found in Section 3,577, Revised Statutes 1874, Title XXXVIII.:

"When any United States notes are returned to the treasury, they may reissue from time to time as the exigencies of the public interests may require."

The point made is clearly stated in Mr. Atkinson's letter, and it seems to be useless to speculate on what the courts may decide in reference to it. But a decision which at a single blow destroys the legal-tender power of the greenbacks and annihilates the only good currency the people are allowed to use would be a most direful calamity.

MR. W. FRASER RAE, an English traveler, who is himself Master of one of the oldest Masonic lodges in the world, was considerably surprised at the public parades of Knights Templar in this country. He says the English Knights "would as soon think of holding an encampment in a balloon as of amusing themselves by perambulating the streets in the full dress of their order."

THE MARKETS.

NEW YORK.
BEEVES	$8 25	@13 00
HOGS	4 50	@ 5 75
COTTON	11⅜	@ 11⅝
FLOUR—Superfine	5 00	@ 5 50
WHEAT—No. 2 Chicago	1 29	@ 1 30
CORN—Western Mixed	58	@ 61
OATS—Mixed	35	@ 40
RYE—Western	72	@ 74
PORK—New Mess	12 90	@13 00
LARD	8⅜	@ 8⅝
CHICAGO.
BEEVES—Choice Graded Steers	5 25	@ 5 50
Choice Natives	4 60	@ 5 00
Cows and Heifers	2 25	@ 3 50
Butchers' Steers	3 25	@ 3 75
Medium to Fair	3 90	@ 4 40
HOGS—Live	3 50	@ 4 20
FLOUR—Fancy White Winter	6 75	@ 7 25
Good to Choice Spring Ex.	5 21	@ 5 50
WHEAT—No. 2 Spring	1 06	@ 1 07
No. 3 Spring	1 00	@ 1 01
CORN—No. 2	43	@ 44
OATS—No. 2	24	@ 25
RYE—No. 2	55	@ 56
BARLEY—No. 2	58	@ 59
BUTTER—Choice Creamery	28	@ 30
EGGS—Fresh	19	@ 20
PORK—Mess	11 75	@11 83
LARD	7⅝	@ 8
MILWAUKEE.
WHEAT—No. 1	1 09½	@ 1 10½
No. 2	1 06	@ 1 07
CORN—No. 2	44	@ 45
OATS—No. 2	24	@ 25
RYE—No.	55	@ 56
BARLEY—No. 2	64	@ 65
ST. LOUIS.
WHEAT—No. 3 Red Fall	1 17	@ 1 18½
CORN—No. 2 Mixed	45	@ 46
OATS—No. 2	27	@ 28
RYE	55	@ 56
PORK—Mess	12 00	@12 15
LARD	7⅝	@ 7¾
HOGS	3 60	@ 4 05
CATTLE	3 00	@ 5 25
CINCINNATI.
WHEAT—Red	1 18	@ 1 28
CORN—New	37	@ 39
OATS	29	@ 31
RYE	60	@ 64
PORK—Mess	11 75	@11 90
LARD	7⅝	@ 8
TOLEDO.
WHEAT—No. 1 White Michigan	1 29	@ 1 30
No. 2 Red Winter	1 27	@ 1 28
CORN	45½	@ 49
OATS—No. 2	28	@ 29
DETROIT.
FLOUR—Choice White	5 50	@ 6 00
WHEAT—No. 1 White	1 29	@ 1 30
No. 1 Amber	1 26	@ 1 27
CORN—No. 1	50	@ 52
OATS—Mixed	29	@ 30
BARLEY (per cental)	1 00	@ 1 55
PORK—Mess	12 25	@12 50
EAST LIBERTY, PA.
CATTLE—Best	5 00	@ 5 40
Fair	4 50	@ 4 75
Common	4 00	@ 4 37
HOGS	4 10	@ 4 40
SHEEP	3 75	@ 5 37

AUBURN COURIER.

T. C. MAYS, Publisher.

AGRICULTURAL AND DOMESTIC.

Around the Farm.

Dr. Ward detailed a case of extraordinary recovery from epilepsy, the patient being placed upon a celery diet.—Report British Vegetarian Society.

The only safe way, if improvement is the object, is to breed from full-blood males. Always use such, and the pure blood will rapidly gain the ascendency.—Utica Republican.

It pays well to keep pig-pens clean, and with a warm sleeping apartment, with plenty of straw. Hogs will fatten much faster in a comfortable pen than in one that affords but little protection against cold winds and storms.—Exchange.

To a farm like mine, not favored with any living brook or spring, I consider a good wind mill a most important and valuable piece of machinery. Mine not only saves the labor of pumping, but furnishes an abundant supply of water at all times for house use as well as for all stock on the farm.—Detroit Tribune.

At one of the county fairs, two farmers, one of whom was the exhibitor of a simple half-bushel of wheat, held this little dialogue: Exhibitor—"I raised ninety-two bushels of wheat like that on four and one-half acres of land." His neighbor—"Well, if I had read that in a paper I wouldn't have believed it, but, if you say it is so, it is so, of course, and I'm an infernal fool to be buying my flour, as I have done for ten years and must do this winter, for my land is just as good for wheat as yours." There is a whole agricultural sermon in that little dialogue, and it is one which has been preached a hundred times and made hundreds of converts this fall. Scores of farmers, who last spring couldn't be made to believe that wheat could be profitably raised in New Hampshire, believe it now.—Mirror and Farmer.

Forest leaves are excellent to mix with hot-bed material, and, where practicable, should be saved for this purpose. They do not heat so rapidly as stable manure, and in this have an advantage as tempering its violence, making it last longer, and maintaining a more regular heat. They are excellent material to put round cold frames to protect half-hardy plants. A board is put up the height of the frame-boards, and about a foot or more from them, and the leaves filled in between. If the plants are somewhat tender, the bottom of the frames may be filled in a few feet with the leaves. Much heat is thrown off during the decomposition of the leaves, which, though not enough to keep out a severe frost, yet modifies somewhat the temperature. These leaves, after they have been two or three years decaying, make admirable stuff for potting and for flowers in general.—Gardener's Monthly.

Care of stock, so far as their proper bedding, feeding and ventilation are concerned, is too important a matter for the thrifty farmer to neglect attending to himself. However trustworthy his assistants, judging by our own experience, it will pay him well at the close of the season to see, each evening, that his cattle, horses, sheep and hogs are well bedded, fed and watered. Scarcely less important is the proper ventilation of the buildings in which his stock are wintered. While the entrance of draughts and cold is to be carefully prevented, it should be borne in mind that domesticated animals, like man himself, need fresh, wholesome air, and, if compelled by ignorance or carelessness to breathe a foul, tainted atmosphere, it is at a serious risk of health and consequent profit. A visit to the barn, stable and pig-pen early in the morning will at once warn the observant farmer of defective ventilation.—Moore's Rural.

It is surprising to see the quantity of potatoes that can be grown from one pound of seed. Last season parties that did their "level best," in competition for some tempting prizes, succeeded in producing from one pound of the Alpha potato, from 1,280 to 1,982 pounds! In these experiments each eye was cut from the seed, and planted in separate hills; and the land was covered with an immense coat of stable-dung, and plowed or forked in. Then ashes, bone-dust, lime and other fertilizers were applied without stint, at the rate of $500 worth to the acre; and, when the clouds failed to supply sufficient moisture, water was supplied from other sources. This is "high farming" in reality—no half-way work; and it was shown that one can not easily apply too much manure to potato land. Potatoes require a good deal of potash, and farmers can not make a mistake in applying to the land on which they are grown either ashes or commercial fertilizers that contain a large percentage of potash. It comes cheapest in muriate of potash, being fifty per cent. of actual potash, and selling at $2.50 per 100 lbs.—Rural New Yorker.

About the House.

Eat Graham pudding and milk for breakfast.

Mend coal-scuttles with flour paste and Canton-flannel.

A cement of ashes and salt will stop cracks in a stove.

Wicks must be changed frequently to insure a good light.

Acidity of the Stomach.—This can be corrected by using alkalies. Borax is good, if used properly; take a small pinch several times a day; too much might cause nausea.

Bread-Making.—We use a 2-cent cake of yeast dissolved in three pints of luke-warm water. This makes three loaves of bread and one pan of rolls. Our bread is excellent.

For Dyspepsia.—Burn alum until the moisture in it is evaporated; then take as much as you can put on a dime, about half an hour before eating. Three or four days probably will answer; but take it until cured.

Dark Steamed Pudding.—To be steamed two and a half or three hours. One cupful molasses, one cupful of sweet milk, two cupfuls of butter, four cupfuls of flour, one teaspoonful soda, three-quarters cupful of fruit; spice to suit the taste; to be eaten with sour sauce.

Boston Tea Cakes.—One well-beaten egg, two table-spoonfuls of sugar, one cupful sweet milk, one teaspoonful soda dissolved in the milk, two teaspoonfuls of cream of tartar sifted in the dry flour, two heaping cupfuls of sifted flour, one table-spoonful of butter, melted; bake in small tins.

Celery.—Celery can be kept for a week or longer by first rolling it up in brown paper, then pin it up in a towel and keep it in a dark place, and keep as cool as possible. Before preparing it for the table place it in a pan of cold water, and let it remain for an hour. It will make it crisp and cold.

Corning Beef.—For 100 pounds of beef take seven pounds salt, two pounds sugar, two ounces saltpetre, two ounces pepper, two ounces soda; dissolve in two and a half gallons of water; boil, skim and let cool; when a scum rises after a few weeks scald the brine over, and by so doing and keeping meat entirely covered with brine, it will keep a year and more.

Jelly Cake Rolls.—Four eggs, beat whites and yelks separately; one teacupful white sugar, one teacupful sifted flour, one teaspoonful cream-tartar, one-half teaspoonful soda dissolved in a very little hot water; flavor with the juice of one lemon; beat all well together; spread quarter of an inch thick in a square tin; bake quickly; then turn bottom side up, spread with jelly, and roll up while hot; this recipe makes three rolls.

NINETY-NINE YEARS.

A Long Term—A Scene in a Missouri Court of Justice.

[From the Sedalia (Mo.) Bazoo.]

The trial of John and William Williams, two brothers, for murder in the first degree, was concluded in the Criminal Court yesterday morning. This case was brought here for trial on a change of venue from Miller county. They were charged with the killing, on the 28th of last March, a man named L. Corbin, who was shot through the head by a pistol in the hands of John Williams, the younger brother.

The case went to the jury on Friday night, at 8 o'clock. At 10 o'clock the jury were allowed to separate and return to their homes. Yesterday morning they reassembled, and about 11 o'clock agreed upon a verdict of murder in the second degree, as follows:

"We, the jury, find the defendant, John Williams, guilty in manner and form as charged in the within indictment for murder in the second degree, and assess his punishment as imprisonment in the penitentiary for the period of ninety-nine years.

"We, the jury, find the defendant, William Williams, guilty in manner and form as charged in the within indictment for murder in the second degree, and assess his punishment at imprisonment in the penitentiary for the period of ten years."

There were present the father, two sisters, a niece and a female relative of the boys. When Deputy Clerk Stewart arose to read the indictment, the most intense eagerness was depicted upon the countenances of the females, but the father's face wore a look of despair, as if he had forebodings of the fate that was in store for his sons. The spectators, with whom the room was crowded, manifested deep interest, while the accused seemed the most indifferent of all. As the Clerk reached that portion of the verdict which assessed the punishment of John Williams at ninety-nine years, the sisters and niece broke into loud exclamations of anguish, accompanied with violent demonstrations of grief. They begged the Clerk to stop, and the niece exclaimed, "Oh, what will become of poor old grandmother?"

"Oh, those hard-hearted jurors! How could they be so cruel?" wailed a sister.

The poor old heart-broken father was less demonstrative, but the tears which streamed down his furrowed cheeks showed how deep was the anguish that filled his heart. The Clerk was visibly affected, but proceeded with his disagreeable duty as best he could, while the bystanders also exhibited the emotion which the scene was naturally calculated to call forth.

The girls—for they were all young—threw their arms around the prisoners' necks, kissing them again and again, making the building resound with their cries, lamentations and exclamations, such as:

"Oh, Lord, what shall become of me!"

"Oh, John! John! Oh, brother! For you to go to that horrid place!"

"Just think of it! For ninety-nine years! Oh, I cannot stand it!"

It was a sad scene, and the grief and emotion exhibited by the relatives finally brought the tears to the eyes of the prisoners themselves.

When the sentence of ninety-nine years' imprisonment was announced for John Williams, his brother heartlessly remarked: "Well, John will lose his teeth by that time!" Then, suddenly changing, he exclaimed: "It's a d—d shame!" and his eyes malignantly flashed with fury.

When the Sheriff ordered the prisoners to be removed to jail, the girls clung to them with despair, and renewed their cries and entreaties, going with them through the streets, which echoed with their cries.

The Voice of the Turtle.

The preacher believed he ought not to select a subject beforehand; but when he rose to speak and opened the Bible the first verse that met his eye must be used. That happened to be "The voice of the turtle shall be heard in the land." He thought he was stumped. At length he said: "Brethering, at first sight one would not think there was much in this tex'; but on a little consideration you will see there is a great deal in it. Now, you all know what a turtle is. If you have been along by a pond, you have seen them on a log sunning themselves. Now, it is said 'The voice of the turtle shall be heard in the land.' But the turtle hasn't any voice, that anybody ever heard; so it must be the noise he makes in plunging off the log into the water. Hence we conclude that immersion is meant, and that immersion will become universal."

THE FALL OF PLEVNA.

[From the Chicago Times.]

The decisive event in the war in Bulgaria, so long awaited, has come at last. Plevna has capitulated, after a hard fight, in which Ghazi Osman himself was wounded. The fall of the Bulgarian stronghold, which will take a worthy place in history by the side of Saragossa, Sebastopol, Strasbourg, and Kars, was by no means inglorious, for its defenders were dying of hunger, and had held out against a vastly superior force, investing them on every side, for more than four months. Numberless assaults have been repelled with heroism; hunger, fatigue, and exposure have been endured. Two battles of appalling magnitude have been fought, and in each the defenders have inflicted terrible defeat upon the assailants. But in spite of the utmost heroism and endurance the end must come at last, and starvation has done what the enemy's storming parties and siege-guns and trenches could not accomplish. For, though the capitulation has taken place at the end of a great battle, that battle would have resulted as did those which went before it if the defenders had not been reduced by hunger to a condition in which they could make no effectual resistance. In Osman Pasha the Russians found an opponent of no mean ability. It was he who rendered Plevna so strong, and his work was done in an amazingly short space of time. Toward the end of July, when the Russians crossed the Danube at Sistova, Osman was in command at Nikopolis. Compelled to abandon that point, he fell back with his army upon Plevna, and, when the Russians reached the vicinity of that city less than two weeks afterward, they found it surrounded by a continuous line of redoubts, covering the crests of the two ranges of hills which command it on all sides. The genius of the Turkish commander had in a fortnight rendered the place impregnable. Entirely unsustained by his chief, he showed the same masterly ability in defending Plevna that he did in its fortification; and that his soldiers were worthy of their commander is shown in the terrible slaughter which they, armed with Yankee rifles, inflicted upon the enemy.

The result of this event, which is by far the most important of the war, will be disastrous to the Turks. Set free from Plevna, the main body of the army of the Grand Duke Nicholas will press forward to the Schipka pass and invade Roumelia. Nothing has prevented the Grand Duke from making this movement but the danger of leaving Plevna on his flank. The attempt of Suleiman Pasha against Tirnova has apparently already come to a standstill; and, if that General could effect nothing against the right wing of the Czarowitch, he can have no hope of prevailing against the overwhelming force which the capitulation of Plevna will liberate. Within a week the seat of war will be transferred to the south side of the Balkans; unless, indeed, the Sultan should express his earnest desire to treat for peace, and the seat of war be transferred to the council chambers. It does not seem likely that the Turks will attempt much further resistance in their present enfeebled condition, and there is no reason to believe that the Russians will miss an opportunity to gain what they want without further bloodshed and expenditure, should such opportunity offer. The presence of the Grand Duke's army in the neighborhood of Adrianople would stimulate powerfully the Sultan's desire to treat, but the permanent conditions of peace will never be arranged directly between the Sultan and the Czar. The questions at issue cannot be settled now without a European understanding, and in establishing that understanding there is no knowing what new complications may arise.

The United States Senate.

For the first time in several years we have a full Senate, the admission of J. B. Eustis, of Louisiana, filling the last vacant seat. That body, as now organized, consists of the following members. There are Republicans (in Roman), 39; Democrats (in Italic), 36; Independent (in SMALL CAPS), 1; total, 76:

ALABAMA.		MISSISSIPPI.
Term expires		Term expires.
1879.	George E. Spencer.	1881.	Branch K. Bruce.
1883.	John T. Morgan.	1883.	L. Q. C. Lamar.
ARKANSAS.		MISSOURI.
1879.	Stephen W. Dorsey.	1879.	David Armstrong.
1883.	Aug. H. Garland.	1881.	Francis M. Cockrell.
CALIFORNIA.		NEBRASKA.
1879.	Aaron A. Sargent.	1881.	A. S. Paddock.
1881.	Newton Booth.	1883.	Alvin Saunders.
COLORADO.		NEVADA.
1879.	Jerome B. Chaffee.	1879.	John P. Jones.
1883.	Henry M. Teller.	1881.	Wm. Sharon.
CONNECTICUT.		NEW HAMPSHIRE.
1879.	Wm. H. Barnum.	1879.	B. Wadleigh.
1881.	Wm. W. Eaton.	1883.	Edward H. Rollins.
DELAWARE.		NEW JERSEY.
1881.	Thomas F. Bayard.	1881.	Theo. F. Randolph.
1883.	Eli Saulsbury.	1883.	John R. McPherson.
FLORIDA.		NEW YORK.
1879.	Simon B. Conover.	1879.	Roscoe Conkling.
1881.	Charles W. Jones.	1881.	Francis Kernan.
GEORGIA.		NORTH CAROLINA.
1879.	John B. Gordon.	1879.	Aug. S. Merrimon.
1883.	Benjamin H. Hill.	1883.	Matt. W. Ransom.
ILLINOIS.		OHIO.
1879.	Richard J. Oglesby.	1879.	Stanley Matthews.
1883.	DAVID DAVIS.	1881.	Allen G. Thurman.
INDIANA.		OREGON.
1879.	Daniel W. Voorhees.	1879.	John H. Mitchell.
1881.	Joseph E. McDonald.	1883.	Lafayette F. Grover.
IOWA.		PENNSYLVANIA.
1879.	William B. Allison.	1879.	J. Donald Cameron.
1883.	Sam'l J. Kirkwood.	1881.	William A. Wallace.
KANSAS.		RHODE ISLAND.
1879.	John J. Ingalls.	1881.	A. E. Burnside.
1883.	Preston B. Plumb.	1883.	Henry B. Anthony.
KENTUCKY.		SOUTH CAROLINA.
1879.	Thos. C. McCreery.	1879.	John J. Patterson.
1883.	James B. Beck.	1883.	M. C. Butler.
LOUISIANA.		TENNESSEE.
1879.	James B. Eustis.	1881.	James E. Bailey.
1883.	Wm. P. Kellogg.	1883.	Isham G. Harris.
MAINE.		TEXAS.
1881.	Hannibal Hamlin.	1881.	Samuel B. Maxey.
1883.	James G. Blaine.	1883.	Richard Coke.
MARYLAND.		VERMONT.
1879.	George R. Dennis.	1879.	Justin S. Morrill.
1881.	William P. Whyte.	1881.	Geo. F. Edmunds.
MASSACHUSETTS.		VIRGINIA.
1881.	Henry L. Dawes.	1881.	Robert E. Withers.
1883.	George F. Hoar.	1883.	John W. Johnston.
MICHIGAN.		WEST VIRGINIA.
1881.	I. P. Christiancy.	1881.	Frank Hereford.
1883.	Thomas W. Ferry.	1883.	Henry G. Davis.
MINNESOTA.		WISCONSIN.
1881.	S. J. R. McMillan.	1879.	Timothy O. Howe.
1883.	William Windom.	1881.	Angus Cameron.

The London Times staff, from the highest to the lowest, wished to unite in a testimonial to be presented to Mr. Delane on his retirement. But the intended recipient declined the proffered honor, and not even the suggestion that it shall take the form of his portrait, to be hung in the editorial room, will induce him to consent.

A hundred lashes is a forfeiture which can be taken with more precision than Shylock's pound of flesh. A negro living near Warrenton, Ga., recently asked a white neighbor to lend him some money. The capitalist declined on the ground that there was no chance of his getting back. The applicant voluntarily offered to pay the penalty of 100 lashes if he failed to meet his obligation at the appointed time. The money was not repaid, and, on Monday last, the creditor proceeded to take the debt out of the negro's hide. When he had got $50 worth, White told Black that he could go on the farm and work out the remainder, but the latter insisted that the debt should be canceled with the lash, according to the bond, and it was done.

THE SILVER BILL.

Its Prospects in the Senate—Will the President Veto the Measure?

[From the Chicago Tribune.]

The preliminary votes on the Silver bill in the Senate leave no doubt that a large majority of that body is in favor of the passage of the bill. That question being determined, the other one arises, will the President veto the bill? It is not often that a President has the opportunity, or, having it, avails himself of it to inform Congress of his personal opinions as to the expediency of a measure. In this case the President, in his annual message, laid before Congress in strong and unmistakable language his objections to a bill which had already passed one house by a four-fifths vote and was then pending in the other house. The theory of a veto is that the President, in returning a bill without his approval, may give such reasons for his negative that members of Congress shall be influenced to vote differently after hearing these reasons than they voted on the first occasion. In this case, however, the President's objections have been heard in advance. He and the Secretary of the Treasury have in fact exhausted their reasoning in opposition to the bill, and a veto message with any expectation of changing votes will be a vain delusion. So vain would such a proceeding be, that it is more than likely that, should the bill pass the Senate by a two-thirds vote, the President would confine his action to a protest such as other Presidents have made under similar circumstances. Should he, however, veto the bill, what are the prospects of its receiving the two-thirds vote necessary to make it a law? With the admission of Eustis, of Louisiana, the Senate will consist of seventy-six members, and, if all are present, fifty-one votes will be required to pass a bill over a veto. The Senators have, by their votes and otherwise, nearly all expressed an opinion on this question, and the Senators may be classified as for or against the Silver bill as follows:

YEAS.

States.	Senators.	States.	Senators.
Alabama	Morgan.	Missouri	Armstrong. Cockrell.
Arkansas	Dorsey. Garland.	Nevada	Sharon. Jones.
California	Booth.	N. Carolina	Merrimon. Ransom.
Colorado	Chaffee. Teller.	Ohio	Matthews. Thurman.
Florida	Conover. Jones.	Pennsylv'a.	Wallace.
Georgia	Gordon.	S. Carolina	Patterson. Butler.
Illinois	Oglesby. Davis.	Tennessee	Bailey. Harris.
Indiana	Voorhees. McDonald.	Texas	Coke. Maxey.
Iowa	Allison. Kirkwood.	Virginia	Johnston. Withers.
Kansas	Ingalls. Plumb.	W. Virginia	Hereford. Davis.
Kentucky	McCreery. Beck.	Wisconsin	Howe. Cameron.
Louisiana	Eustis.
Michigan	Ferry.
Mississippi	Bruce.

NAYS.

California	Sargent.	Michigan	Christine
Connecticut	Barnum. Eaton.	Mississippi	Lamar.
		N.H'm's'ire	Rollins. Wadleigh.
Delaware	Bayard. Saulsbury.	N. Jersey	Randolph. McPherson.
Georgia	Hill.	New York	Conkling. Kernan.
Louisiana	Kellogg.
Maine	Hamlin. Blaine.	R. Island	Anthony. Burnside.
Maryland	Whyte. Dennis.	Vermont	Morrill. Edmunds.
Mas'chus'ts	Dawes. Hoar.

DOUBTFUL.

Alabama	Spencer	Oregon	Mitchell.
Oregon	Grover.	Pe'ns'lvania	Cameron.

RECAPITULATION.

Yeas	47
Nays	25
Doubtful	4
Total	76

Of those put down as doubtful, the two Senators from Oregon, and Mr. Cameron of Pennsylvania, judging from their antecedents and the opinion in their States, will vote for the bill. Mr. Spencer may vote the other way. Included in the negative vote, however, are Messrs. Hill of Georgia, Lamar of Mississippi, Kellogg of Louisiana, and Christiancy of Michigan, all of whom represent constituencies overwhelmingly in favor of the unlimited remonetization of silver.

An Interesting Breach of Promise Case.

A rare and funny breach of promise suit is set for hearing to-morrow before Judge Willford, in the Circuit Court of this city. Miss Pauline Rhule is the plaintiff and F. Neurath the defendant. Neurath is a well-known wholesale candy manufacturer here, and occupies a high station in society. Miss Rhule is a young lady who also moves in the best society of this city. It seems that the lady had engaged herself to the defendant several months ago, and that the defendant broke the engagement for a very curious reason—namely, for alleged bad breath—which the defendant discovered upon kissing her, last September. I am informed by the counsel for the plaintiff that she will produce young lady friends as witnesses who will testify that they have slept with her, and found her breath sweetly aromatic. Members of the Richmond bar, who are familiar with all of the facts, think it the most remarkable case of the kind in the records of the court. Miss Rhule is buxom and bewitching in appearance, and the jury may adjourn to view the premises. Neurath is 42 years of age, and is a widower of one year's standing. Miss Rhule lays her damages at $2,500.—Richmond (Va.) Cor. New York Times.

Facts About Fires.

The following practical and scientific observation on the quenching of fires quickly and with the least loss to insurance companies is communicated to the Portland (Me.) Press by an old fireman:

One gallon of water at the bottom of a fire will do more to quench it than ten gallons at the top. Play low is the true motto for the fireman. If the first engine that reached the Summer street fire in Boston had burst into the warehouse and played into the goods elevator, where the fire broke out, it would probably have saved $50,000,000. To play on the roof of a house on fire is to waste water; the roof was made to shed water; the rain does not put out the kitchen fire, nor would the Presumpscot, flowing bodily on the roof, put out the kitchen if afire. Play low, get the water to the bottom of the fire, and you need not pour in the Presumpscot. A few gallons at the bottom of the fire will rise in clouds of steam wherever the fire is rising and will quench it. Even a heap of rubbish turns rain and water like a partial roof. A gill of water thrown into the bottom of a grate quenches the fire more than a quart thrown on top. For a similar reason, water on the windward side is more effective than on the leeward. I am speaking now of a moderate fire, when there are only one or two houses burning. The big blazes on the leeward look fearfully, but they cannot be effected by playing on them. Throw your water into the bed of coals under the retort that is sucking them, and it goes out. That is to say, play at the bottom of the windward side of the fire, and you take the surest and speediest way to quench the whole, leeward side blazes included.

PINCHBACK RETIRES.

He Writes a Letter in Which the Course of the Republican Majority in Seating Kellogg is Sharply Criticised.

The following is the letter of P. B. S. Pinchback to Gov. Nicholls, announcing his retirement from the contest for a seat in the United States Senate as Senator from Louisiana:

Washington, D. C., Dec. 8, 1877.

To His Excellency, Francis T. Nicholls, Governor of the State of Louisiana:

Sir: On the 14th day of January, 1873, I was elected by the General Assembly of the State of Louisiana United States Senator for the term beginning March 4, 1873, and my credentials, duly signed by the Governor and attested by the Secretary of State, with the seal of the State attached, were presented to the Senate of the United States. On the 13th day of January, 1875, and pending the action of the United States Senate on the credentials of 1873, to cover what might be deemed any irregularity in the first action, the General Assembly of Louisiana re-elected me Senator as though in case of a vacancy, and my second credentials, duly signed by the Executive and attested by the Secretary of State, with the seal of the State attached, were presented to the Senate. In February of 1876 the Senate passed on my credentials of 1873, and, by a vote of 29 to 31, resolved "that P. B. S. Pinchback be not seated Senator from Louisiana for the term of six years from March 4, 1873," leaving, nevertheless, the credentials of 1875 still before the Senate, and the title created by the election of that year undetermined. My defeat in my first contest was referable to the votes of certain Republican Senators, and on the alleged ground that the Returning Board that gave certificates to the members of the General Assembly of 1873 was unconstitutional, and the Legislature organized thereon illegal. With the credentials of 1875 still pending before the Senate, and inferring from the action of the Senators above referred to, relative to the powers and decisions of the Electoral Commission, and more recently from their seating William Pitt Kellogg, that the opinions of these gentlemen as to the constitutional powers of the Returning Board in the matter of creating a Legislature had undergone a change, I determined to make a second contest for my seat in the Senate. A majority of the Committee on Privileges and Elections, including three Republican members, have, however, reported that James B. Eustis is lawfully entitled to a seat in the United States Senate for the unexpired term for which I was elected. Not willing under the circumstances to continue this contest, and by a seemingly factious opposition embarrass Mr. Eustis and deprive the State of her due representation, I now respectfully tender to you, as Chief Executive of Louisiana, my resignation.

I deem it proper in this connection, as a matter of justice to myself and to my friends, to direct attention to the exceptional action had in my case, especially as the same appears in contrast with the prompt and partisan support of Gov. Kellogg. I admit that there were irregularities attaching to the constitution of the General Assembly of 1873 of such a character as to put in question to some extent the legal status of said General Assembly. Its members bore credentials from a Returning Board whose legal character was determined and recognized by the Supreme Court of Louisiana, but from the opposition of Gov. Warmoth, the custodian of the returns of the election, they were unable to obtain possession of said returns, and their action in making the canvass and promulgation of votes was to some extent based upon statements and certificates of votes furnished by the United States Supervisors, and other secondary evidence. Necessarily their decisions were to some extent conjectural and uncertain, but the best the necessities of the case allowed; and the Legislature thus declared was authorized, under the constitution, to cure and determine any defects that might exist in the title of its membership. This body actually existed for its constitutional term of two years, enacted the legislation that governed the State for that period, and was deemed of sufficient vitality to canvass and declare the votes for Governor and Lieutenant Governor; and the executive officers were not only recognized by the judiciary of the State and by the President of the United States, but exercised their functions within the State for the full term of their office. Supplementing these considerations by the further fact that Louisiana was largely Republican in its masses, I believed that, as Senator elect, I not only represented the popular will of the State, but possessed a title substantially legal and valid; yet I submitted to the decision of the Senate on the assumption that honorable Senators were not only honest in the grave constitutional objections that they raised, but were so far acting from conviction as would authorize the expectation of consistency of conduct when a similar case should be presented for their consideration. Now, I find, when Gov. Kellogg presents a claim essentially like my own, but weaker, that the gentlemen who so earnestly combatted my claim promptly and without hesitation admit and defend his.

The Packard Legislature, so-called, derives its credentials from the legal Returning Board, and said board, unlike that of 1873, could be specific and definite in its promulgation of the election, but as a matter of fact, not from lack of knowledge, but of choice, excluded men who had received a majority of the votes cast, as appeared from the official returns before them, sufficient in number to destroy a quorum in each House. They thus, by the practical disfranchisement of the citizens, created a Legislature which could not exist except by the defeat of the popular will. The Assembly of 1873 may have, inadvertently, and by the enforced ignorance of the only tribunal competent to act in the premises, had men in it not entitled to sit therein, but the Packard Assembly, in its Senate and in its House, held members in sufficient numbers to have broken the quorum in each, who were put there to the knowledge of the Returning Board, not only without having received a majority of votes, but to the exclusion of other men who were well understood to have been elected. This Assembly passed away in a few weeks, without leaving behind it, as the evidence of its existence, a single living statute. An election by such a body is certified to by Gov. Packard, whose title was as baseless, and whose tenure of office was as uncertain as his General Assembly, and this makes prima facie and on its merits the case of Gov. Kellogg. It taxes both my credulity and charity to concede either sincerity or consistency to Republican Senators who so earnestly opposed my claim from 1873 to 1876, and so promptly and solidly supported the new Senator from Louisiana. In withdrawing from this contest, I cannot refrain from expressing my heartfelt gratitude to the members of the Senate who have consistently and bravely sustained me in my efforts to secure my rights and representation to the State and people of Louisiana. I have the honor, sir, to be

Your most obedient servant,
P. B. S. Pinchback.

A Minnesota farmer stood beneath a hollow tree, all hollow, hollow, hollow, and cut it down. It contained twelve live skunks, all hollow, hollow, hollow and the farmer "hollowed," too.

ALL SORTS.

They raise vegetable tallow in Australia.

The hogs of Pennsylvania are dying with diphtheria.

A boast of strength is usually a confession of weakness.

Horseshoes are made in California of compressed rawhide.

Ground Hog City is the name of a town in the Black Hills.

The late Gen. Forrest, at his own request, was buried in his Confederate uniform.

There are said to be many impecunious Americans stranded in Paris and London.

The Harpers paid Mr. Longfellow at the rate of $10 a line for his poem of "Keramos."

[illegible] American cheese is running ahead of the European article the world over.

"Progressive Women" have had their fifth congress and gone home to sniff at their husbands because seal-skin sacques don't grow on trees.

The United States utilizes in agriculture 10 per cent. of its area; Great Britain, 58 per cent.; France and Belgium, 83; Austro-Hungary, 88; and Holland, 70. This shows conclusively whence the agricultural growth must spring.

At Creedmoor, lately, Thomas Lamb, Jr., one of the reserves of the last American rifle team, made the astonishing and unprecedented score of thirty consecutive bull's-eyes at 900 yards. But the score was not made in a match, and so doesn't count.

There arrived at Galveston a few days ago, 150 German immigrants on their way to Marion county, Tex. On the train from Galveston the baggage-master was struck with the peculiar shape of a bundle, and, upon examination, found in it a big Dutchman.

A Rochester milkman lost two lady customers because a newspaper charged him with putting aqua pura in his milk. They said they had all they could do to stand the water he put in, but now that he was caught adding that nasty drug, they wanted no more of his milk in theirs.

The British Bible Society reports an astonishing demand for the Bible among the Cossacks. Over 60,000 have been distributed within the last few weeks. The excellent linen paper makes the best of gun wadding, and thus the gospel is spread among the Turks.

FOR THE HOLIDAYS

LORD & TAYLOR

NEW YORK.

WE INVITE ATTENTION TO THE FOLLOWING DEPARTMENTS OF OUR ESTABLISHMENTS. THE LOW PRICES AT WHICH OUR GOODS ARE MARKED, HAVE SPECIAL REFERENCE TO THE HOLIDAY SEASON, AND BARGAINS WILL BE FOUND THROUGHOUT THE HOUSE, THIS SEASON'S IMPORTATIONS GIVING US AN UNEQUALED STOCK OF GOODS.

BLACK SILKS,

handsome and durable, all widths, $1.00 to $3.50. The GREAT AMERICAN INDESTRUCTIBLE SILK, $1.20, $1.35, and $1.50.

PLAIN COLORED SILKS,

new shades, commencing as low as 75c. per yard, and at $1.00, same as quality of last season at $1.25. Fancy Brocade and Damasse Figures of the new Paris shades, from $2.00 upwards. Trimming Satins at $1.00, worth $1.35.

THE PRICES AT WHICH WE OFFER OUR SILKS ARE ONE-QUARTER TO ONE-THIRD LESS THAN LAST SEASON.

☞ A SILK DRESS IS A HANDSOME HOLIDAY PRESENT.

IN DRESS GOODS

there is richer display of colorings and brilliant effects this season than for many years past.

The mixed COSTUME CLOTHS range in price from 50c. a yard to $5.00, and on low-priced DRESS GOODS, from 10c. a yard up, many of them being as effective as the heavier fabrics.

Shawls, Mantles and Wraps.

India Valley Cashmere Shawls from $100.00 up. India Filled Centers at $50.00 and up. Real Laces, Chudda and Striped India Shawls, new designs, from $10.00 upwards. Also, full lines British, French and German Shawls in beautiful new styles, of the best and most reliable manufacture. Paris Mantles and Cloaks of the latest modes from $15.00 up, and Berlin from $5.00.

Ladies' and Children's Suits and Fine Under Clothing.

These departments embrace everything pertaining to Female Costume, suited to all ages and circumstances. For full particulars see catalogues.

HOSIERY.

Ladies', Misses', and Children's Hosiery from $1.50 a dozen, up to the finest goods. All the newest and prettiest designs in Hosiery are represented in our stock in Silk, Cotton and Merino.

FURS.

Alaska Seal Sacques, from $65.00 up.
Alaska Seal Muffs from $6.00 up.
Alaska Seal Boas, from $6.00 up.
Mink Muffs and Boa, from $12.00 a set, upward.
Silk Fur-lined Garments, from $65.00.
Alaska Sable Sets, from $7.50.
A good set of Furs as low as $5.00.
☞ A SET OF FURS IS A SUITABLE AS WELL AS SEASONABLE HOLIDAY PRESENT.

GENTS' FURNISHING.

DRESSING GOWNS, SMOKING JACKETS AND CAPS, SCARFS, TIES, UMBRELLAS, GLOVES, AND OTHER ARTICLES FOR GENTLEMEN, SUITABLE FOR THE HOLIDAYS TO WHICH THE ATTENTION OF LADIES IS INVITED.

GLOVES.

Kid, Silk, Lisle Thread and Merino Gloves of the new colors and shapes, in great variety.

Lord & Taylor's Kid Gloves, 2 buttons, warranted, at $1.00 per pair, price last season $1.50.

ALSO,

Lace, Cambric, Linen and Silk Handkerchiefs, and Beautiful Neckerchiefs, all prices from 25c. upward, and all kinds Dress Trimmings to match our goods.

☞ Our Goods are all first-class. We make a point to fill all orders exactly and to the interest of purchasers. We guarantee all purchases to be satisfactory to buyers, and stand ready to remedy all errors. We invite orders, convinced that a first trial will insure us the regular custom hereafter.

Catalogues of our entire stock sent to any address on application.

All orders for Goods to be accompanied by the money, or where parties wish Goods will be sent by Express, C. O. D. Where the remittance is too large, we always return the difference.

Broadway & Twentieth St.
Grand, Chrystie & Forsyth
Streets, N. Y.

Auburn Courier.

AUBURN, INDIANA, DEC. 27th, 1877.

Address of the Central Committee to the Democracy of Indiana.

DEMOCRATIC COMMITTEE ROOMS,
INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 21, 1877.

To the Democratic Voters of Indiana:

At a meeting of the democratic state central committee held in this city on the 20th day of December, 1877, it was unanimously resolved that the democratic state convention shall be held at Indianapolis, on the 20th day of February, 1878. The vote of the state has so largely increased that a representation upon the former basis makes the convention too large for the convenient dispatch of business; so large indeed that no hall in the state is capacious enough for its accommodation. The committee therefore established the basis of representation at one delegate for every two hundred voters, and one for each fraction over one hundred in each county cast for Tilden and Hendricks; and you are requested to select the delegates in each county upon the above basis in such manner as you have usually adopted.

It is the wish and hopes of the committee that all the voters of the state who desire a change in national administration; all who favor economy in national, state, county and city expenditures, and reform in the civil service of the country; all who demand that the policy of the country in relation to finance and money shall be made fair, equal and just towards the people by the repeal of the resumption law and the restoration of silver money, shall participate in the selection of delegates, so that the sentiment of the entire people, who think alike upon these important matters, shall be represented in the convention and express in its utterances.

This is the first occasion upon which the committee has been called upon to address you since the election of 1876. We can not now be wholly silent upon what took place after that election. It is known to you all that Tilden and Hendricks were elected, and according to the constitution and laws they should have been inaugurated. A cabinet officer announced to the country the flagrant falsehood that Hayes and Wheeler were elected, and then it was resolved that they should be forced into the offices. The president gave his sanction to the high handed proceedings and commanded the military forces of the country to be assembled at Washington, thereby seeking to control the action of congress and dictate his successor. The work was done. The right of the people to select their rulers at the ballot box was sacrificed to the greedy demands of party, and in the presence of military power. Rather than involve the country in civil strife or even expose it to the hazard of that dreadful calamity the democrats in congress chose to trust the judges of the supreme court. That trust was disappointed, and resulted in a fraud—even members of that high court so far forgot the dignity of their position as to allow themselves to be used to serve the purpose of partisian power and gain. We do not propose to disturb the incumbants, but the people owe it to themselves and the institutions of the country that rest upon the ballot box to rebuke the crime, so that it never can be repeated. The party has made no gain by its crime. It is filled with distrust and dissentions. Neither department trusts the other. Indeed how could it be otherwise? Hayes knows that the commission declared him elected when he was not elected; and the country knows that he has identified himself and made himself and his administration a party to the crime by appointing to lucrative offices nearly all the men who had been connected with the foul returning board transaction. One of the wretches from Florida, nominated for chief justice of one of the territories, was so vile that the senate was compelled, but a few days since, to reject him. May we not ask sincere and honest republicans whether they are content to endorse this crime by their votes? Will they rather not join us in its condemnation and in an honest effort to return to better government, with the hopes that better times will follow?

M. D. MANSON, chairman.
RUFUS MAGEE, secretary.

* * *

Wm. Fleming, Esq., of Fort Wayne, will be a candidate for State Treasurer. While the south and central portions of the state are striving for representations on the ticket, they ought not to have more than they are entitled to, and it has heretofore required a solid north to gain what was due us. There are several candidates in this section for this position and unless we unite on one man and stand firmly by him, there will be little chance of winning. We believe Mr. Fleming the strongest man yet mentioned, and we trust an effort can be made to concentrate our forces upon him. He is from a locality which has never had representation on the state ticket. He is a life-long, indefatigable, persistent worker in the ranks of the democracy. He has always been found where work and cool judgment was needed, and has never flinched a moment in ardorous undertakings for the good of the party. We know he would make an excellent officer, and we believe he deserves the nomination, because of his personal efforts and untiring exertions for the good of the party.

NOTICE TO TAX-PAYERS.

To the Tax-Payers of De Kalb County.

In compliance with the laws of the State of Indiana, I, DANIEL GONSER, treasurer of said county, hereby notify the Tax-Payers thereof that the rate of taxation for the year A. D. 1877 are correctly stated in the following table, showing the amount of tax in cents levied upon each one hundred dollars valuation, in the several townships and incorporated villages in said county, as the same appears on the tax duplicate of De Kalb county, for said year.

		State Levies.			Town and Township Levies.							County Levies.
	State Taxes		School Tax		Township Tax	Road Tax	Com. School Tax	Spec'l. School Tax		Addit'l. Special School		County Tax	Bond Int.	Total Tax	Total Poll
TOWNSHIPS AND INCORPORA'D TOWNS	On each $100	On each Poll	On each $100	On each Poll	On each $100	On each $100	On each $100	On each $100	On each Poll	On each $100	On each Poll	On each $100	On each $100	On each $100	Total Poll.
Butler Townsip.	13	50	16	50	5	20		50	50			45	10	159	150
Jackson "	13	50	16	50	5	15		15	25			45	10	119	125
Concord "	13	50	16	50	5	15		25	50			45	10	129	150
Newville "	13	50	16	50	5	15		35	10			45	10	139	200
Stafford "	13	50	16	50	5	10		40	50			45	10	139	150
Wilmington "	13	50	16	50	5	15		35				45	10	139	100
Union "	13	50	16	50	5	15		3				45	10	109	100
Richland "	13	50	16	50	5	10		25	100			45	10	124	200
Fairfield "	13	50	16	50	5	15		15	40			45	10	119	140
Smithfield "	13	50	16	50	5	15		15	40			45	10	119	140
Franklin "	13	50	16	50	5	20		20	25			45	10	129	125
Troy "	13	50	16	50	5	15		22				45	10	126	100
Keyser "	13	50	16	50	5	15	10	30	50			45	10	134	150
Auburn Town	13	50	16	50	5	15		25	50	50	100	45	10	189	250
Waterloo "	13	50	16	50	5	15		50	100			45	10	154	200
Butler "	13	50	16	50	5	15		50		50		45	10	204	150
Garrett "	13	50	16	50	5	15		25	50			45	10	129	150

DOG TAX:—For every male, $1.00; for every female, $2.00; for each additional dog, $2.00.

Examine your receipt before leaving the office and see that it covers all your property. People are taxed for what they own on April 1st of each year.

Taxes are due on the 15th day of December, and tax-payers may pay the full amount of such taxes on or before the third Monday of April, or may, at their own option, pay one-half thereof on or before said third Monday and the remaining one-half on or before the first Monday in November following, provided, however, that all road taxes charged shall be paid prior to the third Monday in April, as prescribed by law; and provided, further, that in all cases where as much as one-half of the amount of taxes charged against a tax-payer shall not be paid on or before the third Monday in April, the whole amount charged shall become due and returned delinquent, and be collected as provided by law. Delinquent lands are advertised on or about the first Monday in January, and are sold on the second Monday of February of each year.

The treasurer is responsible for the taxes he could have collected. Therefore tax-payers ought to remember that their taxes must be paid every year.

No county order will be paid to any person owing delinquent tax. As the road tax is all due with the first installment, road receipts must be presented on or before the third Monday of April, or they will not be received. For the collection of which I may be found at my office, in Auburn, as directed by law. Pay your taxes promptly and avoid costs.

DANIEL GONSER, Treasurer of De Kalb county.

December 24th, 1877.

The Kendallville Standard asks the question, "Is Hayes a sneak?" Well, he sneaked into office mighty slick, and the Standard glorified therein. Why squeal now?

* * *

The Supreme Court of this State has just decided that when land is deeded to husband and wife it cannot be sold on execution against either during the life time of both.

* * *

The swells in and around Washington are lamenting the bloodless settlement of the Gordon-Conkling dispute. They would be proud to officiate at any body's duel but their own. Messrs. Gordon and Conkling have acted with sense.

* * *

Conkling defeated the confirmation of Hayes' New York appointments. We are in favor of the fight; but confess to a serene indifference as to which whips. Hayes occupies the Presidency by fraud and Conkling helped to perpetrate the fraud, and we'd like to see both cleaned out.

* * *

There is not a more swaggering, arrogant pompous man in the Senate than Conkling. The difficulty between him and Blaine some twelve years ago arose from the airy manner of the Senator, and that is why Blaine called him a turkey cock. On the other hand there is no gentleman more polished, amiable, polite and genial, in that body, than Senator Gordon.

* * *

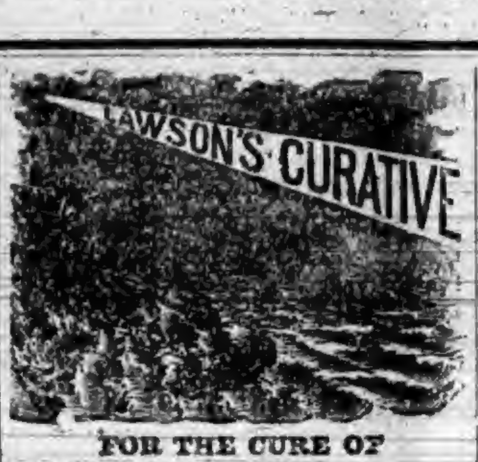
Secretary Evarts has spoken and his speech is believed to express the sentiments of President Hays. It is an acceptance of the war offered by Conkling, Blaine and Chandler. The Administration will not be trifled with, much less beg for terms. The quarrel can have but one result, and that will be the total upsetting of Conkling and his allies. The only time to have made war successfully upon Hayes was before he was counted to the White House.

* * *

The Supreme Court of Georgia has decided for that latitude the long-disputed question whether drunken men are responsible for the murders that they commit in their fit of intoxication. The Georgia tribunal has ruled that "to be too drunk to form the intent to kill, he must be to drunk to form the intent to shoot." We suppose he must be too drunk to handle a club or use any other murderous weapon effectually, and this decision seems to have considerable common sense as well as justice about it.

* * *

The following story is applied to President Hayes. An old man went to market on his jackass, his little son going along on foot. They met a man who said, "Old fellow, I think you had better get down and let your little son ride." The old man got down and put his son up to ride. Pretty soon they met another who said, "Young man, I think you had better get down and walk; let your poor old father ride." The son obeyed and the old gent again got up to ride. They had not gone far until they met the third man who said the hard-hearted old man ought at least to take his son up and let him ride also. This request was also complied with, but the load proved to be too great for the poor old animal who sunk down and died. The old man then took in the situation and began to see what he had done and thus soliloquized: "Well, I have tried to please everybody, and have pleased nobody, and have lost my ass in the bargain."



FOR THE CURE OF

RHEUMATISM AND NEURALGIA.

This marvelous preparation has cured hundreds of the most distressing cases of Chronic Rheumatism and Neuralgia, even when all other remedies have failed. It is fast becoming the

Acknowledged Antidote

for these diseases and can be relied upon by sufferers to relieve them of their pains and effect a permanent cure.

Do Not Give Up

your case as hopeless and settle down to the conviction that no medicine will help you; all we ask is a fair trial of the CURATIVE, and that you bear in mind that the nature of these diseases require persistent and faithful application to insure a perfect cure. In every community where the CURATIVE has been placed will be found many witnesses who will testify to what it has done for them.

Diphtheria, Sore Throat, Burns, Scalds, Bruises, Sprains, Wounds, Cuts, Chilblains, Inflammation, Headache, Toothache, Catarrh, Dyspepsia, Sour Stomach

can positively be cured by the free use of the CURATIVE. Send to us for testimonials if you have any doubts.

Sold by all Druggists.

Price $1.00 per Bottle, 6 for $5.00.

PREPARED BY

Lawson Chemical Co., Cleveland, O

For sale by F. E. Davenport.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of an Execution to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Wm. Dunn is plaintiff, and Ann M. Spencer is defendant requiring me to make the sum of Five Thousand, Nine Hundred and Two Dollars and Seventy-Six Cents $5,902.76 with interest on said judgment and costs I will expose at public sale to the highest bidder on

SATURDAY, JANUARY 19th, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m. and 4 o'clock p. m. of said day at the door of the Court House of DeKalb County, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years of the following real estate to-wit:

Lots number twenty-eight, fifty two, fifty-three, fifty-nine, eighty-two, eighty three, one hundred and one, one hundred and thirty, one hundred and thirty three, one hundred and thirty-four, one hundred and thirty-one, one hundred thirty-nine, one hundred and forty, one hundred and fifty-seven and one hundred and fifty eight, [28, 52, 53, 59, 82, 83, 101, 130, 133, 134, 131, 139, 140, 157 and 158,] all in the western addition to the town of Auburn, De Kalb county Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said judgment interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose at public sale, the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
By THOS. D. GROSS, deputy.

Zollers & Zollers, Att'ys for Plaintiff.
Auburn, Indiana, Dec. 20th, 1877.
Pr. fee $9.50.

L. J. BLAIR, Attorney.

STATE OF INDIANA, }
DE KALB COUNTY. }

In the De Kalb Circuit Court, February term, 1878.

Almira Dunford } vs. } Divorce.
John Dunford. }

NOW comes the plaintiff by L. J. Blair, her attorney, and files an affidavit that said defendant is not a resident of the State of Indiana.

Notice is, therefore, given said defendant that unless he be and appear on the second day of the next term of the De Kalb Circuit Court, to be holden on the fourth Monday of February, A. D. 1878, at the court house in Auburn, in said county and state, and answer or demur to the complaint, the same will be heard and determined in his absence.

Witness, my name and the seal of said court affixed at Auburn, this 19th day of December, 1877. GEO. H. K. MOSS, Clerk.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Orlando M. Letcher and William Letcher are plaintiffs, and Martin and Mary Maze, are defendants, requiring me to make the sum of Six Thousand and F[illegible] Two dollars and Seventy-One cents, $[illegible].71 with interest on said decree and costs, will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, JANUARY 19th, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House in Auburn DeKalb county, Indiana the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

North-east quarter of section twenty-four, [24] township thirty-four, [34], north of range fourteen [14], east, excepting one acre off the north west corner of said above described real estate, deeded to James Leonard, balance of said land to contain 160 acres more or less, in De Kalb county, Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
By THOS. D. GROSS, Deputy.

Rose & Hartman, Attorneys for plff.
Auburn, Dec. 20th, 1877. Pf. $9.75.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of an Execution to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Samuel B. Wood is plaintiff and John Treash is defendant requiring me to make the sum of Three Hundred and Twenty-Two dollars and Thirty-eight cents, $322.38, with interest on said judgment and costs I will expose at public sale to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, JANUARY 19th, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m., and 4 o'clock p. m. at the door of the Court House of DeKalb County Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years of the following real estate, to-wit:

Lot number thirty two [32] in Brandt & Ashley's addition to the town of Auburn, lot number twenty-seven [27] in the Western addition to the town of Auburn, and part of lot number ninety-seven (97) in the original plat of the town of Auburn, described as follows, to-wit: Commencing twenty-two (22) feet north of the south-west corner of said lot ninety-seven (97) thence north twenty-two 22 feet, thence east eighty 80 feet, thence south twenty-two 22 feet thence west eighty 80 feet to the place of beginning, all in DeKalb county and State of Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said judgment, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose at public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said judgment, interest and costs.

Sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
By THOS. D. GROSS, Deputy.

W. H. Dills, Att'y. for Plaintiff.
Auburn, Ind., Dec. 26, 1877.
P. fee $9.75

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Jacob Silbert is plaintiff and John Mc lellan is defendant requiring me to make the sum of one hundred and sixty-three dollars and seventy-five cents, ($163.75) with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, JANUARY 19th, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House in DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

Part of out lot number six, (6), in Kuhlman's second addition to the town of Auburn, DeKalb county, Ind., commencing at a point on the south line of said out lot, one hundred and forty (140) feet west of the south east corner of said lot, and running thence west seventy (70) feet on said south line thence north ninety (90) feet to the north line of said lot, thence east seventy (70) feet on the north line of said lot, thence south ninety (90) feet to the place of beginning.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St CLAIR, Sheriff.
By THOS. D. GROSS, Deputy.

Rose & Hartman, Attorneys for plaintiff.
Auburn, Dec. 20th, 1877. Pf. $9.75.

$777 is not easily earned in these times but it can be made in three months by any one of either sex, in any part of the country who is willing to work steadily at the employment we furnish. $66 per week in your own town. You need not be away from home over night. You can give your whole time to the work, or only your spare time. We have agents who are making over $20 per day. All who engage at once can make money fast. At the present time money cannot be made so easily and rapidly at any other business. It costs nothing to try the business. Terms and $5 outfit free. Address at once,

H. HALLETT & Co., Portland, Maine.
October 11, -6m noll.

ROOT & COMPANY

46 and 48 Calhoun Street.

FORT WAYNE, IND.

BLACK SILKS Superb stock, most of them bought at auction sales and will be sold cheap. Prices, 65c, 75c, 85c, $1.00, 1.15, 1.25, 1.30, 1.50 per yards.

CASHMERE SILKS Black silks, brilliant color warranted to wear; $1.50, 1.65, 1.75, 2.00, 2.25, 2.50, 3.00 per yard.

COLORED SILKS All the popular shades for dresses and trimmings at greatly reduced prices, viz: 75c, 85c, 1.00, 1.15, 1.25, 1.40, 1.50 per yard.

CHENEY'S American gros grain silks, [illegible] dark shades, warranted to wear and give satisfaction. Price 1.50 per yard.

BLACK CASHMERES Full lines of all our popular numbers. The best value in the city at 60c, 68c, 75c, 85, 90c, 1.00 1.25, per yard.

COLORED CASHMERES, In seal brown, navy blue, myrtle green, plum color, draubs, bargains at 60c, 75c, 85.c 1.00 per yard.

BOURETTE CLOTHS Niegose and matalasse effects Knickerbockr and snow flake goods for overdresses. Suits, etc., 25c, 35c, 50c, 75c, 1.00, 150 per yard

MOURNING GOODS, Large choice stock cashmeres, black merinos, henriettas, Austrailian crepes, bombasines, tamise cloths, barathens, matalasse, etc.; etc.

COURTAULD'S ENGLISH CREPE

3-4 4-4 5-4 6 4 wide, cut on the bias at 75c, 85c, 1.00, 1.25, 1.50, up to 8.00 per ya. Also crepe vails, al sizes, best goods 2.50 to9.00 each.

UNDERWEAR for gentlemen, ladies, and infants wear. All sizes from smallest to the largest. The largest stock and lowest prices in the city.

HARRIS KID GLOVES is the best kid glove sold. In 2, 3, 4, 6 buttons. Prices reduced. Also 2 and 3 button kids at 75c, 1.00, 1.25 and 1.50 per pair.

HOSIERY KID GLOVES for wear, complete stock, newest styles and lowest prices. Balbri gan hosiery for ladies and gentlemen.

CLOAKS, SUITS, SHAWLS, Paris and New York styles. Immense stock to select from. New styles open daily.

CARPETS, this department is the most prosperous in our etablishment, choice styles and low popularprices do the business

HOUSEKEEPING GOODS of all kinds, table linens, and demasks, towels and towelings, quilts, napkins, table covers, piano covers, etc.

Root & Company.

BOSS HARNESS SHOP

I have purchased the harness stock of Geo. Nock, and added largely to every description of stock that is usually kept in my line of trade, such as

HARNESS, DOUBLE AND SINGLE!
Bufalo Robes, Lap Robes,
Horse Blankets, Collars,
Whips, Brushes, Combs,
Harness Oil, Axel Greese.
Fine Ready-made Harness,
Double and Single a Specialty.

Manufactured by the most experienced workman that can be found in Northern Indiana, I employ none other, none other need apply. I would say to all customer frends that I will warrant all stock and work that goes out of my shop as recommended. I use none but the best Oak tanned Leather. I would invite all in need of goods in my line to call at my shop before purchasing elsewhere Shop in Flukes old Tannery Building on corner Jackson and seventh St. As I am bound not be undersold in the same class of goods in Northern Indiana

Being an old farmer formily I keep a very effable experienced Foreman to see that all work is well done. Repairing done with neatness and dispatch.

J. E. SHILLING, Sole Proprietor.
W. SHEFFER, Foreman.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court, in a cause wherein Stiefel & Och are plaintiffs and George M. Tappan is defendant, requiring me to make the sum of Two hundred and fifteen dollars (215) and fifty (50) cents with interest on said judgement and costs, I will expose to the highest bidder on

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 29th, 1877.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M. of said day, at the door of the Court House, in DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years of the following real estate to-wit:

The undivided one seventh (1-7) of one hundred acres off the north part of the southeast quarter of section twelve, 12, township thirty-four, 34 north of range fourteen, 14, east in De Kalb County Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interests and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St CLAIR, Sheriff.

Young & Ralston, Attorneys for plaintiffs
Auburn, Nov. 21st, 1877. Pf. $9.25.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Samuel Gowdy is plaintiff and John A. Scholfield, et al are defendants, requiring me to make the sum of Four Hundred and Nineteen dollars and thirteen cents, with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, JANUARY 5th, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House in DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years of the following real estate, to-wit:

The south half of the west half of the north-east quarter of section ten [10], township thirty five [35] north of rang fourteen [14] east, containing forty acres of land, more or less, in DeKalb county, Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St CLAIR, Sheriff.

McBride, Morlan & Leas, Att'ys for plaintiff.
Auburn, Ind., Dec. 13th, 1877.
Pr. fee $7.50

Notice for Stockholders' Meeting.

Notice is hereby given that according to the articles of association of the First National Bank of Auburn, Indiana, that the stockholders thereof are required to meet at the Banking house of said association, on the second Tuesday in January, annually, to elect a board of nine directors for the ensuing year, and to transact such other business as may come before said meeting. Therefore a meeting of the stockholders of said association will be held on Tuesday, January 8th, 1878, at the banking house in Auburn, between the hours of 9 o'clock A. M., and 4 o'clock P. M. to elect a new board of directors and to transact such other business as may come up.

JAS. V. HAZZARD, Cashier.
Auburn, Ind. Dec. 14th 1878.

NOTICE.

NOTICE is hereby given that at the regular meeting of Auburn Lodge, No. 118, I. O. O. F. on Wednesday evening, January 2nd, 1878, there will be elected three Trustees, to serve one year, or until their successors in office are elected and qualified. By order of the Lodge

S. T. GALLOWAY, P. Secretary.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of an execution to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Levi Houser is plaintiff, and Noah Long is defendant, requiring me to make the sum of one hundred and fifty-two dollars (152) and twenty cents, with interest on said judgment and costs, I will expose at public sale to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 29th, 1877.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House of DeKalb County, Indiana, the rents and profits, for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

A life estate in ten (10) acres of land of a square form in the south west corner of the east half of the south west quarter of section twenty one (21), township thirty-three, 33, north of range twelve, 12, east in DeKalb county Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said judgment, interest and costs, I will, at the same time and place, expose at public sale, the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said judgment, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation and appraisement laws.

J. C. St CLAIR Sheriff.
By THOS. D. GROSS, Deputy.

Penfield Attorney for plaintiff.
Auburn, Ind. Dec. 5th Pf. $7.75.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court, in a cause wherein Samuel Swihart is plaintiff, and Samuel Geisinger, etux, is defendant, requiring me to make the sum of one hundred and seventy-two dollars, 172, and eighty-three, 83, cents, with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 29th, 1877.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M., and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House of DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate to-wit:

Town lots numbers seventy-eight, 78, and seventy-nine, 79, in Ensleys second addition to the town of Auburn, Dekalb County and State of Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose at public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St CLAIR, Sheriff.
By THOS. D. GROSS, Deputy.

Guy Plum Attorney for plaintiff.
Auburn, Ind. Dec. 5th, 1877. Pf. $7.50

MOODY & HOFFMAN, Attorneys.

STATE OF INDIANA }
DEKALB COUNTY }

In the De Kalb Circuit Court, February term, 1878.

Lewis Hoffmand } vs. } Complaint.
John W. Garvey, }

NOW comes the plaintiff by Moody & Hoffman, his attorneys, and files an affidavit that said defendant, John W. Garvey, is not a resident of the State of Indiana.

Notice is, therefore given said defendant that unless he appear on the second day of the next term of the De Kalb Circuit Court, to be holden on the 4th Monday of February, A. D. 1877, at the court house in Auburn, in said county and state, and answer or demur to the complaint herein, the same will be heard and determined in his absence.

Witness, my name and the seal of said court affixed at Auburn, this 22nd day of December, 1877. GEO. H. K. MOSS, Clerk.

Auburn Courier.

Local and Miscellaneous.

Silver Dollar

"I am very sorry my dear madam to find you ill; what is the matter?" Sick lady reaching over to the back of the bed, the invalid turned down the coverlid, disclosing a beatiful infant wrapped in the embrace of the rosy God, and said triumphantly, "that's what's the matter." We warrant all the solid silver ware and silver plated ware to be of the double and tripple plate, and all stamped with the named of Meriden Britanna Co., the best and largest plating company in the world. Tea set, $25 to 100. water set, $13 to 80; castors, $4 to 50. Card and Cake stands, pickle castors, knives, spoons, ladles, sugar shells, fruit knives, the best stock of plated, at Ward's Cheap Crockery Store No. 9 Columbia street Fort Wayne, Ind.

Mr. Wright, of Michigan, is in town.

The firm known as Canon & Foltz have dissolved partnership.

Rob. McClellan returned Friday last from an extensive visit to Iowa.

Miss Yesbera, sister to our merchant tailor, is here spending the holidays.

Protracted meetings will commence at the M. E. church next Sunday evening.

Harry Rush, of Angola, spent several days in the city with his parents this week.

See the card of Mr. Bashelier who has engaged in the grocery trade at Auburn.

Hank Little and Francis J. Kline of this city, spent Sabbath last in Corunna.

The little cigar store on the corner has been resuscitated and is again alive and kicking.

Our County Treasurer, Mr. Gonsor, gives notice in another column about the paying of taxes.

It strikes us our town authorites should keep the crossings cleaned up during the muddy season.

A handkerchief flirtation is a very simple thing. It only requires two fools and two handkerchiefs.

There was a shooting match at the slaughter house last Tuesday. Two ducks and a "setting hen" were the prizes.

Mr. J. T. Canon is prepared to do all kinds of shop and ornamental painting at his shop on corner of Van Buren and Eleventh streets.

The Hicksville Independent has been changed, and is now called the News. It is much improved and looks bright and sparkling.

QUERY: "Why will men smoke common tobacco, when they can buy Marburg Bros. "Seal of North Carolina," at the same price?"

The ladies of the Presbyterian church gave a splendid dinner on Christmas and we are glad to learn they netted about $50 therefrom.

Court is in session again. A case of rape, against one Stacy, took the attention of the jury and a large number of spectators yesterday.

MARRIED.—On Thursday, Dec. 20th, 1877, at the M. E. Parsonage, by Rev. J. E. Ervin, Mr. Geo. Long and Mollie Kegrice, all of DeKalb County.

The South Bend Herald is now published in a bran new office, and is a brilliant spicy paper! But that head. We are sorry we can't steal it.

Rev. Mr. Tedrow, of the United Brethren church, on account of the illness of Mr. Ervin, officiated at the M. E. church last Sabbath evening.

The Neoteric Association will meet at Ensley's Hall, Monday evening next, for the purpose of tiping the fantastic toe to the music of Hogue's full orchestra.

We received the Newville items last week just after the COURIER was issued. In order to get them in promptly, all communications should be mailed on Monday.

Call in at the St. Nicholas Saloon if you want to see one of the neatest arranged bars in the state. If Joe. can't fix one up to the admiration of one's eye, there is no use to look for any one that can.

Mr. Jas. Potter, the enterprising boot and shoe maker on Jackson street, is ready to make you a good boot at reasonable rates. He has lately introduced a cement with which to repair rubber boots that is most excellent, and you will do well to try it.

Nothing will learn your children to read so quickly or improve their minds so rapidly as to furnish them with their home paper. In it they find items of which they have some personal knowledge in which they will take a deeper interest and be more anxious to understand than any other reading matter you can place before them.

The ladies of the Presbyterian church will give a Mum Social at the residence of Mrs. S. W. Ralston on Friday evening of this week. A mite of ten cents will be charged. Supper at half past seven. All communications and solicitations must be made by sign and motions. Any person speaking shall pay a fine of five cents.

MRS. ELSON, Sec'y.

As the Defiance Accommodation passed Whitehouse last evening two young ladies attempted to cross the track ahead of the engine. One of them crossed safely, but the other, Miss Whitcomb, was caught in a cattle guard and held fast. The train could not be stopped and the young lady was run over and horribly mangled. Death was instantaneous.—Defiance Democrat.

The most important trial which will grace this term of Court was doubtless that tried last week in which Dr. Howard Casebeer was defendant, charged with petit larceny. The jury returned a verdict of not guilty. The crowd in attendance was large and great interest manifested. The case was ably managed on both sides. Rose, Hartman and Peterson for the prosecution, Best, Penfield and Emanuel for the defendant.

We regret that Mr. Hiefner of Goshen, State committeeman for this District, was unable to attend the meeting of the Committee at Indinnapolis last Thursday Dr. McConell, of Angola, was substituted, and did not represent this District in voting for an early convention. We believe the papers of the District favored a spring convention, and if the Doctor wants to represent this District he should post himself. But great men will make mistakes.

A few days ago one of our handsome young ladies went to Toledo, and shortly after there followed one of our enterprising young men. Now, put this and that together and something will come out of it. We learn that the late Miss Orpha Bodine is now Mrs. D. D. Snyder. The marriage took place at Toledo, at the residence of D. S. Locke, (Nasby), on Christmas day We don't know of a more worthy pair of young people in the world than these two little lambs, and many will rejoice at their mutual happiness.

We are indebted to the publishing house of Lee & Shepard, Boston, Mass., for a copy each of "That Wife of Mine," "Just His Luck," and 'His Own Master,' for which they will accept our thanks. Lee & Shepard are leading book publishers and will supply you with any book in the market. Each of the above can be had at 50 cents a copy by addressing the publishers and enclosing that amount. They are of the same style and binding as 'That Husband of Mine,' Send for them at once They will make nice holiday presents.

The following from an exchange, applies excellently to this vicinity: 'When anybody dies, gets married, runs away, steals anything, builds a house, makes a big sale, or whips his man—or wife—breaks his leg, or gets his senses kicked out of him by a mule, or does anything remarkable, and you have reason to believe that you know as much about the occurrence as anybody else, don't wait for some other person to report it, or trust us to find it out by instinct, but come and tell us about it, or send the facts on a postal card. This is the way news is supplied, and it takes a goodly supply of that necessary article to make a good home paper. Let us know every item of knews that transpires in your neighborhood."

Wilmington Teachers.

The following has been sent us for publication, having been unanimously adopted by a Township Institute of school teachers held in Wilmington, Dec. 22d 1877:

Believing that "in union there is strength" and that more and better work can be performed by different persons engaged at the same business by forming themselves into organizations, and that the time is soon coming when school teachers to be qualified for their work must devote a great portion of their time and money for that purpose. Therefore be it resolved by the teachers of Wilmington-tp., DeKalb County, Indiana.

1st. That a school teachers' union should be organized in this county and that success in teaching cannot be attained until such exists. And that we earnestly solicit the attention and consideration of each and every teacher in the county to the same.

2d. That no scholar be permitted to attend school without taking part in recitations.

3rd That in all cases the teachers' word MUST be law in the school.

4th. That we will do all in our power to compel the regular attendance punctuality and good behavior of the scholars under our supervision.

5th. That we will strive to subdue profanity and all bad language and inspire the pupils with the necessity of securing a high standard in excellence and good order.

6th. That the teacher shall upon all occasions exercise his better judgement and inflict whatever punishment he deems proper.

7th. That we abide by the regulations of the school board and will grade the schools under our supervision accordingly.

8th. That we will adhere to the above faithfully and assist each other as far as we can.

I. L. Ackley, Mollie Brundage, John L. Wyckoff, Geo. Pugsley, W. S. Maxwell, Lottie Chilson, Nannie Hornberger, Amelia Kesler, Henry Waters, Jno. Eckhart, Wm. P. Chambers, A. J. Jennings.

The New Year.

Ceaseless time, with its steady, untiring pace, will soon score another year to be added to the varied unrelenting past. With a few it has been bright and cheerful, but with many it has been full of sorrow and heartaches, desponding and gloom. A wide-spread depression has followed it all the way through and though a kind Providence has smiled benignantly upon us, and blessed us with a bountiful harvest, yet expected relief has not come, and its closing hours sees a great nation embarrassed, inactive and without much hope in the near future. But what of the new year. In one's life journey, what a charming pause does New Years afford—what a holy rest from turmoils and troubles!—After a year's battle we may enjoy peace; after the anxiety of business and the buffetings of misfortune, we are again at home—bathing in an atmosphere of love, where all eyes are bright and smiling, and all hearts light and gay. New Year's, with its delightful festivities and its hallowed memories, has again arrived, to consecrate the social and domestic affections with a high and hopeful festival. Disappointments are forgotten, disquietudes calmed, sorrows assuaged, and in the pleasures and happiness of domestic joy we gain new life, gather new hopes, make fresh resolves, and acquire more energy to start out once more to reach and rest on another New Year's day, and so to tread our weary way through sieges of troubles to welcome recurrences of peace and repose. To one and all we wish a happy New Year.

Butler Items.

—"Feed my Lambs," was the beautiful motto on the arch on christmas eve.

—Rev. Butler was compelled to close his meetings in consequence of the bad roads.

—The "Stella," Chas. Paine's private car, went east last Friday, freighted with officials.

—The average small boy is happy. We have a vacation in our schools until Wednesday.

—Mr. Jones, the grocer, who was burned out. has moved into the barber shop occupied by Mr. Moore.

—"No great loss without some small gain." If we have no snow there is nothing said about hand-sleds.

—There is more road to the mile in this vicinity than is agreeable. It varies—some places deep and at others deeper.

—Mr. and Mrs. Baxter are now trying the realities of life in house-keeping. Took tea at home for the first time last Saturday eve.

—The exclamation of all is, "O, for that cold weather;" but give it to us just light enough to enable us to keep on top of the roads.

—Mr. Gilbert, agent of our depot and lady, are spending holidays in York State. Mr. Eddy is doing efficient service in charge until his return.

—The christmas ceremonies at the the Lutheran church were a complete success. We cannot let too much sunshine into the lives of our little ones.

—Some person in the marble shop sat a board either on or too near the heated stove. It took fire and came near adding another to the list of our calamities.

—Some of our merchants have sufficient enterprise to clean the crossings before their stores. The city Dads wear rubber boots and wade majestically through.

—Mr. Ocher, of the firm of Hays & Ochor, is confined to his house by reason of a hemorage of the lungs. The atmosphere has been so loaded with water as to make it peculiarly bad for those having weakness of these organs.

—They had a union Sabbath School Concert at the Disciple church, on Tuesday evening. There were some excellent renditions, both in music and declamations! Among others Annie and Willie's prayer carried the house before it.

—To be compelled to sit beside a couple of young men, who resemble gentlemen(?) and endure their foolish whispering and conduct, all through a lecture is down-right pennance, and we refer it to Berg, as a case of cruelty to animals.

—It was really pleasant to see the clandestine visits to the Lutheran church on Monday. Every soul bent on a mission intended to produce pleasure to another. Kind friends, why not carry the practice right on through the year—'twould add beauty to our lives.

—There is some talk of having the temperance meetings held on Saturday nights except once in each month, when a mass meeting will be held on Sabbath eve. It is thought that some of the exercises are irreverent to the day and that it will demonstrate whether the participants are bent on reform or pleasure.

—When you notice a man slam the door on leaving home, looks solemn as he walks down the street and presently that his wife visits a milliner shop, it is safe to conclude that there has been a discussion upon the variety of dress. "When she will, she will, you may depend on-it, and when she won't she won't, and that's the end on-it."

Mr. John Malone, of Shelby, O. spent several days here last week with his nephew, M. Houston. He is a sound old Democrat, and speaks well of the political outlook in Ohio.

Triumph of Patience and Energy.

Some twenty years ago a young man from the Buckeye State, resolved to seek his fortune or fate in the gold mines of the west. Possessed with an indomitable will, and a tireless restless energy, he struck boldly out, and cast his fortunes with that reckless element of adventurers, whose march even the Rocky Mountains, have been powerless to stay. At first inexperienced and unused to frontier life, but with a quick perception and an unquenchable ambition, he passed safely through the first stages of a miner's life. With varying fortunes he held steadily on through years of toil and suffering, exchanging enjoyments of home and civilization for the rude and cheerless comforts to be found in the wild, undeveloped regions of the far west. Often far away in the mountains, isolated and alone with but one companion, far from human habitation, he struggled wearily on, often discouraged, but never for a moment relinquishing the great purpose of his life. Finally after herculean efforts and untold privation, the fickle goddess, fortune, smiles upon him and he returns hearty, robust, in the prime of life, and with abundance of glittering metal to make the remainder of the journey through life an easy and useful one. His name is Thomas Mallory, a brother-in-law to the editor, and he is now visiting his relations in Auburn.

Corunna News.

—The school building standeth.

—The roads are somewhat muddy.

—The weather beats the oldest inhabitant.

—Red Ribbon meeting Wednesday evening.

—The grain and pork market is a little slack.

—The time for slaughtering porkers is with us.

—The schools marm are giving general satisfaction.

—A pleasant dance was given on Christmas eve

—Frank Mercer is now with his father in the drug store.

—A series of meetings began at the U B. church Monday.

—The time for the "annual swear off" has nearly reached us.

—Mrs. Perry Alling has been suffering with an attack of lung fever.

—Trentman & Son, of Fort Wayne have been putting repairs on their building.

—Frank Kline, of Auburn, was in town over Sunday. Frank is again escourting our fair ones.

—Pete Draggoo, a prominent grocery dealer of this place, was all smiles Sunday morning. It was a young clerk, weight immense.

—"In union there is strength" and if you want a little strength added to your union buy your wife a back-comb for a holiday present. We've been there.

—James DeLong, living one mile north of our village, and who has been suffering from consumption for a long time, died last Sunday at about four o'clock p. m.

—It was given out two weeks ago that there would be no services at the M. E. church unless the sexton was paid off. They did'nt whack up and of course there were no preaching.

—A daughter of Mr. Nye's passed to "that world from whose bourne none return" last Saturday. Giving birth to a child was the cause of her death. Her husband was not at home which made the sad affair more impressive upon relatives and friends. The husband and father, we learn, left a short time since for Michigan in search of employment and is yet ignorant of the death of his wife.

—Birtha Orr gave a birthday party last Saturday to her young friends. It was an occasion that enlivened them better in your imagination than we can pencil it. A number of presents were given by the invited guests. The following little girls were present: Ottie Stonebraker, Ettie Smith, Nettie Smith, Ella Jourdon, Lizzy Jourdon, Anna Beaver, Edna Orr, Ina Quince, Minnie Trich, Pearl Alling, of Corunna; Edith Orr, of Kendallville.

La Otto Items.

—Preaching at both churches next Sunday.

—Darke's store building will soon be ready for occupancy.

—The concert which was to be held at Swan last Friday evening, has been indefinitely postponed on account of the bad roads.

—The time set for the Sunday school concert was changed. Instead of Sunday evening it will take place Sunday at 2 o'clock p. m., to suit the convenience of a few old ladies.

—Considerable excitement prevails throughout this community, caused by the appearance of a catamount in a piece of woods owned by Holbrook and others. Johnny Grim was the first victim—not eat up by the cat, but badly frightened. Johnny has a heap of "sand," but when he saw that cat be gave one yell and lit for home with each particular hair on end like the quills of a fretful porcupine. Lee Holbrook also saw the "animal," but like a hero, stood his ground and dared the cat on. The cat, however, not relishing a tussel, [illegible]

Communication.

GARRETT, Dec. 24th, '77.

MR. EDITOR—If people are so wicked with religion, such as the world has had, what would they be without it? They would be less wicked no doubt, for there is no crime that most fertile imaginations can invent, which has not been used in the name of religion, to oppress and tortue humanity. The engines of cruelty in former ages were put in motion and thousands of human beings were burned and hanged for the glory of God. Those who claimed inspiration from above, invented these instruments of torture and put them in operation in the name of religion. All past history is a delusion and a false hood, if this is not a fact

Men were more wicked with religion when there was not heresy enough to counteract it, as in the year 1600, Bruno was burned alive in Rome and his ashes thrown into the Tiber. Religion did it, but the infamous deed could not be done to-day, because there is less religion in the world now than there was then, and no doubt that in course of time as religion dies out, and reason takes its place, mankind will become as improved as their nature will admit.

For eighteen hundred years the world has had religion, and in all that time some nations have been fighting each other. But five hundred years or less of reason, without religion, would make such improvements in man that they will not follow demagogues, and persecute man for his opinions.

For popularity some will give away their better judgment and put upon the scaffold, and there with the sharp-pointed knife of revenge, with holy and inspired hands, pierce Justice and Truth to the heart, and say the will of God be done. The current of revenge flows on beneath the surface and calls for the reformation of Garrett. The same spirit burnt heretics at the stake.

There is a liberal element which has come to the rescue, taken the torch out of the hands of religion, whose arm has been paralized by liberty, free thought and justice.

A very long-minded champion of Garret steps to the front, with a set of people, with their amalgamated ideas set forth by their speaker. It would excite the mirth of a stoic to sit and listen to him. They being diciples of Christ must have their Judas. He having a revenge to seek in the holy cause, the power is given him to punish someone. He selects his victim, brings him before the courts which protect the holy disciples in their devotion. Strange to say, while engaged in holy adorations his eyes fell on a certain boy—he saw him smile and whisper in the same moment in a remote part of the house. A complaint is made before the advocate of divine rights of man; "you must be punished." It is not strange that man is disgusted with his fellow man to see justice trampled under the feet of hypocrites who wear the cloak of religion.

The poet may well say, "Great day of revelations, in the grave the hypocrite had lef his mask and stood in naked ugliness." He was a man who stole the living of the court of heaven to serve the devil in virtue's guise, devoured the widow's house and orphan's bread, in holy phrases transacted villanies that common sinners darst not meddle with. He prayed by quantity till all knees were weary. With one hand he put a penny in the urn of poverty, and with the other took out a shilling. See the man a serpent with an an angel's voice, yet few are deceived, his virtues being over done. Detected wretch none seem more matured for the flames of hell, who says to all that pass him by I was a hypocrite on earth.

M. L.

The masonic fraternity of Waterloo, will hold a public installation of officers at their lodge this evening, at which a free banquet will be spread to invited guests.

Is your life worth 25 cents? If it is do not neglect a cough or cold. Use Bull's cough syrup. For sale at Davenport's.

Why suffer with such a dreadful Cough and Cold. For 25c you can purchase of your druggist a bottle of Dr. Marshal's Lung Syrup and your cure is certain.

"Lawson's Curative" is not a disagreeable, oily linament, but a cleanly limpid fluid, clear as water, without odor—a most perfect scientific preparation—and can be relied upon to remove pain or soreness in any part of the human frame. Send for a pamphlet it your druggist has not got them. See advertisement.

THE INDIANAPOLIS SENTINEL.

The Sentinel is the Commercial, Financial and Industrial paper of the State, and at least the equal in point of editorial, literary news merit of any of its rivals. It will be the best weekly we can make, and in every sense the paper of the people.

It will advocate justice and fair living opportunities for industry and labor.

That there be no more class legislation.

A reduction of the present ruinous rate of interest.

An immediate and unconditional repeal of the resumption law.

The remonetization of silver.

A greenback currency of the required volume to meet the legitimate demands of business.

Withdrawal of national bank notes—greenbacks and silver to be made a legal tender in payment of all debts, public and private, without limit.

The bond holder to be paid no more than the contract, and to share equally the burdens of government with industry and labor.

The Sentinel is especially devoted to the interests of the industrial classes, and every reading and thinking man in the State, who can afford to take a newspaper, without regard to party politics, ought to subscribe for at least one of its editions.

TERMS—POSTAGE FREE—INVARIABLY IN ADVANCE. WEEKLY.

Single copy one year,	$1.50
(and at the same rate for a shorter term)
Clubs of five one year $1.25 each,	6.25
Clubs of ten, one year $1.15 each,	11.50
(and an extra copy to getter up of club)
Clubs of 20 one year $1,10 each,	22.00
(and two extra copies with the club.)

DAILY.

One copy one year,	$10.00
One copy six months,	5.00
One copy three months,	2.50
One copy one month,	85

Clubs of five or more, one year, $8.00 each, 40.00; Clubs of five or more, six months, $4.25 each, 21.25; Clubs of five or more, three months, $2.25 each, 11.25 Clubs of five or more, one month, 75c each, 3.75.

SPECIMEN COPIES SENT FREE TO ANY ADDRESS.

Send for one, and at the same time give us the address of a dozen or so of your friends at as many different post-offices, to whom we will send copies free, postage paid. Send for our special circular to Agents Address

INDIANAPOLIS SENTENEL CO.,
Indianapolis, Ind.

Cranberries at the Auburn Fruit House.

Buckwheat flour at the Abburn Fruit House.

Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup is reccommended by all druggists as being a purely and reliable preparation for babies Price 25 cents. For sale by Davenport

We can recommend our readers to use Dr. Marshal's Lung Syrup in all cases of Coughs, Colds, &c. It only costs 25c a bottle, and is warranted to cure. Sold in every drug store.

The man who cursed the hot weather of last summer, and was continually threatening to move to Greenland, is now snorting around and d—g a country in which a person has to wear an overcoat eight months during the year.

AUBURN FRUIT HOUSE.

PHLIP BASHELIER

Having purchased the large grocery stock of B. TRENTMAN, of Fort Wayne is now ready to supply the trade with

Groceries,
Provisions,
Fruits,
Crockery, &c.

At the lowest prices. Store in Odd Fellows' buiding, North of Court House, Auburn, Indiana.

Highest price paid for COUNTRY PRODUCE.

EXECUTOR'S SALE.

Notice is hereby given that the undersigned, Executor of the late will and Testament of Hugh Watt, Senior deceased, will offer for sa e at public auction, at the late residence of the Testator, one mile south-east of Auburn, Indiana, on Saturday, January 5th, 1878, the personal property of said estate, consisting of horses, cows, one two horse wagon, and new open buggy, plows, and other farming implements, hay, and other articles too numerous to mention. Terms, all sums of three dollars and under, cash, all sums over three dollars a credit of nine months will be given the purchaser giving his note with approved security waving valuation and appraisement laws with interest.

GUY PLUM, Executor.

WHAT IS THE LATEST ?

CUSTOME MAD

Artic Coats, Ulsters, Broadway
OverCoats, Winter Suits,
Diagonal Coats
And Vests.

SAM, PETE & MAX.

FORT WAYNE.

CHRISTMAS EVE.

Christmas eve, I sat half dreaming
In the fire-light's ruddy glow;
And my busy brain was burning
With the thoughts of long ago.

Oh, the light, and warmth, and glory
Circling round a Christmas eve!
Eastern tale or fairy story
Never could such magic weave.

Children count the days and hours
Till the Christmas-time has come;
Watch them drop like leaves from flowers
Till, at last, the Christmas bloom.

Well, to-night, the old-time feeling
Breathed upon my heart again,
While I heard the soft bells pealing
"Peace on earth, good-will to men!"

Up the mantel-piece I numbered
Six small stockings in a row,
While upstairs their owners slumbered—
Just a pair for each you know.

With what eager hands they hung them,
Trusting to old Santa Claus;
"Yes," said Robbie, "he will bring them.
He'll see to it—he's the Boss!"

So I softly said, "Old fellow,
You had better come along
While the fire-light gleams so mellow,
While the light is not too strong!"

While I waited, lo! a jingle!
Soft and sweet, but silver clear,
Made my very ear-drums tingle
As I heard it coming near.

Tap, tap, tap, and jingle, jingle!
"'Tis the reindeer on the roof!
Oh, you darling old Kriss Krinkle,
You are coming here in truth!"

"Ha! ha! ha!" I heard him stamping
"Ha! ha! ha!" he laughed again;
In a minute in came tramping
Just the tiniest of men!

After all his taps and knockings
Here his jolly saintship stands!
Then he turns to count the stockings,
While he blows his rosy hands.

"That's the way they try to get me!
Sly young rogues! I know their game;
I would, dare say they'd let me
Fill a dozen all the same!

"Can't be done, my gay young fellows,
If I should, why bless my eyes!
Should have to get some bellows,
Blow things up to twice their size!

"Ha! ha! me; well, time is flying,
Let us see what we can do;
Dearie me! I can't help trying
Do the best I can for you."

With a look quite keen and elfish,
Harry's stocking down he took;
"Here's a boy that's rather selfish—
I can read him like a book.

"Shall I scant him, just to teach him
Santa Claus don't like his ways?
No, no! Christmas-time should preach him
Sermons for all coming days;

"Teach him only loving lessons—
Generous kindness and good-will
So, young master, here's my blessing
While I both your stockings fill!"

Bertie's then he caught, and shook them,
Laughed till tears stood in his eyes;
"Ha! ha! ha! before I took them
I knew how this fellow cries!

"Cries too often; my! how breezy!
Spunky, too! Look out, my boy!
When you learn to take things easy
Santa Claus will wish you joy."

Then, of course, he came to Robbie's,
Gave them many a stretch and pull;
"Ha! ha! ha! I have my hobbies—
This chap wants his stockings full.

"His must be as big as t'other's,
I can't scant the little ones;
'Share and share alike' for brothers—
That's the way my programme runs!"

So he stuffed and stuffed each stocking
Till they looked just fit to burst,
While I sat serenely rocking,
Pleased and silent, as at first.

Suddenly I jumped affrighted!
Some one came and pulled my nose!
There I sat, the lamp dim-lighted,
Fire gone out, and I half froze.

Some one said that it was "shocking,"
So I hurried off to bed;
Not until I'd filled each stocking
Just as Santa Claus had said!

—Mrs. S. M. Walsh, in Christian Union.

LOST AND FOUND.

A Christmas Story.

The wind whistled merrily round each corner and over the roof of my third-floor chambers, as I stood packing my portmanteau one bitterly cold night, just a week before Christmas day, 18—. It was none of the wailing winds that come down chimneys with a melancholy howl, sending heavy puffs of smoke into the already foggy atmosphere of rooms, and are altogether suggestive of damp omnibuses, wet umbrellas, and muddy, plashy streets, but a brisk, continuous, whistling wind that made the fire burn brightly and sent the snow-flakes on the window-sills eddying around, like chips from the top of a twelfth cake.

I suppose everything seemed cheerful because I was; and who had better reason to be in good spirits that cold night than Henry Marsden, a rising barrister, aged 27 years, within a month of his marriage, and with the prospect before him of a thoroughly English Christmas in an old-fashioned country house?

My father was a country gentleman who sincerely believed in and imitated the manners of the old school in everything save their excesses; a dandy was his especial abhorrence, and, although well-read himself, I fear a thorough book-worm would not have held a very high place in his esteem, unless he had had some idea of "going" straight across the country.

Being an only son, I might fairly have been brought up a specimen of those embryo squires, so common in England, who have scarcely two ideas beyond a horse, a dog, or a gun. My father, however, encouraged idleness in no one, and I was early sent to college, where I somewhat distinguished myself, and was entered at the bar, where, at the time of which I am writing, I had already begun to fall in for a fair practice, which promised to be very lucrative in the time to come.

I never cared much about London amusements, and my great delight, whenever I could get away, used to be to go down to my father's for the shooting, with my bosom friend and college chum, Frank Raeburn. What jolly evenings we used to have—my father and Frank, my two sisters and myself. But after a time those visits became even dearer to me, for my Cousin Maud came finally to live with us. Early in life my father's only sister had married—against the advice of all her relations—a rich profligate, who died within a year or two of their marriage, and before he had had quite time to spend all his money; however, the income with which my aunt was left to rear her infant daughter was but a slender one, and, on his sister's death, my father took Maud, of whom he was very fond, entirely into his own care.

I don't know how it was that I fell in love with Maud. As a growing young man, I used to think her rather an awkward, bashful school-girl who loved me less than my sisters, it is true, but then only because she had seen less of me; but somehow, as she came near her 19th and I my 25th year, I began to find that I was becoming wonderfully interested as to the expression of those dreamy brown eyes with their long fringes, and that a strange thrill went through me whenever they were lifted to my face with that pretty, pleading look they so often wore.

Well, at last we were engaged. I hardly know how we came to arrange it all, but I found that Maud had loved me all along, with an earnestness and with a fervor which she only could love, and I—well, never mind what I felt; any way the two years had elapsed which had been fixed in order that I might have some standing in my profession before getting married, and, when I returned to my work again in town, bright, blushing Maud Granger would be my wife—for my father, with his old-fashioned love for the season of peace and plenty, had wished us to be married at the beginning of the new year.

With all this whirling in my mind, no wonder that the portmanteau was somewhat hastily packed—indeed, I have an idea that I "jumped the clothes in," that is, stood upon the lid till it shut. Presently the cab was announced at the door, largesse given to my ancient laundress—which no doubt materially benefited the public house at the corner—and I was soon rattling down the Strand.

How bright and cheerful all the shops looked, especially the grocers', with the mountains of raisins in the windows, interspersed with bowlders of citron, and with snowy summits of blanched almonds, all looking so delightfully tempting and bilious that the apothecary's lamp over the way seemed to twinkle more brightly at the prospect of the increased custom that the puddings would bring its owner. And then the railway-station! I think the most gloomy man in London would be enlivened by the prospect of a railway station at Christmas time—that is, if he had not to stay in town with but a vague prospect of a dinner. The usual scene of bustle was going on when I entered. Trains were coming in, and pouring out their loads of jolly-looking passengers, all rushing frantically to get their luggage out; trains were going off whistling and shrieking as though impatient at being delayed; fat old ladies, bound for Clapham, were complacently seating themselves in express carriages for Dover, and, on being unceremoniously bundled out again, were asking piteously, amid a chaos of their various belongings, "where they were to go;" newsboys were yelling out, in a shrill, monotonous treble, that they had the latest evening "papahs;" the book-stalls, bright with the various covers of their many-colored books and annuals, were tempting people to stand and look, till driven off by successive charges of porters, wheeling Brobdingnagian masses of luggage; a hurrying crowd constantly passing and repassing through the swinging doors of the refreshment-room, a chorus of bells and whistles sounding at once from everywhere.

I saw and heard all this, which it has taken me some minutes to describe, as I hurried through the station to get my ticket—for I had but little time to lose. Before long, with a shrill, waiting scream, the train moved off into the wintry night; and, with a bald and particularly cross-looking old gentleman for a companion, I found myself flying, now through the open country, now through a plantation of firs, with their snow-laden branches waving like gigantic feathers in the wind, and settled myself comfortably down, well on my way to Maud and home.

* * *

How glad they all were to see me, though I was a little disappointed that Maud had not come to the station; but my sister Alice said that she had a slight headache, and did not like to venture out; so I could do nothing but wait and listen to the chatter of the girls as they volubly told me all the news of the neighborhood—who were coming to stay with us, how the church was to be decorated, and how the preparations for the wedding were progressing—till the wheels rattled on the hard carriage-drive, and I saw my father, standing as it were amid a halo of light at the open hall-door, waiting to receive me.

I knew the favorite nooks in the house well enough to be tolerably sure of finding Maud, unless she was in her own room, and passed at once into the library, a large oak-paneled room, lighted only by a shaded lamp on a distant table and the flickering blaze of the wood fire that burned upon the hearth, now lighting up the room and casting a thousand fantastic shadows over it, now dying away into a dull red mass of embers that left it almost in total darkness.

To my surprise, as I entered, my Cousin Maud and Frank Raeburn emerged from the conservatory at the other end, and came toward me. Could it be that the wavering light of the fire had deceived me, or was it some strange freak of the imagination? Surely Maud was encircled by his left arm as they walked, talking earnestly. Pshaw! it was only fancy; but for a moment the idea startled me.

They saw me at once, and Maud came hurriedly toward me, holding out her hand, and exclaiming:

"O, Harry, you here so soon? Why, I did not expect you for an hour yet!"

I laughingly referred to my watch as I shook hands with Frank, and said that her time must have been pleasantly filled up to fly so quickly, for I was some time overdue.

"Indeed," she replied, confusedly, "I must have been mistaken."

I thought that Frank would have left us, knowing that we had not met for some weeks; but he remained, and the three of us stood there, talking in a commonplace, desultory manner, which contrasted forcibly with the meeting I had been looking forward to, till my father and sisters came in, and the dinner-bell warned me that it was time to make some change in my dress.

During dinner the conversation was general, and, though Maud sat near me, I could get no opportunity of speaking particularly to her; and it was not until late in the evening that, going again into the library, I found her leaning pensively against the chimney-piece gazing into the fire.

How beautiful she looked! The clustering masses of dark hair were thrown back over her exquisitely-shaped shoulders, the long dark eyelashes contrasting with the fair cheek; but there was a sorrowful look in those dark eyes, and one white hand beat fitfully on the chimney-piece, indicating a restless impatience painful to witness. As I drew nearer—she had not heard me enter—I saw that her eyes were glistening with tears.

"Why, Maudie!" I cried.

The abruptness of my address startled her, and, with a slight scream, she turned, looked at me for a moment, and then flung herself on a sofa and burst into a passion of tears.

At first I was seriously alarmed, and moved hastily to call for assistance, but a hurried gesture from Maud stayed me, and I endeavored to soothe her, using every endearing expression that I could think of till she grew somewhat calmer; but, with all my efforts, I could not ascertain the cause of her agitation, and she at last begged me not to press her with any further inquiries then—that in a day or two she would tell me all, but implored me to say nothing to my family in the meantime; and, before I could interpose or say one word to hold her, she had glided past my outstretched arm and left the room—nor did she reappear that night.

I sat down alone in the firelit room, musing over the reception I had been looking forward to for weeks and weeks. I thought of how my bright little Maud used to creep to my side, and, laying her soft cheek against my own, talk to me so hopefully and lovingly of our future life; but now—whatever could have caused the change? She had never come near me once since I had arrived—till I had unexpectedly given rise to such a burst of distress as I had never seen her under the influence of before.

I sat for hours musing over the change in my life, but could find nothing to account for it; I could do nothing but wait, trusting to time to unravel the mystery.

The next day I had to ride some distance, to visit a few country friends, and had to start before Maud came down. My sisters said she was still suffering from a headache, and, though they made light of it, I could see that both seemed grave and preoccupied; my father wished to call in a medical man, but this Maud refused to consent to—as I afterward heard—and so I started on my long ride alone, more troubled and perturbed in spirit than ever.

When I returned home late at night, I found only my sister Alice sitting up for me. In reply to my inquiries about Maud, she said that she was better, and had gone out alone for a long walk in the afternoon. I questioned her as to any cause which she might know of for the change which had come to Maud, but she knew of nothing. She said that she had been ill and nervous for the last fortnight; and it was the more noticeable as she had for a month previously been out riding or walking nearly every day with Frank Raeburn.

"Why," I said, "I thought Frank came down only a day or two before I did."

"Oh, no," she replied; "Frank has been here for the last six weeks. Has he never told you so in his letters?"

"No," I answered; "Frank has not written to me for some time past, nor did any of you mention that he was here."

"How strange!" said my sister. "But, after all, Frank is so often here that you know we look upon it as quite a common occurrence; but it's strange that he has not written to you. Yes," she continued, "he and Maud used to go out a good deal at first, but latterly they have not seemed to be so much together; I could almost fancy that they had had a tiff."

I thought of the scene in the library on the previous night, and marveled more and more what secret bond there could be between Frank and Maud, and why she was so altered toward me, and so evidently distressed in mind. I said nothing to my sister, however, of the thoughts that came into my mind, but retired to my room to pass the weary hours, sleeplessly thinking, thinking, but unable to understand.

Once or twice the idea flashed into my head, could Frank have proved false to me, and tried to win Maud from me? No; it could not be. I knew and trusted both him and her too thoroughly to entertain such a notion; besides, it was generally thought that he and my younger sister Ellie had a liking—as the country phrase goes—for each other; still the idea recurred once or twice, and in the end, as I at last fell into a weary doze, it was in my head still.

The next day we had a party of friends arrive from town, and amid them all I could get little opportunity of seeing Maud alone, but I watched her every moment that I could spare, and became at last convinced that between my future bride and Frank Raeburn some secret understanding existed, and it was that, too, I felt sure, which was causing Maud such anxiety of mind.

At length I could bear the suspense no longer; and the day before Christmas eve I watched Maud into the conservatory off the library, and told her, in a few impassioned words, that I had noticed that there was some secret in her life that was preying on her mind, and demanded, as her future husband, a solution of the mystery.

For a minute or two she did not reply, and we both stood gazing out upon the wintry scene—a weird expanse of snow, dotted here and there with color, as the cold wind swept among the swaying trees, making the few remaining leaves eddy shiveringly to the ground. At last Maud turned, and, laying her hands on mine—how they burned even on that cold day—said:

"Harry, there is a secret in my life. I, like you, can bear this suspense no longer, and to-morrow you shall hear all. Heaven knows that I would rather, far rather, be found a corpse on that snow than have to tell the tale I must; but give me till to-morrow night, and you shall hear all. If I could think you hated me, instead of loving me as well as I know you do, I should be a less wretched woman than I am; you will wish yourself, in after years, that such had been the case."

She left me hurriedly as she spoke. I was bewildered at her gloomy, almost fierce speech. Could that be my gentle Maud—whom a rough word had once been enough to frighten—speaking with a prophetic sternness that reminded one of the sibyls of old? Good heaven! what had happened to that fragile creature—a child almost—to make her talk thus to me of hatred and wretchedness? I could only wait—wait while all that was bright in my life seemed fading away.

The day before Christmas we were busy decorating the church. I joined the party with reluctance, for so miserable were my thoughts that I wanted to be alone to think; but I had promised some days before, and could not refuse now without exciting remark, which above all things I was anxious to avoid. Maud was with us, too, and worked with a boisterous hilarity which surprised me, till I proved how unreal it was by asking her once, as I stood near, when and where we should meet that night. In an instant she turned deadly pale, and gasped out:

"Hush! I don't know yet. I'll see you perhaps by-and-by."

These were the only words she spoke to me throughout the day, and I felt nervously uncomfortable lest any one should notice the estrangement, as it must seem to them; but they were all too busy with their own affairs. So the day wore on, till the daylight faded, and the stained-glass windows were only lighted by the reflection of the snow-clad ground.

I had to play the part of host that night, for my father was detained at a neighboring county town till long past the dinner hour; and I certainly felt thankful that it was our custom ever on Christmas eve to break up early, my father always holding that late hours the night before destroyed the enjoyment of Christmas day; and we rose from the table at half-past 9—an exceptionally early hour for our house.

As we rose to leave the table one of the servants handed Frank Raeburn—who had regularly avoided me during the last week—a tiny note; he just glanced at it and nodded. As I followed him out into the passage I saw Maud waiting and Frank join her. Before they had been in conversation I passed the door, and heard Frank say:

"We can't speak here—it is madness to try to do so. Meet me to-night at 11, at the old place."

I thought Maud seemed about to expostulate; but he moved hurriedly away, and went toward the smoking-room. Maud, at the time, looked so utterly woe-begone and miserable that I had hardly the heart to speak to her then, but went up to my own room, waiting for the summons from her which I felt would decide my life.

I sat for some time by the wood-fire in my bed room, thinking how miserably all my hopes had been shattered; for, without actually knowing what it was, I felt sure that Maud's trouble was of no common kind, and would, in all probability, lead to our separation. My poor father, too, who had so set his heart upon the match, and knew nothing of what was going on—how would he bear the intelligence? I sat thus, I know not how long, till the fire was a dying pile, from which occasionally leaped a transient flame, bringing forcibly to my mind the lines:

I saw the light flames falling fast,
I saw the ashes fall and die;
So bright at first, so dark at last,
How like, alas! love's mystery.

But it was getting late now, and with a weary shiver I arose and looked out of the window.

Beneath me stretched the lawn, covered with a thick carpet of snow, mantled by weird shadows, as the wind moved the fir trees to and fro; the moon shone out only at intervals, as the light scud flew across the sky; and the plaintive murmur of the sea, which was close to us, was an appropriate adjunct to a scene desolate enough. As I stood at the window watching the quiet picture with an apathetic kind of curiosity, I suddenly saw a dark figure emerge beneath me from the house and cross the lawn, availing itself as far as possible of the shelter of the trees.

Who could it be? The figure was just gaining the shadow, when the moon shone out. Great heaven! It was Maud. What could she be doing alone, away from the house, at that hour of the night? Her speech of the day before flashed into my mind—"I had rather, far rather, be found a corpse on that snow, than to have to tell the tale I must."

To seize my hat and hastily gain the side door of the house was the work of a minute or two; but, quick as I had been, when I got out upon the lawn the figure was no longer visible, and it was only after a quick run—my footsteps being, thank goodness, deadened by the snow—that I caught sight of Maud again, just emerging from the park gate, and taking the path that led to the "Sisters' Leap," a remarkable cliff which the action of the sea had scarped away till one might drop a plummet-line from the summit to the rocks, hundreds of feet below.

Wearisome as the ascent was, Maud went up quickly, as one who had a fixed object in view. I kept some few yards behind her, taking advantage of every boulder to screen myself, lest she should turn and see me, and determined to rush up and seize her should she have the object in view that I dreaded. Just as we neared the end of the path that led to the flat summit of the cliff, and I was preparing to dart forward and stay her at any risk, I heard a man's voice whisper, cautiously, "Hist, Maud! are you alone?" and, standing above the rock behind which I crouched, I saw Frank Raeburn.

Maud joined him, and they stood in silence for a minute, she gasping for breath, he smoking and watching her with a sneer upon his face such as I had never seen it wear before.

"Oh, Frank," said Maud, after a pause of a minute or two, "I came through all the snow this bitter night—won't you speak to me?"

"Yes, I see you have come," was the cool reply—"what is it? The old story, I suppose?"

"Yes, it is the old story," exclaimed Maud, indignantly; "and now let us end it. Will you tell my miserable tale to Henry? Marry me, and take me away from this place; I am sick of acting a daily lie such as my life is now. Take me away from here; I care not where or in what poverty I live, but to go on deceiving the man who has loved me so generously and truly I will not."

"Now, Maud," began Frank, impatiently, "you are going over the old childish argument again. Have I not told you twenty times lately that it would be worse than lunacy in me to take the step you propose? Our love began in madness, why end it in folly? No one knows, no one can know, what we have been to each other. Marry Marsden, and forget it all—if you can—and who is injured, or the wiser? No one. If I marry you," he continued, with a careless yawn, "there will be a scandal and a row; you and I will both be disgraced, and the happiness of a whole family will be ruined. I can't, and, plainly, won't do it."

"And so," rejoined Maud, "you, Henry Marsden's friend—you who have partaken of his hospitality, enjoyed his friendship, and shared his confidence—urge me to marry him, when you know well that, if he were acquainted with all, he would spurn me like a dog—you urge me to do this?"

"Yes," was the emphatic answer, "I do."

There was a silence of some moments, broken only by the dash of the surf at the base of the cliff.

So this was the secret! The friend whom I had most trusted in the world had deceived the woman whom I loved better than my own life, and now scoffed her with studied insolence! The bad blood went surging through my veins, and I felt like a second Cain; friendship, love—all were swept aside now—nothing but blood could wash out the wrong done me. The intensity of my feelings made me feel sick and giddy, and for a moment I buried my face in my hands, utterly unnerved.

The silence between them was broken by Maud.

"Listen, Frank," she said; "I will not do what you wish. I know that if ever there was a feeling between us which would not profane the word love, it is over now—I know you are weary of me; still, had you taken me at my word to-night, and removed me from this place, I would have followed you like the veriest slave, content with fare that the poorest wretch would not stoop to; but to bring dishonor on the man who has only erred in loving me too well, I will not. Listen; to-morrow I will tell Henry Marsden all your perfidy, my infatuation, guilt—call it what you will—and then"—she paused, and almost whispered the last words—"kill myself!"

"Don't you think you could vary the programme by killing yourself first?" was the reply, given with a jeering, brutal laugh.

This was all that I could bear. Springing up, I dashed between the speakers, and before Frank's exclamation and Maud's scream had died away I was grasping the former by the throat and dragging him to the edge of the cliff. The struggle was long and desperate—he was the stronger man, but I was nerved by rage, and at length got him under me and half over the precipice. For a few seconds I paused; and, as the moon revealed the agonized expression in Frank's face, I felt a revulsion of feeling—but it was over directly, and my rage returned with tenfold violence.

Should I succeed? He struggled desperately, and Maud's screams rang loud and shrill upon the air.

"At last he's gone—gone!" I cried, and clutched convulsively at—

"Hullo, there! hullo! hullo! Why, sir, you'll have a fit!"

I opened my eyes. Where was the cliff—Frank—Maud? Dim as the light was, I could see that I was still in the railway carriage, and the cross-looking old gentleman with whom I had started was shaking me desperately.

"Ah, awake at last!" exclaimed my companion, in the crustiest tone. "Do you often sleep like that, sir? If you do, I think you might have mentioned it, and I'd have got into another carriage."

I was so bewildered that I could not speak, but only wipe the perspiration from my forehead, and ejaculate, "Thank Heaven!"

"Not much to be thankful for," muttered my companion. "Too much pork-pie—humph!"

The train was slakening speed visibly now, and, in a minute or two, ran beside the platform of the terminus; and there were Maud, Alice, Ellie and Frank, waving their hands to me as I leant from the carriage window.

"Why, Harry, old fellow, how pale you are!" was Frank's exclamation, as he wrung my hand.

I did not give him my recent experiences then, nor need I dwell upon later particulars now; suffice it to say that, having had my horrors out in dream-land, I never spent a jollier Christmas in reality, and no better wife now sits beside any man's fire than she whom I had "Lost and Found."

The Clown's Acting Misunderstood.

Whoever has habitually attended circuses in this country remembers the Conrad brothers, acrobatic clowns, and their comical performance, in which one pretended to be dead, while the other tumbled him about. They recently went to Germany. The London Era contains the following: "One evening the elder Conrad fell to the ground after a pretended blow, and was turned and re-turned as usual. His arms and legs were jerked, he was struck and kicked and dragged, but preserved a steady impassibility. Suddenly an expression of distress could be noticed through the grotesquely-painted lineaments of his brother, who hastily dropped on his knees and placed his hand upon the heart of the inanimate clown, exclaiming, 'My poor brother is dead!' At this the audience only laughed. 'Gentlemen,' said the distressed man, with tears in his voice, 'I assure you that he is dead.' Then taking him tenderly in his arms he bore him from the arena. The crowd appeared struck with the natural manner in which the bereft clown expressed grief, and applauded him vigorously as he departed. There were loud encores for both, but neither presented himself. Death had been more thoroughly simulated than ever before."

Bay State Statistics.

The returns to the Secretary of Massachusetts show an increase in the number of dwelling-houses in the State of 4,404, against 5,411 as last year reported; 66 towns report a decrease, and 30 towns the same number as last year. An increase of 891 horses, against a decrease of 2,673 last year, is reported; an increase of 1,919 cows, against 353 last year, and a decrease of 2,581 sheep, against 1,490 last year. A decrease in the number of acres of land taxed of 19,071 last year is reported, and an increase of 4,776 polls, against 5,081 last year.

A HARD-TIMES CHRISTMAS.

Hard times! You've hit it, stranger;
You're mighty right in that.
"Wasting my money," am I?
You think I "need a hat"?
I know I need a pair o' boots,
And Mary wants a gown;
And the little uns ain't all shod yet—
Wages has been so down.

Well! taint enough to buy a gown,
Nor yet a pair of shoes.
Ten cents for this toy kitten—
Just hear! It fairly mews.
You ought to see my Jennie's eyes—
They'll shine, I tell ye, when
She finds that in her stockin', sir,
The trumpet is for Ben.

Five cents was all it cost, sir,
I call it cheap at that.
The dancing-jack's for Johnnie;
The doll for little Mat.
That last was rather steep, sir—
Three shillin's for a doll;
But they threw me in a rattle,
So there's somethin' for 'em all.

And wife said I must get the doll,
Whatever else I mought'n't;
For [illegible]
A heap o' comfort out on't.
"Afford it?" No; yet I can't say
I'm sorry that I bought 'em.
Can't stand my young uns takin' on 'Cause Santa Claus forgot 'em.

—Independent.

PITH AND POINT.

SHEER nonsense—Clipping jokes.

THE Pacific mails—Quiet husbands.

A MATTER of form—Fitting a dress.

THE surest way to interest the Indian in agriculture is to show him that whisky is made out of corn.

HONOR tells you not to hit a man when he's down, and discretion warns you against hitting him when he isn't down.

THE era of the lion and the lamb has come in Bulgaria. The Turks and Russians lam each other, and the correspondents do the lyin'.

IF you merely buy oysters in hopes of finding pearls, you must get-up-pearly. But if you buy them to eat, you can get-a-plate. Unless you prefer them on the shell.

A LITTLE boy was asked the other day if he knew where the wicked finally went to. He answered: "They practice law a spell here, and then go to the Legislature!"

IT was observed of a philosopher who was drowned in the Red sea, "that his taste would be suited, for he was a man of deep thinking, and always liked to go to the bottom."

PATERFAMILIAS—"To-morrow is the tutor's birthday; now what can I get him for a birthday present?" Charley—"Get him a muzzle, papa; he's always biting the governess' cheek."

"BOB, can you tell me why I'm like the moon when it is twenty-three days old?" Bob couldn't tell, and the questioner explained: "Because I've passed my last quarter." A small loan was advanced immediately.

AN old author quaintly remarks: "Avoid arguments with ladies. In 'spinning yarns' among silks and satins a man is sure to become twisted and worsted; and when a man is worsted and twisted he may consider himself wound up."

"HOW LOVELY, in the calm stillness of the evening, to listen to the nightingale's note!" "Yeth, he's a doocid fine fellow, is the nightingale; but I thay (bright idea), he must be a beasthly noothance to all the other little birdths that want to go to thleep."—London Fun.

SPARKS—"What a shame to 'a knocked about your old woman like you did last night, Swipes; whoy, what pretext did you 'ave for beatin' her so?" Swipes—"Laws a mussy, neighbor Sparks, I didn't use no pretext, not I; it was the broom-handle I done it with."—London Fun.

A STURDY vagabond with full black beard of unusual length was recently brought before a London Police Magistrate, who questioned him about his past life. "If one can believe all that is laid to your charge," said the Judge, solemnly, "your conscience must be as black as your beard." "Ah," replied the wily rogue, "if a man's conscience is to be measured by his beard, then your Lordship has no conscience at all!"

THE tomato is what may be called a self-made vegetable, and in this particular deserves, perhaps, a higher degree of respect than can be accorded to any plant. It came to this country in the humblest circumstances, being brought here as food for swine; but, through pure merit, it has risen from an obscure origin to the front rank in the vegetable kingdom. It merely shows us what true merit will accomplish in the most adverse circumstances.

BEFORE she could utter the "Where have you been till this hour of the morning, anyhow?" which was trembling on her lips, he said: "Bin t'ther mind-readin'; bet yer $7 I can read yer mind this very minnit." "Well, you old fool, what am I thinking of now?" she said, in a tone of sadness. "Thinkin' of! Why I can read yer mind like ther open pages of 'er book; yer thinkin' I'm drunker'n a biled owl, but yer never was worse fooled in yer life." She only said that there must be something in mind-reading after all, for he had hit the nail square on the head.

Death of a Lion-Tamer.

Driesbach, the lion-tamer, died recently on his Ohio farm, a poor but contented man of 70 years. The newspapers are relating many anecdotes concerning him, and among them is that of the exhibition in New York twenty years ago, when, after a fight in a cage with a tiger, he was taken out covered with blood and apparently dreadfully injured. There were shrieks from the audience and much horror expressed, until a physician announced that his wounds were not dangerous. For a fortnight afterward Driesbach appeared with his arm in a sling and his face covered with strips of plaster; then it was discovered that the wounds were imaginary, the gore had come from a sponge filled with rose-pink, and the whole performance was nothing but a clever piece of advertising.

Everybody Well.

A resident of Baltimore, who reached home by a noon train, after an absence of two weeks, was met at the station by his 8-year-old son, who loudly welcomed him. "And is everybody well, Willie?" asked the father. "The wellest kind," replied the boy. "And nothing has happened?" "Nothing at all. I've been good; Jennie's been good; and I never saw ma behave herself so well as she has this time."

A Vision of the Christmas Tree.

Hark! The Waits are playing, and they break my childish sleep! What images do I associate with the Christmas music as I see them set forth on the Christmas tree? Known before all the others, keeping far apart from all the others, they gather round my little bed. An angel, speaking to a group of shepherds in a field; some travelers, with eyes uplifted, following a star; a baby in a manger; a child in a spacious temple, talking with grave men; a solemn figure, with a mild and beautiful face, raising a dead girl by the hand; again, near a city gate, calling back the son of a widow, on his bier, to life; a crowd of people looking through the opened roof of a chamber where He sits, and letting down a sick person on a bed, with ropes; the same, in a tempest, walking on the water to a ship; again on a seashore, teaching a great multitude; again, with a child upon His knee, and other children round; again, restoring sight to the blind, speech to the dumb, hearing to the deaf, health to the sick, strength to the lame, knowledge to the ignorant; again, dying upon a cross, watched by armed soldiers, a thick darkness coming on, the earth beginning to shake, and only one voice heard: "Forgive them for they know not what they do?"

* * * * * * * * *

Be the images once associated with the sweet old Waits, the softened music in the night, ever unalterable! Encircled by the social thoughts of Christmas time, still let the benignant figure of my childhood stand unchanged! In every cheerful image and suggestion that the season brings, may the bright star that rested above the poor roof be the star of all the Christian world. A moment's pause, O vanishing tree, of which the lower boughs are dark to me as yet, and let me look once more! I know there are blank spaces on thy branches, where eyes that I have loved have shone and smiled—from which they are departed. But, far above, I see the Raiser of the dead girl, and the widow's son; and God is good! If age be hiding for me in the unseen portion of thy downward growth, O may I, with a gray head, turn a child's heart to that figure yet, and a child's truthfulness and confidence.

Now the tree is decorated with bright merriment, and song, and dance, and cheerfulness. And they are welcome. Innocent and welcome be they ever held beneath the branches of the Christmas tree, which casts no gloomy shadow! But, as it sinks into the ground, I hear a whisper going through the leaves. "This, in commemoration of the law of love and kindness, mercy, and compassion. This, in remembrance of Me!

What a beautiful picture is here presented by the great master by which it is drawn—the immortal Dickens—and with what vividness has he brought the Christmas tree of our youth before us.

Precipitated from a Balloon.

A passenger from Kingstree, on the line of the Northeastern railroad, gives the details of a frightful accident which occurred at that place on Wednesday last. A traveling show company had stopped at the town for the purpose of relieving the natives of all their spare change, and, in order to carry out this praiseworthy object, had with them a balloon, by means of which one of the company ascended into the air, and went through certain gymnastic performances. This exhibition was free, of course, and drew an immense crowd. When the hour for the balloon ascension arrived the town and surrounding country were alive with the natives, mostly negroes, who, never having seen a balloon before, looked upon the whole proceeding with a mixture of awe and curiosity. By dint of persuasion two negroes consented to hold the ropes of the balloon while it was being inflated with hot air. When everything was in readiness a man in a pair of red drawers and a red shirt came out and was cheered lustily. The balloon swayed violently to and fro, and the aeronaut took his seat upon a small bar which dangled from the air ship, and gave the order to cast loose. The negroes loosed their holds upon the ropes, and the balloon shot upward like an arrow from a bow. To the consternation of the crowd, however, it was seen that one of the negroes had become entangled in the ropes, and was being borne aloft with frightful rapidity. With a wonderful presence of mind the unfortunate darky grasped the rope with his hands, and, after disengaging his feet from the ropes, climbed up to the bar upon which sat the man in red. Instead, however, of remaining upon this comparatively secure perch, he let go his hold and began sliding down the rope again; and, upon reaching the end, he let go entirely, and was dashed to the earth, having fallen through a space of about sixty feet. The crowd were so completely awe-stricken that not one would dare approach the prostrate man. After some little time, however, several gentlemen who were near by went up to the negro and found him bleeding profusely from the mouth and apparently unconscious. At the last accounts the man was still alive, but it is hardly possible for him to recover. The aeronaut succeeded in making a safe landing.—Charleston Courier.

The Horse-Hair Snake.

There is a well-known popular belief, which still largely survives in spite of the efforts of naturalists to assure the public of its fallacy, that the gordius, or "horse-hair snake," is actually live horse-hair. There are still many people who firmly believe that if the hair from a horse's mane or tail is left for some weeks in running water, the individual hairs will assume vitality and become "horse-hair snakes." Many a country lad has tried this experiment, though, of course, with unsatisfactory result. At a recent meeting of the Maryland Academy of Sciences, Prof. Uhler, the President, read an interesting paper summing up our knowledge of this strange worm. Dr. Leidy has determined the fact that in its adult state the "horse-hair snake" does not eat any food; like many insects in their final stage of life, it is then solely devoted to the reproduction of its species. A single female may have an enormous number of eggs; Dr. Leidy's estimate is 6,624,800. The young gordius attaches itself as a parasite to many fishes and small aquatic creatures, and also to such insects as grasshoppers and day-flies. The length of the mature gordius is about fourteen inches; its thickness, the twenty-fifth of an inch; its tendency to coil in knots has given the worm its scientific name.

Sentenced for Ninety-nine Years.

The trial of John and Wm. Williams, brothers, for murder in the first degree, was concluded in the Criminal Court yesterday. They were charged with killing L. Corbin, who was shot through the head by a pistol in the hands of John Williams, the younger brother. The jury agreed upon a verdict of murder in the second degree, as follows:

"We, the jury, find the defendant, John Williams, guilty in manner and form as charged in the within indictment for murder in the second degree, and assess his punishment as imprisonment in the penitentiary for the period of ninety-nine years.

"We, the jury, find the defendant, Wm. Williams, guilty in manner and form as charged in the within indictment for murder in the second degree, and assess his punishment at imprisonment in the penitentiary for the period of ten years."

When the sentence of ninety-nine years' imprisonment was announced for John Williams, his brother heartlessly remarked: "Well, John will lose his teeth by that time!" Then, suddenly changing, he exclaimed: "It's a d—d shame!" and his eyes malignantly flashed with fury.—Sedalia (Mo.) Bazoo.

Happy.

"You appear to be very happy, my little man; what is the cause of it?" asked a gentleman of a little urchin on the street. "Pop's drunk, mam's in jail, Bill's got the measles, and there's nobody to git me off to school. Hope this business'll last all winter," said the youngster, as he vaulted over the hydrant.

Railway Building in 1877.

The Railroad Gazette notes the construction since the 1st of January last of 1,945 miles of completed railroad in the United States, against 2,102 miles reported for the corresponding period in 1876, 1,150 in 1875, 1,686 in 1874, 3,355 in 1873, and 6,311 in 1872.

On the dread morning when Sioux City, Iowa, was shaken by an earthquake, a jury was locked up in one of the rooms of the Court House. The members were exceedingly disputatious. "I won't agree to any such verdict till hell comes!" exclaimed an obstinate member. In the twinkling of an eye came—not hell, but perhaps the next thing to it—an earthquake. The jury was under lock and key, and it was some time before the bailiff passed by and heard the raps upon the door. "We've a-g-r-r-r-e-e-d!" exclaimed the foreman, with the air of a man who had seen a ghost with a bandaged jaw.

A hole eight by six inches was large enough to let a 10-year-old boy out of the jail in Westborough, Mass.

History in Our Common Schools.

Our attention has recently been called to a History of the United States for the use of schools, by Prof. J. C. Ridpath, which is not only the best we have ever seen, but embraces features of rare value never before incorporated into any history. It is written in a style of great elegance, but simple and easy of comprehension; systematically arranged in a connected narrative; elegantly and intelligently illustrated with chronological charts, progressive maps, typographical diagrams, portraits and cuts; fresh, philosophical and readable.

It is as much unlike an ordinary school history as the beautiful periods of Irving are unlike the turgid nonsense of Tupper; and it so adroitly weaves the inspiring story of the country into the web and woof of its material facts as to impress the lessons of history upon the mind with indelible force. It is fact dressed in elegant periods, noble diction, impressive characterizations, and illuminated by appropriate incident and beautiful pictures. The publishers (Jones Brothers & Co., Cincinnati, Ohio) have made the most elegant and attractive school-book now before the public.

Dickens' Little Folks.

Nothing has given the writings of Charles Dickens so strong a hold upon the hearts of parents as the well-known excellence of his portrayal of children and their interests. These delineations, having received the approval of readers of mature age, the different child characters have been detached from the large mass of matter with which they were originally connected, and presented in the author's own language to a new class of readers, to whom the little volumes will be as attractive as the larger originals have proven to the general public. A series of twelve volumes has been prepared, presenting among others the following characters: "Smike," from Nicholas Nickleby; "Little Nell," from The Old Curiosity Shop; "The Child Wife," from David Copperfield; "The Boy Joe," from Pickwick Papers, etc., etc. A new edition of the first volume of the series, "Little Paul," from Dombey and Son, has just been issued, illustrated by Darley, and attractively bound. The other volumes will shortly follow. Sent post-paid for $1.00; or any volume will be sent with a year's subscription to the New York Tribune (weekly) for $2.00; or any two volumes with a year's subscription to the Independent for $3.00.

John B. Anderson, Publisher,
Hartford, Conn.

A Prime Remedy for a Painful Disease.

The pangs endured by the rheumatic are attributed by scientific pathologists to the contact of a certain abnormal acrid element in the blood with the sensitive covering of the muscles and joints. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, being a superb blood depurent, is admirably calculated to expel this impurity, and by removing the cause to allay the pain and feverish symptoms which it produces. That it is a most successful remedy for rheumatism, neuralgia and gout, as well as a reliable means of counteracting those diseases, is a fact amply evidenced by voluntary certificates emanating from those whom it has cured, and attested by American practitioners of high repute. It is likewise a sovereign curative of dyspepsia, constipation, liver complaint, urinary troubles and general debility, as well as the most popular and successful antidote to malaria extant.

The Celebrated Vienna Rolls.

Among the numerous articles Dooley's Yeast Powder is used for are the celebrated Vienna rolls, which are so delicious, palatable and healthy. If you have not the recipe send three-cent stamp to Dooley & Brother, New York, and you will get it, together with many other valuable cooking receipts, by return mail.

Mrs. General Sherman,

Wife of the General of the United States Army, says: "I have frequently purchased Durang's Rheumatic Remedy for friends suffering with Rheumatism, and in every instance it worked like magic." Send for circular to Helphenstine & Bentley, Druggists, Washington, D. C.

Burnett's Cocoaine is the best and cheapest Hair Dressing in the world. It kills dandruff, allays irritation, and promotes a vigorous growth of the Hair.

Ask your newsdealer for a copy of The Chicago Ledger, the best story paper in the West.

A Campaign Canard.

When Dr. R. V. Pierce was a candidate for State Senator, his political opponents published a pretended analysis of his popular medicines, hoping thereby to prejudice the people against him. His election by an overwhelming majority severely rebuked his traducers who sought to impeach his business integrity. No notice would have been taken of these campaign lies were it not that some of his enemies (and every successful business man has his full quota of envious rivals) are republishing these bogus analyses. Numerous and most absurd formulas have been published, purporting to come from high authority; and it is a significant fact that no two have been at all alike—conclusively proving the dishonesty of their authors.

The following is from the Buffalo Commercial of Oct. 25, 1877:

"Hardly a dozen years ago he (Dr. Pierce) came here, a young and unknown man, almost friendless, with no capital except his own manhood, which, however, included plenty of brains and pluck, indomitable perseverance, and inborn uprightness. Capital enough for any young man, in this progressive country, if only he has good health and habits as well. He had all these great natural advantages and one thing more, an excellent education. He had studied medicine and been regularly licensed to practice as a physician. But he was still a student, fond of investigation and experiment. He discovered, or invented, important remedial agencies or compounds. Not choosing to wait wearily for the sick and suffering to find out (without anybody to tell them) that he could do them good, he advertised his medicines and invited the whole profession, of every school, to examine and pronounce judgment upon his formula. He advertised liberally, profusely, but with extraordinary shrewdness, and with a method which is in itself a lesson to all who seek business by that perfectly legitimate means. His success has been something marvelous—so great indeed that it must be due to intrinsic merit in the articles he sells more even than to his unparalleled skill in the use of printer's ink. The present writer once asked a distinguished dispensing druggist to explain the secret of the almost universal demand for Dr. Pierce's medicines. He said they were in fact genuine medicines—such compounds as every good physician would prescribe for the diseases which they were advertised to cure. Of course, they cost less than any druggist would charge for the same article supplied on a physician's prescription, and besides there was the doctor's fee saved. Moreover, buying the drugs in such enormous quantities, having perfect apparatus for purifying and compounding the mixture, he could not only get better articles in the first place, but present the medicine in better form and cheaper than the same mixture could possibly be obtained from any other source.

"It may be thought that all this having reference to Dr. Pierce's private business has no point whatever when considered in connection with the proper qualifications of a candidate for the Senate. Perhaps. But it is the fashion now, and will be for a fortnight more, with sundry journals, to make sneering allusions to this very matter. After that brief period, they will be quite ready to go on doing his work as before, and, as always before, to speak of him as a great public benefactor."

Rheumatism Quickly Cured.

"Durang's Rheumatic Remedy," the great Internal Medicine, will positively cure any case of rheumatism on the face of the earth. Price, $1 a bottle, six bottles, $5. Sold by all druggists. Send for circular to Helphenstine & Bentley, Druggists, Washington, D. C.

CHEW
The Celebrated
"Matchless"
Wood Tag Plug
Tobacco.
The Pioneer Tobacco Company,
New York, Boston and Chicago.

Do not go home Saturday night without a copy of The Chicago Ledger. You can get it at the news depots.

Patentees and inventors should read advertisement of Edson Bros. in another column.

Free! Leisure Hours, a splendid 16-page family literary paper, full of Choice Stories, Sketches, Poetry, etc., sent three months, with a pair of beautiful 6x8 Chromos, worthy to adorn the walls of any home, Free to any one sending fifteen cents (stamps taken) to pay mailing expenses. The publishers, J. L. Patten & Co., 162 William Street, N. Y., Guarantee every one. Double Value of money sent. $1,500 in prizes, and big pay, given to agents. A rare chance to make money.

THE GREAT REGULATOR.

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

PURELY VEGETABLE.

An Effectual Specific for
Malarious Fevers,
Bowel Complaints, Dyspepsia,
Mental Depression,
Restlessness,
Jaundice,
Nausea, Colic,
Sick Headache,
Constipation and Biliousness.

Ask the recovered dyspeptics, Bilious sufferers, victims of Fever and Ague, the mercurial diseased patient, how they recovered health, cheerful spirits and good appetite—they will tell you by taking Simmons' Liver Regulator.

This justly celebrated medicine Regulates the Liver, promotes digestion, and fortifies the system against malarial diseases.

Extract of a letter from Hon. Alexander H. Stephens: "I occasionally use, when my condition requires it, Dr. Simmons' Liver Regulator, with good effect. It is mild, and suits me better than more active remedies."

CONSTIPATION.

TESTIMONY OF THE CHIEF JUSTICE OF GEORGIA.—"I have used Simmons' Liver Regulator for constipation of my bowels, caused by a temporary derangement of the liver, for the last three or four years, and always, when used according to the directions, with decided benefit. I think it is a good medicine for the derangement of the liver—at least such has been my personal experience in the use of it."—Hiram Warner, Chief Justice of Georgia.

ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE,
MANUFACTURED ONLY BY
J. H. ZEILIN & CO.,
PHILADELPHIA, PA.
Price, $1.00. Sold by all Druggists.

$$$ Persons, male or female, old or young, who desire liberal pay for honest industry, address W. F. Semple & Co., Mt. Vernon, O.

EYE RESTORERS better than Spectacles. The best reduced to $1. Circulars free. Address Box 788, New York.

Before
After

DYKES' BEARD ELIXIR [illegible]

ARTHUR'S ILLUSTRATED HOME MAGAZINE. $2.25 a year; 3 copies, $5.50; 6 copies, and 1 to club-getter, $11. Specimen number, 10c. T. S. ARTHUR & SON, Phila.

"HIS DEAR LITTLE WIFE,"

A new serial by T. S. Arthur, is begun in January No. of Home Magazine. Send 10c. for No. containing first chapter of this tender and touching story of a dear little child-wife. T. S. ARTHUR & SON, Philadelphia.

"THE WORD OF A WOMAN

AND THE WAY SHE KEPT IT." A new serial by that charming writer, Virginia F. Townsend. Send 10c. for specimen No. of Arthur's Home Magazine containing first chapters of this beautiful story. Magazine, $2.25 a year. Butterick's Newest Patterns in every number. T. S. ARTHUR & SON, Philadelphia.

ALL Who will cut this out and send it to us with 50 cents will receive The Young Folks World, an 8-page 32-column monthly for young and old, and 50 fine mixed visiting cards in a nice card case. No amateur paper; established three years. P. O. stamps taken. Sample copy of paper, with best premium list ever offered, for 3 cents. Address

THE YOUNG FOLKS WORLD,
12 Winter Street, Boston, Mass.

$10, $20, $50, $100, $500.

Alex. Frothingham & Co., Brokers,
12 Wall Street, New York,

make desirable investments in stocks, which frequently pay from five to twenty times the amount invested. Stocks bought and carried as long as desired on deposit of three per cent. Explanatory circulars and weekly reports sent free.

SUNSHINE A Gem of a monthly, for one year, 1 fine Chromo; Centennial Puzzle; Fun [illegible] Agents WANTED. SUNSHINE PUBLISHING CO. 116 East Washington Street, Chicago, Ill.

SELF-INKING TRIUMPH PRINTING PRESS, $3.50; Outfit & Press, $5.50. A new Line of ROTARY POWER & Self-Inking Presses. Send 3 stamps for catalogue to D. W. WATSON 73 Cornhill, Boston, Mass.

KEEP'S SHIRTS.

KEEP'S Patent Partly-made Dress Shirts, best quality, only plain seams to finish, 6 for $7.
KEEP'S Custom Shirts to measure, best quality, 6 for $9, delivered free. Guaranteed perfectly satisfactory.

RED FLANNEL UNDERWEAR.

Undershirts and Drawers, best quality, $1.50 each.
White Flannel Underwear, best quality, $1.50 each.
Canton Flannel Vests & Drawers, ex. heavy, 75c. each.
Twilled Silk Umbrellas, paragon frames, $3 each.
Best Ginghams, patent protected ribs, $1 each.
Circulars and Samples mailed free on application.
Shirts only delivered free. KEEP MANUFACTURING [illegible]

TEACHERS of VOCAL MUSIC,

Desiring the Best Book extant, should buy FAVORITE SONGS An unequaled collection of Gems compiled for their use by [illegible], and superintended by Prof. [illegible], the eminent author and teacher. Price $6.00 a dozen. Sample by mail, 60 cents. SPECIMEN PAGES FREE. F. W. CARROLL & CO., Publishers, Cincinnati, or LYON & HEALY, Chicago.

BOOK AGENTS TAKE NOTICE!
BETSEY BOBBET COME AGAIN!
New Book Ready for Agents, by

JOSIAH ALLEN'S WIFE:

'SAMANTHA AT THE CENTENNIAL.

Send for Circulars to AMERICAN PUBLISHING CO. Hartford, Ct.; Cinn., O.; Chicago, Ill.; Newark, N. J.

ELASTIC RUPTURE BELT

The Best Truss without Metal Springs ever invented. No humbug claim of a certain radical cure, but a guarantee of a comfortable, secure and satisfactory appliance. We will take back and pay FULL PRICE for all that do not suit. Price, single, like cut, $4; for both sides, $6. Sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of price. N. B.—This Truss WILL CURE more Ruptures than any of those for which extravagant claims are made. Circulars free.

POMEROY TRUSS CO., 746 Broadway, New York.

TEN YEARS

of successful experience in our PECULIAR line of business enables us to produce, at a very moderate price, a beautiful life-like PORTRAIT of any person, which we guarantee to be in all respects entirely satisfactory. A common card photograph or other likeness, and description, for which we furnish blanks, are all we require.

AGENTS WANTED, upon the most favorable terms. Business thoroughly reliable and of the highest respectability. Address TEN EYCK & CO., Auburn, N. Y. or 337 State St., Chicago, Ill.

"The Best Polish in the World."

THE RISING SUN
STOVE POLISH

BABBITT'S TOILET SOAP.

Unrivalled for the Toilet and the Bath. No artificial and deceptive odors to cover common and deleterious ingredients. After years of scientific experiment the manufacturer of B. T. Babbitt's Best Soap has perfected and now offers to the public The FINEST TOILET SOAP in the World. Only the purest vegetable oils used in its manufacture.

For Use in the Nursery it has No Equal.

Worth ten times its cost to every mother and family in Christendom. Sample box, containing 3 cakes of 6 oz. each, sent free to any address on receipt of 75 cents. Address

B. T. BABBITT, New York City.
For Sale by all Druggists.

Burnett's Cocoaine
Prevents the Hair from Falling.

Burnett's Cocoaine
Promotes its Healthy Growth.

Burnett's Cocoaine
Is not Greasy nor Sticky.

Burnett's Cocoaine
Leaves no Disagreeable Odor.

Burnett's Cocoaine
Subdues Refractory Hair.

Burnett's Cocoaine
Soothes the Irritated Scalp-Skin.

Burnett's Cocoaine
Affords the Richest Lustre.

Burnett's Cocoaine
Is not an Alcoholic Wash.

Burnett's Cocoaine
Kills Dandruff.

Burnett's Cocoaine
Gives New Life to the Hair.

Burnett's Cocoaine
Remains Longest in Effect.

BURNETT'S
KALLISTON
TRADE MARK

As a wash for the complexion, has no equal. It is distinguished for its cooling and soothing properties, removing Tan, Sunburn, Freckles, Redness and Roughness of the skin, etc., curing Chapped Hands, and allaying the irritation caused by the bites of mosquitoes and other annoying insects. The Kalliston is highly recommended

After Shaving,
Softening the beard and rendering the skin smooth.

In the Nursery,
Peculiarly adapted to the bathing of Infants. A few drops sufficient for a bowl of water.

For Chapped Hands,
An effective application.

After Sea-Bathing,
Relieving the disagreeable action of the salt water and the sun.

A Wash for the Head,
Cooling, Cleansing and Refreshing.

For Bites of Mosquitoes and other Insects,
Neutralizing the poison almost instantaneously.

To allay Heat and Irritation of the Skin, to remove Dandruff, to prevent the Hair from falling off, and promote its vigorous growth.

Apply the Kalliston thoroughly with a sponge or soft brush. For the Hair it should be applied night and morning.

The greatest efficacy of the Cocoaine is best secured by a perfect cleansing, before its application, of the hair and scalp (for which purpose the Kalliston is recommended, because its ingredients are co-operative with those of Cocoaine), under which circumstances it allays irritation, removes all tendency to dandruff, and invigorates the action of the capillaries in the highest degree.

Prepared only by JOSEPH BURNETT & CO. Boston. For sale by all Druggists.

PULMONA,

Made from the prescription of one of the most eminent physicians in the medical faculty, is now offered to the public as a radical cure for CONSUMPTION, BRONCHITIS, CATARRH, ASTHMA, and all affections of the THROAT and LUNGS; for all Disorders of the Nervous System, and Diseases of the Blood. PULMONA increases the strength and deepens the color of the pale blood. It checks Night Sweats within a fortnight. It subdues the CHILLS and FEVER. It diminishes Expectoration. It causes calm and refreshing sleep. It invigorates the appetite, and the invalid gains flesh rapidly. It is beyond comparison the best remedy known for CONSUMPTION and all affections of the THROAT, LUNGS and NERVOUS SYSTEM.

Extracts from Letters from Pastors of Churches.

PULMONA saved my daughter's life.
Rev. E. Jones, Ransom, N. Y.

We bless God for the benefits we have received from the use of PULMONA.
Rev. P. Warren, Canton, Pa.

Every one who I have recommended it to has benefited much by its use.
Rev. C. D. Humphreys, Racine, Wis.

A circular containing advice for the treatment of the diseases above mentioned, certificates of MANY actual cures, and full particulars of cases successfully treated will be sent free to applicants.

PULMONA may be obtained through Druggists, or orders may be sent to the Proprietor direct. Price, $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5. OSCAR G. MOSES, 18 Cortlandt Street, New York.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER.

Absolutely Pure.

All Grocers authorized to guarantee its full weight, and absolute purity. To try it, send 60 cents for 1-pound can to be sent by mail free of postage. ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., N. Y.

AGENTS WANTED FOR

Creative Science;

Or, MANHOOD, WOMANHOOD, AND THEIR MUTUAL INTER-RELATIONS; LOVE, ITS LAWS, POWER, ETC.

Agents are selling from 15 to 25 copies a day. Send for specimen pages and our extra terms to Agents, and [illegible] NATIONAL PUBLISHING CO., Chicago, Ill.

BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES
FOR COUGHS COLDS

A

Cough, Cold, or Sore Throat,

Requires immediate attention, as neglect oftentimes results in some incurable Lung disease. BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES are a simple remedy, and will almost invariably give immediate relief.

SOLD BY ALL CHEMISTS and dealers in medicines.

THOMSON'S PATENT
GLOVE-FITTING
CORSETS.

The friends of this UNRIVALLED CORSET are now numbered by MILLIONS. Prices are much reduced. MEDAL RECEIVED AT CENTENNIAL. Get the Genuine, and beware of Imitations. ASK ALSO FOR THOMSON'S UNBREAKABLE STEELS The best goods made. See that the name of THOMSON and the Trade Mark a CROWN are stamped on every Corset & Steel.

SURPASSES ALL OTHERS IN COMFORT
GIVE COMPLETE SATISFACTION
FITS THE FIGURE PERFECTLY

HOLIDAY MUSIC BOOKS.

The World of Song.
Magnificent Bound Volume of Songs of the most popular and musical character.

The Sunshine of Song.
Magnificent Bound Volume of the most recent and popular songs. (In press and nearly ready.)

Gems of the Dance.
Splendid Bound Volume of the most Brilliant Piano Music, by Strauss and others.

The Cluster of Gems.
Splendid Bound Volume of the finest piano pieces of Medium Difficulty. (In press and nearly ready.)

Each book has 200 to 250 pages full sheet-music size, and costs $2.50 in Boards; $3.00 in Cloth; $4.00 Fine Gilt for Presents.

Send for 5 Christmas Selections, $4 per 100.

WINTER SINGING BOOKS.

THE SALUTATION. ($1.25 or $12 doz.)
ZION.
Two first-class Church Music Books.

ENCORE. (75 cts., or $7.50 doz.)
JOHNSON'S CHORUS CHOIR INSTRUCTION BOOK. ($1.25 or $12 doz.)
PERKINS' SINGING SCHOOL. (75 cts., or $6.75 doz.)
Three of the best possible Singing-class Books.

Any book mailed, post free, for retail price.

OLIVER DITSON & CO., Boston.
C. H. Ditson & Co., 843 Broadway, N. Y.
J. E. Ditson & Co., 922 Chestnut St., Phila.

VEGETINE.

HER OWN WORDS.

Baltimore, Md., Feb. 13, 1877.

Mr. H. R. Stevens:

Dear Sir—Since several years I have got a sore and very painful foot. I had some physicians, but they couldn't cure me. Now, I have heard of your Vegetine from a lady who was sick for a long time, and became all well from your Vegetine; and I went and bought me one bottle of Vegetine, and, after I had used one bottle, the pains left me, and it began to heal, and then I bought one other bottle, and so I take it yet. I thank God for this remedy and yourself, and wishing every sufferer may pay attention to it. It is a blessing for health.

Mrs. C. Krabe, 638 West Baltimore Street.

VEGETINE.

SAFE AND SURE.

Mr. H. R. Stevens:

In 1872 your Vegetine was recommended to me, and, yielding to the persuasions of a friend, I consented to try it. At the time I was suffering from general debility and nervous prostration, superinduced by overwork and irregular habits. Its wonderful strengthening and curative properties seemed to affect my debilitated system from the first dose; and, under its persistent use, I rapidly recovered, gaining more than usual health and good feeling. Since then I have not hesitated to give Vegetine my most unqualified indorsement, as being a safe, sure and powerful agent in promoting health and restoring the wasted system to new life and energy. Vegetine is the only medicine I use; and, as long as I live, I never expect to find a better.

Yours truly,
W. H. Clark,
120 Monterey Street, Allegheny, Pa.

VEGETINE.

THE BEST SPRING MEDICINE.

Charlestown.

H. R. Stevens:

Dear Sir—This is to certify that I have used your "Blood Preparation" in my family for several years, and think that, for Scrofula, or Cankerous Humors, or Rheumatic affections, it cannot be excelled; and as a blood purifier and spring medicine it is the best thing I have ever used, and I have used almost everything. I can cheerfully recommend it to any one in need of such a medicine.

Yours respectfully,
Mrs. A. A. Dinsmore, 19 Russel Street.

VEGETINE.

WHAT IS NEEDED.

Boston, Feb. 13, 1871.

H. R. Stevens, Esq.:

Dear Sir—About one year since I found myself in a feeble condition from general debility. Vegetine was strongly recommended to me by a friend who had been much benefited by its use. I procured the article, and, after using several bottles, was restored to health, and discontinued its use. I feel quite confident that there is no medicine superior to it for those complaints for which it is especially prepared, and would cheerfully recommend it to those who feel that they need something to restore them to perfect health.

Respectfully yours,
U. L. Pettengill,
Firm of S. M. Pettengill & Co.,
No. 10 State Street, Boston.

VEGETINE.

ALL HAVE OBTAINED RELIEF.

South Berwick, Me., Jan. 17, 1872.

H. R. Stevens, Esq.:

Dear Sir—I have had dyspepsia in its worst form for the last ten years, and have taken hundreds of dollars' worth of medicines without obtaining any relief. In September last I commenced taking Vegetine, since which time my health has steadily improved. My food digests well, and I have gained fifteen pounds of flesh. There are several others in this place taking Vegetine, and all have obtained relief.

Yours truly,
Thomas E. Moore,
Overseer of Card Room, Portsmouth Co.'s Mills.

VEGETINE

PREPARED BY

H. R. STEVENS, Boston, Mass.

Vegetine is Sold by All Druggists.

$50 to $150 a week with our popular [illegible] Chromos & Maps. Goodspeed's Pub'g House, Chicago.

Books Old & New wanted and sold. [illegible] logue. American Book Exchange, 55 Beekman St., [illegible]

GUNS REVOLVERS. Price List [illegible] Great Western Gun Works, [illegible]

$3300 A YEAR. How to Make it. [illegible] COE & YONGE, [illegible]

A [illegible] Randall & Co.'s [illegible] They are the best, cheapest and [illegible]

Invalid Chairs. [illegible]

$200 a month. Agents wanted [illegible] Child & Fenton, Cincinnati, [illegible]

BEATTY Piano, Organ best. [illegible] Organs 13 Stops $98. [illegible] new Cat. Free. Daniel F. Beatty, Washington, [illegible]

$400 A MONTH. AGENTS WANTED. $50 of the latest novelties [illegible] Send for Catalog. VAN & CO., Chicago.

$2500 a year. Agents wanted everywhere. Business strictly legitimate. [illegible] Address J. WORTH & Co., St. Louis, Mo.

$350 A MONTH—AGENTS WANTED—36 best selling articles in the world; one sample free. Address JAY BRONSON, Detroit, Mich.

$3 GOLD PLATED WATCHES. Cheapest in the known world. Sample Watch Free to Agents. Address, A. COULTER & CO., Chicago, Ill.

$1 WEBSTER'S Star in the East, warranted to cure Catarrh and Bronchitis, mailed on receipt of $1. Address Dr. L. A. Webster & Co., Marshall, Mich.

SIXTY-SIX specimen copies of our BEAUTIFUL OIL CHROMOS free to responsible Agents. Inclose 10 cts. with your application to cover postage. STEIGELMAN & CO., 106 W. Sixth St., Cincinnati, O.

CATARRH And Female Complaints. Send 3c. stamp for circular containing valuable advice. Dr. G. F. LYNCH, Greenwood, Wis.
NEURALGIA

Agents, Read This!

We will pay Agents a Salary of $75 per Month and Expenses to sell our New and Wonderful Inventions. Address L. S. SHERMAN & Co., Marshall, Michigan.

CHEAPER THAN ORGANS! AN UPRIGHT PIANO!!

Something entirely new from the celebrated manufactory of Guild, Church & Co., Boston. Illustrated circular sent free.

CLOCKS E. INGRAHAM & CO.'S are superior in design and not equaled in quality, or as timekeepers. Ask your Jeweler for them. Manufactory—Bristol, Ct.

KIDDER'S PASTILLES. Sure relief ASTHMA. Price 35cts. by mail. Stowell & Co. Charlestown, Mass.

PENSIONS Procured, or NO PAY, for every wounded, ruptured, accidentally injured or diseased Soldier. Address Col. L. W. FITZGERALD, U.S. Claim Att'y, Washington, D.C.

PATENTS AND INVENTORS. EDSON BROS. U. S. and Foreign Patent Agents, 711 G St., Washington, D.C. Established in 1865. Fee after allowance. Circ'l of instructions, etc., sent free.

WORK FOR ALL

In their own localities, canvassing for the Fireside Visitor (enlarged), Weekly and Monthly. Largest Paper in the World, with Mammoth Chromos Free. Big Commissions to Agents. Terms and Outfit Free. Address P. O. VICKERY, Augusta, Maine.

NASBY AS A BANKER, AND On the President's Policy. Two of the richest, raciest pamphlets ever issued. Full of the rare Humor and profound Philosophy of the Sage of Confedrit X Roads. 10 cents each; three for 25 cents. Address BLADE, Toledo, Ohio.

STORIES. Five complete novels, by eminent writers, and four delightful stories, all for 25 cents. In book form, would cost $6.00. Address THE BLADE, Toledo, Ohio.

FREE Choice Standard BOOKS in all departments of literature—Poetry, Fiction, History, Biography, the Classics, etc.; the best and cheapest books in the world. Catalogue free. Address THE BLADE, Toledo, Ohio.

BEFORE YOU subscribe for any other paper send for a specimen copy of THE TOLEDO BLADE. It is a Mammoth Eight-Page Weekly Paper of Sixty-four Columns, filled with carefully-prepared reading matter of interest and value to people in all parts of the United States. Specimens free.

$10 to $25 A DAY SURE made by Agents selling our Chromos, Crayons, Picture and Chromo Cards. 125 samples, worth $5, sent, postpaid, for 85 Cents. Illustrated Catalogue free. J. H. BUFFORD'S SONS, Boston. [Established 1830.]

MARY J. HOLMES.

The new novel, MILDRED, by Mrs. Mary J. Holmes, author of those splendid books—Edith Lyle—West Lawn—Tempest and Sunshine—Lena Rivers—etc., is now ready, and for sale by all booksellers. Price, $1.50. It is one of the finest novels ever written, and everybody should read it.

G. W. Carleton & Co., Pub'rs., New York.

AGENTS WANTED!

FOR PARTICULARS, ADDRESS
WILSON SEWING MACHINE CO.
829 Broadway, New York City;
Chicago, Ill.; New Orleans, La.; or San Francisco, Cal.

JACKSON'S BEST SWEET NAVY CHEWING TOBACCO

was awarded the highest prize at Centennial Exposition for its fine chewing qualities, the excellence and lasting character of its sweetening and flavoring. If you want the best tobacco ever made, ask your grocer for this, and see that each plug bears our blue strip trade mark with words Jackson's Best on it. Sold wholesale by all jobbers. Send for sample to C. A. JACKSON & CO., Manufacturers, Petersburg, Va.

WEBER'S METROPOLITAN CORSET!

THE ONLY CORSET COMBINING

Grace Comfort and Beauty!

Is constructed on purely scientific principles. The bust is made elastic and left open at the hips to be [illegible] by all leading merchants. Lady Agents wanted. [illegible] plies by mail on receipt of price [illegible]

WESTERN DEPOT, KEITH BROS., Chicago, Ill.

THE GOOD OLD STAND-BY.

MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT.

FOR MAN AND BEAST.

Established 35 Years. Always cures. Always ready. Always handy. Has never yet failed. Thirty millions have tested it. The whole world approves the glorious old Mustang—the Best and Cheapest Liniment in existence. 25 cents a bottle. The Mustang Liniment cures when nothing else will.

SOLD BY ALL MEDICINE VENDERS.

SANDAL-WOOD.

A positive remedy for all diseases of the Kidneys, Bladder and Urinary Organs; also good in Dropsical Complaints. It never produces sickness, is certain and speedy in its action. It is fast superseding all other remedies. Sixty capsules cure in six or eight days. No other medicine can do this.

Beware of Imitations, for, owing to its great success, many have been offered; some are most dangerous, causing piles, &c.

DUNDAS DICK & CO'S Genuine Soft Capsules, containing Oil of Sandal-Wood, sold at all drug stores. Ask for circular, or send for one to 35 and 37 Wooster Street, New York.

O. N. U. No. 51

WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS, please say you saw the advertisement in this paper.

DAVENPORT THE DRUGGIST

Would call the attention of the public to his splendid stock of

PURE DRUGS AND MEDICINES!

Which have been selected with especial reflerence to the wants of this locality, and warranted fresh and genuine. Also to his fine stock of

HAIR OILS AND PERFUMERY.

The finest in the county. He also keeps a full stock of

Toilet Soaps, Face Powders, Combs, Brushes, Sponges, etc. Also Trusses and Supporters, in large varieties and a full Stock of DRUGGIST'S SUNDRIES.

SCHOOL BOOKS WALL PAPER AND CURTAINS!

The largest and most complete stock in Northern Indiana. Be sure to call on

DAVENPORT.

His stock is very complete and PRICES WAY DOWN. Also a full line of.

GOLD PENS, ALBUMS, POCKET BOOKS, BLANK BOOKS, INK and STATIONERY.

Be sure and call on

DAVENPORT, THE DRUGGIST,
AUBURN, IND

FRUIT HOUSE PRICES!

Great Reduction on Sugars

All grades reduced 1 cent per pound; the lowest they have sold for fifteen years. Best white coffee sugar 10c, best coffee C 9c, choice yellow sugar 8c.

An immense stock of all goods for

CHRISTMAS AND NEW YEARS!

Candies, Nuts, Toys, Liquors and Cigars.

TEAS!

Fifty more chests of the choice 40c tea and 40 chests of the good 25c tea. We sell large amounts of these two teas; being good drawers, strong and well flavored We now sell more chests of tea in a month than we used to in a year, and this comes simply from our purchasing direct of the importers and selling direct to our customers, thereby saving the profit of the middle men, which is 20 to 40c on the pound.

Young Hyson Tea,	25, 50, 70, best 90 cents per pound
Gunpowder Tea,	60, 70, best 90 cents per pound
Imperial Tea,	40 60, best 90 cents per pound
Ooolong Tea,	25, 60, best 70 cents per pound
Japan Uncolored Tea,	35, 50, best 70 cents per pound

COFFEE! COFFEE!

Our Best Rio, 22 cents. Good Fine Rio, 20 cents. Old Government Java, 30 cents.

SYRUPS.

Cuba 40 and 50 cents. New Orleans, 50 and 75 cents White Drips, 75 cts. and $1.

RAISENS, and ZANTEE CURRENTS for CHRISTMAS CAKE, CITRON, LEMON and ORANGE PEEL.

Valencia raisins per pound 6c, Best layers raisins 12½c. Zantee currents 9c Leghorn citron 25c. Orange and Lemon peal 30c,

CANDIES.

Toy candies of all kinds. Stick candy per pound 15c. French mixed 18c. Toy candy all sorts and varieties 30c. Toys for Santa Claus from a penny whistle to a nice album to make presents with a thousand different things to amuse the little ones—Dogs, cats, rats, mice, birds, elephants, lions, tigars, drums, wagons, horses, Chineese lanterns, pistol caps, &c., something for every little one in the country.

And for Christmas tree candles we have a large assortment of every color, from ½ cent to 2 cents each or 50c per box.

OILS, OILS, OIL!!

Coal Oil per gallon, 20 cents. Fish Oil per gallon, $1.00. Headlight Oil per gallon 25 cents. Best Golden Machine Oil per gal. 70c. Lard Oil, per gallon, $1.00 Machine Oil per gal. 30ct

Nuts for Christmas and New Years.

Brazil nuts 10c. Filberts, quart 15c. Almons, qurrt 25c. English walnuts, quart 15c. Pecans, quart 12 1-2c. Roasted pea nuts quart 5c.

Liquors of all Kinds for Medical use Whisky, Rum, Brandy, Gin, Wines and Ales.

Good old bourbon $1 and $1.25. 2 years old $1.40 and 1.50. Best old 76 for medical use $2.50. Sherry Wine as good as any in the country $1.50. Port wine best in the market $1.50. California Angelica wine best $1.50. Gin $1.50 and $2.50. Dublin and Londen Porter 22c. Scotch 22c.

TOBACCOS AND CIGRS-

A No. 1 smoking for 30c per pound. Choice fine cut 50c per pound. No. 1 Plug Tobacco 50c per pound.

We have a large assortment and can sell a good cigar at $1.25 per box. And a choice No. 1 cigar for $1.75 per e00.

FRESH OYSTERS LOWER THIS YEAR THAN MEAT—We sell a fine Oyste at 12½. No. 1 full count saloon oyster 20c. Large A standard 30c.

You can save at least 25 per cent. on the dollar at the

Fruit House, Fort Wayne, Ind

JOHN L. DAVIS,

OF THE

PIONEER HARDWARE STORE,

Would respectfully announce that he has made large additions in every department, and is prepared to furnish everything in the Hardwase line.

He keeps a full stock of

BUILDING MATERIAL.

Which he can sell at prices to suit the times. All kinds of

STOVES and TINWARE

[illegible]

EXCELSIOR HARDWARE.

GRAND CLEARANCE SALE OF

STOVES, TINWARE, AXES, CROSS-CUT SAWS, &C., &C.,

That must be sold at some price. We have every kind of saws on the market and parties wanting anything in the

SAW, AXE, STOVE AND TINWARE LINE,

Will do well to call on us before buying elsewhere. We have the goods and can suit you in kinds, quality and the best of all we

GUARANTEE PRICES

Lower than the lowest. We have added Iron and Steele,

SEAT AND CARRIAGE SPRINGS,

and a general line of Carriage and Wagon Hardware,

WOOD WORK.

Sleigh and Sled Runners, Rims, Hubs and Spokes,

and a general line of Wagon, Carriage and Blacksmiths goods, and will sell just as low

And a Little Lower

Than you can buy the same quality of goods elsewhere. We buy for cash and sell for cash and therefore it is clear that we can compete with any house in the state selling Hardware. Come everybody and cary away goods at almost your own prices. This is no humbug, but mean just what we say. Come and see for yourselves Remember the place,

EXCELSIOR HARDWATE STORE

North Side Public Square, AUBURN. IND.

W. H. KIBLINGER & CO.

DOWN! DOWN! DOWN!

FROM 10 TO 25 PER CENT.

HARNESS, SADELES,

COLLARS, WHIPS, &c.,

At my new shop on seventh street, opposite Court House, in old Post Office building. Come and see me and I will sell you a good article for less money than you ever heard of before. All work warranted.

G. RHODENBAUGH & CO

$200.000.

GREATEST In order to clear out our stock of very superior Gold-plated Jewelry valued at over $200,000, we will send as below, 20 Pieces, all warranted Gold-plated for $1.00. 1 pair Gold Stone Sleeve Buttons; 1 pair Engraved Sleeve Buttons; 1 set Pointed Studs; 1 set Amethyst Studs; 1 Wedding Ring; 1 Engraved Band Finger Ring; 1 Amethyst Stone Ring, Inlaid BARGAIN with Gold; 1 Elegant Ring, marked "Friendship;" 1 Amethyst Stone Scarf Pin, Inlaid with Gold; 1 Silvered Hat Pin; 1 set Ladies' Jet and Gold Pin and Drops; 1 Misses' set Jet and Gold; 1 Collar Stud; 1 set Handsome Rosebud Ear Drops; 1 Gents' Elegant Lake George Diamond Stud; 1 Cardinal Red Bead Necklace; 1 pair Ladies Amethyst Stone Ear Drops, EVER Inlaid with Gold; 1 Ladies' Ornamented Jet Brooch; 1 Fancy Scarf Ring and Elegant Watch Chain. Take your choice, the entire lot of 20 pieces, sent Post-paid for $1.00 or any 8 pieces you choose for 50 cents. Now is the time to make money. These can easily be retailed at $10.00. CLUB PREMIUM. To any OFFERED one ordering 12 Lots at $1.00 each, we will present Free, an Open Face Coin Silver Watch as Premium. WATCH AND JEWELRY CIRCULAR FREE.

NOTICES OF THE PRESS.

Our cotemporary, the Boston Globe, speaks very highly of both advertiser and goods as being honorable in his dealings, and reliable in his goods, a commendation we heartily endorse.—St. Louis Dispatch, December 7, 1876.

The house is a thoroughly reliable one in every repect.—Boston Globe, Oct. 25, 1876.

His reputation for honesty, fair dealing, and liberality is unequaled by any advertiser in this city.—N. Y. Day Book, December 16, 1876.

Advertises more and sells cheaper than any man in New York.—Herald, April 13, 1877.

F. STOCKMAN, 27 Bond Street, New York.

DAY'S AGUE TONIC

CURES EVERY FORM OF CHILLS, OR MONEY RETURNED.

DAY'S TONIC Cures Chills and Fevers

DAY'S TONIC Cures Dumb Chills

DAY'S TONIC [illegible]

DAY'S TONIC [illegible]

DAY'S TONIC [illegible]

DAY'S TONIC [illegible]

DAY'S TONIC [illegible]

DAY'S TONIC [illegible]

DAY'S TONIC [illegible]

DAY'S TONIC

Is a new innovation, and possesses advantages heretofore unknown and unattained by others.

It does not contain Quinine or any poison; it does not produce buzzing or ringing in the head, which follows the use of Quinine; it is retained by delicate stomachs; it acts upon the liver and bowels without the use of any other medicine; it never fails to cure, and our agents are authorized to return the money in each and every case of failure; one bottle will cure two cases. Try it and see. Sold by all Druggists at $1.00.

[illegible] & CO., Proprietors, Louisville, Ky.

RAILROADS.

Lake Shore & Mich Southern R R

AIR LINE DIVISION.

On and after Nov. 19 1877, trains will run as follows:

GOING WEST

	Special Ex.	Pacific Ex.	Accm
Toledo	11 05 a m	12 01 a m	5 30 p m
Wauseon	12 18 "	1 07 "	6 35 "
Bryan	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Butler	1 35 "	2 25 "	8 38 "
Waterloo	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Sedan		"	"
Corunna	"	"	9 13 "
Kendallville	2 15 "	3 05 "	9 30 "
Ligonier	2 55 "	3 40 "	"
Goshen	[illegible] "	4 12 "	"
Elkhart	3 50 "	4 35 "	"

GOING EAST.

Elkhart	1 10 p m	9 50 p m	"
Goshen	1 30 "	10 10 "	"
Ligonier	1 58 "	10 42 "	"
Kendallville	2 35 "	11 17 "	6 00 a m
Corunna	"	"	6 15 "
Sedan	"	"	"
Waterloo	2 57 "	11 45 "	6 33 "
Butler	3 12 "	12 01 a m	6 52 "
Bryan	3 45 "	12 40 "	7 36 "
Wauseon	4 25 "	1 25 "	8 34 "
Toledo	5 40 "	2 40 "	10 00 "

CHAS. PAINE, Gen. Supt.
J. W. CARY, Gen Tic. Agt
J. E. CURTIS, Division Su

Pittsburg, Ft. W. & C. R. R

Condensed time card Nov. 11, 1877.

GOING WEST.

	No. 1 Fast ex.	No. 7 Pac. ex.	No. 3 Nigh ex	No 5 Mail.
Pittsburgh	11 45 pm	9 00 am	1 50 pm	6 00 am
Rochester	12 53 am	10 15	2 58	7 45
Alliance	3 10	12 50 pm	5 35	11 00
Orrville	4 45	2 28	7 12	12 55 pm
Mansfield	7 00	4 40	9 20	3 11
Crestl'e ar.	7 30	5 15	9 45	3 50
" lv.	7 50	5 40	9 55
Forest	9 25	7 35	11 25
Lima	10 40	9 00	12 25 am
Ft. Wayne	1 30 pm	11 55	2 40
Plymouth	3 45	2 46 am	4 55
Chicago	7 00	6 30	7 58

GOING EAST

	No. 4 Night ex	No. 2 Fast ex.	No. 6 Pac. ex	No. 8 Mail
Chicago	9 10 pm	8 00 a.m	5 15 pm
Plymouth	2 46 am	11 25	9 05
Ft. Wayne	6 55	2 15 pm	11 30
Lima	8 55	4 10	1 30 am
Forest	10 10	5 20	2 37
Crestl'e ar.	11 45	6 55	4 20
" lv.	12 05 pm	7 15 pm	4 30	6 05am
Mansfield	12 35	7 44	5 00	6 55
Orrville	2 26	9 38	7 10	9 15
Alliance	4 00	11 15	9 00	11 20
Rochester	6 22	1 20 am	11 06	2 00pm
Pittsburgh	7 30	2 30	12 15	3 30

Trains Nos 3 and 6 run daily, Train No. 1 leaves Pittsburg daily except Sunday, Train No 4 leaves Chicago daily except Saturday. All others daily except Sunday.

F. R. MYERS.
Gen. Pass. and Ticket Agent.

Detroit, Eel River & Illinois R. R.

TAKE EFFECT Nov. 19 1877.

GOIMG EAST,

Stations.	MAIL No. 2,	ACCOM. No. 6,	LOCAL FT No. 8,
lv. Logansport	8 15am	7 35pm	6 30am
Mexico	8 57	8 28	7 40
Denver	9 08	9 06	8 25
Chili	9 17	9 12	8 47
Roann	9 35	9 37	9 35
Laketon	9 53	10 00	10 10
N. Manchester	10 05	10 17	10 35
Liberty Mills	10 17	10 30	11 00
Collamer	10 31	10 50	11 40
S. Whitley	10 35	10 55	11 50
Columbia City	11 01	11 31	12 50
Colen's	11 20	11 55	2 05
Churubusco	11 35	12 12	2 31
La Otto	11 47	12 42	3 25
Cedar Creek	12 06	12 55	3 45
Auburn Junct'n	12 22	1 12	4 25
Auburn	12 25	1 17	4 35
Butler	1 00am	2 00pm	5 45pm

Going West.

Stations	No. 1,	No. [illegible]	No. 7,
Logansport ar	7 00pm	1 00pm	6 50pm
Mexico	6 26	12 00	5 40
Denver	6 17	11 46	5 20
Chili	6 10	11 35	5 00
Roann	5 56	11 12	4 15
Laketon	5 43	10 50	3 30
North Mancester	5 33	10 35	3 00
Liberty Mills	5 27	10 17	2 35
Collamar	5 15	9 57	2 03
South Whitley	5 12	9 52	1 53
Columbia City	4 50	9 18	12 10
Collin's	4 32	8 53	11 29
Cherubusco	[illegible] 20	8 38	10 55
La Otto	3 55	8 10	[illegible]
Cedar Creek	3 45	8 00	9 48
Auburn Junction	3 27	7 40	9 15
Auburn	3 22	7 35	8 30
Butler lv	2 45pm	6 55am	7 15

FRANK J. HECKER,
Gen. Sup't

Baltimore & Ohio Railroad.

IN EFFECT Nov. 18 1877.

GOING WEST.

STATIONS:	Express	Express	Cum'l A
lv New York	8 15am	8 55pm
Philadelphia	11 45	11 30
Baltimore	5 15pm	7 00am
Washington	6 55	8 40
Wheeling	6 20am	10 50pm	4 30pm
Bellaire	8 00am	11 15	4 50
Barnesville	10 10	12 25am	6 12
Cambridge	11 13	1 25	7 30
Zanesville	12 25pm	2 35	8 50
ar Newark	1 30	3 40	10 00
Columbus	3 20	5 20
Shawnee	4 30	10 10
lv Columbus	12 40
Newark	2 20	2 50	5 00pm
Mt Vernon	3 10	4 50	7 15
Mansfield	4 54	6 19	11 25
Shelby	5 11	6 47	12 23am
Monroeville	6 13	8 25	3 00
ar Sandusky	7 00	9 10	4 50
lv Chicago Junction	6 00	7 45	6 15
Republic	6 45	8 19	8 19
Tiffin	7 15	8 39	9 35
Fostoria	7 45	9 10	10 [illegible]
Deshler	8 50	10 00	1 35pm
Defiance	9 52	11 06
Hicksville	10 41	11 52
Auburn Junction	11 22	12 35pm
Garrett	11 40pm	1 05	m
Avilla
Albion	12 17am	1 44
Milford Junction
Walkertown Junction	2 33	3 53
Chicago	5 40	7 00

GOING EAST.

Chicago	8 50am	9 40pm
Walkertown Junction	12 26pm	10 54pm	1 20am
Milford Junction			2 37pm
Albion	2 30	3 10	4 15
Avilla	2 40	3 30	4 55
Garrett	3 20	3 55	6 00am
Auburn Junction	3 28	4 08	6 18
Hicksville	4 07	4 42	7 42
Defiance	4 54	5 27	9 15
Deshler	5 48	6 23	11 35
Fostoria	6 47	7 23	2 10pm
Tiffin	7 15	7 54	3 20
Republic	7 36
Sandusky
Monroeville
Chicago Junction	8 40	9 30	1 25
Shelby Junction	9 13	10 06	2 55
Mansfield	9 44	10 37	3 55
Mt. Vernon	11 13	12 10pm	7 15
ar Newark	12 15a	1 15	9 20
lv Columbus	9 50	[illegible]
Shawnee
Newark	[illegible] 50am	2 05	[illegible] am
Lv Zanesville	1 35	3 10	7 40
Cambridge	2 37	4 06	8 1[illegible]
Barnesville	3 38	[illegible]	[illegible]
Ar Bellaire	4 50	6 20	10 12
Wheeling	5 00	6 40	11 [illegible]
Washington	7 [illegible] pm	7 [illegible]
Baltimore	[illegible] 40	[illegible]
Philadelphia	[illegible] am	1 45pm
New York	6 45	5 10pm

Zanesville Accommodation leaves Zanesville daily except Sunday at 6:40 a. m., and arrives a Columbus at 9:45 a. m.

Express trains run daily, other trains daily except Sunday.

L. M COLE, Gen. Tick. Agt.

Ft. Wayne, Muncie & Cin. R. R.

Muncie Route.

THE SHORT LINE TO INDIANAPOLIS,
—AND—
THE SOUTHWEST.

Time Card in effect Nov. 18, 1877.

GOING SOUTH.

STATIONS.	1. Mail.	3. Express.	5. Accom.
FORT WAYNE	1 00 pm	6 00 pm	....
Bluffton	2 10	7 15 pm	....
Montpelier	2 47	7 57 pm	....
Hartford	3 17	8 24 pm	....
MUNCIE	4 15	9 20 pm	6 20 a m
Newcastle	[illegible]	....	8 00
Cambridge City	5 49	....	9 15
Connersville	[illegible]	....	10 [illegible]
Cincinnati	10 00 pm	....	12 25 p m
INDIANAPOLIS	[illegible]	11 50 pm
Louisville	10 05 pm	6 30 am
Terre Haute	10 34 pm	1 50 am
St. Louis	7 35 am	8 30 am

GOING NORTH

STATIONS		6 Express.	4 Accom.
St. Louis	....	6 45 am	....
Terre Haute	....	1 35 pm	....
Louisville	....	7 17 pm	....
Cincinnati	7 30 am	....	4 10 pm
Indianapolis	....	4 25 am	4 25 pm
Connersville	10 40 am	....	7 40 pm
Cambridge City	11 15 am	....	[illegible] 13 pm
New Castle	11 53 am	....	8 50 pm
Muncie	12 45 pm	8 20 am	9 40 pm
Hartford	1 38 pm	9 15 am	....
Montpelier	2 04 pm	9 41 am	....
Bluffton	2 48 pm	10 19 am	....
Fort Wayne	3 56 pm	11 25 am	....

All trains daily except Sunday. Trains run on Columbus time. Through cars attached to trains 1 and 4, and run between Fort Wayne and Indianapolis via Muncie.

GEO. W. MULLEN, Act'g Gen. Tick. Ag't.
W. W. WORTHINGTON, Gen. Supt.

Ft. Wayne, Jackson & Sag. R. R

Short-Line Between

Michigan and the South.

Time card in effect Nov. 18—run by Chicago time

Going South.

Stations	Mail	Exp.	Fr't.
Saginaw	3 25 pm	7 15 am
Lansing	7 20 pm	10 00 am
Grand Rapids		6 30 am	11 50 am
Detroit	9 50 pm	7 00 am
Jackson	6 55 am	11 40 am	5 10 pm
Jonesville	8 10	12 50 pm	7 20
Bankers	8 28	1 07	7 47
Reading	8 44	1 29	8 15
Angola	9 43	2 12	9 45
Waterloo	10 28	2 47	10 50
Auburn	10 40	3 01	11 43
Auburn Junction	10 46	3 05	11 35
Ft Wayne	11 40 am	4 00 pm	1 00 am
Indianapolis	6 05 pm	11 20 pm
Louisville	10 50 pm	8 30 am
St. Louis	7 25 am	8 30 am

Going North.

St. Louis		6 45 pm
Louisville		7 15 pm
Indianapolis		4 25 am
Dep. Fort Wayne	4 15 pm	11 15 am	1 30 am
Auburn Junction	5 15	12 05 pm	3 00
Auburn	5 18	12 08	3 03
Waterloo	5 32	12 19	4 05
Ar Angola	6 35	12 57	5 56
Reading	7 35	1 40	7 15
Bankers	7 47	2 04	7 40
Jonesville	8 05	2 30	8 10
Jackson	9 20 pm	3 40	10 00 am
Detroit	8 35 am	6 30	1 00 pm
Grand Rapids	7 05 am	1 00	4 30 pm
Lansing		5 55 pm
Saginaw		9 13 pm

All trains daily except Sunday.

P. B. LOOMIS, Pres't
S. K. HOOPER Gen. Ticket Ag't.

JAS. CLIFFORD.

WATERLOO, IND.

Keeps constantly on hand the best and choicest brands of all kinds of

Wines and Liquors,

Cigars, Tobaccos, &c.

He also has, in connection with the above a first class

BILLIARD HALL.

To our citizens and the traveling public, we would say that this is the popular resort at W oo. First door south of the railroad

---

GOLD. Great chance to make money. If you can't get gold you can get greenbacks. We need a person in every town to take subscriptions for the largest, cheapest and best illustrated family publication in the world. Any one can become a successful agent. The most elegant works of art given free to subscribers. The price is so low that almost every body subscribes. One Agent reports making over $150 in a week. A lady agent reports taking over 400 subscribers in ten days. All who engage make money fast. You can devote all your time to the business, or only your spare time. You need not be away from home over night. You can do it as well as others. Full directions and terms free. Elegant and expensive outfit free. If you want profitable work send us your address at once. It costs nothing to try the business. No one who engages fails to make great pay. Address "The People's Journal," Portland Maine.

Dr. A. G. OLIN'S Private Hospital, 187 East Washington St., Chicago, Ills, for the cure of all Diseases of a Private nature, resulting from early abuses or infection of either Sex. Seminal Weakness producing Emissions, Loss of Memory, Impaired Sight, Lost Manhood or Impotency, Nervous Debility, permanently cured; diseases of the Bladder, Kidneys, Liver, Lungs, Asthma, Catarrh, Piles, all Chronic Diseases, and DISEASES OF FEMALES, yield to his treatment. Dr. Olin has had a life-long experience, and cures where others fail. He is a graduate of the Reformed School, uses no mercury, has the largest practice in the U. S. LADIES requiring treatment with private home and board, call or write. Every convenience for patients. Send fifty cents for sample of Rubber Goods and circular of important information by express. DR. OLIN'S Female Pills, $5 per Box. Consultation free.

MARRIAGE GUIDE [illegible] pages. Secrets & information for the young and middle aged of both Sexes, on all diseases of a private nature. Valuable advice to the married and those contemplating marriage. How to be healthy and truly happy in the married relation. Everybody should get this book. Price 50 cents, to any address, sealed.

A PHYSIOLOGICAL

View of Marriage!

WOMAN AND MARRIAGE A Guide to Wedlock and confidential Treatise on the duties of marriage and the causes that unfit for it; the secrets of Reproduction and the Diseases of Women. A book for private, considerate reading. 260 pages, price 50 cts.

A PRIVATE MEDICAL ADVISER! On all disorders of a Private Nature arising from Self Abuse, Excesses, or Secret Diseases, with the best means of cure, 224 large pages, price 50 cts.

A CLINICAL LECTURE on the above diseases and those of the Throat and Lungs, Catarrh, Rupture, the Opium Habit, &c., price 10 cts.

Either book sent postpaid on receipt of price; or all three, containing 500 pages, beautifully illustrated, for 75 cts. Address DR. BUTTS, No. 12 N. 8th St. St. Louis, Mo.

CHRONIC Diseases Cured. New paths marked out by that plainest of all books—"Plain Home Talk and Medical Common sense,"—nearly 1,000 pages, 200 illustrations by Dr. E. B. FOOTE, of 120 Lexington Avenue, N. Y. Purchasers of this book are at liberty to consult its author in person or by mail free. Price by mail $3.25 for the standard edition, or $1.25 for the popular edition, which contains all the same matter and illustrations. Contents free. Agents wanted. MURRAY HILL PUBLISHING CO., 129 East 28th St. N. Y.

$45 PREMIUM WATCH AND CHAIN—a stem-winder, Free with every order. Outfit free. J. B. Gaylord & Co., Chicago, Ill.

$3 GOLD PLATED WATCHES. Cheapest in the known world. Sample Watch Free to Agents. Address, A. COULTER & Co., Chicago.

OPIUM and Morphine Habit absolutely and speedily cured. Painless; no publicity. Send stamp for particulars. Dr. CARLTON, 187 Washington St., Chicago, Ill.

$2500 A YEAR. Agents wanted. Business legitimate. Particulars free. Address J. WORTH & CO., St. Louis, Mo.

Recorders Office

THE AUBURN COURIER.

Devoted to the Interests of the Democratic Party and to the Collection of Local and General News.

Volume 8. AUBURN, DeKALB COUNTY INDIANA, JANUARY 3rd, 1878. Number 1.

The Auburn Weekly Courier

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY BY

TOM. C. MAYS.

One Year.........$2. | Six Months......$1.

Advertising Rates.

Space.	1 m.	3 m.	6 m.	1 y.
1 Square	2 00	4 00	7 00	12 00
¼ Column.........	6 00	12 00	18 00	20 00
½ Column.........	10 00	18 00	30 00	60 00
1 Column.........	15 00	30 00	50 00	100 00

Local Notices 10 cents per line, first insertion 5cents each insertion thereafter. Business cards give Dollars.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY

TERMS OF COURT.

COURTS IN DEKALB CO.	COURTS IN STEUBEN CO
th Monday in February	1st Monday in Febr'y
rd Monday in May.	4th Monday in April.
th Monday in Septem'r	1st Monday in Sept'r
rd Monday in Decem'r	4th Monday in Nov'r.

ATTORNEYS.

H. C. PETERSON,

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public. Office over Davis' hardware store, Auburn, Ind.

J. W. RICKEL,

ATTORNEY AT LAW Auburn, Ind. Special attention given to collections. Office over First National Bank.

A. F. PINCHIN

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public, Butler, DeKalb Co., Ind. Insurance and real estate business promptly attended to.

GUY PLUM

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public. Office in the Court House. Special attention paid to the collection of claims. Also agent for Home Insurance Company.

D. D. MOODY. F. T. HOFFMAN.

Moody and Hoffman,

ATTORNEYS AT LAW. Office in Odd Fellows' building, opposite Court House, Auburn, Ind.

BEST and McCLELLAN.

ATTORNEYS AT LAW, Waterloo, Ind. Will practice in the Courts of DeKalb & Steuben counties. Liberal Advances Made on all first-class Claims left in our hands for collection.

E. A. FRANKS. O. S. HUBBELL.

Franks & Hubbell,

ATTORNEYS at law. will practice in DeKalb and adjoining counties. Special attention given to the collection of claims, settlements of decendent estates and conveyance. Office on Broadway opposite Haskins & Son's livery stable, Butler, Ind.

R. WES. M'BRIDE, J. L. MORLAN, W. H. LEAS

McBRIDE, MORLAN and LEAS

ATTORNEYS AT LAW, NOTARIES PUBLIC, COLLECTING AND INSURANCE AGENCY Office over Fisher's Clothing Store, corner of Wayne and Marion streets, Waterloo, Ind. Will practice in all parts of the State. Especial Attention given to collections in DeKalb, Steuben, LaGrange and Noble counties.

DANIEL Z. HOFFMAN.

NOTARY PUBLIC, writer of deeds, mortgages, &c., making abstracts and looking up titles, attending to collecting. Also agent for Niagara Fire Insurance Company. Office with County Recorder, Auburn, Ind.

PHYSICIANS.

DR. J. A. COWAN,

PHYSICIAN & SURGEON, Auburn, Ind. Office on Main street, over Central Grocery.

DR. T. G. MATHENY.

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, office up stairs in McIntyre's block, Auburn, Ind. All calls promptly attended to.

W. S. ALLEN.

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, Office West of Court House, on Main Street, over Eldridge's store. Same office lately occupied by Dr. Cowan.

Dr. T. J. Dills,

Especial attention given to Diseases of the EYE and EAR. Rooms 1 and 2 Odd Fellows' building. Office hours—9:30 to 12 a. m.; 1 to 3 p. m. 7 to 8 p. m. Fort Wayne, Ind.

DR. TRITCH,

HOMEOPATHIC PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON Special attention given to Surgery and Chronic diseases. Office in Case's Block, Auburn Indiana.

DR. S. B. JOHNSTON.

DENTIST, WATERLOO, INDIANA, Does all work in the line of his profession at as low figures as possible. Special attention given to gold filling and making new teeth. All work warranted.

W. T. KNAPP, M. D.

Formerly of Chicago, Ill.,

HOMŒOPATHIC PHYSICIAN,

AUBURN, INDIANA.

Office at Residence, Ralston Property Seventh Street.

Special attention given to

CHRONIC DISEASES

-AND-

DISEASES OF CHILDREN.

Calls promptly attended, day or night city or country. Consultation in German or English.

HOTELS.

BUTT'S HOTEL,

FORMERLY THE BIGLER HOUSE. JOHN BUTT & A. B. RICHARDS, Proprietors. Waterloo, Ind. Free omnibus to and from all trains Good sample rooms on first floor.

Central House,

MR. M. C. MARKEL, Prop. Corner Main and Seventh streets. Good Sample Rooms for Drummers.

TREMONT HOUSE,

WASHINGTON, D. C. Accommodates three hundred guests. Terms $1.50 per day. Located corner Second street and Indiana Avenue, in full view of the Capitol City Hall.

F. P. HILL.

SANDS HOUSE.

COR. WABASH AVE. & MADISON ST., CHICAGO, ILL. New House, elegantly furnished. Only $2.00 per day.

GEO. M. PALMER, Late of City Hotel,} Clerk. O. SANDS, Proprietor

BILL BRITTON

THE DRAY MAN

Will attend promptly to all orders for

DRAYING AND HAULING.

Rattling good teams and reasonab

CARPETS

ELLSWORTH, ANDREW & Co.,

Offer a large and choice stock of Carpets in all the newest designs.

Body Brussels Carpets,
Tapestry Carpets,
Ingrain Carpets,
COTTON CHAIN CARPETS,
HEMP CARPETS,
RAG CARPETS.
Terry's Reps, Cretonnes, Lace Curtains, Shades, Wall Paper, Stair Rods.

OIL CLOTHS,

Mattings, Rugs and Mats, Druggets

And all goods pertaining to the carpet and upholestry business.

Lambrequins

A Specialty.

Prices Low to Compete with the Times

ELLSWORTH, ANDREW & CO.
26 East Berry Street,
Fort Wayne, Indiana

LAWSON'S CURATIVE

FOR THE CURE OF

RHEUMATISM AND NEURALGIA.

This marvelous preparation has cured hundreds of the most distressing cases of Chronic Rheumatism and Neuralgia, even when all other remedies have failed. It is fast becoming the

Acknowledged Antidote

for these diseases and can be relied upon by sufferers to relieve them of their pains and effect a permanent cure.

Do Not Give Up

your case as hopeless and settle down to the conviction that no medicine will help you; all we ask is a fair trial of the CURATIVE, and that you bear in mind that the nature of these diseases require persistent and faithful application to insure a perfect cure. In every community where the CURATIVE has been placed will be found many witnesses who will testify to what it has done for them.

Diphtheria, Sore Throat, Burns, Scalds, Bruises, Sprains, Wounds, Cuts, Chilblains, Inflammation, Headache, Toothache, Catarrh, Dyspepsia, Sour Stomach,

can positively be cured by the free use of the CURATIVE. Send to us for testimonials if you have any doubts.

Sold by all Druggists.

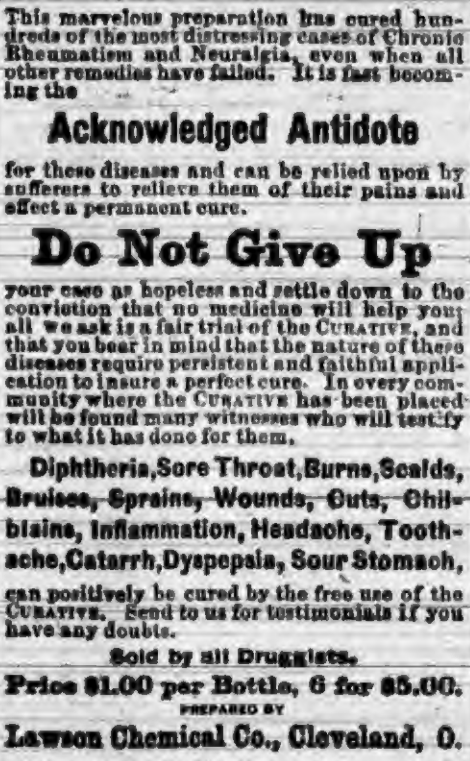
Price $1.00 per Bottle, 6 for $5.00.

PREPARED BY

Lawson Chemical Co., Cleveland, O.

For sale by F. E. Davenport.

HURRAH.



A MAN CRAZY

Selling

SEWING MACHINES!

For 30 DOLLARS

Go and see them.

G. H. YESBERA, AGT

FLORA TEMPLE.

From the New York Sun we take the sketch:

Flora Temple, the world-renown trotter and the fastest on the turf while she was in active sporting service, died last evening at the stock-farm of her owner, Mr. Aristides Welch, near Chestnut Hill. She was foaled in 1845, and bred by Mr. Samuel Welch, in Oneida County, New York. Her sire was One-eyed Hunter, who was by Kentucky Hunter, and her dam was Madam Temple, who was got by a spotted Arabian horse owned at that time by Mr. Horace Terry and brought from Duchess County, New York. When four years of age Flora, being regarded as wilful and unserviceable, was sold by her owner, a Mr. Tracy, to Mr. william H. Congdon, of Smyrna, for $13. After passing through several hands for remarkable small prices she was purchased for $350 by Mr. George E. Perrin, of New York, and while with him she became a true stepper. Her first regular appearance on the turf was at the Union Course, Long Island, in September, 1850, defeating Whitehall and three others in 2:52, 2:55, 2:52 and 2:49. In 1853 the most important part of her career began. In her first race at Hunting Park Black Douglas defeated her, but she turned the tables in two subsequent races. Her only defeats were by Tacony Black Douglass and Green Mountain Maid, but her victories included seven over Tacony alone. The next year Green Mountain Maid beat her once. The gray mare Sontag defeated her in 1855, and she lost a twenty-mile heat against time through casting a shoe. After defeating Tacony, Ethan Allen and Lancet in her contests in the next two years, and having attained a 2:24 record, Mr. William McDonald, a wealthy Baltimorean, bought her for $8,000, and thirteen victories crowned the year's record. In 1859 she defated Ethan Allen and the great California mare Princess. The latter won the second race, but Flora never allowed any other revenge. In the race at Kalamazoo, Mich., for $2,000, against Princess, she made the astonishing time for those days of 2:19¾, and after another victory over Princess and Ike Cook, and at the Union Course, November 21st, in harness, against George M. Patchen under saddle, made 2:28 and 2:28, the third heat going to Patchen because the mare crossed him. The concluding heat was run after dark, and although Flora won, it was not given her. The postponed race for the next day was not run. She defeated Ethan Allen at Union Course November the 24th. Her victory in the spring of 1860 over Patchen at Union Course in 2:21, 2:24, 2:21¼ was said to be her best. Patchen won the two-mile race at Union Course, but she beat him in the one-mile and two-mile races at Philadelphia, and again at Union Course, and also defeated Brown Dick at Fonda. On August 28th, she won a $1,500 race over Patchen at Boston, and also beat Ethan Allen at Kalamazoo, but failed to beat Dutchman's time afterward at New York. She then made a tour with Patchen. In 1861 John Morgan was the only competitor who offered, and he was beaten in one-mile and two-mile races, the best time being 2:24¼. The Government confiscated her in 1861 because of her owner's secession sympathies, and her trotting days were ended. McDonald died in 1864, and Mr. Welch of Chestnut Hill, bought her for $8,000, and her last public appearance was at Dubois' track, when General Grant reviewed the great trotters. Her hind legs failing her soon after, she was thenceforth kept for breeding.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician retired from active practice, having had placed in his hands by an East Indian missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitas, Catarrh, Asthama, and all throat and lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for general debility and all nervous complaints, after having thouroughly tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, feels it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. The receipt will be sent free of charge, to all who desire it, with full directions for preparing and successfully using. Address with stamp naming this paper, Dr. J. C. Stone, 44 North Ninth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Astonishing Success.

It is the duty of every person who has used Boschee's German Syrup to let its wonderful qualities be known to their friends in curing consumption, severe coughs, croup, asthma, pneumonia, and in fact all throat and lung diseases. No person can use it without immediate relief. Three doses will relieve any case, and we consider it the duty of all Druggists to recommend it to the poor dying consumptive, at least to try one bottle, as 40,000 dozen bottles were sold last year, and no one case where it failed was reported. Such a medicine as the German Syrup cannot be too widely known. Ask your Druggist about it. Sample bottles to try sold at 10 cents. Regular size 75 cents. Sold by F. E. Davenport.

BEECHER'S BRAVADO.

The virtuous Mr. Beecher seems to be gradually shaking off the old fashioned doctrine of the Congregational body of which he is a member, and striking out in his accustomed sensational way. All doctrine hangs lightly upon his sholders, and it has long been easier to tell from his public utterences what he does not believe than what he does. He indulged in a vast deal of swearing to-day on the doctrines of the Trinity and of hell.

Speaking of the Trinity, he said he believed there were three persons united in one God-head; but if any one should ask him why he believed it, he should tell him he did not know anything about it, only that it was easier to believe that which he thought concided with the doctrines of the New Testament than to deny it. Othodoxy says that men must believe in the Trinity or they can not come into the Church. That is called orthodoxy, but he called it heathenism.

"It is not an easy thing,' said Mr. Beecher, "for an honest, conservative man to know just what to preach. A man who values morality, and who has the good of his fellow-man at heart, can not be careless as to the things he ought to teach. It was said that Adam was created perfect. It was also said that Adam sinned, and that in consequence of that sin the whole human race fell. The human race had existed on the earth for thousands and thousands of years, and had gone on propagating and multiplying until all the waves that had rolled in upon the shore during those centuries did not contain drops enough, nor the sands of the sea particles enough, nor all the figures of the arithmetic numbers enough, to compute the preface, to say nothing of the great history of the human race. The numbers of the human race were actually beyond computation, and for thousands and thousands and thousands of years they had been born into the world, had lived and struggled, and finally died and gone—where? If you tell me that they have all gone to Heaven, my answer will be that such a sweeping of mud into Heaven would defile its purity, and I can not accept that. If you tell me that they have gone to hell, then I swear by the Lord Jesus Christ, whom I have sworn to worship forever, that you will make an Infidle of me.

The doctrine that God has been for thosands of years peopling this earth with human beings during a period three-fourths of which was not illuminated by an alter or a courch, and in places where a vast population of those people are yet without light, is to transform the Almighty into a monster more hideous than Saten himself; and I swear by all that is sacred that I will never worship Saten, though he should appear dressed in royal robes and seated on the throne of Jehovah. Men may say, 'You will not go to heaven' A heaven presided over by such a demon as that, who has been peopling this world with millions of human beings, and then sweeping them off into hell—not like dead flies, but without taking the trouble to kill them—and gloating and laughing over their eternal misery, is not such a heaven as I want to go to. The doctrine is too horrible. I can not believe it, and I won't. They say the saints in heaven are so happy that they do not mind the torments of the damned in hell. But what sort of Saints must they be who could be happy while looking down upon the horrors of the bottomless pit? And for the blood of Christ I denounce this doctrine. By the wounds in His hands and in His side I abhor it. By His groans and agony I abhor and denounce it as that hideous nightmare of theology."

Safe—Speedy—Sure.

The rapidity and certainty with which Dr. Morris' Syrup of Tar, Wild Cherry and Horehound cures diseases of the respiratory Organs and its reliability as a remedy for consumption long ago secured for it a foremost rank among medicine of its class. It is in fact the recognised specific for throat and bronchial disorders. It promptly checks a cough, no matter how long standing, and affords great relief in cases of asthama. It should not be mistaken for a mere palliation, since it not only affords immediate relief, but also removes all traces of the malady. It is a specific for croup. Trial size 10 cents. Large sizes 50 cents and $1.00. For sale by F. E. Davenport. Also Agents of Prof. Parker's Pleasant Worm Syrup which never fails. Pleasant to take, and requires no physic. Price 25 cents.

EXECUTOR'S SALE.

Notice is hereby given that the undersigned, Executor of the late will and Testament of Hugh Watt, Senior deceased, will offer for sale at public auction, at the late residence of the Testator, one mile south-east of Auburn, Indiana, on Saturday, January 5th, 1878, the personal property of said estate, consisting of horses, cows, one two horse wagon, and new open buggy, plows, and other farming implements, hay, and other articles too numerous to mention. Terms, all sums of three dollars and under, cash, all sums over three do lars a credit of nine months will be given, the purchaser giving his note with approved security waving valuation and appraisement laws with interest.

—GUY PLUM, Executor.

A SENATOR'S SENTIMENTS.

From the Indianapolis Sentinel, December 29th

Senator McDonald having returned home from Washington, a Sentinel reporter called upon him at his law office yesterday afternoon, and after paying his respects, had a long talk with the distinguished gentleman upon the proceedings of the Senate during the extra session and upon public affairs generally. The Senator appears to be enjoying the best of health, and conversed very freely upon the numerous topics introduced. Upon being asked what he thought of the work of the Senate during the extra session, he said that as the session had been called only for the purpose of making up the deficiencies in the military and naval appropriations the Senate had necessarily to wait until the house had taken the action upon those matters, and therefore much of the time was consumed in executive business, and chiefly in consideration of the nominations sent in by the President. This resulted in the rejection of the nominations for two of the most important offices in New York.

ATTITUDE TOWARD THE PRESIDENT.

Senator McDonald, in reply to a question asked by the reporter, said that the President was practically without support among the Republican Senators. True, there were a few in his course out of party spirit, but the majority was arrayed against his policy. As was natural, the few were gradually coming over to the many, and the tendency was toward an united opposition towards the President's policy, whatever their personal differences might be. The object was evidently to force the President to an out and out Republican administration, and to shape it to suit their partisian wishes. The President however, had manifested no disposition to yield to them. When asked whether there was much rivalry between Conkling and Blain, Senator McDonald said they worked in unison in opposition to the policy of the administration, whatever their personal feelings toward each other might be.

THE CONTESTED SEATS.

Senator McDonald reviewed the action of the Senate in regard to the contested seats. He said that there was not much discussion over the admission of Eustis, as many of the Republicans had admitted his right to the seat, after the vote upon the Pinchbak case, by which a vacancy was declared. Eustis having been elected by the legislature which was recognized as the lawful one both by the State and National Governments, there was a decided majority in favor of his claim. The contest over the admission of Kellogg and Butler was graphically described by Senator McDonald. The allowance of the vote on the admission of Kellogg was in no sense a compromise—the Democrats were obliged to yield to a necessity. Grover was away and was paired off with Blaine. At the end of the extra session the "pair" would be off. Blain could get back, but Grover couldn't. This would give the Republicans a majority of one at the opening of the regular session. Therefore, in order to be sure of seating Butler the Demcrats were forced to push the cases through before the end of the extra session.

THE SILVER BILL IN THE SENATE,

When asked what the probable action of the Senate would be regarding the financial issues, Senator McDonald said that he thought the silver bill, as amended in the Senate, would pass that body. The amendment eliminated the fee coinage clause, and permits the coinage of from $2,000,000 to $4,000,000 per month. Senator McDonald said that all the Democratic Senators except Kernan, Eaton, Bayard, Davis, of West Virginia, Hill, Lamar and Salisbury would vote for the bill as amended. He believed it would be passed to a vote and passed next month, after a short time had been allowed for its discussion by the eastern Senators. Senator McDonald believed in the wisdom of the amendments to the bill, saying that the amount of coinage named was about the capacity of the mints. He did not favor free coinage, as the profit of the coinage should be made by the Government instead of by individuals, the difference in the market value of the coin and its face value being 8 cents This would result in a profit of about $5,000,000 annually to the government, an amount worth saving. Again, should the permission of unlimited or free coinage raise the value of the silver dollar to par or above it, it would defeat the main object of the bill, as the holders of the bullion would have no object in going to the trouble of having it coined, as it would be worth as much without the stamp as with it. This is the substance of the views advanced by the Senator in the course of somewhat extended remarks upon the subject. Senator McDonald expressed himself as strongly in favor of the restoration of the silver dollar and making it a legal tender. He eulogized it at some length as the people's money, and best adapted to the needs of ordinary business as a medium of exchange. The proposed coinage would afford immense relief in the channels of trade.

THE RESUMPTION ACT.

Senator McDonald said that the resumption act would be repealed by the Senate. He thought it should never have passed, and that this became more appearent as the date for it to go into force drew near. He named among those who would vote for the repeal of it both Senators from Ohio, the Senators from Illinois and the Senators from Indiana. "I shall vote for it," said Mr. McDonald, "and so will Mr. Voorhees, of course." It would be opposed by the Senators from California and Oregon, as well as the eastern Senators. The chief support of the repealing act would come from the Senators from the northwest and the Mississippi Valley. A great deal of weight was attached to the support from the Senator from Ohio. Senator McDonald said that the repeal of the resumption act was of far more importance to the country than the passage of the silver bill.

CONSERVATIVE VIEWS.

Senator McDonald said that the repeal of the resumption act would remove the apprehension entertained by business men of the individual and material ruin which would ensue from a decleration of resumption and a failure to resume. He thought the country wanted time to get into a sound and healthy condition. The restoration of the silver dollar would furnish a basis upon which to build a sound monetary system. While opposed any contraction of the paper currency, because it would greatly increase the burdens of the debtor class, he opposed to any further issue of greenbacks at present. He said that while the basis of all stable and sound systems of finance must be the coin standard, yet there must be of course, above this a system of credit. He thought it was for the future to decide what the nature of this superstructure of credit should be—whether greenbacks or some other form of currency.

Senator McDonald said that he was decidedly opposed to making the national bank note system perpetual, as it would necessarily make a perpetual national debt which would keep the country in the grasp of the capitalists.

AS TO GREENBACKS.

Senator McDonald appeared disinclined to believe that the greenbackers would be satisfied to join hand with the Democrats upon the platform he had recommended. He said that he had never seriously entertained any thought of the adoption of the ultra greenback policy. He argued that the power of a currency depended, not upon its quantity, but upon its quality. A country maintaining commercial relations with foreign nations must, unless it wishes its currency discredited, have a monetary system founded on the standard of value which is universally recognized as such. To issue an exclusively paper currency it must bind itself to an internal policy, and even then the system will be subject, whenever there is an apparent depression, to the vice of further inflation, which would be repeated until even its own people would be repudiate it. Senator McDonald thought that the theory of inflation if carried out at this time would brighten up things for a while and give hope to the debtor class, yet in the end it would entail widesprerd and general disaster.

NOTICE.

NOTICE is hereby given that at the stated communication of Cedar Encampment No. 65, I. O. O. F. on Friday evening January 11th, 1878, there will be elected three Trustees to serve one year, or until their successors in office are elected and qualified. By order of the Lodge.

S. T. GALLOWAY, Scribe.

MOODY & HOFFMAN, Attorneys.

STATE OF INDIANA }
DEKALB COUNTY }

In the De Kalb Circuit Court, February term, 1878.

Lewis Hoffmand }
vs. } Complaint.
John W. Garvey. }

NOW comes the plaintiff by Moody & Hoffman, his attorneys, and files an affidavit that said defendant, John W. Garvey, is not a resident of the State of Indiana.

Notice is, therefore given said defendant that unless he appear on the second day of the next term of the De Kalb Circuit Court, to be holden on the 4th Monday of February, A. D. 1877, at the court house in Auburn, in said county and state, and answer or demur to the complaint herein, the same will be heard and determined in his absence.

Witness, my name and the seal of said court affixed at Auburn, this 22nd day of December, 1877. GEO. H. K. MOSS, Clerk.

L. J. BLAIR, Attorney.

STATE OF INDIANA, }
DE KALB COUNTY. }

In the De Kalb Circuit Court, February term, 1878.

Almira Dunford }
vs. } Divorce.
John Dunford, }

NOW comes the plaintiff by L. J. Blair, her attorney, and files an affidavit that said defendant is not a resident of the State of Indiana.

Notice is, therefore, given said defendant that unless he be and appear on the second day of the next term of the De Kalb Circuit Court, to be holden on the fourth Monday of February, A. D. 1878, at the court house in Auburn, in said county and state, and answer or demur to the complaint, the same will be heard and determined in his absence.

Witness, my name and the seal of said court affixed at Auburn, this 19th day of December, 1877. GEO. H. K. MOSS, Clerk.

AUBURN COURIER.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 3, 1878.

THE NEWS CONDENSED.

THE EAST.

THE Maryland Court of Appeals has rendered an opinion denying the right of Charles Taylor, a colored citizen of Maryland, to be admitted as an attorney to the court.

PRESIDENT HAYES visited New York last week, and was tendered a grand reception by the Union League Club.

A COMPANY has been organized in New York for the construction of an underground railroad in that city. A London capitalist is at the head of the enterprise....A pleasant incident of President Hayes' visit to the city of New York last week was the formal opening by him of the American Museum of Natural History, the corner-stone of which was laid, in 1876 by President Grant. The ceremonies were very interesting, and were assisted at by a large gathering of New York's most public-spirited citizens and the Presidents of Yale and Harvard universities. The President was also present at the annual New England dinner, and made a brief speech.

THE Treasurer of the New York Board of Excise Commissioners has skipped out with some $60,000 of public funds....A number of claims for riot-damages by incendiary fires and stealing have been heard by a commission raised for the purpose by the authorities of Allegheny county, Penn. The amount allowed on 124 claims is $102,191. A large number of claimants are yet to be heard, and the additional allowance is expected to be heavy.

THE North American Review, so long published in Boston, will hereafter be published in New York....Netter & Co., prominent New York bankers, have failed....Charles E. Johnson, a wealthy young man living in Brooklyn, attempted to murder his young wife the other day, by shooting her with a pistol. Domestic infelicity was the cause. Johnson is a nephew of Henry Ward Beecher.

THE WEST.

A SHORT time ago the town of Caliente, in the southern portion of California, were raided by a party of Mexicans and native Californians. A number of horses, and a lot of provisions, dry-goods, and some money, was taken. Five of them were captured in the Tenjon mountains and taken to Bakersfield. A few nights ago a body of men, embracing a number of the best citizens of Bakersfield, forced their way into the jail, took the prisoners into the District Court room, impaneled a jury, tried and convicted them of horse-stealing, and hung them in the jail-yard. The Coroner's jury next morning found a verdict, "Hung by parties unknown."...Chicago is now without a race-course. Dexter Park having been converted into a lumber-yard.

ADVICES from Fort Lincoln report that an expedition is forming there, consisting of the Seventh Cavalry and Twentieth Infantry, to proceed north and work their way between Sitting Bull and the British line, with the view of capturing the wily savage and his band......A large band of hostile savages are raiding through the Black Hills and adjacent country......A war with the Bannock Indians is threatened in Idaho Territory. ......Kate Noonan, who shot and killed W. H. Sidle, the teller of the First National Bank, of Minneapolis, has been acquitted on the ground of insanity. In the first trial the jury disagreed, and in the second the session lasted two days and three nights before a verdict was reached......Advices from California report that the State has been visited by rains heavy enough to insure an abundant crop.

THE house of Thomas Terrill, near Blackhawk, Col., was burned one night last week. Four persons perished in the flames—Mrs. Terrill, Johnnie Terrill, William J. Terrill and Robert Terrill.

THE chief amusement event of Chicago is the production of the magnificent spectacle of "Antony and Cleopatra," at Haverly's Theater, with Miss Rose Eytinge in the rôle of Cleopatra. The play is drawing crowded houses.

ARIZONA dispatches report the extermination of a band of thieves who had been robbing the mails and preying upon wagon trains in that region. A portion of the band were pursued by a detachment of cavalry, under Lieutenants Rucker and Toney, who continued the chase until they struck a permanent camp of more than thirty lodges. After a gallop through the village the troops counted fifteen dead brigands, and captured a number of horses and a large quantity of stolen goods.

THE SOUTH.

A DISPATCH from Mesilla, N. M., dated Dec. 22, says: "The Texas rangers who surrendered at San Elizario, having gathered reinforcements, started yesterday to recapture the arms taken by the Mexicans. It is reported that the forces encountered, and a fight followed, in which Lieut. Mortimer, of the regular army, was killed, and two soldiers captured, and that the invaders took a cannon from the detachment of United States troops. A portion of the Mexicans then crossed the Rio Grande, whither they were followed by Texas rangers. Lively work may be expected at any time. Gen. Hatch, with two batteries of artillery and one Gatling gun, has arrived at the scene of disorder."

A NEGRO attempted to murder a grocer named Denton, at East Hickman, Ky., by cleaving his skull with an ax, with the evident intention of robbing him. The would-be murderer was caught and summarily hung by a mob of citizens....A Memphis detective named Pride, while half asleep, and imagining a burglar about the premises, fatally shot his wife and child the other night.

POLITICAL.

THE Indiana Democratic Committee has issued a call for a meeting of the Democratic State Convention at Indianapolis, on the 28th of February.

WASHINGTON dispatches say Secretary Evarts authorizes the announcement to be made that the differences are about to be healed that have divided the President and the Republicans in Congress, and that the restoration of harmony is near at hand.

GENERAL.

THREE murderers expiated their crimes on the gallows on Friday, Dec. 21. Henry Norfolk was hanged at Annapolis, Md., for the murder of his wife; John McNally, alias Van Dyke, was executed at Canton, N. Y., for a similar crime, and Sam Mills (colored) was choked to death at Elko, Nev., for the killing of James Finnerty....Flora Temple, the once-famous trotting mare, is dead. She was 32 years old.

A TELEGRAM from Mesilla, New Mexico, says: "Texas rangers started from El Paso to recover their arms, taken from them by the invaders. Arriving at Socorro they met an armed body of Mexicans, whereupon a fight commenced. Four of the invaders were killed and one Texas ranger wounded. Gen Hatch, who is in the advance, has sent back for more troops."....According to Washington dispatches there is little danger of an international difficulty on account of the Rio Grande troubles. It is announced that the Mexican troops sent forward by Diaz have promptly co-operated with the United States forces in the preservation of order......Business embarrassments: George Baker, banker, Chester, Pa., liabilities $159,000, assets (on paper) $192,000; Riggs Bros., bankers, Saybrook, Ill.; the Taunton (Mass.) Savings Bank, liabilities $1,353,753, scheduled assets $1,404,513; the Dale Manufacturing Company, owners of the largest silk mill in Patterson, N. J., liabilities $400,000, all secured but $20,000; the C. F. Keatly Stocking Company, Kankakee, Ill.; F. J. Richard, a prominent farmer of De Kalb county, Ill., liabilities $40,000; O. De Blna, tinware dealer, Montreal, Canada, liabilities $80,000, assets nil....Clement Blunt, one of the oldest and most honored and trusted officers of the engineer corps, is under arrest for malfeasance, and is to be tried by court-martial.

THE TURKO-RUSSIAN WAR.

A LONDON telegram of the 22d says: "A fresh levy of 300,000 men has been ordered by Turkey. The Russian advance is to be resisted to the bitter end. The Turkish policy is to hold every position until driven out, but not to leave large forces to be captured in fortified places. If the Russian armies can be held in check until the new levy is mobilized, Turkey hopes to take offensive and obtain England's assistance.

THE CZAR has returned to St. Petersburg. He was received by the populace with extraordinary demonstrations of enthusiasm....The cable dispatches are contradictory regarding the progress of the peace movement in Constantinople, but there is no conflict of statement as to the critical condition of affairs in that city. Provisions have increased enormously in price, in consequence of the heavy depreciation of the value of Turkish paper money, and great distress prevails among the lower classes. If the price of food advances still more, there are grounds for the apprehension of a serious uprising of the famishing thousands....Germany and Austria have replied to the Turkish note, that it is not practicable to mediate on the basis therein contained.

TELEGRAMS from St. Petersburg say that the Czar will return to Bulgaria in a few weeks, and that an attempt will then be made to "march through to Constantinople as the Germans did to Paris."....The Turkish prisoners captured at Plevna were caught in a terrible snow-storm while en route to the Roumanian capital, and a number of them were frozen to death......A dispatch from Constantinople says the Servians attempted to carry Yatre by assault, and were repulsed with immense loss. They were pursued by the garrison to Yavor, about five miles distant. To offset this defeat, it is stated that the Servian troops have taken Akpalanka, on the Sofia road, after eight hours' fighting...... The Sultan has held a grand review of troops in Constantinople. Great enthusiasm was manifested by everybody....It is stated that Turkey is preparing to concede the free passage of the Dardanelles, which meets with opposition from England....A cessation of the snow-storms in Armenia is reported, and it is expected that the Russians will take advantage of the fine weather to complete the investment and attempt the capture of Erzeroum....Drifting ice in the Danube has destroyed the Russian bridge at Ibrail, over which the supplies for Zimmerman's army in the Dobrudscha have to be hauled.

A CORRESPONDENT, writing from Plevna, states that when the Turks made their sortie they left thousands of sick and wounded starving and unattended. These unfortunates remained in this state three days, and hundreds of them died. Those killed in the battles were unburied many days after the surrender of the place. In short, Plevna is described as one vast charnel-house.

GENERAL FOREIGN NEWS.

A PARIS dispatch announces that in the Court of Cessation the Advocate-General announced the adjournment, sine die, of the consideration of all cases arising from prosecutions of booksellers, newsdealers and hawkers instituted subsequent to the 16th of May. This is put down as a back-down on the part of MacMahon.

A TELEGRAM from London says: "Capt Wiggins, an Englishman, just returned from the Jenesei and Obi rivers in Siberia, reports that route as practicable to the North pole, with an open sea all the way. He also reports that there is an immense commerce into Siberia from China. Capt. Wiggins, with his schooner of forty tons' burden, sailed from the capital of Siberia to St. Petersburg, and anchored before the Winter Palace, where his vessel was visited by the imperial family and by great crowds of people. Steps are to be taken to organize a line of trading steamers, and thus open to the world the marvelous timber, grain, and mineral resources of Siberia. Seven tons of gold were taken from one mine this year. Wheat equal to that from California is sold at $15 a ton. Beef is 1 cent a pound. There are telegraphs everywhere, and the large cities and fine people exhibit the great spirit of enterprise that Russia has carried into the country."....The Dutch steamer Friesland, from Java for Rotterdam, has been lost, it is believed, with all hands, off Cape Finisterre. The crew numbered about fifty. She carried no passengers" ....A Paris dispatch says: "Proceedings in the Councils General confirm the belief that the recent elections turned the scale in favor of the republicans. The Left have a majority in forty-five Councils instead of thirty-six, as formerly."

THE reconstruction of the internal administration proceeds apace in France, under the auspices of the new Ministry. The reinstatement of all the municipal councils dismissed since the 16th of May has been ordered; prosecutions for press and publication offenses have been dismissed, and the triumphant republicans are gathering the spoils of victory in all directions.

A SERIOUS Indian war is reported in the State of Sonora, Mexico. The Sonora troops lately attacked the hostiles, and were badly whipped, losing twenty-seven killed and a number wounded.....The departments of Alsace and Lorraine, since their forced dismemberment from France, have been treated by the Germans as a conquered people. They have become weary of a military government, and sigh for the return of civil and constitutional authority. To this end meetings have been held, resulting in the appointment of a Provincial Committee. This body met in Strasbourg, the other day, and passed a resolution requesting the Emperor to grant to the conquered provinces their own constitution as a Federal State and a representative in the Federal Council of the empire......The Edinburg Chamber of Commerce has memorialized the British Government to continue its neutrality in the present war.

Six Children Arraigned for Murder.

The Supreme Court room in Columbia, S. C., presented a spectacle of peculiar and painful interest a few days ago, six little children of both sexes being present under a charge of murder. The eldest of these children has not yet reached the age of 11 years, and two of the number are girls. Their names are Harmon Fallow, Henry Fallow, Robert Fallow, Mary Fallow, Anna Fallow and William Ellis. The first five named are the children of the same parents—respectable people of Edgefield county—and the last named is an adopted child in the same family. The circumstances of the killing which caused their appearance in the court were these: The children were at work picking cotton in a field near their father's house about a week ago, when a negro youth named Willis Asbill, about 18 years of age, who had been discharged from Mr. Fallow's service and ordered to keep off the premises, joined them and commenced ill-treating them, and interfering with their work in various ways. Finally he went so far as to strike one of the boys with a stick. The resentment of the little laborers culminated at this affront, and they at once made a combined attack upon their tormentor with stones, sticks and knives, which they employed with such effect as to inflict severe injury upon the head of Asbill, which, as is alleged, brought upon him an attack of cerebro-spinal meningitis, resulting in death a day or two ago. The children were at once arrested on a charge of murder and brought to Columbia, where their case came up in the Supreme Court on application for a writ of habeas corpus. After a touching argument by counsel, ably seconded, it may well be believed, by the almost-infantile appearance of the affrighted prisoners, the court granted the writ, and bail was allowed in the sum of $1,000 for the appearance of the defendants at the next term of the Court of General Sessions for Edgefield county. The case has excited the keenest interest in the community, and is without parallel in the history of the State.

The Scene of Lincoln's Assassination.

During a real Washington rainy spell, I know of nothing more in union with the prevailing depression of visitors to the city than a tour through the old Ford Theater, in which Lincoln was assassinated. No doubt the verdict of the average American would be that the place where that awful deed was committed should be pulled down and all traces of its existence removed from the face of the earth; but, with a hideousness that only the Government could originate, the place has been converted into a National Medical Museum, fitted on the third floor with all possible anatomical horrors. There are plaster casts of all sorts of amputations, from the finger to the shoulder and from the little toe to the neck. There are skulls of the most diverse classes and races of men, shivering skeletons of the human kind, and vertebræ of beasts, birds, and reptiles. Of a dismal, rainy day it is particularly cheering to go into a side-show of this kind, bearing in mind the national tragedy which gave existence to the place, and thence contemplate how frail a thing is man; how unattractive and how devoid of spirituality are his remains. Here he may be studied in all grades, from the most perfect and enlightened to the poor little papoose with its remnant of blanket, its infantile moccasins on shrunken feet, its hair, once raven black, now bleached to the highly-prized blonde, its shriveled features and eyeless head, as it was taken from a tree near Fort Laramie, where no doubt a fond mother deposited it, with tearful eyes, but sustaining hopes of again meeting her treasure in the happy hunting ground beyond the western sky. All these things may be seen and studied here, but the greatest objects of historical interest are a portion of the spinal cord and a section of the neck bone, taken from the body of J. Wilkes Booth after he was shot. This section of the neck bone was perforated by the fatal bullet, and removed previous to depositing his remains in the arsenal grounds, from which they were subsequently removed for private burial. The portion of the spinal cord is preserved in alcohol, the section of neck bone being stuck up as on a fork beside the jar containing the fluid and gristle. Another feature of the tragedy which transformed this building from a playhouse where the heroic drama were performed once to applauding audiences is found in a residence on the opposite side of the street, pointed out as the place in which Lincoln died, after being carried out from the theater. The orderly at the entrance to the door of the museum pointed it out to me saying, "That's it with the notice stuck up of 'rooms for rent.' They always have rooms to let over there. Nobody stays long in the house for some reason or other. I don't know why, but it is a fact. Nobody will stay in the house." He refused to say the place was haunted, but stuck to his mournful statement that nobody would long occupy the premises. I suggested it might be because they did not pay their rent promptly, but he asked me why people could not as well pay rent there as anywhere, and I gave it up. The colored servant girls in the neighborhood are, however, given as authority for the most solemn assurances that uncomfortable noises are heard in the house at midnight, and this is why no tenants can be got to occupy the premises for a great length of time.—Washington Cor. Pittsburgh Dispatch.

To Select Flour.

In selecting flour first look at the color. If it is white with a straw-colored tint, buy it. If it is white with a bluish cast, or with white specks in it, refuse it. Second, examine its adhesiveness—wet and knead a little of it between the fingers; if it works soft and sticky, it is poor. Third, throw a little lump of dried flour against a smooth surface; if it falls like powder it is bad. Fourth, squeeze some of the flour tightly in your hands; if it retains the shape given by the pressure, that too is a good sign. It is safe to buy flour that will stand all these tests. These modes are given by all old flour dealers, and they pertain to a matter that concerns everybody—the staff of life.

THE largest plow ever manufactured has just been made at a factory in Stockton, Cal. It is designed for work in the tules, and cuts a furrow thirty-five inches wide. The mold board is eight feet long from the point to the end. The plow will be attached to a sulky, and will require a team of twelve stout animals to pull it.

THE value of the wedding gifts of Mlle. d'Albe, niece of the ex-Empress Eugenie, is said to be $1,600,000. One of these was a cameo ring which belonged to Charles V. Eleven necklaces of brilliants adorned the collections. The Duke of d'Ossuna, whom she married, is said to be one of the wealthiest personages in the Peninsula.

BY order of the Emperor William himself, La Patti is not to appear in Berlin. He has declared that the price charged per night by the late Marquise de Caux is something monstrous, and that he will not allow such absurd prodigality.

SHOULD the weather prove anyway propitious, the next wheat crop of Texas will be enormously large. All over the wheat-region of the State farmers are turning their attention to its cultivation, and will plant less cotton than heretofore.

THE Grangers of California own and run a bank which, during its three years of existence, has paid in dividends $174,912.70. Last year it received and paid out over $3,000,000.

OREGON, with a population of but 135,000, this year produces a surplus of eight million bushels of grain and four million pounds of wool.

WOMEN'S RIGHTS IN LAW.

The Property and Other Rights of Woman in the United States.

[From the Troy Times.]

In Maine a married woman may become possessed of real or personal property by bequest, demise, gift, or purchase, in her own name and as her own property.

After marriage she still retains the custody of the property owned by her before marriage, and the same is exempt from liability for the debts of her husband.

She may sue in her own name to recover back her separate property.

In the event of her death without a will, her property, real and personal, descends to her heirs.

She has full power to make a will, which requires three witnesses.

In New Hampshire a married woman can hold property in her own name, may make contracts, sue and be sued, and can dispose of her property by will, and, in case of her death without a will, her husband is excluded from any share in her estate.

A will requires three witnesses.

In Vermont a married woman is entitled to the same rights of property as in New Hampshire.

Wills require three subscribing witnesses.

In Massachusetts a married woman may hold property separate from her husband without the intervention of a trustee. A deed conveying land to a married woman must be recorded within ninety days of its delivery, or the land will be liable for the husband's debts.

Any married woman over 21 years of age may dispose of her property by will, provided her husband's consent is indorsed on the will in writing. If the devise is to her husband, his consent is not necessary.

Wills must be signed in the presence of three subscribing witnesses.

In Rhode Island a married woman is entitled to her separate estate, which is not liable for her husband's debts, nor can he control the use of it. She may dispose of it in the presence of three subscribing witnesses.

In Connecticut the wife is entitled to her separate estate which she owned before marriage. The proceeds of any property granted to her after marriage is held by the husband as trustee for her and her children, and his executors must account for the same. With the consent of the husband she may dispose of her property by will, which must be signed in the presence of three witnesses.

In New York a married woman has absolute control of her separate estate, and is entitled to demand a conveyance of any property held in trust for her, provided she has a fee-simple estate in the same. She has a right to deposit money in a bank in her own name, and draw out the same by check.

A will requires but two attesting witnesses.

In New Jersey the separate property of the wife is not liable for the debts of the husband.

Wills must be signed in presence of two subscribing witnesses.

In Pennsylvania the separate property of any married woman, owned by her before marriage, or which she has become the owner of after marriage, is free from any liability except her own debts, and then not until the creditor fails to obtain the amount of debt from the husband's estate. If, however, judgment is obtained against the husband for the wrongful act of the wife, the creditor must first exhaust the wife's separate property before he can levy on the husband's.

Wills must be in writing and signed by the testator, or by some one at his request, and must be proved by two competent witnesses.

In Delaware the wife's property is liable for the debts of the husband, unless certain legal proceedings are taken to prevent such liability.

Wills must be in writing, signed either by the testator or some one at his request, and must be proven by two subscribing witnesses.

In Maryland the wife's property, by late enactment, is protected from levy and sale for debts of her husband. She may make a will with the consent of her husband subscribed to it.

Wills must be in writing and signed by the testator, or some one at his request, and shall be subscribed in the presence of the testator by at least three witnesses.

By the law of Virginia a married woman's property is subject to the debts of her husband.

By the law of West Virginia the separate estate of the wife is not responsible for any but her own debts.

Wills in both States must be written and signed by the testator in the presence of two competent witnesses, who must subscribe the same.

In North Carolina a woman's separate estate is not liable for the debts of her husband. Wills must be written, signed by him or some person in his presence at his request, and shall be subscribed by two witnesses present.

In South Carolina married women have no right of property, unless conferred upon them by ante-nuptial settlements.

Wills must be in writing, signed by the testator, or by some one for him, in the presence of three subscribing witnesses, all of whom must be of full age.

In Georgia the lands and personal property of the wife become the property of the husband, so that he has complete control over them. A will must be in writing and signed by the testator, or by some one in his presence at his request, and must be subscribed by three competent witnesses.

By the laws of Texas all property, real or personal, belonging to a woman before marriage, continues after marriage to be a separate estate, and not liable for her husband's debts.

Wills must be in writing, signed by the testator or some one for him at his request, and must be witnessed by two persons of legal age in his presence.

In Florida married women are entitled to all the property owned by them previous to marriage, and all that they may become possessed of after marriage.

A will must be in writing, signed by the testator or by some one in his presence, and must be attested by three competent witnesses, who must subscribe the same in the presence of the testator.

The law in Alabama as to married women's separate estate is the same as that of Texas. She is not liable for her husband's debts.

Wills must be in writing, signed by the testator or by some one in his presence, in the presence of three subscribing witnesses.

In Mississippi married women have the same rights as to their separate property as is given by the law of Texas.

Wills must be in writing, signed by the testator, in the presence of three subscribing witnesses.

In Arkansas the separate property of the wife is not liable for the debts of her husband.

Wills must be signed by the testator, or by some one at his request, and must be witnessed by two witnesses, who must subscribe their names to the will.

By the Louisiana laws a married woman is entitled to her separate property, which is not liable under any circumstances for her husband's debts.

Wills must be signed by the testator, in the presence of three witnesses and in presence of a notary. It may be signed by the testator, inclosed in an envelope, and then handed to a notary and acknowledged by the testator to be his will in presence of the notary and seven witnesses, who must all indorse their names on the envelope.

In Tennessee the separate estate of any married woman cannot be made liable for her husband's debts.

Wills must be in writing, signed by the testator, or some one in his presence at his request, and subscribed to by two witnesses.

In Kentucky the right of the married woman to her separate estate is the same as in Tennessee

Wills must be executed the same as in Tennessee.

In Ohio, Indiana and Michigan the separate property of the wife is free from liability for the debts of the husband.

And wills must be signed by the testator, or by some one at his request, in the presence of two or more subscribing witnesses.

In Illinois the wife's separate property is protected from her husband's creditors by statute.

The married women of Illinois acquired by the law of 1874 the right to do almost everything. They can—blessed privilege—sue their own particular tyrants. When a husband deserts his wife the latter has the custody of the children. If the husband stays out of the State a year and does nothing to support his wife during that time, or if he is imprisoned in the penitentiary, the wife can, upon obtaining an order from a Court of Record, manage his property absolutely. The wife is not at all liable for the husband's debts incurred before marriage, and only in exceptional circumstances for those incurred afterward.

She can manage any business independently, except in case of a partnership, which she cannot enter without her husband's consent. A wife's earnings cannot be touched by her husband or his creditors.

A married woman can acquire, possess and sell real and personal property as freely as a married man can. This list of abilities is expected to be largely increased the present year—so as to include suffrage and other incidentals.

Wills must be executed in the same manner as in Ohio.

In Iowa, Missouri and Wisconsin the separate property of the wife cannot be affected by the husband's debts.

Wills must be signed and sealed by the testator in the presence of two or more subscribing witnesses, who shall subscribe the same at the request of the testator.

By the laws of California, Kansas, Minnesota, Nebraska and Oregon the separate estates of married women cannot be interfered with by their husbands. Under no circumstances can they be made liable for their husband's debts.

All wills must be signed by the testator, or by some person in his presence, in the presence of two or more subscribing witnesses.

The Earthquake of 1868.

The region shaken by the earthquake of 1868, for instance, was equal to at least a fourth of Europe, and probably to fully one-half. From Quito southward as far as Iquique—or along a full third part of the length of the South American Andes—the shock produced destructive effects. It was also distinctly felt far to the north of Quito, far to the south of Iquique, and inland to enormous distances. The distributing force which thus shook 1,000,000 square miles of the earth's surface must have been one of almost inconceivable energy. If directed entirely to the upheaval of a land region no larger than England, those forces would have sufficed to have destroyed utterly every city, town and village within such a region; if directed entirely to the upheaval of an oceanic region, they would have been capable of raising a wave which would have been felt on every shore line of the whole earth. Divided even between the ocean on the one side and a land region larger than Russia in Europe on the other, those vulcanian forces shook the whole of the land region and sent athwart the largest of our earth's oceans a wave which ran in upon shores 10,000 miles from the center of disturbance with a crest thirty feet high. Forces such as these may be fairly regarded as cosmical; they show unmistakably that the earth has by no means settled down into that condition of repose in which some geologists still believe. We may ask with the late Sir Charles Lyell whether, after contemplating the tremendous energy thus displayed by the earth, any geologist will continue to assert that the changes of relative level of land and sea, so common in former ages of the world, have now ceased? and agree with him that if, in the face of such evidence, a geologist still persists in maintaining this favorite dogma, it would be vain to hope, by accumulating proofs of similar convulsions during a series of ages, to shake the tenacity of his conviction—

> Si fractus illabatur orbis,
> Impavidum ferient ruinæ.

—The Cornhill Magazine.

SOMEBODY has ascertained that the 336 members of the two houses of Congress include 239 lawyers, 19 bankers, 17 merchants, 15 editors, 12 farmers and planters, 20 physicians, 7 manufacturers, 5 officers of railroads, and 5 school teachers.

ANDY JOHNSON'S LETTERS.

A Few Specimens from the Papers of the Late Ex-President.

Redfield, the correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial, recently visited the Johnson homestead, where he was shown the correspondence received by Andy Johnson while President. Among the letters he found the following:

NEW ORLEANS, La., Oct 15, 1865.

PRESIDENT JOHNSON: J. H. Hood, late General in the rebel army, is desirous of a personal interview with Mr. Davis, to get at some military information in connection with his military career. He has made a full statement to me of his object, which would require an interview of a few minutes. May I respectfully ask your permission for this interview? He has made his application for pardon.

P. H. SHERIDAN, Major General.

This is indorsed in Johnson's handwriting:

Submitted to the Secretary of War for his consideration and action. There may be some reason not known to me why he should (not?) be permitted to visit and have an interview with the prisoner.

ANDREW JOHNSON, President.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 15, 1865.

PRESIDENT JOHNSON: I deem it the interest of Louisiana that I should be appointed provisional Governor. A uniform system of reorganization is, in my opinion, nationally indispensible.

J. MADISON WELLS, Governor of Louisiana.

RALEIGH, N. C., Nov. 6, 1867.

PRESIDENT JOHNSON: I presume that I shall be arrested in a day or two for telling the truth—a truth unknown to any one outside myself and 500,000 Confederate soldiers and officers—which is, that the day the capital surrenders to a bush convention, under the recent act of Congress, it will be taken possession of by myself and followers, and if the army retake it, it will be over our dead bodies. Since having been made a slave, all I ask is, if imprisoned by Federal troops, while held in confinement until liberated by my fellows, direct the officer in command to allow the ladies to furnish me with provisions. Your old friend,

WM. H. THOMAS,
Formerly Commander of Thomas' Legion, who pulled down the last flag in Dixie.

BOSTON, Nov. 11, 1865.

Andrew Johnson, President of the United States:

As a friend and supporter of your administration, I most respectfully petition you to suspend for the present your policy toward the rebel States. I should not present this paper if I were not painfully convinced that thus far it has failed to obtain any reasonable guarantees for that security in the future that is essential to peace and reconciliation. To my mind it abandons the freedmen to the control of their ancient masters, and leaves the national debt exposed to repudiation by returning rebels. The Declaration of Independence asserts the equality of all men, and the rightful government can be founded only on the consent of the governed. I see small chance of peace unless the great principles are practically established by our Government. Without this the house will continue divided against itself.

CHARLES SUMNER,
Senator of the United States.

NEW YORK, April 6, 1867.

Col. Moore, Secretary to President:

If I cannot have O'Callaghan and Dana, I want O'Callaghan and Thomas. I shall adhere to these names.

F. WOOD.

NEW YORK, April 8, 1867.

PRESIDENT JOHNSON: If Dana is determined against positively, I want Francis A. Thomas for Collector, Ninth District, and Thomas O'Callaghan for Assessor. Please nominate to-day.

FERNANDO WOOD.

Mr. Wood seemed to be in earnest.

The following is from the "Far West."

DENVER, Col., July 28, 1868.

PRESIDENT JOHNSON: I want to be Chief Justice of Wyoming or Utah. Present position worthless. Am competent, honest and your friend. Indorsed, you remember, by Supreme Court of Illinois. God will approve.

G. W. CHAMBERLAIN,
United States Attorney for Colorado.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 29, 1868.

PRESIDENT JOHNSON: One hundred thousand young Democrats of the North and West are ready to volunteer and fight in defense of the President and the discharge of his duty. The President is the Government, and by the Government we stand at all times and under all circumstances.

M. M. POMEROY,
Editor La Crosse Democrat.

LOWELL, MASS., Oct. 28, 1865.

PRESIDENT ANDREW JOHNSON: An order to muster me out as Major General is about to be issued. Is that desired by the President.

BENJ. F. BUTLER.

NEW YORK, Feb. 23, 1866.

F. W. Seward, Department of State:

All right. The work is done. The country is safe. The administration is established. Its enemies are nowhere. Look for me on Monday, unless you hear that I come sooner.

WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Feb. 21, 1866.

Andrew Johnson, President:

Gov. Morton is much better, and able to accept a Cabinet position. If you desire it his brother-in-law, Col. Holloway, will go after him.

THOS. N. STILLWELL.

A SWEET potato weighing seventeen pounds is on exhibition at the counting-room of the Little Rock Gazette office.

THE MARKETS.

NEW YORK.
BEEVES	$7 50	@11 75
HOGS	4 50	@ 5 75
COTTON	11⅛	@ 11⅜
FLOUR—Superfine	5 00	@ 5 50
WHEAT—No. 2 Chicago	1 32	@ 1 34
CORN—Western Mixed	50	@ 56
OATS—Mixed	35	@ 40
RYE—Western	72	@ 74
PORK—New Mess	12 75	@13 00
LARD	8	@ 8⅛
CHICAGO.
BEEVES—Choice Graded Steers	5 25	@ 5 50
Choice Natives	4 80	@ 5 00
Cows and Heifers	2 25	@ 3 50
Butchers' Steers	3 50	@ 3 75
Medium to Fair	3 80	@ 4 25
HOGS—Live	3 00	@ 4 15
FLOUR—Fancy White Winter	6 75	@ 7 25
Good to Choice Spring Ex	5 25	@ 5 50
WHEAT—No. 2 Spring	1 09	@ 1 10
No. 3 Spring	1 01	@ 1 02
CORN—No. 2	45	@ 46
OATS—No. 2	25	@ 26
RYE—No. 2	55	@ 56
BARLEY—No. 2	57	@ 58
BUTTER—Choice Creamery	28	@ 30
EGGS—Fresh	19	@ 20
PORK—Mess	11 70	@11 75
LARD	7⅞	@ 8
MILWAUKEE.
WHEAT—No. 1	1 12½	@ 1 13⅛
No. 2	1 09	@ 1 10
CORN—No. 2	44	@ 45
OATS—No. 2	24	@ 25
RYE—No. 1	56	@ 57
BARLEY—No. 2	64	@ 65
ST. LOUIS.
WHEAT—No. 3 Red Fall	1 18	@ 1 18⅛
CORN—No. 2 Mixed	44	@ 45
OATS—No. 2	26	@ 27
RYE	56	@ 57
PORK—Mess	11 75	@11 85
LARD	7⅜	@ 7⅝
HOGS	3 60	@ 4 25
CATTLE	3 00	@ 5 25
CINCINNATI.
WHEAT—Red	1 18	@ 1 23
CORN—New	38	@ 40
OATS	28	@ 32
RYE	60	@ 63
PORK—Mess	11 75	@11 90
LARD	7⅞	@ 8⅛
TOLEDO.
WHEAT—No. 1 White Michigan	1 30	@ 1 31
No. 2 Red Winter	1 27	@ 1 28
CORN	47½	@ 51½
OATS—No. 2	29	@ 29½
DETROIT.
FLOUR—Choice White	5 80	@ 6 00
WHEAT—No. 1 White	1 29	@ 1 30
No. 1 Amber	1 26	@ 1 27
CORN—No. 1	43	@ 51
OATS—Mixed	29	@ 30
BARLEY (per cental)	1 01	@ 1 60
PORK—Mess	12 15	@12 50
EAST LIBERTY, PA.
CATTLE—Best	5 20	@ 5 40
Fair	4 50	@ 5 00
Common	3 25	@ 4 00
HOGS	3 25	@ 4 30
SHEEP	3 00	@ 5 40

AUBURN COURIER.

E. C. HAYS, Publisher.

THE OLD YEAR.

Haps and Mishaps of the Last Twelve Months.

A Record of Important Events Throughout the World.

[illegible]

JANUARY.

1. Queen Victoria proclaimed Empress of India. Republicans and Democrats each organized a Legislature in Louisiana.
2. The Porte refused the terms of the International Conference.
3. Centennial of the battle of Princeton celebrated.
4. Extradition treaty signed between the United States and Spain.
5. Spanish Cortes prorogued. Emperor William prohibited German officers from entering the Russian army.
6. French steamer L'Amarique went ashore at Seabright, N. J.; no lives lost.
7. Duel between J. G. Bennett and F. May; neither hurt.
8. Two Governors were inaugurated in Louisiana, and the Metropolitan police were attacked by a mob at the State House.
9. M. Grevy elected President of the French Chamber of Deputies. The Nicholls Government took possession of New Orleans and besieged Gov. Packard in the State House.
10. Louisiana Republican Legislature elected W. P. Kellogg to the Senate.
11. President Borrerro, of Ecuador, overthrown.
14. The Moctezuma burned by the Cubans, her captors. Gen. Tchernayeff expelled from Bohemia by the Austrian Government.
15. Fraud in the management of the Security Life Insurance Company discovered.
16. Gen. Diaz overthrew Iglesias in Mexico. Senators Blaine, Windom and Ferry re-elected.
17. News of a terrible famine in British India. The arrest of the Louisiana Returning Board ordered by the House of Representatives for contempt.
18. The Turkish Grand Council unanimously rejected the modified terms of the Peace Conference.
19. A great famine reported in Corea.
21. The chief engineer of the Ashtabula bridge committed suicide.
22. In a riot on the steamship Montana, at New York, several sailors and firemen were killed.
23. Gen. Diaz sent $300,000 to this country in part payment of the American debt. A fire in the Stonehill colliery, England, caused the death of fifteen miners.
24. John R. McPherson elected Senator from New Jersey.
25. Judge David Davis elected Senator from Illinois.
26. The Electoral-Commission bill passed by Congress.
30. Both houses of Congress choose members of the Electoral Commission, and the Justices of the Supreme Court select the fifth Judge.
31. The Electoral Commission organized.

FEBRUARY.

1. The electoral count commenced.
3. Five firemen were injured by an explosion at a fire in New York.
5. Midhat Pasha succeeded by Edhem Pasha as Grand Vizier of Turkey. The steamer George Washington sank off Cape Race; twenty-five lives lost.
8. A nolle prosequi was entered in the bribery case of Secretary Belknap.
11. The Egyptian troops defeated by the Abyssinians.
12. Thirty-three illicit stills were captured in Georgia, and Lieut. McIntyre was killed.
15. An attempt made to assassinate Gov. Packard.
16. The steamer George Cromwell wrecked, and thirty lives lost.
18. Mahmoud Damad made Grand Vizier of Turkey.
24. Postmaster McArthur, of Chicago, discovered to be a defaulter. Three schooners were wrecked on the Long Island coast, and eleven men drowned. Two children were burned to death in New York.
26. Gen. Diaz was elected President of Mexico.

MARCH.

2. The result of the electoral count announced in Congress. Gov. Hayes arrived in Washington.
3. President Hayes took the oath of office, the 4th of March occurring on Sunday.
5. Inauguration ceremonies took place. Seven lives were lost by the burning of a hotel at Karns City, Pa. One life and $500,000 lost by fire at St. Louis. The Senate met in special session. Marquis de Compeigne, the African traveler, killed in a duel at Cairo.
6. The Waltham building, New York city, burned; loss, $500,000.
7. Lee, the Mormon, sentenced to be executed.
8. Seven lives were lost by a panic in St. Francis Xavier church, New York.
12. Senator Cameron, of Pennsylvania, resigned.
17. The steamer Rusland went ashore at Long Branch; all the passengers saved.
19. Disturbances take place in New Orleans between the Nicholls and Packard factions.
20. J. Donald Cameron in Pennsylvania and Stanley Matthews in Ohio elected Senators.
21. Special commission sent to Louisiana by the President. Ex-Mayor Oakey Hall disappeared from New York. An earthquake in Jamaica did much damage.
23. John D. Lee shot at the scene of the Mountain Meadows massacre.
24. The English university boat-race resulted in a dead heat. The Turks burned a Herzegovinian village.
27. A mill reservoir broke away at Stafford, Ct., destroying $500,000 in property and two lives.
30. Good Friday services held. Egypt and Tunis sent arms to the Sultan.
31. Mother and four children burned to death at Rhinecliff, N. Y. The protocol proposed by Russia signed.

APRIL.

1. Easter service celebrated.
5. A number of persons were indicted for the murder of Chinamen at Chico, Cal. Three men were killed by a collision on the Central Pacific railroad. Sitting Bull fled to the British possessions. Two men were killed in New York by the explosion of a shell.
6. Herr Camphausen replaced Prince Bismarck in the German Chancellorship.
9. Spotted Tail surrendered.
10. Troops were withdrawn from Columbia, S. C., and Chamberlain gave up the fight for the Governorship.
11. Southern Hotel, at St. Louis, burned; fifteen lives lost.
15. Steamship Leo burned at sea.
17. Tweed confessed. A great Tichborne procession took place in London.
19. The Nicholls party gained possession of the Louisiana State Government.
20. Troops were withdrawn from New Orleans.
23. The New York Journal of Commerce was burned out.
24. Judge Spofford elected Senator by the Louisiana Legislature. The Czar issued a proclamation of war against Turkey, and Russian troops crossed into Roumania.
27. Russian troops occupied Giurgevo.
28. Twelve men were killed at a fire in Montreal, Canada.

MAY.

1. Three men killed by the falling of the New York Postoffice roof. The Turks captured two Roumanian war vessels.
2. The Russians captured Bayazid.
3. Ten persons were buried under a landslide in Canada.
4. Three murderers executed at Abbeyville, N. C.
6. Proclamation issued for an extra session of Congress. Seven men killed by the bursting of a boiler on the steamship [illegible].
7. Eight lives were lost by the burning of a boiler on a coasting vessel at the mouth of the Mississippi.
8. The most important sewing-machine patents expired.
9. Seven men killed by a colliery explosion at Wadeville, Pa.
10. Russian troops crossed the Danube in small force at Galatz.
11. Several persons were killed by the falling of the walls of the Rockford (Ill.) Court House. The Syndicate took $5,000,000 4½ per-cent. bonds. The Russian batteries set Turtokai on fire.
12. Linseed-oil works in Brooklyn were burned; loss, $500,000. A drawn battle took place near Batoum.
17. Gen. Grant sailed for Europe. Six persons were killed by a collision between two vessels near New York.
19. The Russians captured Ardahan.
21. Roumania declared herself independent.
22. Seven men were killed while launching [illegible]
24. The Russians were repulsed at Kars.
25. A Turkish monitor was sunk in the Danube.
29. The English-American Fisheries Commission was made up.
30. Decoration day generally observed. Gen. Grant arrived in England.
31. William Sexton won the billiard championship.

JUNE.

4. Twenty lives lost and much property destroyed by a hurricane at Mount Carmel, Ill. A train was wrecked near St. Louis, for the purpose of plundering, killing three persons.
8. Eleven men were killed by the falling of a wall at a fire at Bridgeport, Ct. Galveston, Tex., was visited by a $2,000,000 fire.
9. Contract was made for placing the new 4 per-cent. loan.
14. The Russians erected a battery on an island opposite Rustchuk.
15. A church was burned by Indians in Canada. Six lives were lost by the breaking of a dam at Belvidere, N. J.
18. A fight was reported between the troops and the Nez Perce Indians in Idaho.
21. Eleven Mollie Maguires were executed in Pennsylvania. A terrible fire destroyed $12,000,000 worth of property and thirteen lives at St. John.
22. One officer and thirty-three soldiers were killed by Indians in Idaho. A new Russian loan was authorized. Three more Cardinals were created. The French Chamber was dissolved.
25. The Turks won a battle in Asia Minor. Rustchuk was bombarded by the Russians.
26. The President visited Boston. A tornado did great damage in Illinois.
27. Harvard College made the President an LL. D.
28. A steamboat boiler exploded at Silver lake, Mass., injuring eighteen persons.

JULY.

1. Crossing of the Danube effected by 60,000 Russians at Sistova.
2. A Turkish sortie from Kars was repulsed.
3. Wells and Anderson, of the Louisiana Returning Board, were indicted. The Pan-Presbyterian Council commenced at Edinburgh.
4. Independence day celebrated as usual. Six persons were drowned at Woburn, Mass., by the upsetting of a boat.
6. A twelve hours' battle was fought at Biela; the Russians captured the place.
9. Gen. Ord's troops followed a party of horse-thieves into Mexico. The village of Pensaukee, Wis., was destroyed by a tornado, killing six persons. Russian troops captured Tirnova. The Turks destroyed Cherketil, a town on the Black sea coast.
10. The Russian left wing was driven out of Armenia.
11. Seven workmen were suffocated by gas in a coal mine at Brookfield, Pa.
15. Gen. Howard fought the Nez Perces, losing thirteen men. A revolt took place in Hayti. The steamer Eten was wrecked off the Chilian coast; over a hundred lives were lost.
16. Two St. Louis banks suspended. The Russians captured Nikopolis.
17. Strike took place on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad. Russian troops under Gen. Gourko passed the Balkans.
20. A riot took place at Baltimore on account of the strike; troops fired into the crowd, killing eight persons.
21. The Russians were defeated at Plevna. The Turks lost Schipka pass.
22. Many lives and millions of property were lost by a riot at Pittsburgh. United States troops were sent to the scenes of disturbance at various points. Capt. Crapo finished the voyage to England in a whale-boat.
25. Rioters and police skirmished in Chicago.
26. More fighting took place in Chicago.
31. The Russians were again defeated with heavy loss, at Plevna.

AUGUST.

1. The troops fired on the mob at Scranton, Pa., killing four and wounding several.
2. The Turks were successful at Eski-Saghra.
5. Gen. Gourko was defeated and forced to retreat.
6. News was received of a terrible famine in British India.
9. A train to Long Branch ran off a bridge, injuring over sixty persons. Fighting took place around Plevna.
10. The first telegraph line in China was put in operation.
11. Gen. Gibbon fought the Nez Perces in Montana, losing twenty-five in killed and wounded, the Indians losing forty-five.
15. The Turks bombarded Giurgevo.
16. Centenary of the battle of Bennington was celebrated.
18. A satellite to the planet Mars was discovered.
22. The Turks were repulsed at Schipka pass.
23. Osman Pasha was defeated at Tirnova.
25. Russian troops were defeated in Armenia.
26. Bridge at Omaha was partially destroyed.
29. By the wrecking of a train on the Rock Island road, twenty persons were killed.

SEPTEMBER.

3. A $350,000 fire happened in New York; four persons were burned to death.
4. The Russians captured Lovatz.
5. Crazy Horse was captured and killed.
12. About 100 lives were lost by the collision of two vessels in the English channel.
13. Heavy fighting occurred around Plevna.
14. The American team were successful in the rifle-match at Creedmoor.
15. Yellow fever made its appearance at Fernandina, Fla. The Japanese rebellion was completely put down.
22. An indecisive battle occurred on the river Lom. Gambetta was sentenced to imprisonment. The business portion of Keyport, N. J., was destroyed by fire.
24. The upper stories of the Patent Office were burned out. Osman Pasha was reinforced and revictualed at Plevna.
27. Prang's chromo establishment, at Boston, burned. A great fire occurred in Providence, R. I. Mehemet Ali retreated behind the Lom.
30. Col. D. H. Armstrong was appointed Senator from Missouri.

OCTOBER.

2. William C. Gilman was discovered to be a forger to a heavy amount at New York. Mukhtar Pasha repulsed two attacks.
3. Suleiman Pasha succeed Mehemet Ali in command of the Army of the Danube.
5. The steamer Massachusetts was wrecked on Long Island sound. The Nez Perces surrendered to Gen. Miles.
12. Gilman, the forger, was sentenced to five years in prison.
13. Mukhtar Pasha was forced to retreat.
15. Congress met in special session; Samuel J. Randall was elected Speaker of the House. The Republicans carried the French elections.
16. The Russians gained an important victory in Armenia. About 10,000 cigar-makers struck in New York.
17. Fire destroys $250,000 and two lives at New York city.
20. A Roumanian attack on the Grivitza redoubt was repulsed with terrible slaughter.
22. Upward of 200 lives were lost by a colliery explosion near Glasgow, Scotland.
25. Desperate fighting took place southwest of Plevna.
27. The French Ministry resigned.
29. Kars was completely invested.
30. The discovery of relics of Sir John Franklin was reported.

NOVEMBER.

1. President Hayes visited the State Fair at Richmond, Va. Oakey Hall returned to New York.
4. Earthquake shocks were felt in many places in New England and Canada.
6. Daniel W. Voorhees was appointed Senator from Indiana.
12. A Turkish attack on Gen. Skobeleff was repulsed.
13. Suleiman Pasha was made Commander-in-Chief in Roumelia.
14. Field, Leiter & Co.'s store burned in Chicago. Robert L. Case was convicted of perjury.
16. Three banks closed at Reading, Pa. The French Ministry resigned.
17. A mill burned at Fall River, Mass.; loss, $500,000.
18. The Russians carried Kars by assault. A French Cabinet was organised.
23. The Fishery Commission awarded $5,500,000 to the English claimants. A great fire occurred at Bahia, Brazil.
24. The war steamer Huron was lost off the North Carolina coast; over 100 lives lost. Great damage by floods took place in Virginia.
[illegible]

DECEMBER.

1. Kellogg and Butler were seated in the Senate.
3. Congress met in regular session. Eleven lives were lost by the burning of the steamer Lotus.
4. The Russians were defeated at Elena.
7. The Turkish advance on Tirnova was checked.
9. Osman Pasha surrendered unconditionally.
12. The Servian troops were ordered to cross the Turkish frontier.
13. Suleiman Pasha was defeated in an attack at Matchka.
15. The Porte called for the intervention of the powers.
20. Milne's Hotel, Edinburgh, Scotland, burned; ten persons killed. Candy factory boiler in New York exploded and building burned; about fifty persons killed.

NECROLOGY.

JANUARY.

3. Gen. J. J. Abercrombie, U. S. army; Roslyn, L. I.; 73....4. Commodore Cornelius J. Vanderbilt; New York; 83....8. Rev. Alexis Caswell, President of Brown University; Providence, R. I.; 78....15. Ethar Shepley, ex-Chief Justice of Maine and ex-United States Senator; Portland, Me.; 87....17. Rear Admiral Joseph Smith, U. S. navy; Washington; 86....18. Princess Mary of Prussia, sister of the Empress; 76....23. Richard Somers Smith, former President of Girard College and author; Baltimore; 64....24. George Wm. McLellan, formerly Assistant Postmaster General; Washington; 73....26. Daniel Haines, formerly Governor and Judge of Supreme Court of New Jersey; Hamburg, N. J.; 73....28. Signor Blitz, magician; Philadelphia; 66....31. Hon. J. Wiley Edmunds, former M. C. from Massachusetts; Newton, Mass.; 68.

FEBRUARY.

1. Col. A. R. Holladay, former M. C. from Virginia, Henrico, Va....4. Valle-Riestra, Rear Admiral of the Peruvian navy, Charillos, Peru, 69. John S. Gallagher, former Auditor of the Treasury, Washington, 81. N. T. Changarnier, senior General of the French army, Paris, 70....6. Col. John O'Mahony, Irish patriot and exile, New York, 60. Rear Admiral James Alden, U. S. navy, San Francisco, 68....8. Rear Admiral Charles Wilkes, U. S. navy, Washington, 76....10. Rear Admiral Theodorus Bailey, U. S. navy, Washington, 72....11. Sir Wm. Fergusson, eminent English surgeon, London, 69. ....12. James Johnson, former M. C. from Kentucky, Evansville, Ind....14. Amidee Pichot, French author, Paris, 81....18. Rear Admiral Charles H. Davis, U. S. navy, Annapolis, Md., 70. Solomon H. Mosenthal, German author, Vienna, 56....20. Rear Admiral Louis M. Goldsborough, U. S. navy, Washington, 72....21. Maj. Gen. Amos B. Eaton, U. S. army, New Haven, Ct., 71....22. John Oxenford, dramatic author and critic, London, Eng., 65....25. Gen. A. Von Steinwehr, U. S. volunteers, Buffalo, N. Y....27. Ex-Gov. Joseph Johnston, of Virginia, 92.

MARCH.

2. Joel T. Hart, American sculptor; Florence, Italy; 67....3. George Odger, representative of the workingmen of England....5. Joseph Autran, French poet, Paris; 64....6. F. J. Moses, Chief Justice of South Carolina, Columbia, S. C....7. Matilda Heron, actress; New York; 46. Dr. Johann Jacoby, member of German Parliament; 71....8. Gen. John F. Benjamin, U. S. volunteers, former M. C. from Missouri; Washington; 60....10. Baroness Rothschild, Europe....12. Mme. Octavia Walton Le Vert, authoress; Augusta, Ga....14. Don Juan Manuel De Rosas, former Governor of Buenos Ayres; Southampton, Eng.; 80....18 Emory Washburne, ex-Governor of Massachusetts; Cambridge, Mass.; 77....25. Walter Bagshot, English political and financial writer; England. Miss Alta M. Hulett, lady lawyer; Chicago; 22.

APRIL.

2. Jean Baptiste Madou, French painter; Paris; 81....3. Capt. Frederick Lahrbushs military adventurer; New York; 111. Amos Morse, former U. S. Senator from Maryland; 82....10. Commodore Joseph D. Marvin, U. S. navy; Yokohama, Japan. ....11. Ross Winans, millionaire and mechanician; Baltimore, Md.; 80....14. Lorenzo Sabine, former M. C. from Maine; Boston; 74....20. J. B. Irving, painter; Rochester, N. Y.; 49....21. Jean Bautista Gill, President of Paraguay. Cardinal Vannicelli, Rome, Italy....22. Gen. William E. Lathrop, Commander of the Grand Commandery of the Unites States, Rochester, N. Y.; 83.... 25. Gustavus Geary, musical manager; New York....29. Rev. William G. Brownlow, former Governor of Tennessee; Knoxville, Tenn.; 72.

MAY.

1. Enoch H. Rosekrans, Justice of Supreme Court of New York; Glen's Falls, N. Y.; 68. W. W. Newcomb, minstrel; New York; 52.... 9. Commodore Benjamin J. Totten, U. S. navy; New Bedford, Mass.; 71....14. Charles H. Bryan, ex-Judge Supreme Court of California; Carson, Nev. H. H. Emmons, Judge U. S. Court; Detroit, Mich....17. Edmund Quincy, author; Dedham, Mass.; 70....19. Edward Kent, ex-Governor of Maine; Bangor, Me.; 75....22. Sir Matthew Digby Wyatt, English architect and author; England; 57.... 23. Wm. H. C. Hosmer, poet; Avon, N. Y.; 63....25. Judge Richard Hawes, Confederate Governor of Kentucky and ex-Congressman; Bourbon county, Ky.; 80....Miss Catherine A. Warfield, novelist; Pewee Valley, Ky.... 29. John Lothrop Motley, historian; Dorsetshire, Eng.; 63....Fletcher Harper, publisher; New York; 71.

JUNE.

4. Sophia Frederica Matilda, Queen of Holland; 59....7. Edwin White, historical painter; Saratoga Springs, N. Y.; 60....13. Ludwig III., Grand Duke of Hesse; Darmstadt, Germany; 71....14. Gen. Frederick Henningsen, filibuster and author; Washington; 62....15. Lady Sterling Maxwell, authoress; London, Eng.; 70. Miss Mary Carpenter, authoress; London, Eng. 57....17. George T. Davis, former M. C. from Massachusetts; Portland, Me. Daniel D. Pratt, former Congressman from Indiana; Logansport, Ind.; 64....18. John S. C. Abbott, historian; New Haven, Ct.; 71....19. Admiral Henry J. Rous, steward of the English Jockey Club; London; 82....22. Commodore John R. Goldsborough, U. S. navy; Philadelphia, 69.... 24. Robert Dale Owen, author, socialist and ex-Congressman from Indiana; Lake George, N. Y.; 73....27. Hugh W. Mercer, Confederate General; Baden Baden, Germany; 69.... 28. Prof. Santini, priest and astronomer; Padua, Italy; 90.

JULY.

1. Robinson Palmer, first Senator from Maine; Perry, Me.; 91. Joseph Braham, musician; New York; 50....2. Samuel D. Evans, former M. C. from Texas; Washington; 68....7. Cardinal Angelis; Rome, Italy; 85....13. Sir George Bell, K. C. B., an old English General. ....20. Thomas Placede, actor; Tom's River, N. J.; 70....25. George W. Matsell, ex-Chief of Police of New York; New York; 65....27. Joseph H. Tuthill, former M. C. from New York; Ellenville, N. Y.; 66. Michele Domingue, ex-President of Hayti; Jamaica; 77.... 29. Hon. George Ward Hunt, First Lord of the English Admiralty; Hamburg, Germany; 52. ....30. Commodore J. W. Swift, U. S. navy; Geneva, N. Y....31. Samuel Warren, English novelist; London; 70.

AUGUST.

3. Wm. B. Ogden, first mayor of Chicago; New York; 72. Gen. Charles Frederick Von Steinmetz; Landeck, Silesia; 81....11. M. Blanc, European gambler; worth $17,000,000; Paris. ....16. Rev. Asa Dodge Smith, President of Dartmouth College; Hanover, N. H.; 72. Raleigh Daniel, Attorney General of Virginia; Richmond, Va.; 73....18. M. Villiamme, French historian; France....20. Don Federico Errazuris, former President of Chili; Santiago, Chili....27. Cardinal Bizarri; Italy; 75. James Ware, ex-Justice Supreme Court of Massachusetts; Salem, Mass....28. Ben De Bar, actor and manager; St. Louis; 64....29. Brigham Young, Mormon prophet; Salt Lake City; Utah. 76....30. Wilson Shannon, ex-Governor of Ohio and Kansas; Lawrence, Kan.; 75. Raphael Semmes, commander of Confederate cruiser Alabama; Point Clear, Ala.; 68.

SEPTEMBER.

1. Alvin Adams, founder of Adams Express; Watertown, N. Y.; 73. Edward L. Davenport, tragedian; Canton, Pa.; 61....3. Louis Adolphe Thiers, ex-President of France; St. Germain, France; 80. James C. Hopkins, ex-Judge of U. S. Court; Madison, Wis....5. Crazy Horse, Sioux chief; Sidney, Neb....[illegible] 87....19. Henry Compton, comedian; London, Eng....20. Louis V. Bogy, U. S. Senator from Missouri; St. Louis; 64....23. Urbain Joseph Le Verrier, French astronomer; Paris; 66.... 26. Commodore James M. Frailey, U. S. navy; Philadelphia; 67....30. Cardinal Sixto Riario Sforza; Naples, Italy; 57.

OCTOBER.

3. Mlle. Teresa Titiens, prima donna; London; 43. Archbishop James Roosevelt Bayley, Roman Catholic primate of the United States; Newark, N. J.; 63....7. Edward Granville Eliot, former Lord Lieutenant of Ireland; London; 79....24. Sobieski Ross, former M. C. from Pennsylvania; Condersport, Pa.; 49. George L. Fox, pantomimist; Cambridge, Mass.; 52....28. Joseph Durham, English sculptor; London; 56. Edwin Adams, actor; Philadelphia; 44....29. Gen. N. B. Forrest, Confederate army; Memphis, Tenn.

NOVEMBER.

1. Oliver Perry Morton, U. S. Senator from Indiana; Indianapolis, Ind.; 54. Field Marshal Wrangel, of the Prussian army; Berlin, Ger.; 93....7. Amelia, Queen Dowager of Saxony; Dresden, Saxony; 75....10. George J. Barry, Chief Engineer of U. S. navy; Philadelphia; 44....12. Henry P. Gray, artist; New York; 58. Eardley Wilmot, Lieutenant General of English army....13. Sir Adolphus Slade, Admiral British navy; London; 74....14. Julia Kavanagh, English novelist; Nice, France; 53. ....17. Geo. S. Bangs, former Superintendent of Railway Mail Service; Washington; 52. Paul Boudet, former Senator and Minister of France; Paris; 77....24. Moses H. Grinnell, ex-Congressman from New York; New York; 64....30. Commodore Charles H. B. Caldwell, U. S. navy; Waltham, Mass.; 56.

DECEMBER.

7. Benjamin Huger, Confederate Major General; Charleston, S. C.; 71....11. Sydney Smirke, English architect; London; 70.... 12. George W. Rawson, Justice of Supreme Court of New York; Lyons, N. Y....15. Lord Henry Percy, General in English army; London; 60....17. Gen. D'Aurelle de Paladines, French army; Paris; 73....18. Charles Clarke, ex-Governor of Mississippi and Confederate General; Mississippi; 67.

In a Newspaper Office.

A little tin box shot up and down a wooden shaft in the middle of the room, into which rolls of manuscript were put by an office-boy, who rushed from desk to desk and gathered the sheets as they came from the writers' hands. From time to time a very nervous, sharp-voiced, imperative gentleman, in a very much soiled linen duster, called to one or the other of the workers, and gave orders which would have been quite unintelligible to a layman, who might have mistaken the establishment for a slaughter-house when he heard a pale-faced little gentleman requested to "make a paragraph of the Pope," "cut down Anna Dickinson," "double-lead Gen. Grant," "put a minion cap head on Peter Cooper," and "boil down the Evangelical Alliance." But making a paragraph of the Pope simply applied to the compression of some news concerning him in that space; "the minion cap head" intended for the venerable philanthropist meant the kind of type to be used in the title of a speech or lecture of his; and "boiling down" and "cutting down" were two technicalities expressing condensation. The gentleman in the linen duster was the night editor in charge, the despot of the hour, and the intermediary between the writers and printers, the latter being on the floor above, and the little tin box in the shaft communicating with them.

By 3 o'clock the last line of the "copy" must be in the printers' hands, and from midnight until that time a newspaper office in the editorial department is in a state of nervous intensity and activity for which I can imagine no parallel.

The smoke from the cigars and pipes rolled up to the ceiling, and the pens sped over the pages of manuscript paper. The writers bent to their work with tremendous earnestness and concentration; there was not one of them who had written less than a column of matter that night, and some were closing two and three column articles, which contained nearly as many words as five pages of Harper's Magazine. They were pale and care-worn. One of them was heading and sub-heading cable dispatches from the seat of war, another was writing editorial paragraphs on the important telegraphic news that came in; another was damning a new play in virulent prose; another was revising a thrilling account of a murder; another was transcribing his stenographic notes of a speech on the inflation of the currency; another was putting the finishing touches upon a well-considered article criticising a debate in the French Assembly, and another was absorbed in the description of a yacht race. The little tin box in the shaft bounced up and down more frequently, and the night editor became more nervous and imperative than ever, as the fingers of the big clock on the wall went beyond 2. The pages of manuscript were sent up one by one, and long, moist proof-sheets came down from the composing-room. Then the "cutting down" began, and some of the writers saw articles that had cost them hours of research annihilated by the stroke of a pen, or reduced from columns to paragraphs—not on account of unimportance, but simply because there is always a superfluity of matter, contrary to the erroneous notion that the editor's great difficulty is to fill his space—and in some instances even the paragraphs were finally omitted to make room for unexpected news that arrived later. Telegrams were still coming in at 2:30, but soon after that hour one dispatch brought the words "good night," and that meant the closing. The night editor and his assistant now disappeared into the composing-rooms, where they remained to superintend the making up of the forms, and the men at the desks prepared to leave, or threw themselves back in their chairs for a chat and some more smoke.—William H. Rideing, in Harper's Magazine for December.

The sexton of a church in Pittsburgh has fallen heir to a fortune of $100,000, left him by a relative in Ireland.

AN AWFUL CRIME.

A Boy Shoots His Father at the Request of His Mother.

[From the Cincinnati Enquirer.]

A peculiarly atrocious murder was committed in Lawrenceville, a little out-of-the-way hamlet in Dearborn county, Ind., on Wednesday night. A laboring man named Joseph Kunzler lived in the edge of the village. His relations with his wife for some time past had been unhappy. She had filed a petition for a divorce against him, though they still lived in the same house. On Wednesday evening he went down into the village, saying he would be home by 9 o'clock.

In his absence his wife prevailed upon their oldest son, a boy of 13 years of age, to load up a gun with buck-shot [illegible] and kill him. The boy obeyed, and, concealing himself behind a wood-pile, waited for an hour, and when his father came into the yard shot him through the back. This done, he went into the house, when the mother took the gun from him and laid it by the side of her husband, who, still alive, was crying for help.

She then returned to the house and went to bed with her boy, but, neither being able to sleep, subsequently arose and cooked supper, which they ate. All through the night they heard moans and appeals for help from the father, who was still alive, but paid no heed to them.

In the morning a neighbor came to the house to employ Kunzler, and found him lying on the ground in a pool of blood, though still alive, while the woman was some distance away unconcernedly engaged in her domestic work. When asked concerning her husband, she replied that he had shot himself. Subsequently the Coroner was summoned from Lawrenceburg, twenty miles distant, and the investigation showed that the man could not have killed himself.

Suspicion was directed to the woman and her boy. The latter, when separated from his mother, confessed that he had done the deed at her command, saying that she had been urging him to do it for a year past. He also told how they spent the night in the hearing of the cries of his father, yet neither came to his assistance.

Elephants as Timber-Carriers.

One of the great industries of Burmah is the timber trade. The teakwood, which is the chief timber cut and shipped, is very heavy, and requires prodigious force to handle it; and, as the Burmese are not far enough advanced to use machinery for the purpose, they use elephants, and bravely do the noble beasts perform their task. In the timber-yards, both at Rangoon and at Maulmain, all the heavy work of drawing and piling the logs is done by them. I have never seen animals showing such intelligence, and trained to such docility and obedience. In the yard that we visited there were seven elephants, five of which were at that moment at work. Their wonderful strength came into play in moving huge pieces of timber. I did not measure the logs, but should think that many were at least twenty feet long and a foot square. Yet a male elephant would stoop down and run his tusks under a log, and throw his trunk over it, and walk off with it as lightly as a gentleman would balance his bamboo cane on the tip of his finger. Placing it on the pile, he would measure it with his eye, and if it projected too far at either end would walk up to it, and, with a gentle push or pull, make the pile even.

If a still heavier log needed to be moved on the ground to some part of the yard, the mahout, sitting on the elephant's head, would tell him what to do, and the great creature seemed to have a perfect understanding of his master's will. He would put out his enormous foot and push it along; or he would bend his head, and, crouching half way to the ground and doubling up his trunk in front, throw his whole weight against it, and thus, like a ram, would "butt" the log into its place; or, if needed to be taken a greater distance, he would put a chain around it, and drag it off behind him. The female elephant, especially was employed in drawing, as, having no tusks, she could not lift like her big brothers, but could only move by her power of traction or attraction. Then, using her trunk as deftly as a lady would use her fingers, she would untie the knot or unhitch the chain, and return to her master, perhaps putting out her trunk to receive a banana as a reward for her good conduct. It was a very pretty sight, and gave us a new idea of the value of these noble creatures, and of the way in which they can be trained for the service of man.—Letter from Dr. Fieldes in the Evangelist.

Woman Lawyers and Congress.

The House Judiciary Committee, strange as it may appear, were almost unanimous in favor of reporting the bill giving women lawyers the right to practice before the Supreme Court of the United States, after having heard the argument of Mrs. Belva Lockwood, Washington's first woman lawyer. As soon as Mrs. Lockwood left the committee room, Ben Butler suggested that the committee vote upon the bill. "If any gentleman has anything to advance," said he, "to show that a woman has not as good a right to practice law, everywhere and anywhere, as a man, I would like to hear it." Nothing was said, and it was decided to report the bill favorably as soon as the committee is again called in the House. Proctor Knott will, it is said, make a speech in support of the bill, as will also Butler and Frye. Mrs. Lockwood has a first-class practice in the courts of the District, having worked it up in the face of many obstacles. She has been employed in any number of equity and divorce cases and contests over wills, and kept up all the time a large practice before the Criminal Court, where she has won great distinction as an attorney. She has one or two women students in her office.

Bismarck.

Prince Bismarck likes to find everything in his study in disorder and general topsy-turviness, just as he left it—bottles, mugs, cigars and cigar-boxes, odd gloves, books, pamphlets, papers, letters, spurs, stray antiques, swords, hand-mirrors, pistols, fiddle strings, flutes—these are all articles he wants to put his hand on at short notice, and see lying around loose on the tables, floor, and sofas. Whenever he discovers any signs that his wife or the servants have been trying to set things to rights a terrible row is raised.

ALL SORTS.

Great Britain has 60,000 velocipedists.

The net debt of Providence, R. I., is $8,752,525.

There are only two cameo-cutters in New York city.

When is a mother a father? When she's a sigher.

Philadelphia has a paper called the Puzzlers' Own.

The national fruit crop is valued at [illegible].

Erzeroum has 100,000 inhabitants and manufactures the best cimeters.

Strawberries are ripe and mignonettes blooming near Scottsboro, Ala.

In 1873, the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of America comprised 200 societies; now it has grown to a membership of nearly 600 societies.

Great Britain now cultivates nearly 1,000,000 fewer acres of wheat than she did twenty years ago. Pastures and market-gardens have succeeded to wheat fields.

There is a crusade against dancing in Baltimore circles. Many young ladies who are church members are dropping the amusement from their list of party engagements.

It has been ascertained from statistical data that there are now over 2,800,000 men in the United States at work on farms, as farm-laborers, who do not own a foot of land.

Why discourage the growth of the precious cranberry, which, like many another raw American, goes abroad for sophistication, and is restored to us in the form of sherry wine.

The season's shipments of lumber from the Saginaw river aggregate 548,835,000 feet, an increase of 93,000,000 over last year, and 157,347,850 shingles, 51,000,000 in excess of last year.

The people of the West are in a condition to hold over a large part of their grain till lake navigation opens in the spring. Meantime a great deal of grain will go down the river to market.

A large amount of artificial butter is sold to English markets. A correspondent there states that if nothing but genuine butter were sold there it could not be had for less than $1 per pound.

FOR THE HOLIDAYS

LORD & TAYLOR
NEW YORK.

WE INVITE ATTENTION TO THE FOLLOWING DEPARTMENTS OF OUR ESTABLISHMENTS. THE LOW PRICES AT WHICH OUR GOODS ARE MARKED, HAVE SPECIAL REFERENCE TO THE HOLIDAY SEASON, AND BARGAINS WILL BE FOUND THROUGHOUT THE HOUSE, THIS SEASON'S IMPORTATIONS GIVING US AN UNEQUALED STOCK OF GOODS.

BLACK SILKS,
handsome and durable, all widths, $1.00 to $3.50. The GREAT AMERICAN INDESTRUCTIBLE SILK, $1.20, $1.25, and $1.50.

PLAIN COLORED SILKS,
new shades, commencing as low as 75c. per yard, and at $1.00, same as quality of last season at $1.25. Fancy Broche and Damasse Figures of the new Paris shades, from $2.00 upwards. Trimming Satins at $1.00, worth $1.25.
THE PRICES AT WHICH WE OFFER OUR SILKS ARE ONE-QUARTER TO ONE-THIRD LESS THAN LAST SEASON.
☞ A SILK DRESS IS A HANDSOME HOLIDAY PRESENT.

IN DRESS GOODS
there is richer display of colorings and brilliant effects this season than for many years past.
The mixed COSTUME CLOTHS range in price from 50c. a yard to $5.00, and on low-priced DRESS GOODS, from 10c. a yard up, many of them being as effective as the heavier fabrics.

Shawls, Mantles and Wraps.
India Valley Cashmere Shawls from $100.00 up. India Filled Centers at $20.00 and up.
Real Dacca, Chedda and Striped India Shawls, new designs, from $10.00 upwards. Also, full lines British, French and German Shawls in beautiful new styles, of the best and most reliable manufacture. Paris Mantles and Cloaks of the latest modes from $15.00 up, and Berlin from $8.00.

Ladies' and Children's Suits and Fine Under Clothing.
These departments embrace everything pertaining to Female Costume, suited to all ages and circumstances. For full particulars see catalogues.

HOSIERY.
Ladies', Misses', and Children's Hosiery from $1.50 a dozen, up to the finest goods. All the newest and prettiest designs in Hosiery are represented in our stock in Silk, Cotton and Merino.

FURS.
Alaska Seal Sacques, from $65.00 up.
Alaska Seal Muffs from $6.00 up.
Alaska Seal Boas, from $6.00 up.
Mink Muffs and Boa, from $12.50 a set, upward.
Silk Fur-lined Garments, from $65.00.
Alaska Sable Sets, from $7.50.
A good set of Furs as low as $5.00.
☞ A SET OF FURS IS A SUITABLE AS WELL AS SEASONABLE HOLIDAY PRESENT.

GENTS' FURNISHING.
DRESSING GOWNS, SMOKING JACKETS AND CAPS, SCARFS, TIES, UMBRELLAS, GLOVES, AND OTHER ARTICLES FOR GENTLEMEN, SUITABLE FOR THE HOLIDAYS TO WHICH THE ATTENTION OF LADIES IS INVITED.

GLOVES.
Kid, Silk, Lisle Thread and Merino Gloves of the new colors and shapes, in great variety.
Lord & Taylor's Kid Gloves, 2 buttons, warranted, at $1.00 per pair, price last season $1.50.

ALSO,
Lace, Cambric, Linen and Silk Handkerchiefs, and beautiful Neckerchiefs, all prices from 25c. upward, and all kinds Dress Trimmings to match our goods.

☞ Our Goods are all first-class. We make a point to fill all orders exactly and to the interest of purchasers. We guarantee all purchases to be satisfactory to buyers, and stand ready to remedy all errors. We invite orders, convinced that a first trial will insure us the regular custom hereafter.
Catalogues of our entire stock sent to any address on application.
All orders for Goods to be accompanied by the money, or where parties wish Goods will be sent by Express, C. O. D. Where the remittance is too large, we always return the difference.

Broad[illegible] Twentieth St.
Grand, Chrystie & Forsyth
Streets, N. Y.

Auburn Courier.

AUBURN, INDIANA, JAN. 3d, 1878.

The Political Outlook.

Now that a political campaign will soon open in this state, we may look for a gradual advance along the lines of both parties towards a discussion of the issues that will be presented to the people. We sincerely hope the discussion will be fair, courteous, impersonal and conducted in a spirit of candor and manliness. We believe the Democratic party in this state is in a most excellent condition, and will reap a grand victory next October. We are entirely harmonious, and no discords strike jarringly upon the ear. Firm in the conviction that we triumphed in the last national contest, we go forward firm, unyielding and defiant, conscious that wrong will be righted, and that retribution will follow those who conspire against the will of the people. The issues will soon be made up and on them the Democracy will be found with the great masses. Its uncompromising hostility to class legislation, its gallant effort against extravagance and corruption, promises this much. It will be on the side of the people, against the resumption act, because that act will require a further contraction of our currency. It will be on the side of the people in the effort for the remonetization of silver, because that is one of the currencies with which we promised to pay our indebtedness. It will be for an honest administration, because it has heretofore put honest men in position, as the election of Gov. Williams, although a farmer and a laborer, will testify. These are among the principal issues of the coming campaign. Then, conscious of being for the right, let us stand by our guns, firm and unflinching. Let not a man straggle from its columns. While the opposition are without leaders or policy, distracted, discordant and weak, they are wily and unscrupulous, and their defeat by an overwhelming victory, larger than ever before, will forever rid us of an enemy who have for years been held together only by the cohesive power of office. The bleak lowering clouds of depression hang like a pall upon us, and there is but one hope in the future, for a restoration of better times and that hope lies in the Democratic party.

* * *

The following is the number of votes that each county in this (the 13th) district is entitled to in the Democratic State Convention.

	Votes for T. & H.	Delegates.
De Kalb	2,532	13
Elkhart	3,390	17
Kosciusko	2,703	14
Lagrange	1,266	6
Marshal	2,767	14
Noble	2,665	13
Steuben	1,051	5

* * *

Butler Items.

—Mr. Ocker is improving slowly.

—The mud dried up considerably last Sabbath.

—We think the Record is a spicy little sheet well managed.

—E. S Fosdick is home from school, having a jolly time with the boys, a-n-d the g-a-l-s.

—Rev. Butler visited his parents on New Years day. His Step Father has long been helpless from the effects of Rheumatism.

—Many of our farmers are improving the warm weather in plowing sod ground, which indicates not only thrift but sound judgment.

—The temperance meeting last Saturday evening was a decided success. A declaration and a solo rendered by two young ladies are worthy of notice.

—Mr. Hyman narrowly escaped being gored by an infuriated cow on Friday. He was endeavoring to drive her to the slaughter house when she sprang at him.

—Kehrer & Stone are closing out their holiday goods at reduced price to save packing. They are all fresh and new, and are still desirable as rewards of merit to the little ones.

—Wednesday of last week was a field day for the Masons of Forest Lodge No. 239 of this place. It was on the occasion of the instalation of its officers. Rev. Hendrix delivered an address, and the Waterloo Band discoursed some excellent music. In the evening there was served a bountiful repast and all was jollity and enjoyment.

—On last Thursday evening, despite the inclemency of the weather, our citizens of the Masonic persuasion to the number of eighteen, with many of their ladies, went to Waterloo to be present at the ceremonies of instalation of the officers F. A. M. of that City. They expressed themselves as having been finely entertained.

—Christmas evening at about 12 m. W. P. Erwin a professional Penman, whose home is at Clyde, O., in a fit of somnambulism, or night mare, or mania potu or something else, jumped out of a second story window of the Waverly House alighting on a plank sidewalk, receiving serious contusions, after which the unfortunate man wandered about for two hours sometimes wallowing in the mud. At last he put in appearance at the depot from which he was taken to the hotel where he now lays, (Monday morning,) dangerously ill. His faithful wife arrived Friday and is untiring in her attentions. She receives the sympathy of all true men and women in her affliction. Mr. Erwin had taken the temperance pledge the Sabbath previous.

NOTICE TO TAX-PAYERS.

To the Tax-Payers of De Kalb County.

In compliance with the laws of the State of Indiana, I, DANIEL GONSER, treasurer of said county, hereby notify the Tax Payers thereof that the rate of taxation for the year A. D. 1877 are correctly stated in the following table, showing the amount of tax in cents levied upon each one hundred dollars valuation, in the several townships and incorporated villages in said county, as the same appears on the tax duplicate of De Kalb county, for said year.

	State Levies.				Town and Township Levies.							County Levies.
	State Taxes		School Tax		Township Tax.	Road Tax	Com. School Tax	Spec'l. School Tax		Addit'l. Special School		County Tax	Bond Int.	Total Tax	Total Poll
TOWNSHIPS AND INCORPORA'D TOWNS	On each $100.	On each Poll.	On each $100.	On each Poll.	On each $100.	On each $100.	On each $100.	On each $100.	On each Poll	On each $100.	On each Poll.	On each $100.	On each $100.	On each $100.	Total Poll.
Butler Township.	13	50	16	50	5	20		50	50			45	10	159	150
Jackson "	13	50	16	50	5	15		15	25			45	10	119	125
Concord "	13	50	16	50	5	15		25	50			45	10	129	150
Newville "	13	50	16	50	5	15		35	10			45	10	139	200
Stafford "	13	50	16	50	5	10		40	50			45	10	139	150
Wilmington "	13	50	16	50	5	15		35				45	10	139	100
Union "	13	50	16	50	5	15		5				45	10	109	100
Richland "	13	50	16	50	5	10		25	100			45	10	124	200
Fairfield "	13	50	16	50	5	15		15	40			45	10	119	140
Smithfield "	13	50	16	50	5	15		15	40			45	10	119	140
Franklin "	13	50	16	50	5	20		20	25			45	10	129	125
Troy "	13	50	16	50	5	15		22				45	10	126	100
Keyser "	13	50	16	50	5	15	10	30	50			45	10	134	150
Auburn Town	13	50	16	50	5	15		25	50	50	100	45	10	189	250
Waterloo "	13	50	16	50	5	15		50	100			45	10	154	200
Butler "	13	50	16	50	5	15		50		50		45	10	204	150
Garrett "	13	50	16	50	5	15		25	50			45	10	129	150

DOG TAX:—For every male; $1.00; for every female, $2.00; for each additional dog, $2.00.

Examine your receipt before leaving the office and see that it covers all your property. People are taxed for what they own on April 1st of each year.

Taxes are due on the 15th day of December, and tax-payers may pay the full amount of such taxes on or before the third Monday of April, or may, at their own option, pay one-half thereof on or before said third Monday and the remaining one-half on or before the first Monday in November following, provided, however, that all road taxes charged shall be paid prior to the third Monday in April, as prescribed by law; and provided, further, that in all cases where as much as one-half of the amount of taxes charged against a tax-payer shall not be paid on or before the third Monday in April, the whole amount charged shall become due and returned delinquent, and be collected as provided by law. Delinquent lands are advertised on or about the first Monday in January, and are sold on the second Monday of February of each year.

The treasurer is responsible for the taxes he could have collected. Therefore tax-payers ought to remember that their taxes must be paid every year.

No county order will be paid to any person owing delinquent tax. As the road tax is all due with the first installment, road receipts must be presented on or before the third Monday of April, or they will not be received. For the collection of which I may be found at my office, in Auburn, as directed by law. Pay your taxes promptly and avoid costs.

DANIEL GONSER, Treasurer of De Kalb county.

December 24th, 1877.

Corunna News.

—The school house scare has entirely subsided.

—Edward Orr is on a visit to Chicago He returns this week.

—A number of our citizens are attending court at Auburn.

—The meetings are still in progress, with a fair show of success.

—Mrs. Eddy has been confined to her house for some days with erysipelas in the arm.

—The dance at the Imus House on Christmas eve was a very pleasant and enjoyable affair.

—We would say something in regard to the condition of our sidewalks if we thought it would do any good.

—Dr. Snyder and lady have returned from their visit to New York. The patrons of the doctor will be glad to know of his return.

—The holidays have passed and nothing transpired at our quiet village in the way of excitement that generally occur the world over on such occasions.

—There is talk of the fast trains being placed on the Air Line again. This will give those who have "a lean" on the bridge a "lightning view" in warm days.

—We hear it rumored that our young friend, and former citizen, J. F. Kline, will soon embark in the printing business for himself. We wish him every success posible and hope that his organ will peal fourth sound democratic principles.

—The death of Miss Norris south of town, occurred on last Friday night.— The cause of her illness and death was quick consumption. The suddenness of her death cast a gloom upon the community where she resided. Her sickness only lasted about three weeks.

—The Corunna Items are written by a resident of the town, but the credit is given to a young man from Auburn who frequently visits us. This is not fair as it takes considerable of our time to look up these items between business hours and also makes our crainum whirl to get them in proper shape for publication. Give credit to whom credit is due, friends.

You Know.

* * *

St. Joe Items.

—Editor Courier.—Having noticed nothing in the Courier from this place for some time, I thought a few items would not come amiss.

—I understand that we are to loose our agent, Mr. Van Hyde. He is going to Auburn Juction—who is to be his successor. We do not know, but our best wishes go with Van.

—J. D. Leighty, merchant of this place, is doing a good business, but nevertheless, his spare time to attend to mule breading, having one on hand at this time. No danger of him getting hurt as he keeps his distance.

—On Wednesday night last as train No. 11, on the B & O. road, going east at a rapid rate, was nearing the bridge across St. Joe, a young man named McIntosh jumped from the train, striking a board fence and going clear through. Result, a broken nose and otherwise injured.

—St. Joe, notwithstanding the mud, has shipped during the month of December 13 car loads of wheat, and 5 of hogs. Prices of grain have averaged $1.25 for wheat, 25c for oats, and 37 for corn and $3.45 to $3.60 for live hogs.

—Our good natured friend, Ed. White still keeps his team on the road between [illegible] and Spencerville.

Hoosier.

—When Morton was alive the Indianapolis Journal gave a long account of how he stood by Hayes in his southern policy. Now, that he is gone, the Journal makes a retrograde movement, and is "fernenst" Hayes.

* * *

—The Albion New Era wants us to hitch ourself to Bro. Parker, of the News, and petition Gov. Williams to recall Senator Voorhees. Well, Bro. Prickett and several other "Independent" editors might be added to said committee, and then good old "Jamie" would simply dismiss the whole as a set of damphools. So we propose to run no risks.

* * *

Commissioners Allowances December Term 1877.

Expense Roads, Bridges and Dykes.

F. & G. McOsker, work on dyke, Conc'd-tp	$15.00
Same " " " "	15.00
Same " " " "	96.50
Same per Murray " " " "	181.66
Same " Barney " " " "	119.65
W Stamen per " " " " "	16.00
Seaton & Culver " " " "	39.54
G. Barney & Son " McOskers contract	139.63
Same " on Stamens "	28.02
Same " Seaton & Culvers	5.05
Same stone for abutment to bridge	17.20
Wm Stamen work on dyke	292.54
Same per Wilmot piling for "	4.14
J. H. Murry " " " Stamen con.	75.00
Hadsell & Shull " " "	66.00
F. Fales on McOsker con.	6.00
A. Johnson on " "	5.00
J. Emanuel " " "	4.00
Z. Kagey " " "	6.50
G. Smith " " " & S. & C.	4.10
J. Rhodes " " " & S. & C.	17.10
J. W. Boyle " " "	8.43
John Sommers " " "	13.00
Seaton & Culver work dyke & bridge	10.00
Smith bridge Co. on con. bridge Newv'll	1240.00
Same " " " "	200.00
Same " " " "	20.00
Same " " " "	772.78
Same " " " "	57.50
Emily Jackson " S. B. Co. "	30.45
T. D. Gross " " "	80.85
Moody & Walcott " " "	35.00
H. Griswold " " "	20.00
H. Griswold piling bridge Newville	30.00
Same " " "	180.00
Same " " "	40.00
Same " " "	93.51
E. Hopkins making road Wil.-tp	35.00
Same planking abutments for bridge	12.00
Same embankment on road Con.-tp	50.00
Same " " " "	25.00
Same " at bridge Wil.-tp	15.00
Same work on bridge Newville-tp	15.00
Same " " " "	10.00
Same " " " "	10.00
Same " " " "	20.00
G. N. Rex " " abutment "	9.90
Chs. Bartlett " "	3.00
H W. Coburn embankment "	8.00
Olds & Wheelock iron abutments	1500.00
Same	950.00
Same bridge Union-tp	150.00
J. W. McKay & Co. bridge Union-tp	340.26
Same " "	117.77
Same " Troy-tp	100.00
Bronson Snyder " Franklin-tp	60.85
J. Marks digging Buckwell ditch	22.44
Same " A. A Waters "	26.63
Smith & McOsker Hubbard "	83.25
Wm. Goodsheld Yarlott "	24.05
E. Hallett boarding bridge hands Wil.-tp	10.00
S. H. Bartlett grading road "	5.00
A Seaton piling bridge Union tp	18.00
G. W. Maxwell " Stafford-tp	65.53
Same bal on " "	2.00
A. Wedner " " "	6.00
J. Hornberger ditching road Smithfld-tp	4.50
David Culver Bridge Butler-tp	35.00
Same "	60.00
Same grading on road Union-tp	35.00
Same " " "	10.00
R. Glover planking for " "	8.40
D. Myers hauling sand on road "	6.00
L. Bates " " " "	3.00
A. Cobler " " " "	3.00
P. J. Showalter " " " "	3.00
Jas H. Rowland " " " "	3.00
I. Hopnich " " " "	1.50
J. Gross " " " "	3.00
Wilson Purdy " " " "	1.50
G. H. Duncan Supt'g bridges & cash adva.	33.35
Same one day Supt work Con tp & C. "	4.60
Same " " " "	33.15
B. F. Blair Supt road & bridge "	79.40
Same " work Con-tp "	14.65
Same 1 day at Newv'll & Spencerv'll "	12.38
A. D. Goetschius Supt bridge "	38.00
Same " "	20.55
G. Hoodlemire work on road Union-tp	8.00
J. C. St Clair notices on road &c. viewers	33.60
N. Buckland work on bridges Union-tp	7.00
Jas. McClellan on J. McKay's con. for bridge	10.00
I. Cool livery hire attending to roads &c.	18.50
Haskins & son " " "	3.00
A. S Legs " " "	25.50
A W Allen to Spencerv'll to accept dyke	5.00
J. J. VanAuken making ditch maps and leveling &c for dyke Concord-tp	[illegible]
Same posting ditch notices	11.50
Amos Britton reviewing ditch	3.00
J. Buchanan " "	3.00
J. J. VanAuken viewing &c. for ditches	35.00
Same	37.00
Same	35.00
Jno. Buchanan	4.00
F. Beard	4.00
J W. Clark " " " "	1.50
Jacob Myers " " " "	6.00
Same " " " road	1.50
P. B. Nimmons " " " "	3.00
John Shoub " " " "	3.00
Henry McClish " " " "	1.50
Edwin Ervin " " " "	1.50
W. L. Smith " " " "	3.00
Wm. Grube " " " "	3.00
John Sheffer " " " "	3.00
G. I. Patterson " " " "	3.00
Daniel Thomas " " " "	3.00
Daniel Lentz " " " "	3.00
Philip Albaught " " " "	1.50
John McOsker " " " "	1.50
D. W. Slaybaugh " " " "	3.00

Expense of Poor.

W. J. Austin & Co. goods for poor	18.95
Schaab Beugnot & Co. " " "	9.58
J. K. Bodine " " "	5.15
Abraham Shaffer " " "	12.00
F. E. Davenport " " "	35.53
Brand & Duncan " " "	93.48
J. & J. A. Shull " " "	28.63
Same	4.20
H. W. Coburn " " "	41.30
Jacob Kahn " " "	71.87
Same " " "	21.50
G. W. Miller " " "	4.45
S. W. Ralston " " "	4.92
J. A Potter " " "	5.65
Miller & Getrost " " "	13.50
G. C. Ralston " " "	37.92
A. H. Philips & Co. " " "	2.70
J. L. Davis " " "	127.96
J. J. Littlefield surgical attendance "	8.00
Jared Spooner medical "	84.00
H. W. Bowman " " "	30.00
Same " " "	11.75
D. R. Rotner " " "	15.20
S. M. Sherman " " "	7.25
Geo. Murphy " " "	40.50
W. S. Allen " " "	15.00
J. A. Cowan " " "	7.50
J. B. Casebeer " " "	7.80
J. N. Chamberlain " " "	25.00
Jonas Emanuel " " "	38.50
W. H. Madden " " "	5.00
J. L. Sheldon " " "	31.00
J. W. Shaffer work done for poor farm	4.00
Geo. Waggoner " " "	12.71
G. J. Waggoner " " "	2.75
D. J. George " " "	1.50
G. W. Stahl " " "	2.75
Wm. Murphy " " at "	30.37
Lena Shoudel " " "	26.00
Lydia Bowman " " "	14.00
S. A. Allen " " "	3.02
Filesa Gerardot " " "	5.35
E. Palmer " " on "	200.00
same " " "	41.42
T. L. Baker	44.00
Zimmerman Bros. material furnish poor	1.00
B. F. Blair span of mules for poor farm	250.00
Augustus Porter relief furnished poor	10.00
S. T. Galloway aid rendered "	4.00
Orpha E. Meek " "	10.00
Talma Rummel " "	8.00
Mary E. Compart " "	10.00
Chas. G. Smith " "	6.00
R. N. Crooks cash adv. to aid "	8.84
C. C. Shaffer coffins furnished "	20.00
Chas. Hanes meat " "	2.72
P. N. Calkins tile furnished poor farm	74.84
H. Levi meat " " "	8.19
Chas. Fox horse hire for " "	6.75
Baltser Shoudel work on " "	5.25
Jacob Mitchel sawing lumber poor farm	21.25
J. W Britton keeping a poor family	4.00
J. Rummel servecess as Supt of poor farm	150.00
B. F. Blair one day at " "	4.00
Geo. H. Duncan one day at " "	4.00
A. D. Goetschius " " " " "	4.00
same " " " " "	4.00
Geo. H. Duncan " " " " "	4.00
B. F. Blair one day at poor farm, cash paid out keeping and taking Miles to poor farm	12.00

Books, Stationary and Printing.

T C. Mays printing	$29.75
W. B. Buford blank books, stationary &c.	464.65
R. H. Weamer printing	50
A. S. Parker "	6.00

Expense of Court.

J. C. St. Clair summoning Jurors	18.00
— same 7 days services as Sheriff Com Court	14.00

Expense of Criminals.

J. C. St. Clair boarding prisoners	68.90

Expense of Insane.

W. J. Austin goods furnished	3.75

Salaries of County Officers.

James A. Barnes 32 days services	128.00
Daniel Gonser Treasurer for 3 months	250.00
I. Hague Auditor quarter end'g Nov. 30. '77	462.50
same, allowanc managing school fund	108.54
A. D. Goetschius Com. services 7 days	28.00
B. F. Blair " " "	32.00
G. H Duncan " " "	32.00

Expense of Public Buildings.

N. McLaughlin repairing Jail	89.31
James Anderson " "	3.00
same repairing Recorders office	2.00
J. L. Davis stoves &c. for Court House	127.60
M. C. Markle boarding hands	2.50
C. C. Shaffer repairing Court House	3.50
Wm. Meek cementing vaults	2.00

Miscellaneous Expenses.

E. Berry coal furnished county	69.25
I. Hague services as Co. Ag't.	28.65
A. J. Barnes holding Institute	50.00
D. Gonser postage stamps Tres. office	3.00
J. S. Bowers desk for Co. Supt.	1.200
J. L. Davis goods furnished county	10.38
D. D. Snyder " " "	2.85
F. E. Davenport " "	7.75
John Kruse wood for Court room	3.00
T. D. Gross serving citations	1.50
J. C. St. Clair washing &c., for Jail	4.25

Isaac Hague, Auditor. Dec. 30th, '77

* * *

—Subscribe for the Auburn Courier. Only $2.00 a year.

BOSS HARNESS SHOP

I have purchased the harness stock of Geo. Nock, and added largely to every description of stock that is usually kept in my line of trade, such as

HARNESS, DOUBLE AND SINGLE!

Bufalo Robes, Lap Robes,

Horse Blankets, Collars,

Whips, Brushes, Combs,

Harness Oil, Axel Greese,

Fine Ready-made Harness,

Double and Single a Specialty.

Manufactured by the most experienced workman that can be found in Northern Indiana, I employ none other, none other need apply. I would say to all customer frends that I will warrant al stock and work that goes out of my shop as recommended. I use none but the best Oak tanned Leather. I would invite all in need of goods in my line to call at my shop before purchasing elsewhere Shop in Flukes old Tannery Building on corner Jackson and seventh St. As I am bound not be undersold in the same class of goods in Northern Indiana

Being an old farmer formily I keep a very effable experienced Foreman to see that all work is well done. Repairing done with neatness and dispatch.

J. E. SHILLING, Sole Proprietor.

W. SHEFFER, Foreman.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of an Execution to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Samuel R. Wood is plaintiff and John Treesh is defendant requiring me to make the sum of Three Hundred and Twenty-Two dollars and Thirty-eight cents, $322.38, with interest on said judgment and costs I will expose at public sale to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, JANUARY 19th, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m., and 4 o'clock p. m. at the door of the Court House of DeKalb County Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years of the following real estate, to-wit:

Lot number thirty two [32] in Brandt & Ashley's addition to the town of Auburn, lot number twenty-seven [27] in the Western addition to the town of Auburn, and part of lot number ninety-seven (97) in the original plat of the town of Auburn, described as follows, to-wit: Commencing twenty-two (22) feet north of the south-west corner of said lot ninety-seven (97) thence north twenty-two 22 feet, thence east eighty 80 feet, thence south twenty-two 22 feet thence west eighty 80 feet to the place of beginning, all in DeKalb county and State of Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said judgment, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose at public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said judgment, interest and costs.

Sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
By Thos D. Gross Deputy.
W. H. Dills, Att'y. for Plaintiff.
Auburn, Ind., Dec. 26, 1877.
P. fee $9.75

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of an Execution to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Wm. Dunn is plaintiff, and Ann M Spencer is defendant requiring me to make the sum of Five Thousand, Nine Hundred and Two Dollars and Seventy-Six Cents $5902.76 with interest on said judgment and costs I will expose at public sale to the highest bidder on

SATURDAY, JANUARY 19th, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m. and 4 o'clock p. m. of said day at the door of the Court House of DeKalb County, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate to-wit:

Lots number twenty-eight, fifty-two, fifty-three, fifty-nine, eighty-two, eighty-three, one hundred and one, one hundred and thirty, one hundred and thirty three, one hundred and thirty-four, one hundred and thirty-one, one hundred thirty-nine, one hundred and forty, one hundred and fifty-seven, and one hundred and fifty eight, [28, 52, 53, 59, 82, 83, 101, 130, 133, 134, 131, 139, 140, 157 and 158,] all in the western addition to the town of Auburn, DeKalb county Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said judgment interest and costs, I will at the same time and place, expose at public sale, the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
By Thos. D. Gross, deputy.
Zollers & Zollers, Att'ys for Plaintiff.
Auburn, Indiana, Dec. 26th, 1877.
Pr. fee $9.50.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Orlando T. Letcher and William Letcher are plaintiffs, and Martin and Mary Maze, are defendants requiring me to make the sum of Six Thousand and Fifty Two dollars and Seventy-One cents, $6052.71 with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, JANUARY 19th, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day at the door of the Court House in Auburn DeKalb county, Indiana the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

North-east quarter of section twenty-four, [24] township thirty-four, [34], north of range fourteen [14], east, excepting one acre off the north west corner of said above described real estate, deeded to James Leonard, balance of said land to contain 160 acres more or less, in De Kalb county, Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, sheriff.
By Thos. D. Gross, Deputy.
Rose & Hartman, Attorneys for plff.
Auburn, Dec. 26th, 1877.
Pf. $8.75.

AUBURN FRUIT HOUSE.

PHLIP BASHELIER

Having purchased the large grocery stock of B. TRENTMAN, of Fort Wayne is now ready to supply the trade with

Groceries,

Provisions,

Fruits,

Crockery, &c.

At the lowest prices. Store in Odd-Fellows' buiding, North of Court House, Auburn, Indiana.

Highest price paid for COUNTRY PRODUCE.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Jacob Sibert is plaintiff and John McClellan is defendant requiring me to make the sum of one hundred and sixty-three dollars and seventy-five cents, ($163.75) with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder on

SATURDAY, JANUARY 19th, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House in DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

Part of out lot number six, (6), in Kuhlman's second addition to the town of Auburn, DeKalb county, Ind., commencing at a point on the south line of said out lot, one hundred and forty (140) feet west of the south east corner of said lot, and running thence west seventy (70) feet on said south line thence north ninety (90) feet to the north line of said lot, thence east seventy (70) feet on the north line of said lot, thence south ninety (90) feet to the place of beginning.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
By THOS. D. GROSS, Deputy.
Rose & Hartman, Attorneys for plaintiff.
Auburn, Dec. 26th, 1877.
Pf. $8.75.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Samuel Goudy is plaintiff and John A. Scholfield, et al. are defendants, requiring me to make the sum of Four Hundred and Nineteen dollars and thirteen cents, with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, JANUARY 5th, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House in DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years of the following real estate, to-wit:

The south half of the west half of the north-east quarter of section ten [10], township thirty five [35] north of rang fourteen [14] east, containing forty acres of land, more or less, in DeKalb county, Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
McBride, Morlan & Leas, Att'y's for plaintiff.
Auburn, Ind., Dec. 13th, 1877.
Pr. fee $7.50

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Robert Knott is plaintiff, and Robert M. Lockhart et al are defendants requiring me to make the sum fourteen hundred dollars, [$1400.00] with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, JANUARY 26th, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M. of said day, at the door of the Court House, in DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years of the following real estate to-wit:

As lot number thirty-six [36] in the original plat of the town of Waterloo, in DeKalb county Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interests and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St CLAIR, Sheriff.
Penfield & Emanuel Attorneys for plaintiff.
Auburn, Jan. 1st, 1878.
Pr. fee $7.00

MOODY & HOFFMAN, Attorneys.

STATE OF INDIANA }
DEKALB COUNTY }

In the DeKalb Circuit Court, February term 1878

William Shutt,
John D. Leighty,
VS.
Joseph Depew,
Isaac N. Depew,
Ellen Depew
and Jonathan Edwards.
} Complaint

The plaintiffs by Moody & Hoffman their Attorneys file in open Court an affidavit that said defendant Jonathan Edwards is not a resident of the State of Indiana, and the Court orders that publication hereof be made in the Auburn Courier.

Notice is, therefore, given said defendant that unless he appear on the second day of the next term of the DeKalb Circuit Court, to be holden on the fourth Monday of February, A. D. 1878, at the Court House in Auburn said county and State, and answer or demure to the complaint, herein the same will be heard and determined in his absence.

Witness my name and seal of said Court affixed at Auburn, this 29th day of December 1877.

G. H. K. Moss, Clerk DeKalb Circuit Court.

Notice for Stockholders' Meeting.

Notice is hereby given that according to the articles of association of the First National Bank of Auburn, Indiana, that the stockholders thereof are required to meet at the Banking house of said association, on the second Tuesday in January, annually, to elect a board of nine directors for the ensuing year, and to transact such other business as may come before said meeting. Therefore a meeting of the Stockholders of said association will be held on Tuesday, January 8th, 1878, at the banking house in Auburn, between the hours of 9 o'clock A. M., and 4 o'clock P. M., to elect a new board of directors, and to transact such other business as may come up.

JAS. V. HAZZARD, Cashier.
Auburn, Ind. Dec. 14th 1878.

NOTICE OF ADMINISTRATION.

Notice is hereby given, that the undersigned has been appointed by the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court of the State of Indiana, Executor of the will of Hugh Watt deceased, late of said county. Said estate is supposed to be solvent.

Guy Plum, Administrator.
December 10th, 1877.

Auburn Courier.

Local and Miscellaneous.

Thin Money.

There is a great abundance of money in this country. The only difficulty being that the country is very large and the money spread over a vast expanse territory. In some localities it is spread very thin. Chas F. Haveland's best French china only $65 for large dinner setts Glass goblets only 5c cnts each. We warrant every bit of our solid silver ware and silver plated ware to be of the double and triple plate, and all stamped with the [illegible] of Meriden Britanna Co., the best and largest plating company in the world. Tea set, $25 to 100. water set, $18 to 60; castors, $4 to 50. Card and Cake stands, pickle castors, knives, spoons, ladles, sugar shells, fruit knives, the best stock of plated at Ward's Cheap Crockery Store, No. 9 Columbia street, Fort Wayne, Ind.

—The young man who got a little more than his share of new years eve. "janjuice," and took occasion to serenade the town with his lusty howls of "The old man's shook me, and I'll never darken his door again," was seen crawling in through the back woodshed to get his christmas spanking, "just as nat'ral."

—Barns, when brought into court on New Years day, to be sentenced for stealing a hog, was asked if he had anything to ray. He had He said he was innocent as a snow-ball, that he had rich friends, and if he had known it in time be would have had enough present at his trial to buy the whole court. It was a laughable incident, though Barns was terribly in earnest.

—Several boys who were on a drunk New Year and "swore off" about midnight to never touch, taste or handle the intoxicating bowl again, could be seen on the streets yesterday morning looking forlorn and dryer than a match factory. They had the secret of spitting cotton to perfection and would have given their old hats if this town flourished a penny soup house —We regret to hear of a rumor that Mr Morse will sever his connection with the Baltimore road. We hope it has no foundation, as the loss of Mr. Morse will not be confined to Garrett alone. An active, earnest, enterprising citizen wields an influence wherever he is known, and they are always more widely known and make themselves felt by a personal force and charm entirely irresistable.

—Mine host of the Swineford House entertained the legal fraternity on New Years. A sumptuous dinner was served in excellent style, and to which the guests did ample justice. Among those present were Hon. H. S. Tousley and daughter, of Albion; Hon J. H. Woodhull and wife, of Angola; Hon Jas. I. Best and wife, Gen. L. J. Blair, wife and daughter, C. A. O. McClellan, & wife R. W. McBride and wife, D. Y. Husselman and wife and J. L. Morlan, of Waterloo; Wm. Croxton and wife, of Angola; J. E. Rose and wife, E. D. Hartman and wife, P. V. Hoffman and wife, Guy Plum and wife and W. L. Pendfield, of Auburn. After dinner the ladies visited the court room and jail, and promptly noticed a decided difference—in favor of the jail.

—Marriage Licenses.—The following marriage licences were issued by Clerk Moss, during December:

Robert Davis and Sarah A. Kastner, Nelson Frees and Delphina Tryan, R. C. Culbertson and Matilda C. Baltz, Chalmers Reasoner and Celestia Sheuberger, Will K. Balsley and Gertrude G. Allen, David Krider and Ida C. Clark, Sylvester P. Imhoff and Annetta L. Linn, L. T. Taylor and Sarah C. Jenkins, John Amsted and Sarah Fisher, Geo. Lung and Mollie Kegrice, Stephen C. Walker and Emma Freeby, Leonard S. Stamets and Francis M. McCoy, B. J. Miller and Emma McCoy, William Wallace and M. D. Colgrove, S. W. Cole and Sarah McNole, R. O. Graham and S. J. Dick, John A. Lower and Emma J. Eyers, Wm. Graves and Catharine Dean, Henry C. Hoffinger and Sarah Rowe, James T. Wyatt and C. L. Wildeson, John Houser and Juliet Jackson.

—We had the pleasure of attending the installation of the officers of the Masonic Lodge at Waterloo last Thursday evening. It was a most enjoyable, well arranged affair, in which citizens from Butler, Corunna, Auburn and other points participated. The exercises opened with the beautiful solo, "Sweet Spirit Hear My Prayer," by Miss Jennie McClellan, which was finely rendered, followed by other solos and quartetts by the local talent of the place. A solo by Mrs. Patterson was especially enjoyed, and the musical features of the occasion, including a string band, were most excellent. After the exercises, all repaired to the hall below where a beautiful collation of good things were spread and greatly enjoyed. We especially commend this fraternization of the citizens all over the county. It is prolific of kindly feeling and induces a finer appreciation of those qualities which develope, ennoble and elevate society. Let this be but the beginning of others soon to follow, that we may enjoy life and each others society as we journey along through the rough uneven path of life.

—New Years was an extremely dull day—nothing to enliven the boys except a shooting match near the slaughter house.

—The detectives are working out the grave-snatching affair at Fort Wayne in pretty good shape. Drs. Van Buskerk and Sommers are now before the court as the guilty parties of the transaction.

—The mails to the Baltimore have been carried by hand for several weeks owing to the muddy roads, but at the rate they are drying up the hacks will soon run again.

—Sunday was a rather cold day and the corners of our thoroughfares were not lined with young men. It would be well to have cold weather every Sabbath just for this one item.

—Billy Cochran, who lately abandoned his better-half is trying to recover his child. Parties who are acquainted with the circumstances think Billy has a right to it.

—The fast trains on the Air Line road were inaugurated January 1st, 1878 between New York and Chicago, and the relays of postal clerks are the same as under the old arrangement.

—The members of the M. E. church heard words from the pulpit last Sabbath morning that should have a tendency to wake up their religious spirits. A little plain talk has the right effect sometimes.

—A minstrel party will be organized in this city soon. Charley Follett is on the "dance committee" and the balance of the party will see to securing half fare railroad tickets and board by the bulk.

—The "cloth man," who has been stopping at the Swineford House several weeks, was taken to the county asylum Sunday morning last in a bad condition He had been drinking hard for some time and it ended in a spell of sickness.

—We hear of a farmer in the vicinity of Butler who had the sand to thrash a cloth peddler. Let him come to the front and give us his name and it shall be linked in memory's chain with that of Geo. Washington, &c. Show up.

—List of unclaimed letters in Auburn P. O. Dec. 31st, 1877.

O. Broughton, Miss Lissie Boiles, Diana Hathaway, George Soule, John Yelford, Charles Young, Jacob Yorick, Ben. Ziglor. Joseph Rainier, P. M.

—Shooting matches seem to be the popular amusement at present. Quite an interesting one was had at Mr. Pepple's, between here and Waterloo, last Saturday, and one at Mr. Kapp's candy store in the evening.

Piano for sale —A good Piano, bought three years ago, very little used and never abused, with velvet stool and cloth cover can be had for $200 if application be made immediately to Mrs. T. R. Dickinson, at Waterloo.
Jan. 1, 1878.

—G. Rodenbaugh having purchased the interest of J. I Smith in the harness business in this place, will continue the business, selling harness as cheap as ever. Call and see him before purchasing elsewhere. Remember the place, North of Public Square.

—It is indeed very peculiar how public opinion and discretion disagree. The former thinks it improper to "kick a man when he's down," and the latter protests against kicking at any other time, especially if you are in minority so far as size is concerned.

—Wood.—We are entirely out of wood at this office, and if we have one subscriber who does not wish to see us perish with cold, he will bring us wood and relief. We know the roads are bad and a part of a load is all we can expect now.

—The Whitly county Commercial held a public reception January 1st. These entertainments are becoming popular with the country press. As soon as our office undergoes a thorough cleaning we may take a notion to be in "fashion, too."

—Guard against theives. Quite a number of our citizens have recently received nocturnal visits from these prowling miscreants. We learn that the somke-house belonging to W. L. Meese was entered the other night, but fortunately the dog scared away the thief.

—Sunday morning, of last week, the barn of N. Williamson, between this place and Waterloo, was destroyed by fire. A man by the name of Spindler was found guilty and had a hearing before Justice Butt who put his bail bond at $1000, and failing to procure it he was conveyed to jail.

—When a girl begins to take an interest in the arrangement of a young man's necktie, it is an infallible sign of something more serious than sisterly regard. This remark is called from the fact that we noticed one of our young ladies arranging a necktie for a fellah on Seventh street the other day.

—In bringing in your wood on subscription, remember that the bargain always was $2 worth of wood, and not a wagon box full. The roads are getting good now and we won't take a "stand-off" any longer. If it ain't brought in pretty soon, we will expect you to whack up a two dollar note for the Courier.

THE NEW YEAR.

The Courier Starts Out With a Lively Batch of Locals.

—Look out for winter now.

—Remember and write 1878.

—The ground hog comes in next.

—Club dance last Monday night.

—The days are lengthing out again.

—Potatoes are 65 cents per bushel.

—The hog market is "too dead to skin."

—Waterloo has organized a "tramp force."

—No wedding in the city during the holidays.

—The roads are in a much better condition.

—J. J. Latson has been suffering with rheumatism.

—This term of court has been an interesting one.

—How many gave to the poor during the holidays.

—Enos Kuhlman is home on a visit with his family.

—Penfield & Emanuel have dashed up a new sign.

—The teamsters have had a hard winter financially.

—The delinquent tax list is said to be small this year.

—The Commissioners' allowances are lengthy this week.

—Rev. A. Young held services at Garret New Years.

—The regular session of Congress convenes next week.

—The shoemakers and blacksmiths call for a freeze up.

—Geo. Patterson will engage in the lumber trade again.

—The mum social at S. W. Ralston's was a pleasant affair.

—The grand jury found several indictments this sitting.

—Sawdust crossings are the style now on several streets.

—Did you loose your red ribbon through the holidays.

—Several convicts for the state's prison this term of court.

—The gun shop has been removed into Raseley's old stand.

—The Defiance people are having trouble in canal matters

—Fred Shoemaker will not apply again for license. So we hear.

—The Larwell Review has picked up and will look for new quarters.

—A Protracted meetings will begin a the M. E. church next Sabbath.

—A new wood house is being erected on Hank Altenberg's old property.

—School opened again yesterday, after a vacation through the holidays.

—The bottom of the road north-west of town is in the neighborhood of China

—We have not heard of any "hightoned" presents given away this year.

—Waterloo will be favored with a dramatic performance January 22nd, 1878.

—Kapp holds the juvenile crowd at night Shooting air guns is the amusement.

—Sixty children came to their death by a boiler explosion in New York last week.

—John Ray has decorated the old Woodford building with boot and shoe signs.

—The dramatic business is below par with our amateur performers this winter.

—The ice men feel a trifle encouraged It got colder yesterday and snowed a little,

—There was nothing on the programme for new years and the day past off quietly.

—The Kokomo Democrat issued a triple sheet as a christmas gift to their patrons.

—The Corunna schools had no vacation on christmas or new years. Rub our head.

—Albion and Butler are talking of fire engines. The burnt child generally avoids fire.

—Was you at the H. and L. dance? Some of our young ladies do not like to own up.

—Dr. Cowan has gone into the stock business. He has 100 fouls, several porkers, &c.

—There is no crossing as yet on Fourth street. There will be no need for it next summer.

—R. W. Starr, city editor of the Goshen Times, was married last week to Miss M. Hopkins.

—The saloons were closed on new years. Reason—because they were not allowed to be open.

—Uncle Tom's Cabin last Tuesday night at Garrett. Jno. Knoder managed the performance.

—A new paper has been started at Cherubusco. It starts out with a liberal advertising patronage.

—Jas. Porter is talking of trading his bakery property for an interest in a woolen mill somewhere in Ohio.

—Isaac Cool has been out west looking at the country. He reports the mud there fully as bad as it is here.

—There isn't much difference between a grasshopper and a grass-widow Either will jump at the first chance.

—No other remedy has proved so effectual in relieving coughs and colds as Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. Sold by F. E. Davenport Criminal Matters.

There has been unusual activity in criminal matters during the present session of court. There was a fine display of felonies on the docket at the commencement, and he who is searching after the curiosities in crime will find here a large field to work upon. So far five candidates have been nominated for the state prison.

Our reporter made them a fashionable call yesterday, and learned from them individually their view of the case. The first one interviewed was John Stacy, who was given a retirement of two years at Michigan City, for committing a rape upon the person of Miss Mary Gossage last October, at Waterloo. John seems to look seriously upon his future and does not seem much elated over the prospects. The sentence was a severe one and of course from his standpoint the witnesses for the prosecution swore falsely. Nothing will convince him that he is not as innocent as a suckling babe.

The next on the list is the humorous Barns, whose negotiations for the transfer of a hog in Smithfield township created suspicion. Through the kindness of the jury he will remain away two years. He claims that a lie was sworn to that he might be indicted, and is not altogether pleased at the result. He leaves a wife and child behind, and claims that he is oh, so innocent.

To give variety to the calendar, Lewis Abbott is brought up for forging a note on Jacob Kahn for $8.00. For this little amusement the jury said he might hie himself away to Michigan City and after two years come home with the other boys. He is from Fort Wayne and therefore don't take the change of location much to heart. He says with an air of entire belief, that four lawyers and a clerk have pronounced the note not a forgery. He does not ignore the fast that twelve good men have concluded differently on the same point. Of course he is as innocent as an angel, and with frequent repetition now believes his own story.

The next on the docket, if not a variety in its way as a crime, certainly links with it a very rare individual, all the way from Buffalo. He is a poet, and we give a specimen of his immense fabrications. B. J. Schimering was in the company of John Butler and Gorman, at Garrett, all drunk, and during this association some sixteen dollars of Butler's, disappeared. He is as innocent as a lamb, as only about two dollars were found on his person. Tears flowed freely from all present at the recital of his gentle story, and Herodotus will turn in his coffin when he hears of the injustice under which this sweet lad now suffers.

Again the panorama moves onward, and in comes the heart and soul of this worthy crew—Billy Gorman, only seventeen years old. Bright, sharp, witty, he rules the roost, and all acknowledge him a leader. He came from Deadwood City through Chicago, and landed in Garrett, where they got the dead wood on him in a case of larceny. He is honest in his convictions—that is he thinks he was honestly convicted and deserves all he got, and has the hardihood to say so. This sprinkling of honesty can only be accounted for from the fact that he has been connected with the printing profession as a typo. It should be a matter of general congratulation that this connection has saved him from a career of crime for a year to come,—he goes to the state prison for that time.

J. Hopnicks, by some inscrutable manner, was sentenced to jail 30 days and a fine of $5. During the trial he seemed perfectly indifferent as to his fate, and we fear John will need to take himself up a good deal before he becomes a useful member in society.

The boys seem to be enjoying themselves and are only quiet when the Buffalo poet inflicts one of his effusions upon them, and they are silent and gloomy. The following was sent to His Honor as a specimen of jail literature:

THE CONVICT'S LAMENT.

I was born in Boston, a city you know well,
Brought up by honest parents, the truth to you I'll tell.
Brought up by honest parents and raised most tenderly,
'Till I became a roaming blade and I'll prove my destiny.
It was at the court of session, Judge Tousely wrote it down.
The jury found me guilty, and I'm going to Michigan town.
The jury found me guilty, and I'm on my way to jail.
My parents went to Tousley, boys, to get me out on bail.
There stands my poor old father a standing at the bar,
Likewise my poor old mother a tearing off her hair.
With the tearing of her old grey locks, and the tears a running down.
Oh, son, oh son, what have you done, you're going to Michigan town.
I jumped aboard a western train one cold and frosty morn.
And every station we went by you could see the people swarm,
"There goes that noted burglar and for the prison he's bound.
Some great crime or other, boys, he's going to Michigan town."
There is a girl in Boston, a girl that I love well
And if ever I gain my liberty, with her I, am going to dwell
If ever I gain my liberty, bad company I will shun
And bid adieu to night-walking and also to drinking rum.
Now, all you who have your liberty, pray keep it while you can
And don't be fooled or don't you rue, or break the rule of man,
For if you do you'll surely rue and then you'll be like me,
A serving some long stretches, boys, in the cottage by the sea.

[Composed by Billy Gorman, from Deadwood]

—In regard to the recent report that Isaac Springer, of Kendallville, has fallen heir to an estate of $500,000 in New Jersey, C. H. Dodge informs us that it is a dead certainty, that the papers are all right and in the hands of a competent person who will soon secure the claim. We are glad to hear of it, for we know Isaac's generosity will prompt him to divide with his good old mother-in-law and relatives at this place.—Angola Herald.

—Mr. Rowly, of Columbus, Ind., is visiting friends here.

—Ed. Bodine has his drug stock already packed preparatory to its removal to Ohio.

—Austin, the upside-down boot and shoe-man, and lady spent New Years in Richmond, Ind.

—Last Tuesday was swearing off day and the saloon keeper's trade will be slack until Saturday night.

—Did those poor unfortunate men and boys in the county jail have a happy new year? We think not.

—A saloon in Bryan is called the "Health Office." It means, no doubt, [illegible] in the other world.

—Mr. and Mrs. D. D. Snyder returned from their wedding tour Tuesday, and are now domiciled at the Swineford.

—Death has taken away one of Chas. Fox's little boys. He was about five years old and was a bright, promising lad.

—J. C. Loveland, Esq., he of various fame, has opened a job office at Clyde, Ohio. Joe., shake, we wish you abundant success.

—Our quail hunters are very successful of late. We hear of several parties who have killed over twenty in one day's hunt.

—Chas. Klotz was made recipient of a handsome New Years present by his wife. It weighed nine pounds and is a she boy again.

—Be sure to call for Dr. Marshall's Cough Syrup if you are troubled with a bad cough or cold It relieves after first dose. Price 25c. Sold in every drug store.

—Marshal Galloway had a lively chase after a bovine in the woods west of town, last Monday. Sam can't be excited, oh, no.

—Shiner carried off Mrs. Leasure's chickens, sold them and lit out. He didn't want any of that "rest over there," on his plate.

—Mr. John Ray is now ready to attend to repairing boots and shoes at his new shop over the barber shop. Good work at reasonable rates.

—The manufacture of corsets has become so perfect that hugging a girl is about as satisfactory as squeezing a parlor stove, we have been told.

Query: "Why will men smoke common tobacco, when they can buy Marburg Bros. "Seal of North Carolina," at the same price?" dec 27.1y

—Our reports from the schools throughout the county indicates commendable progress and less than usual dissatisfaction with teachers.

—A party for the little folks was given at the residence of F. D. Ryan, Esq., last Thursday evening, and one at Dr. Cowan's Monday evening.

—W. K Sheffer, Esq., of the Angola Herald, left his card on our table last week. We are sorry we were not in at the time, and hope he will call again.

—The Hook and Ladder boys came out about seven dollars ahead on their dance. Small favors, however, are thankfully received.

—The holidays only come once in a year, but for all that they become so stale that our church people have done away with the old styled watch meetings.

—The holidays were exceedingly quiet. The inclemency of the weather and the depth of the mud prevented people living in the country from coming into town.

—A number of our citizens presented Maj. S. W. Sprott with a handsome suit of clothes as a token of their esteem for a worthy, generous, liberal-hearted gentleman.

—Mothers need not be kept awake nights by the incessant coughing of their children if they have Dr. Marshall's Cough Syrup at hand, and give one or two doses in season. Price 25c. Sold in every drug store.

—Mr. M. Long passed over the river of death last night. He has suffered intensely for a long time. Funeral services at the M. E. church to-morrow at 2 o'clock P. M. Particulars of his life and death will be given next week.

—The Waterloo Press and the Indianian have commenced to announce Republican candidates for president in 1880. They agree that Grant or Conkling will do, especially the latter. Give the "turky gobler" a chance, say me.

Farm for Sale.

The Somers farm, one mile south-east of Auburn, is for sale. It contains 165 acres, fine orchard, good improvements and will be sold cheap. Terms, one-third down, balance to suit purchaser.

Apply to James McClellan,
Administrator.

[From the Angola Republican.]

A SAD ACCIDENT AT ANGOLA.

DEATH OF S. L. YANDES.

One of the most sad and shocking accidents ever occurring in this community took place last Thursday evening, resulting in the death of two of our citizens and a very near call unto death of three others. The names of the dead are Simon L. Yandes and Samuel Truesdell. Those who escaped the horrors of death are, David Yengling, K Menzenberger and W. H. Piper, all citizens of this place. The facts as we have learned them are as follows;

These five men went to Silver Lake, about 3½ miles west of Angola, for the purpose of fishing, and started from Castell's landing just before dark. The boat was a large, new and staunch row-boat, with capacity for carrying six or eight persons. After rowing around the east side of the lake a half mile or more and when it was dark they began fishing. When near Ward's cove, and not very far from shore the boat suddenly tipped over and all went into the water. Yandes and Truesdell were in the stern engaged in rowing. When the boat capsized all of them were free from alarm or fear and all retained their presence of mind, thinking the accident would amount to nothing more than a wetting and the loss of a few fish. In attempting to turn the boat right side up, they worked rather precipitously and it turned several times over and remained-bottom side up. They then thought it best to cling to it and try to work it toward the shore. After proceeding about 15 ft. they found themselves encountering the marl-bed which characterized the bottom in that part of the lake. This was a serious disadvantage to them, for they could not find resting place or solid bottom. They kept trying to advance the boat but could not. They began to cry for help, if perchance some body might come to their assistance.—The old gentleman, Yandes, was becoming quite exhausted and could do nothing but cling to the stearn of the boat and keep his head above water.

At last, they succeeded in reaching the bogs, but were now unable to get the boat along any further, as there was no bottom to the mud, nothing but soft quagmire over or through which they found it impossible to reach the shore. Piper, Yengling and Menzenberger, however, essayed to make their way through the mud, a distance of about thirty feet to the harder land. Mr. M.'s strength failed him and he sank between the boys, but Piper, who seemed to be the stoutest one in the party, assisted him up several times, and they finally reached firmer ground. So also did Yengling, but in a very exhausted condition and unable to go farther. Truesdell and Yandes remained at the boat, having raised their bodies upon it somewhat.—They could not venture to strike for the shore, but were told to await help where they were. Piper went through the woods nearly half a mile to Mrs. Ward's and John Caster's house. Mr. Castel and his hired man, with lanterns, went to the scene of disaster, and found Yengling and Menzenberger nearly chilled to death on shore and they assisted them to Mrs. Ward's.—About the same time Sylvester Lock and Ben Wheaton who had heard the cry for help, came up and found Truesdell dead in the mud. Yandes could scarcely speak. After bridging the quagmire Truesdell's body was secured, and Yandes rescued in an insensible state. He expressed a desire to be saved, but died about five minutes after he reached the house. About midnight the survivors were taken home, and the corpses removed to their respective families Friday morning.

[Mr. Yandes was born in Wabash, Ind., in 1832. He was a resident here for a number of years, during several of which he was postmaster. He was an easy-going, liberal-hearted, amiable gentleman. He leaves a family of wife and nine children, three daughters married. We regret to say that the family is poorly provided for, though the citizens there are doing all they can. He was buried on last Sabbath at 2 o'clock, p.m. by the Odd Fellows of Angola.]

—The Fort Wayne News of Saturday says: "Dr. T. B. Austin spoke at the Rink last night." Wonder if that is our Boot Upside-Down man He left here on that day and said he was going to Richmond. What if he were a lecturer in disguise. He can talk—no mistake about that. The only thing that disturbs us is, to know if the Rink was full, whether they all got out alive. How are you Doc. We can't speak so largely of him as a lecturer, but in way of selling boots and shoes cheap he can beat anything in the state. When people come twenty miles past other towns to get the advantages of his prices, you may know he has got 'em, got 'em bad—that is, low prices.

Sedan Items.

—Sedan though almost dead in everything, is alive in the interest of temperance. The temperance people of this vicinity are energetic workers, and are bound to push forward with greater rapidity than ever this great work of reformation. The drinking people of this place who have been cold and indifferent in this matter of temperance are now rolling to the front lending their aid and influence to the cause, and thus perfecting harmony in the work.

WHAT IS THE LATEST ?

CUSTOME MAD

Artic Coats, Ulsters, Broadway
OverCoats, Winter Suits,
Diagonal Coats
And Vests.

SAM, PETE & MAX.

FORT WAYNE.

TURNING OVER THE NEW LEAF.

The year begins—I turn a leaf,
All over writ with good resolves;
Each to fulfill will be in chief
My aim while earth its round revolves.
How many a leaf I've turned before,
And tried to make the record true;
Each year a wreck on Time's dull shore
Proved much I dared, but little knew.

Ah, bright resolve! How light you bear
The future's hopeful standard on!
How brave you start; how poor you wear!
How soon are hope and courage gone!
You point to deeds of sacrifice,
You shun the path of careless ease;
Lentils and wooden shoes? Is this
The fare of a human soul to please?

What wonder, then, if men do fail,
Where good is ever all austere?
While vice is fair and pleasant all,
And turns the leaf to lead the year?
Yet, still once more I turn the leaf,
And mean to walk the better way;
I struggle with old unbelief,
And strive to reach the perfect day.

Why should the road that leads to heaven
Be all one reach of sterile sand?
Why not, just here and there, be given
A rose to deck the dreary land?
But, why repine? Others have trod,
With sorer feet and heavier sins,
Their painful pathway toward God—
My pilgrimage anew begins.

Failure and failure, hitherto,
Has Time inscribed upon my leaves;
I've wandered many a harvest through,
And never yet have gathered sheaves.
Yet once again the leaf I turn,
Hope against hope for one success;
One merit mark at least to earn,
One sunbeam in the wilderness.

A NEW-YEAR'S CALLER.

Widow Van Dusenbery's Interview With the Personal D——.

THE WIDOW.

It was one bright, crisp day, the 1st of January, 1875. The wind was from the northwest, but not in the least boisterous. The sky was blue, and the sun shone brightly, causing the snow, which had fallen the night before, to a sufficient depth to render sleighing on the avenue possible, to sparkle brightly and make weak-eyed people wink when they looked out of doors. A merry jingle of sleigh-bells gave a cheerful sound in the air, and everybody said "happy New-year" to everybody else, with a hearty zest that plainly indicated sincerity and enjoyment.

Every house on the magnificent avenue, except here and there one where a small basket hung by a black ribbon on the door-bell, was open to callers, and inside were bright groups of pleasant ladies waiting amiably to receive the compliments of the season from the gentlemen of their acquaintance. But nowhere in the whole city could a prettier picture be seen of New York life on New-year's day than in the parlor of Widow Dusenbery. It was a fine house, with a brown-stone front and bay window, and it contained a good many fine things besides the fine lady herself, who, on this particular occasion, was the only visible occupant of her richly-decorated drawing-room. The widow had been fortunate in marrying a member of an old Knickerbocker family; she adopted all his ancestors as her own, and furnished her apartments with all the quaint old furniture that old families are popularly supposed to leave to their descendants. Old china, old clocks, dingy looking portraits, in tarnished gilt frames, curious cabinets, and queer glasses and faience dishes abounded in all her rooms, which she had bought at auctions; and, if people chose to imagine that they were heirlooms brought from Holland by her ancestors when they came over with Hendrick Hudson in the "Half Moon," it was none of her business to correct their mistake. But she by no means wanted to be considered old herself. Quite the contrary. Her hair was scant and grey; but she wore perfectly lovely tresses, of a rich brown hue, which had once belonged to a peasant girl of Brittany. And, although it was many years since her cheeks had been in the least suggestive of a damask rose, on this occasion they were so skillfully tinted by her maid that no one would suspect the complexion was not her own—as, indeed, it was. But, if her complexion was not real, her diamonds and laces were, and they harmonized most admirbly with her dove-colored satin dress and her pearl-handled marabout fan.

Not only did the widow's taste run in the direction of old furniture and old families, but she preferred the old religious forms to the new, and she had one of the most high-priced pews in the church of St. Bonifacios, which was very high and ritualistic, and she enjoyed the reredos, the candles on the altar, the boy choir, the purple chasuble of Father Lansing, the acolytes, the thurible, and all the other ornamental accessories of that fashionable place of worship immensely. She believed in a personal D——, and would not have yielded her faith on that point for any consideration.

Like a good many other good people who begin the new year with good resolutions, the Widow Van Dusenbery had resolved to turn over a new leaf and inaugurate a reform movement. She had always been charitably inclined, and had subscribed very generously to the Anti-mendicity Society; but, owing to the failure of the Rainbow Insurance Company, she had been a considerable loser, and her income was diminished to such an extent that she had been compelled to sell her coach-horses and to dismiss two of her servants, and she was now trying to rub along in a quiet way, with only three maid-servants and a one-horse cab, in which she did her shopping and took her airings in the park. It was a rather humiliating condition to be placed in. Her husband had cruelly left her with the miserable income of only $30,000; out of which she had to defray her own expenses and maintain her only child, a promising boy of 22, who was then completing his education in Paris, after having visited the Holy Land and Egypt.

The name of this precious youth was Balthazar. But she called him Balt, because that was the way they called this uncle, after whom he was named and whose property he was expected to inherit. It was for his sake that she had determined to turn over a new leaf. It was time she began to save up something against Balt's return; for the poor boy had met with several little accidents, which required his overdrawing the sums he had allotted for his European expenses.

Scarcely had she seated herself in her parlor, with her feet resting upon a Persian rug, and a glowing cannel-coal fire lighting up her handsome features, than she had an opportunity for putting into practical shape her new resolution. There was a ring at the door-bell, and the widow wondered who her first caller would be, when Bridget entered the parlor and pettishly exclaimed: "It's only a beggar boy, who says he wants something to eat."

"Drive him away," said the widow, with a look of disappointment. "It's too bad that people who live on the avenue should be so troubled with beggars. We pay taxes enough to be protected from beggars, and burglars, and book agents, I am sure. Don't let one of them come into the hall door. They are the plague of my life."

Another ring at the hall door, for it was now noon, and the sound of bells and carriages and merry voices were heard out of doors. The duty of callers had commenced in earnest. Bridget came into the parlor again, with a small package in her hand, addressed "To the lady of the house."

This was something worth having, indeed. What a graceful and pleasant reminder it was, to be sure, of the good old times! It was a long, slender flask, covered with gilt labels certifying to its being a genuine product of the famous convent of the Chartreuse; and attached to it was a card bearing the "Compliments of the season from Pilford & Co., choice family groceries, etc."

"What a pleasant thing it is to be remembered in so delicate a manner on New-year's day, said the widow. "Chartreuse was always my favorite liqueur. It is such a religious cordial, coming direct from the hands of those holy monks at the Chartreuse. What a lovely color it is!"

It was, indeed, lovely, for it was the golden-colored, and not the green; and the widow said she must have a taste of it at once. Instead of placing it on the refreshment table, in the extension, she ordered Bridget to bring a little Japan stand and place it at her side, with a silver waiter and some liqueur-glasses, so that, when one of her intimate friends came in, she could ask him to take a drop of the delicious cordial with her. She drank one glass of it, and found it so much to her liking that she could not well resist the temptation to try another. It was so fragrant, so delicate, so sweet and so smooth!

THE WISH.

Most people who knew the Widow Van Dusenbery imagined that she had everything that heart could desire; but she had a capacious heart, which was capable of desiring a good many things that fortune had withheld from her. For herself she did not care. She could live, if necessary, upon the hull of a bean; but she could not endure the idea of anything being denied her darling boy. She had indulged in many ambitious schemes for the promotion of his happiness; and, as she sat musing upon the possibilities of the future, she heard the cheerful tooting of a tin trumpet, which announced the coming of a coach driven by a member of the Four-in-hand Club.

"There they go!" she exclaimed, in a half-reproachful tone. "But if Balt were at home he could not afford to keep a drag. He would be compelled to amuse himself with billiards and cigars, poor boy! It is too bad." And a pearly tear meandered down the widow's cheek, dividing her complexion in a very curious manner.

"I wish," she said to herself, "that I had $100,000 that I could give him as a New-year's present, when he comes back from his European tour. It would be such a delightful surprise to him; and then he could drive a coach of his own."

"A hundred thousand dollars is not such a very unreasonable sum," said the gentleman whom the widow just at that moment discovered by her side, but whose entrance she had not before noticed.

"I think myself it is very reasonable," she said, "and I don't see why I could not have it."

"You shall have it, my dear madam," said the stranger. "Such modesty and maternal tenderness as you have manifested in your very reasonable desires must be rewarded."

And thereupon the stranger drew from his bosom a bundle of greenbacks, which he reached her, on which was distinctly inscribed $100,000.

"Thank you! I am overcome by your goodness," she said, as she took the bundle and placed it on the little table beside the flask of Chartreuse. "Won't you take a glass of this delicious liqueur?" she said.

"I never drink," replied the stranger, solemnly.

"But this is a cordial made by the monks of Chartreuse," said the widow.

"So much the worse," said the stranger. "I hate monks and all their works."

This was said with such a bitterness of tone that the widow looked into the face of her visitor, and saw that he was a very saintly-looking personage. He had a very pale complexion, regular features, black hair and eyes, thin lips and a clean-shaven face. He was dressed exactly in the style of a ritualist high churchman—a long-skirted, black frock coat, with a narrow collar that fitted closely to his neck, a waistcoat which had no opening in front, and a misty black band around his throat. In truth, he looked so nearly like the Rev. Brown Stout, who sometimes officiated at the altar in St. Bonifacius, that the widow felt confident he must be a truly good man, and it would be disrespectful to him to ask where he came from.

"It is a favorite maxim of mine," said the stranger, in an impressive tone of voice, "that to be virtuous is to be happy. But you won't have a good time."

The widow would have smiled at the old remark of her visitor; but he winked his right eye at her in such a wicked manner that it caused a cold chill to creep over her.

"Was there anything more that you desired?" said the stranger in a persuasive manner.

"Really, now," said the widow, "a hundred thousand dollars is such a small sum, and it would make such a small show alongside of the fortunes of some my dear Balt's acquaintances. If it were only two hundred thousand I should feel quite content."

"Oh! very well," replied the stranger; and, putting his hand to his breast, he took out another bundle, just like the first one, which he placed in the widow's lap. "Is there anything else you desire?"

"What a simpleton I was," said the widow to herself, "to make such a moderate demand!" And, as she looked at the two bundles of greenbacks, they really seemed hardly worth having. "Since you are so very kind," replied the widow, "may I be so bold as to ask you to make up the sum to five hundred thousand? It will be such a delightful surprise to Balt when he comes home to find such a fortune at his disposal. I hope you will not think me unreasonable."

"I beg you will make no apologies, my dear madam," said the stranger, while a grim smile seemed to flicker across his pale features. "Anything may be forgiven to a mother's love. Your desire shall be gratified." The stranger thereupon placed another but larger bundle of greenbacks upon her lap, making up the desired sum.

She clutched at them eagerly; but hardly had she got them in her possession than she felt chagrined at her mistake in not demanding more.

"Who wants to be half a millionaire?" she exclaimed pettishly. "Why not make it a round sum at once? A million dollars would put my poor boy on his feet and enable him to hold up his head among the millionaires."

"A million of dollars is a large sum," said the stranger, "and the millionaires are few in number."

"Oh! it is a mere trifle," said the widow. "I know a good many millionaires, and I have always thought it would be such a comfort to be one of them. I should so like to know what the feelings of a millionaire must be."

"Your wishes are not to be denied," said the munificent visitor. "Here is the sum you ask for!" and, without more ado, he plumped a bundle of greenbacks into her lap, which she seized upon with as much avidity as a hungry cur would snap at a bone. But, strangely enough, the possession of this immense sum only produced a feeling of disappointment and regret, which must have reflected on her face, for the stranger exclaimed, with astonishment: "What! Does not that satisfy you?"

"I don't like to appear ungrateful," said the widow; "but, after all, $1,000,000 is but a small matter, compared with the fortunes of some of the mere upstarts that live on the avenue. I couldn't even afford to move further up-town on such a sum; and I don't think that Balt could keep a yacht on it. If it were only $10,000,000, now, I should be entirely satisfied."

The stranger fairly jumped in his seat when he heard the exorbitant demand. "Ten millions of dollars!" he exclaimed. "It is monstrous! However, I cannot deny you!" and he smiled sweetly, the widow thought, as he piled up the great bundles of greenbacks before her.

The widow breathed short for a moment; and then, as the thought of all the good she might do if she only had a little more, and of the respect that would be paid to Balt when he should come back, and of the magnificent white-marble house she would like to build on Murray hill, of the charitable institutions she would endow, of the dinner parties she would give, and of the diamonds she might purchase—as the thought of these things flashed upon her mind, she had a feeling of unhappiness which she had never experienced before.

"You're still unsatisfied," said the stranger, impatiently. "Why did you not say at first what you wished? Why detain me all this while, when I have so many other calls to make, this morning? Let me know at once the limit of your wishes, that I may gratify them and be done with it."

"Well, then," said the widow, growing bolder as he spoke, "I do not think it would be at all beyond the bounds of a moderate ambition if I should say that I will be entirely content with a hundred millions. Properly invested, by the advice of my brokers in Exchange place, I think it would yield me an income of ten millions a year; and with that sum Balt and I could manage to rub along without help from anybody."

"The demand is preposterous, madam. But I cannot deny you!" said the stranger, with a graver expression than he had yet shown. And instantly the whole room was filled with bundles of greenbacks. They were stacked up against the walls and under the tables, and heaped upon the floor in every direction. And the widow looked around upon the treasure with a proud and lofty feeling, in which there was hardly a tinge of selfishness, for she thought only of the benefit that her darling son would derive from it. Don't call it selfishness. She was purely womanly.

"I must now mention the condition upon which this vast sum shall be yours," said the stranger.

"The condition!" exclaimed the widow, looking at him reproachfully. "I imagined it was all mine already."

"Wealth has its responsibilities," said the stranger, "and you surely could not expect to have a hundred millions of dollars and do nothing for it. But the condition on which this great treasure shall be left with you is very light. It is only that you shall commit a murder."

"Horror!" exclaimed the widow. "I can never do it."

"Very well, then, said the stranger. "I have nothing more to say. And he commenced putting the greenbacks into his bosom. And as the widow watched the lessening heaps she cried out: "Stop! Stop!"

The stranger stayed his hand, and the bundles of greenbacks were as numerous as before. They fell all around her like flakes of snow.

"How can I sully my hand and my conscience by committing a murder?" said the widow.

"Why, my dear madam," said the stranger, "your squeamishness is absurd. Do you not know that wealth of all kinds represents toil, and suffering, and agony, and murder? The jewels that sparkle in your ears were only obtained by the sacrifice of many lives, and you do not enjoy a luxury but at the cost of a somebody's existence. It is a frivolous mistake to feel a repugnance at committing a murder yourself, when you feel none while enjoying the results of murder committed by other people."

"But whom do you wish me to murder?" she asked.

"I do not ask you to murder any one in particular," said the stranger. "All that I would have you do is to throw a dart into a crowd. Whoever it may strike will be a long way off, and you may acquit yourself of any evil design or ill-natured feeling against any one in especial. Here is a little arrow. It has a very sharp point. Take it and throw it with all your force. It will take a long flight; but it will strike somebody."

"A good way off?" said she, and she took it in her trembling hand.

"A long way off!" said the stranger. "Now, then, throw." And she lifted her arm and threw the arrow with all her might. As she did so, the stranger glanced at her with a fearful grin. The wall of the apartment suddenly fell away like a mist, and she saw the prostrate form of a young man lying beneath a palm tree, with the arrow lodged in his breast. And she heard him exclaim, in faint accents, as the life-blood flowed from his wound: "Oh! mother, mother!"

She shrieked: "I have murdered my dear Balt!"

There was a loud crash. The terrible vision disappeared. The stranger was gone. There was not a scrap of a greenback to be seen; while Bridget rushed into the parlor, exclaiming: "For dear sakes! What in the world is the matter?"

"Did anybody go out, just now?" said Mrs. Van Dusenbery, rubbing her eyes.

"Not a soul has been inside the house," said Bridget.

"Did you see any bundles of greenbacks lying about?" asked the widow.

"Not a rag," said Bridget.

"And don't you smell any brimstone?" asked the widow.

"Not a ha'porth," replied Bridget, "except the parlor-matches." "But who did this?" she asked, as she pointed at the little japanned table, that was overturned, while the glasses were broken and the flask of Chartreuse was pouring itself out in a golden stream upon the Moquette carpet.

"It was the personal D—— himself!" said the widow, putting her hand upon her heart, which beat violently. "I see it all! O! I have had such an experience."

THE RESULT.

"Didn't you say there was a beggar-boy who came to the door, just now, Bridget?" asked the widow.

"I did, marm," replied Bridget; "and he is standing on the sidewalk, now, crying."

"Poor little fellow!" said the widow, as she wiped a tear from her eyes. "Go call him in."

"Call in a beggar!" exclaimed Bridget, lifting up her hands in amazement. "Call in a beggar-boy!"

"Yes. Call him in. What if he is a beggar-boy? He is somebody's son. He is the dear Balt of some fond old mother. Let me see him. I must do something for somebody."

"In a few minutes Bridget pushed into the presence of the widow one of the worst-clad little ruffians she had ever beheld.

"Here he is," said Bridget. "He is a beauty for such a parlor as this, I don't think!" with scornful emphasis on her words.

"He is a human being," said the widow, scanning his ragged garments pityingly.

"I hain't been doin' nothin'," said the boy, timidly.

"You need make no apologies, my poor child," said the widow. "Pray what is your name?"

"Me name is Dinnis," said the beggar.

"Poor boy! And why did your mother let you come out in such a plight, such a day as this?" said the widow, as she wiped a tear from her eye.

"Me mother has been sent up to the Island for thirty days," said Dennis, hanging his head and blushing. "And she couldn't help it."

"Dear! dear! dear!" exclaimed the widow, tenderly.

"It wasn't no fault of me mother's," said Dennis, holding his head up again. "It was all along of that Mrs. Sullivan, who pulled me mother's hair."

"That's right. Always speak up for your mother, my child," said the widow. "Now give me my purse, Bridget."

And Mrs. Van Dusenbery, utterly disregarding the new leaf she had turned over but a few moments before, on which was recorded a resolution not to give anything to anybody again, actually counted out five new silver half-dollars, which she threw into the boy's hat, thinking, as she did it, how much more satisfactory it was to give to the needy than to receive presents from the rich.

"Is this for me?" asked the boy, opening his hazel eyes with wonder.

"It is all for you," said the widow, and I wish there was more of it. But I am afraid it would do no good if you had more."

The boy started to run; but Bridget caught him by his curly red hair, and said:

"Is that all your manners, you rogue?"

"Don't go yet," said the widow. "He will learn to behave better, one of these days. Take him down into the basement, Bridget, and give him some turkey and pudding and an orange and a bunch of grapes. Could you eat a bit of turkey, Dennis?"

Dennis was pretty sure that he could, if an opportunity were afforded him. So he disappeared from the presence of the Widow Van Dusenbery, who requested him to call again whenever he was hungry, which he promised to do. And Bridget consigned him to the cook, who laughed merrily as the cold turkey vanished which she had placed before him.

When the Widow Van Dusenbery related the incidents which have been so imperfectly sketched above to Father Lansing, the next day, from whose lips the present writer heard them, she remarked that she didn't think that the tempter could ever have succeeded in pursuading her to throw that arrow if he had not looked so much like the Rev. Dr. Brown Stout, whom she revered so highly.

"That is always the way with the P. D.," said Father Lansing. "He always takes the most pleasing forms when he intends to ruin a human soul, as he did when he tempted Saint Anthony in the guise of a lovely woman."

It may be of some interest to the general public to know that the widow and her son Balt live very quietly in their own house on the avenue, and contrive to rub along on their limited income of $30,000 a year. She has become renowned for her charities, and he enjoys the reputation of an accomplished billiard player; but he has not been able to join the Four-in-hand Coaching Club. On his way from his travels he was asked by the Rev. Dr. Brown Stout what had impressed him most in the Holy Land. To which he replied: "Fleas."
—Independent.

Fashions in Bonnets and Veils.

English crape bonnets are worn at all seasons of the year for the deepest mourning. The best bonnets have two thicknesses of crape laid over silk. Widows' bonnets are so covered with the veil that they are made entirely without trimming, or at most they have only a band of the crape laid around the crown.

The widow's cap in front of the bonnet now consists of but one, or perhaps two, small puffs of crimped white tarlatan. If the close bonnet that this requires is objectionable, some folds of black crape are put above the cap to fill it in. Some widows who are still young have their bonnets made in the old-fashioned close shape known as the poke; others select the Marie Stuart, and have the pointed front filled in with a widow's cap. The veil for widows is three yards long, with a hem at each end from three-eights to half a yard deep. It is thrown over the bonnet, with the front falling just below the waist, and the back hanging very low; or else this is reversed, so that the front falls almost to the foot and the back only to the waist; it is pinned on each side of the bonnet with slide pins that are also covered with crape. This veil is of double-width crape, measuring from one yard to forty-two inches, and should not have a fold in the middle, as the best qualities are rolled on a stick. Ladies wearing deep mourning for a parent or any other near relative, except a husband, have black crape folds for face trimmings and around the crown. The crape veil is then only a yard long and of single width, and is plaited down the left side of the bonnet to the back of the crown, and left to hang behind; a mask veil of Brussels net is worn over the face. With such bonnet some pipings of gros-grain are put in the folds, and loops or a bow of gros-grain ribbon. Strings of gros-grain ribbon are added to all mourning bonnets. Quite young ladies wear white tulle ruches for face trimming. Silk bonnets trimmed with feathers and jet are worn in light mourning; these are not trimmed with crape. The silk is plain on the frame, and there are stiff small set bows in the back; a curtain band is piped with silk. Felt bonnets with silk trimmings are used for second best.—Harper's Bazar.

The Opium Curse.

The opium habit, which British money greed forced upon China, England still fosters there by delaying to ratify the treaty of Chefoo, concluded by her representative. It is therein provided that the duty shall be paid by the importer, and the local taxes by the buyer, while the opium is yet in bond. The Government of China proposes to lay upon the drug essentially prohibitive local taxes. Concern for the revenues of India is well-known to be the cause of the delay. Meantime the Chinese are carrying the curse back to England in the way Dickens tells of in his unfinished last novel, and they have also introduced it into America, adding one more vice to those which riot in the cities. Not that opium dissipation has been unknown either in England or here—there are enough famous instances to the contrary—but it has never been consumed in so seductive a way, apparently, as the Chinese way of smoking. The picture of the London den in "Edwin Drood" is well enough known; its scenes are now reproduced in New York as well as in San Francisco, and now we learn that it is the curse of Deadwood—as if that place needed a special curse. A great deal of opium, in the raw drug and in the shapes of laudanum, morphine, etc., has been and is eaten in this country; country storekeepers in Western Massachusetts used to, and we presume still do, supply certain customers with their regular weekly allowance, just as they supply them with coffee or tea. In the southern part of New Jersey, less than fifty years ago, the laborers in the glass-works and iron-furnaces were in a state of virtual slavery to their employers, who kept the only stores, and dealt out opium to them often to an amount exceeding in value their wages, so that they were always in debt for their comparatively insignificant hohsehold supplies.—Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

Pairing Off.

William T. Coleman, of San Francisco, was talking the other day of his old partner, Edward Mott Robinson, of New Bedford, whose penuriousness was a matter of common talk. "He was a good fellow in the main," said Mr. Coleman, "but he exceeded any man I ever knew in ingenious expedients for saving a dollar. In those days I was a Democrat and he was a Republican. One day he said, 'Coleman, have your committee been after you?' 'Not yet,' I replied. 'Well, mine has been after me,' he said, 'and they wanted me to subscribe $500, and I told them I would.' I looked at him with absolute amazement. Then he added, 'Yes, I told them the Democrats would expect $500 from you, and I was going to pair off. So mind you stick to that arrangement. It will be all the same to both parties, and it won't cost either of us a cent."—Harper's Magazine.

England's Poor.

The agitation of the necessity of greater care in the distribution of out-door relief to the poor in England has resulted in five years in a great reduction of the total outlay. In 1871 there was expended in England for out-door relief £3,663,970, and in 1876 £2,760,804. There has been a saving, in other words, of $4,500,000, or 25 per cent., in the cost of the poor administration. This is the direct result of frequent conferences of the overseers of the poor in different parts of the kingdom. During the same time there was a decrease of 31 per cent. in the number of persons relieved, the total of out-door paupers in 1876 being 606,392.

THE NEW YEAR.

[illegible]

Ring all ye bells! in merry chime,
And welcome in the gladsome time,
The glad New Year of hope and joy,
The bright New Year without alloy;
The hundred years since freedom's birth,
Right well hath shown her priceless worth.

Ring out all feuds and factions state,
Ring out all evil, malice, hate,
Ring out the gall and strife that's past,
Ring in good will and peace, at last,
Ring in a purer, better day
Of truth and honor for alway.

The rough-hewn years, now past and gone,
Shall be the frame of those to come,
The finished, furnished house to hold,
As builders frame in rougher mold
Abodes of beauty, taste and art,
Where dwell the cultured mind and heart.

Beneath the tree of liberty
Our house shall ever sheltered be,
There love and peace shall e'er abide,
In trust the inmates there reside;
Each one a brother's right defend,
Till all in harmony shall blend.

Ring all ye bells! in merry chime,
And welcome in the gladsome time,
The glad New Year of hope and joy,
The bright New Year without alloy;
The hundred years since freedom's birth,
Right well hath shown her priceless worth.

PITH AND POINT.

A SWEET article for the toilet—A honey comb.

THE old Western settler—The evening sun.

"WAS his life insured?" "Yes." "For whose benefit?" "Why, for the benefit of the insurance company, to be sure."

WHEN a man is getting married in church he takes a bold place in front of the altar. After that he must take a back seat.

NEVER borro ennything that you are able to buy. Borrowing will demoralize a man almost az fast az stealing.—Josh Billings.

"I THINK your church will last a good many years yet," said a waggish deacon to his minister; "I see the sleepers are very sound."

"AH, parson, I wish I could carry my gold with me," said a dying man to his pastor. "It might melt," was the consoling answer.

"ISN'T your husband a little bald?" asked one lady of another, the other day. "There isn't a bald hair on his head," was the hasty reply.

A WOMAN may not be able to sharpen a pencil or hold an umbrella, but she can pack more articles in a trunk than a man can in a one-horse wagon.

THE art of conversation—British tourist (to fellow-passenger, in mid-channel)—"Going across, I suppose?" Fellow-passenger—"Yaas. Are you?"—Punch.

A YOUNG lady sent 25 cents and a postage stamp in reply to an advertisement of "how to make an impression," and received for an answer, "sit down in a pan of dough."

IT doesn't seem exactly right that a man should be obliged to walk through life on two bow-legs just because he indulged in the innocent diversion of sucking his toes in babyhood.

IT is stated as solemn truth that Indians never kiss their wives. Ah, human nature is the same, whether under a white or copper-colored complexion. But whose wives do they kiss?

THE scientific expedition around the world may, perhaps, be able to tell us when it returns why a man always takes off his boots first when undressing, while a woman begins at her hair-pins.

"SILENCE in the court!" thundered a Kentucky Judge the other morning. "Half a dozen men have been convicted already without the court's having been able to hear a word of the testimony."

THE Fenian movement has broken out again. A Philadelphia perfumer has just put upon the market a new kind of pomade, which is said to be the strangest head-scenter that has been brought out.

HE was not exactly a victim of sunstroke; but, as he had been kicked out of a basement in an emphatic and flat-footed manner, he preferred to allude to the circumstances as a coup de soleheel.

"No, ma," she said, "Charlie can never be anything to me more. He came out last Friday in his las year's fall overcoat; and, O, ma if it only matched my new dress, I wouldn't care so much; but it doesn't, and so we have parted."

"MAMMA, where do the cows get the milk?" asked Willie, looking up from the foaming pan of milk which he had been intently regarding. "Where do you get your tears?" was the answer. After a thoughtful silence he again broke out, "Mamma, do the cows have to be spanked?"

A 5-YEAR-OLD came up to his mother and said, "Mother, I saw something run across the kitchen floor this morning, and it hadn't any legs, either; what do you suppose it was?" The mother said she supposed it was a worm, or something of that sort. Finally she gave it up, and the youngster calmly said, "It was some water."

A FEW days ago a customer in a wholesale house remarked to the dealer that he had noticed an unpleasant odor upon the premises. The latter did not perceive anything, and the customer added, "Well, I guess it is the cellar that smells." The other replied, "Not at all. I smell nothing. It seems to be the buyer who smells."

THE cat is composed of a peculiar composition, similar to India rubber; the exact combination of the material is one of the lost arts. I dropped a cat out of a five-story window on Broadway once, and he bounced up about a rod and landed on his feet. He didn't even feel to see if any bones were broken; he simply glanced at the lamp-post on the corner and read the name of the street to get his bearings, and then sailed away as peacefully as though he had just got out of the stage. It is wonderful how far a cat will tumble and not break.—Boston Globe.

CHARLES ROBINSON, aged 16, became infatuated with a young girl of 14, of Jersey City Heights, and despite the remontrances of her parents and the coolness of the girl, persisted in calling upon her. On Saturday he called with a book-mark, intending to present it to the girl as a token of his love. She rejected his gift, and he left the room hastily, went into the yard and hanged himself with a clothes line.

THERE are thirteen life insurance companies in the hands of receivers in New York.

AGRICULTURAL AND DOMESTIC.

Around the Farm.

The tubers of Jerusalem artichoke are much improved after taking up by being laid for a time on unslacked lime. —English Gardener.

Six pounds of white lead added to one gallon of tar varnish, and applied as paint, will prevent damp coming through walls.—American Cultivator.

Last fall a few loads of manure were spread upon a meadow, and this spring the entire field was plowed and planted with corn. A heavy coat of manure was spread on the plowed surface. The dry weather prevented the rotting of this manure, and the crop received very little benefit from it. On the spots where the manure was spread last fall the corn was much better.—Moore's Rural.

Harness should never be kept in the stable where manure is constantly generating large quantities of ammonia. This ammonia is rapidly absorbed by the leather, and the effect upon the leather is about the same as would result from saturating it with strong lye. In a word, ammonia rots leather, and hence keeping harness in the stable is sure to result in its damage, more or less. —Exchange.

Mr. Chapman relies on the plentiful use of swamp muck over the roots as a preventive of the borer in peach trees, and he accidentally proved the curious refrigerating quality of muck in holding frost and retarding the bloom in the spring when dumped by the horse-load in the fall about the base of his trees. I hear that one of your strawberry growers has great faith in growing tansy around peach trees to keep borers away. That would naturally prevent attacks on the root with plow and spade, and implies a restful and conservative rather than an experimental cultivation.—Cor. Hartford Courant.

We often wonder why farmers in this country do not use the cart more; it is far more handy for loading and dumping manure, soil, roots, etc., than a wagon, being more easy to load, and especially to unload. A cart can be quickly loaded and dumped, and only requires one good horse to draw it. In England carts are in constant use, being very popular in the harvest-field. We are glad to see that dumping wagons are employed on many of our farms. This loading manure from a barn-yard, and hauling it by wagon a few hundred yards, to be unloaded forkful by forkful, is a waste of time and labor, of both man and beast. —Rural World.

The signs of a good-working ox are: long head, broad and level between the eyes, and the eyes full, keen and pleasant; forward legs straight; toes straight forward; hoofs broad not peaked; and the distance short between the ankle and the knee; these properties enable an ox to travel on hard roads; if the animal turns his toes out, the strain comes on the inside claw, and when traveling on hard ground he will get lame at the joint between the hoofs and the hair; full breast; straight back; round ribs projecting out as wide as the hip bones; these are the signs of strength and good constitution. The best colors are brown, dark-red and brindle. At 4 years of age the steer becomes an ox, and, having completed his 8th or 9th year, he should be fattened for the butcher.—Moore's Rural.

About the House.

Never cut broiling meat. The juices escape.

Slow and long cooking will make tough meat tender.

Substitute for Tea.—Alkathrepta, homeopathic chocolate, is recommended by physicians as a substitute for tea, cocoa, etc., for invalids.

Sour Stomach.—Eat a piece of salt codfish or a red herring for your breakfast; avoid grease; a piece of carbonate of soda about the size of a small bean dissolved in water is good.

External Pile Remedy.—Carbonate of lead, one-half ounce; sulphate of morphia, 15 grains; stramonium ointment, one ounce; olive-oil, 20 drops. Mix and apply three times a day, or oftener, as the pain may require.

To Wash Corsets.—Take out the steels; use hot water; one teaspoonful borax to every pail of water; place the corsets on the washboard and scrub well with a clean brush, using very little soap; do not boil the corsets, but, if very yellow, bleach in the sun; rinse well; rub in a little starch and iron when quite damp.—Toronto Globe.

Cold Feet.—Never go to bed with cold feet, nor try to sleep without being able to keep them warm. Cold feet show an unbalanced circulation. The very best thing to do is to warm them by exercise, if that be practicable. If not, try dipping them in hot and cold water alternately, and then using vigorous friction.—Housekeeper.

To Prevent Potatoes from Rot.—Dust over the floor of the bin with lime, and put in about six or seven inches of potatoes, then dust with lime as before, then more potatoes, using about one bushel of lime to forty bushels of potatoes. The lime improves the flavor of the potatoes, and effectually kills the fungi which causes the rot.

Cure for Incipient Consumption.—Live temperately, avoid liquor, take a daily sponge bath, wear flannel next the skin, and take every morning one-half pint of fresh milk from the cow, mixed with a wineglass of the expressed juice of green hoarhound. A person who has tried this remedy says that four weeks' use of the hoarhound and milk relieved the pains of my breast, and gave me the ability to breathe deep, long, and free, strengthening and harmonizing my voice, and restoring to me a better state of health than I had enjoyed for years. The remedy to be effective must be continued for some time.

Plate Cloths for Daily Use.—Boil soft rags (nothing is better for the purpose than the tops of old cotton stockings) in a mixture of new milk and hartshorn powder, in the proportion of one ounce of powder to a pint of milk; boil them for five minutes; wring them as soon as they are taken out, for a moment, in cold water, and dry them before a fire. With these rags rub the plate briskly as soon as it has been well washed and dried after daily use. A most beautiful deep polish will be produced, and the plate will require nothing more than merely to be dusted with a leather or a dry soft cloth, before it is again put on the table.—Boston Transcript.

New-Year's Superstitions.

In Lincoln, in England, and its neighborhood the people indulge a superstition that it is unlucky to take anything out of the house on New-Year's day before something is brought in. Therefore, on the morning of the 1st of January, they take something in, however inconsiderable, to lift the spell of misfortune which would certainly attach to the house were the precaution neglected. The belief in this superstition is expressed in the following rude lines:

> Take out, then take in,
> Bad luck will begin;
> Take in, then take out,
> Good luck comes about.

From certain curious MSS. in the British Museum, published in 1560, it appears that the boys of Eton school had a fashion on the day of the Feast of Circumcision of playing for small New-Year's gifts both before and after supper, and, for good luck's sake, of making verses, satirical or sentimental, and sending them to the provost, masters and other officers of the college, and of interchanging them among themselves.

Upon the day of the Feast of Circumcision, or the accepted New-Year's day, the early Christians masked themselves and entered into mimetic sports, "in imitation," it is said, "of the superstitions of the Gentiles." Against this ridiculous practice Saint Maximus and Peter Chrysologus are said to have remonstrated and declaimed, wherefore in some of the ancient missals there is found, in the mass written for New-Year's day, "Missa ad prohibendum ab idolis." In the North of England there is a saying;

> At New-Year's Tide
> The days lengthen a cock's stride.

And—

> If the grass grows in Janveer,
> It grows the worse for't all the year.

According to the "Shepherd's Kalendar" of 1709, "if New-Year's day in the morning open with dusky red clouds it denotes strifes and debates among great ones, and many robberies to happen that year."

"Never," it is said, "allow any one to take a light out of your house on New-Year's day; a death in the household before the expiration of the year is sure to occur if it be allowed." Another amusing superstition cautions against throwing ashes or dirty water, or any article, however worthless, out of your house on this day; it betokens ill-luck; but you may bring in as many honestly-gotten goods as you can procure."

An accommodating saying to the latter-day observance of New-Year's day in Gotham, at least, is: "If a female is your first visitant, and be permitted to enter your house on the morning of New-Year's day, it portendeth ill luck for the whole year;" but the source whence this saying is obtained does not tell us whether a female of the human species alone is implied in the omen.

Chance opening of the Bible on New-Year's day in order to discover the teaching it may impart or the message given, is a superstitious custom still in general use in some parts of England, and much credit is attached to it.

It is usually set about with some little solemnity in the morning before breakfast, as the ceremony must needs be performed fasting. The Bible is laid on a table unopened, and the parties who wish to consult it are to open it in succession. They are not at liberty to choose any particular part of the book, but must open it at random. Wherever this may happen to be, the inquirer is to place his finger on any chapter contained in the two open pages, but without any previous perusal or examination. The chapter is then read aloud and commented upon by all the people assembled. It is believed that the good or ill fortune, the happiness or the misery of the consulting party during the ensuing year will in some way or other be described and foreshown by the contents of the chapter.

This superstitious practice can hardly be said to be general in our country, while there are individuals who attach more than ordinary importance to the chapter or verse of the Bible upon which the eyes first rest on the morning of New-Year's day. This fact has come under the writer's immediate observation.

An Actor's Troubles.

Joseph Jefferson had an unpleasant experience in Troy. The theater contained less than 100 persons at the matinee performance. In the evening the attendance was better; but, just as he was about to dress for "Rip Van Winkle," two Deputy Sheriffs seized his wardrobe. Manager Daly had refused to give back the money to a woman who had bought the ticket under a misapprehension, and she had brought a suit for damages. The curtain did not rise until nearly 9 o'clock. The price of the ticket was 35 cents, and Mr. Daly's counsel fees and expense of subsequently returning to Troy have already amounted to over $100. Troy people seem to be exacting as to their amusements. A Troy lawyer, while on a visit to Boston, bought a ticket for Heller's show, and could not get a seat. He has sued Jarrett & Palmer, the managers.—New York Sun.

Holy Matrimony.

Archbishop Cullen was making his periodical tour of inspection in the Dublin Sunday-schools. "Kate Molony," said he to an intelligent-looking girl, "explain the meaning of the sacrament of holy matrimony." A pause. At last Kate replied, "Please, yer honor, it's the state of existence before entering purgatory." "Go to the bottom of the class, you ignorant girl," cried out the local clergyman, very much ashamed of his pupil. But the Archbishop stopped him. "Not so fast, Father Patrick—not so fast. The lass may be right after all. What do you or I know about it?"

Vegetable Ivory.

Buttons are made from vegetable ivory, which is an exceedingly hard, fine-grained nut, grown on the isthmus of Panama. It is about the size of the average hen's egg, and after the burr and shell are split off it is white and solid. It is split by a circular saw into several pieces, from each of which different sized buttons are turned by machines which pare both sides at once. The ivory nuts cost $100 per ton.

LICKSHINGLE'S UMBRELLA.

How He Managed to Keep It—Business Rules and Borrowers.

[From the Oil City Derrick.]

"Len' me yer umbrella a minnit!"

Such was the exclamation of Jones as he rushed into the office of Squire Lickshingle, yesterday.

"Certainly, certainly," said the Squire, laying down his newspaper and taking a fresh chew of fine-cut, "glad to accommodate you," and he opened a drawer in his desk and began rummaging through his legal forms and blanks.

Jones darted into the corner, seized the green gingham relic, and was preparing to fly with it.

"Stop, stop, stop!" said the Squire, raising his hand majestically; "not too fast, young man. Wait till I make out the necessary papers."

Jones dropped the umbrella. On his corn, of course. After pumping his lame foot up and down, and tying a hard knot in his countenance, and undoing it again, he echoed:

"The necessary papers?"

"Yes," said the Squire, sternly, "the necessary papers," and he continued his search among the blanks.

The right one found, he filled it out in a jiffy and handed it to Jones to sign.

As Jones read the paper his knees knocked together. It was a mortgage on his house and lot as security that he would return the umbrella in good order within fifteen minutes. He faltered:

"Wh-why, Squire, I only want to borrow your umbrella to run across the street with. I'll fetch it back in two seconds."

The Squire shoved his spectacles up over his bald spot until they formed two sky-lights in his intellectual roof, and, looking Jones full in the face, said:

"You only want to run across the street. You'll return it in two seconds. Young man, that's what they all say. I take no stock in it. Man wants but little here below, but, by the Good Samaritan, when he wants his umbrella he wants it. I have known people in my time who have listened to the song of the siren, who came to borrow umbrellas, until she has transformed them into a people without an umbrella between them and the pelting storms. I am not one of that kind. I have lived a long time. I have accumulated a fortune. Why? For the simple reason that I have not spent my substance in buying umbrellas. That umbrella which you hold in your hand is certainly not of uncommon beauty, nor is it of great value. It is simply a gingham umbrella. A green one, at that. But it answers the purpose for which, etc. I have had it since I was a boy. Why? Because no man, neither the son of man, has ever taken it beyond the range of my vision without first signing over his estate that he would return it in good condition. It may not seem neighborly, but it's business. Here is the mortgage; there is the umbrella; without beats the rain of heaven. You have your choice," and the old man resumed his newspaper.

Jones thought of his wife and babies and the pleasant home that was all his own. Then he looked at the rain that was pounding at the doors and windows, as if to get in out of the wet. A glance at his new overcoat, and Jones was decided.

"I'll risk," he said, and, stepping to the desk with a measured tread and slow, he clapped his name to the mortgage, and was off with the umbrella.

Just as a young lady at Rockfort, Tex., was about to jump into bed, the other night, she was scared to see a large tarantula resting quietly in the place where she was about to deposit herself.

Dickens' Little Folks.

Nothing has given the writings of Charles Dickens so strong a hold upon the hearts of parents as the well-known excellence of his portrayal of children and their interests. These delineations, having received the approval of readers of mature age, the different child characters have been detached from the large mass of matter with which they were originally connected, and presented in the author's own language, to a new class of readers, to whom the little volumes will be as attractive as the larger originals have proven to the general public. A series of twelve volumes has been prepared, presenting among others the following characters: "Smike," from Nicholas Nickleby; "Little Nell," from The Old Curiosity Shop; "The Child Wife," from David Copperfield; "The Boy Joe," from Pickwick Papers, etc., etc. A new edition of the first volume of the series, "Little Paul," from Dombey and Son, has just been issued, illustrated by Darley, and attractively bound. The other volumes will shortly follow. Sent post-paid for $1.00; or any volume will be sent with a year's subscription to the New York Tribune (weekly) for $2.00; or any two volumes with a year's subscription to the Independent for $3.00.

John R. Anderson, Publisher,
Hartford, Conn.

Delicious Cookery.

The most delicious, light, white and wholesome biscuits, rolls, muffins, waffles, cornbread, cake, etc., are possible to every table by using the celebrated Dooley's Yeast Powder. It is absolutely pure, and will go much further in use than other kinds of baking powder. It is impossible to fail with it in baking. Ask your grocer for it, and do not be put off with any other.

Have you Heart Disease? If so, we would like to call your attention to Dr. Graves' HEART REGULATOR, a preparation specially prepared for the cure of Heart Disease, Nervousness and Sleepless Nights.

When we say it can be cured we know what we say, and can substantiate it by certificates of cures, and, what is best, living witnesses. Send to Frank E. Ingalls, Concord, N. H., for a pamphlet containing certificates of a few who have been cured by its use. Also, description of various forms of Heart Disease.

You can obtain the HEART REGULATOR of your druggist. Small size 50 cents, large size $1.

We have, by actual count, over forty different preparations for cough, including all standard medicines, old and new, called for in this section. We have sold Hatch's Universal Cough Syrup for five years. With no newspaper advertising this remedy has had a sale larger than any other. It sells steadily, and maintains itself, and our customers speak uniformly in its favor, as a safe and efficient medicine of its kind.

Carpenter & Barrell, Albion, N. Y.
Sold by H. A. Hurlbut & Co., Chicago, Ill.

Burnett's Cologne is of the best quality, and is filled in elegant bottles of superior finish and beauty. It is offered in popular sizes and at popular prices. This refreshing perfume is thus brought within the reach of every one. It is prepared from the purest and best materials, and with the utmost care.

In Quarter and Half Pints, Pints and Quarts. In Basket style, cork and glass stoppers.

Do not go home Saturday night without a copy of The Chicago Ledger. You can get it at the news depots.

A Valuable Medical Treatise.

The edition for 1877 of the sterling Medical Annual, known as Hostetter's Almanac, is now ready, and may be obtained, free of cost, of druggists and general country dealers in all parts of the United States and British America, and indeed in every civilized portion of the Western Hemisphere. This Almanac has been issued regularly at the commencement of every year for over one-fifth of a century. It combines, with the soundest practical advice for the preservation and restoration of health, a large amount of interesting and amusing light reading, and the calendar, astronomical calculations, chronological items, etc., are prepared with great care, and will be found entirely accurate. The issue of Hostetter's Almanac for 1877 will probably be the largest edition of a medical work ever published in any country. The proprietors, Messrs. Hostetter & Smith, Pittsburgh, Pa., on receipt of a two-cent stamp, will forward a copy by mail to any person who cannot procure one in his neighborhood.

The Celebrated
"Matchless"
Wood Tag Plug
Tobacco.
The Pioneer Tobacco Company,
New York, Boston and Chicago.

Stop that terrible cough, and thus avoid a consumptive's grave, by taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. As a cough remedy it is unsurpassed. Sold by druggists.

Ask your newsdealer, for a copy of The Chicago Ledger, the best story paper in the West.

It will pay to read advt. "Florida Homes!"

FLORIDA HOMES!

Location elevated, fertile and healthy. Close to R. R. Stations and Northern Colonies. Price ONLY $1.25 PER ACRE. Cheap transportation. Settlers are delighted. Send stamp for State Map, Views, and Report Chicago Excursion. Brainerd T. Smith & Co., 93 LaSalle st., Chicago.

HUNT'S REMEDY
THE GREAT
KIDNEY MEDICINE

A positive remedy for Dropsy and all diseases of the Kidneys, Bladder and Urinary Organs. Hunt's Remedy is purely vegetable and prepared expressly for the above diseases. It has cured thousands. Every bottle warranted. Send to W. E. Clarke, Providence, R.I., for illustrated pamphlet. If your druggist don't have it, he will order it for you.

BOOK AGENTS TAKE NOTICE!
BETSEY BOBBET COME AGAIN!
New Book Ready for Agents, by
JOSIAH ALLEN'S WIFE:
'SAMANTHA AT THE CENTENNIAL.
Send for Circulars to AMERICAN PUBLISHING CO. Hartford, Ct.; Cinn., O.; Chicago, Ill.; Newark, N. J.

DR. WARNER'S
HEALTH CORSET
With Skirt Supporter and Self-Adjusting Pads.
Unequaled for Beauty, Style & Comfort.
Approved by All Physicians.
For Sale by Leading Merchants
Samples, any size, by mail. In Sattteen, $1.50; Contil, $1.75; Nursing Corset, $2.00; Misses' Corset, $1.00.
AGENTS WANTED
WARNER BROS., 351 Broadway, N. Y.

GRAFF'S TRADE MARK PATENTED
IMPROVED POTASH OR LYE
WILL MAKE NINE POUNDS OF PURE SOAP IN ONLY ONE HOUR
PROF. BEDFORD'S LETTER SHOWING SUPERIORITY OF THIS ARTICLE OVER ALL OTHERS FOR SOAP MAKING SENT FREE BY MAIL ON APPLICATION TO H.M. ANTHONY 104 READE ST. NEW YORK.

THE CHEAPEST & BEST
ADVERTISING
TO REACH READERS OUTSIDE OF THE LARGE CITIES.
We represent over 1,000 Newspapers, having a weekly circulation of over 600,000 Copies, divided into six different lists, covering different sections of the country.
Advertisements received for one or more lists. For catalogues, containing names of papers and other information, and for estimates, address
BEALS & FOSTER,
41 Park Row (Times Building), New York.

HULL & SCOTNEY,
GENERAL
COMMISSION
MERCHANTS,
346 NORTH WATER ST.,
PHILADELPHIA,
And wholesale dealers in Butter, Cheese, Eggs, Poultry, Game, Potatoes, Apples, Grain, Flour, Fur, Wool, Cotton, Peanuts, Broom Corn, Foreign and Domestic Fruits, and, in fact, we can sell any and everything at price, make prompt returns, and CASH ADVANCES made on all shipments except perishable articles. To show that we do an extensive business, any game dealer in Philadelphia will tell you we handled more game last season than all other Houses in Philadelphia put together. Send for Price-List, Stencil, &c., &c. REFERENCE CASH, or we refer you to Any RESPONSIBLE HOUSE in Our City.
Butter. Cheese. Poultry.
EGGS. GAME.

HOLIDAY MUSIC BOOKS.
The World of Song.
Magnificent Bound Volume of Songs of the most popular and musical character.
The Sunshine of Song.
Magnificent Bound Volume of the most recent and popular songs. (In press and nearly ready.)
Gems of the Dance.
Splendid Bound Volume of the most Brilliant Piano Music, by Strauss and others.
The Cluster of Gems.
Splendid Bound Volume of the finest piano pieces of Medium Difficulty. (In press and nearly ready.)
Each book has 200 to 250 pages full sheet music size, and costs $2.50 in Boards; $3.00 in Cloth; $4.00 Fine Gilt for Presents.
Send for 5 Christmas Selections, $4 per 100.
WINTER SINGING BOOKS.
THE SALUTATION, ($1.38 or $12 doz.) ZION.
ENCORE. (75 cts. or $7.50 doz.)
JOHNSON'S CHORUS CHOIR INSTRUCTION BOOK. ($1.25 or $12 doz.)
PERKINS' SINGING SCHOOL. (75 cts. or $6.75 doz.)
Two first-class Church Music Books. Three of the best possible Singing-class Books.
Any book mailed, post free, for retail price.
OLIVER DITSON & CO., Boston.
C. H. Ditson & Co., 843 Broadway, N. Y.
J. E. Ditson & Co., 922 Chestnut St., Phila.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER.
Absolutely Pure.
All Grocers authorized to guarantee it full weight, and absolutely pure. To try it, send 60 cents for 1-pound can to be sent by mail free of postage. ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., N. Y.

The Canadian Land and Emigration Company, Limited.
50 FRONT ST. EAST, TORONTO—P. O. 2614.
Farm Lots for sale in Dysart and other Townships in the County of Haliburton. Also Town Lots in the Village of Haliburton, to which the Victoria Railway is now being extended. The R. R. will probably be open to Haliburton before Oct. 1, 1877. Apply to C. J. BLOMFIELD, Manager.

JACKSON'S BEST
SWEET NAVY CHEWING TOBACCO
was awarded the highest prize at Centennial Exposition for its fine chewing qualities, the excellence and lasting character of its sweetening and flavoring. If you want the best tobacco ever made, ask your grocer for this, and see that each plug bears our blue strip trade-mark, with words Jackson's Best on it. Sold wholesale by all jobbers. Send for sample to C. A. JACKSON & CO., Manufacturers, Petersburg, Va.

KEEP'S SHIRTS.
KEEP'S Patent Partly-made Dress Shirts, best quality, only plain seams to finish, 6 for $7.
KEEP'S Custom Shirts to measure, best quality, 6 for $9, delivered free. Guaranteed perfectly satisfactory.
RED FLANNEL UNDERWEAR.
Undershirts and Drawers, best quality, $1.50 each.
White Flannel Undervests, best quality, $1.50 each.
Canton Flannel Vests & Drawers, ex. heavy, 75c. each.
Twilled Silk Umbrellas, paragon frames, $3 each.
Best Gingham, patent protected ribs, $1 each.
Circulars and Samples mailed free on application. Shirts only delivered free. KEEP MANUFACTURING COMPANY, 165 and 167 Mercer Street, New York.

BABBITT'S TOILET SOAP.

Unrivalled for the Toilet and the Bath. No artificial and deceptive odors to cover common and deleterious ingredients. After years of scientific experiment the manufacturer of B. T. Babbitt's Best Soap has perfected and now offers to the public The FINEST TOILET SOAP in the World. Only the purest vegetable oils used in its manufacture.
For Use in the Nursery it has No Equal.
Worth ten times its cost to every mother and family in Christendom. Sample box, containing 3 cakes of 6 oz. each, sent free to any address on receipt of 75 cents. Address
B. T. BABBITT, New York City.
For Sale by all Druggists.

CHICAGO
WEEKLY POST
THE PEOPLE'S PAPER.
32 columns of Editorial, News, Agricultural, Miscellany and Market Reports. One copy 1 year, postage paid, 75c. Same terms to Agents as last year. Address THE POST, 89 Dearborn St., Chicago.

WEBER'S
METROPOLITAN CORSET!

THE ONLY CORSET COMBINING
Grace, Comfort and Beauty!
Is constructed on purely scientific principles. The back is whole boned and left open at the hips to be laced at pleasure of wearer, and is so gored in back that the fabrics and bones adapt themselves with marvelous accuracy to every curve and undulation of the finest type or figure. For sale by all leading merchants. Lady Agents wanted. Samples by mail on receipt of $1.50.
WESTERN DEPOT, KEITH BROS., Chicago, Ill.

BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES
FOR COUGHS AND COLDS
A
Cough, Cold, or Sore Throat,
Requires immediate attention, as neglect oftentimes results in some incurable Lung disease. BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES are a simple remedy, and will almost invariably give immediate relief.
SOLD BY ALL CHEMISTS and dealers in medicines.

THE GOOD OLD STAND-BY.
MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT.
FOR MAN AND BEAST.
Established 35 Years. Always cures. Always ready. Always handy. Has never yet failed. Thirty millions have tested it. The whole world approves the glorious old Mustang—the Best and Cheapest Liniment in existence. 25 cents a bottle. The Mustang Liniment cures when nothing else will.
SOLD BY ALL MEDICINE VENDERS.

A Perfect Hair Dressing!
A Promoter of the Growth of the Hair.
A Preparation Free from irritating matter.
BURNETT'S
COCOAINE.
For preserving and beautifying the Hair, and rendering it dark and glossy.
The Cocoaine holds in a liquid form, a large proportion of deodorized
Cocoa-nut Oil,
prepared expressly for this purpose.
No other compound possesses the peculiar properties which so exactly suit the various conditions of the human hair.
It softens the hair when hard and dry.
It soothes the irritated scalp skin.
It affords the richest lustre.
It remains longest in effect.
It is the Best and Cheapest
HAIR DRESSING
IN THE WORLD.
DIRECTIONS.
Apply with the hand, or a soft brush, every other day, or as often as the case may require, rubbing it thoroughly into the roots of the hair.
To remove Dandruff, Scurf, &c., wash the head with Burnett's Kalliston, rub dry with a towel, and apply the Cocoaine as directed.
PREPARED ONLY BY
JOSEPH BURNETT & CO,
BOSTON.
Entered, according to Act of Congress, in the year 1861, by Joseph Burnett & Co., in the Clerk's Office of the District Court of the District of Massachusetts.

NATURE'S REMEDY.
VEGETINE
THE GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER.
An Excellent Medicine.
Springfield, O., Feb. 28, 1877.
This is to certify that I have used Vegetine, manufactured by H. R. Stevens, Boston, Mass., for Rheumatism and General Prostration of the Nervous System, with good success. I recommend Vegetine as an excellent medicine for such complaints.
Yours very truly,
C. W. VANDEGRIFT.
Vegetine is Sold by all Druggists.

$50 to $12 a week with our popular Books, [illegible] Maps. Goodspeed's Pub'g House, Chicago.

$350 A MONTH—AGENTS WANTED—36 best selling articles in the world; one sample free. Address JAY BRONSON, Detroit, Mich.

Books Old or New wanted and sold. Immense Catalogue. American Book Exchange, 55 Beekman St., N. Y.

ASK for Kendall & Co.'s Thermometers. They are the best, cheapest and most reliable.

$200 a month. Agents wanted to represent [illegible], Cincinnati, O.

WONDER box, contains 37 useful articles [illegible]. Middleboro, Mass.

3 new vocal and 3 new instrumental pieces sheet Music, 10c. Globe Music Co., Middleboro, Mass.

$3300 A YEAR. How to Make it. New Agents Goods. COE & YONGE, St. Louis, Mo.

GUNS REVOLVERS. Price List free. Address Great Western Gun Works, Pittsburg, Pa.

PIANOS Retail price $900 only $260. Parlor Organs, price $340 only $95. Paper free. Daniel F. Beatty, Washington, N. J.

$2500 a year. Agents wanted everywhere. Business strictly legitimate. Particulars free. Address J. WORTH & CO., St. Louis, Mo.

$3 GOLD PLATED WATCHES. Cheapest in the known world. Sample Watch Free to Agents. Address A. COULTER & CO., Chicago, Ill.

$400 A MONTH, AGENTS WANTED, 250 of the latest novelties. Send for Catalog. VAN & Co. Chicago.

$1 WEBSTER'S Star in the East, warranted to cure Catarrh and Bronchitis, mailed on receipt of $1. Address Dr. L. A. Webster & Co., Marshall, Mich.

TURKEY FEATHERS! Don't waste them! Save carefully the wing and tail feathers. We pay cash. Send for prices. HIRAM HADLEY & CO., Chicago.

SIXTY-SIX specimen copies of our BEAUTIFUL OIL CHROMOS free to responsible Agents. Inclose 10 cts. with your application to cover postage. STEIGELMAN & CO., 104 W. Sixth St., Cincinnati, O.

Agents, Read This!
We will pay Agents a Salary of $75 per Month and Expenses to sell our New and Wonderful Inventions. Address L. S. SHERMAN & CO., Marshall, Michigan.

VIRGINIA FARMS Catalogue sent free. Now is the time to buy. Maps of Va. 25c. CHAFFIN, STAPLES & CO., Richmond, Virginia.

YOUNG MEN! Learn Telegraphy and earn from $45 to $100 a month. Small salary while learning. Situations furnished. Address, with stamp, R. VALENTINE, Manager, Janesville, Wis.

CLOCKS E. INGRAHAM & CO.'S are superior in design and not equaled in quality, or as timekeepers. Ask your Jeweler for them. Manufactory—Bristol, Ct.

$10 to $25 A DAY SURE made by Agents selling our Chromos, Crayons, Picture and Chromo Cards. 125 samples, worth $5, sent, postpaid, for 85 Cents. Illustrated Catalogue free. J. H. BUFFORD'S SONS, Boston. [Established 1830.]

WATERPROOF COVERS,
Awnings, Tents, Signs, Window Shades, &c. MURRAY & BAKER, 100 S. Desplaines St., Chicago. Send for Illustrated Price-List.

WORK FOR ALL
in their own localities, canvassing for the Fireside Visitor (enlarged), Weekly and Monthly. Largest Paper in the World, with Mammoth Chromos Free. Big Commissions to Agents. Terms and Outfit Free. Address P. O. VICKERY, Augusta, Maine.

MAGIC LANTERNS VIEWS
[illegible]
C. T. MILLIGAN

AGENTS
WANTED!
FOR PARTICULARS, ADDRESS
WILSON SEWING MACHINE CO.
829 Broadway, New York City;
Chicago, Ill.; New Orleans, La.;
or San Francisco, Cal.

AGENTS WANTED FOR
Creative Science;
Or, MANHOOD, WOMANHOOD, AND THEIR MUTUAL INTER-RELATIONS; LOVE, ITS LAWS, POWER, ETC.
Agents are selling from 15 to 25 copies a day. Send for specimen pages and our extra terms to Agents, and see why it sells faster than any other book. Address NATIONAL PUBLISHING CO., Chicago, Ill.

DUNHAM
PIANOS.
Dunham & Sons, Manufacturers,
Warerooms, 18 East 14th St.,
[Established 1834.] NEW YORK.
Prices Reasonable. Terms Easy.

FRANK LESLIE'S
POPULAR MONTHLY
Is the cheapest and most attractive of all the magazines, containing a vast quantity of reading matter, and being without a rival in the abundance and excellence of its illustrations. The text consists of stories, essays on the great personages, events and questions of the day, historical studies, recent discoveries in science—all from able pens—together with a great amount of miscellaneous reading matter. The illustrations, many of them full-page, by some of the best living artists, are in endless variety. Now is the time to subscribe. With the January No. commences a new volume and a serial story of remarkable dramatic power, entitled The American Countess, by Etta W. Pierce. $3 a year. 25c. a No. Any one sending us 5 subscriptions and $15 (to different addresses) will receive an extra copy free. Address
FRANK LESLIE'S PUBLISHING HOUSE,
537 Pearl St., N. Y. City.

PULMONA,
Made from the prescription of one of the most eminent physicians in the medical faculty, is now offered to the public as a radical cure for CONSUMPTION, BRONCHITIS, CATARRH, ASTHMA, and all affections of the THROAT and LUNGS; for all Disorders of the Nervous System, and Diseases of the Blood. PULMONA increases the strength and deepens the color of the pale blood. It checks Night Sweats within a fortnight. It subdues the Chills and Fever. It diminishes Expectoration. It causes calm and refreshing sleep. It invigorates the appetite, and the invalid gains flesh rapidly. It is beyond comparison the best remedy known for CONSUMPTION and all affections of the Throat, Lungs and Nervous System.
Extracts from Letters from Pastors of Churches.
PULMONA saved my daughter's life.
Rev. E. Jones, Remsen, N. Y.
We bless God for the benefits we have received from the use of PULMONA.
Rev. F. Warren, Canton, Pa.
Every one who I have recommended it to has benefited much by its use.
Rev. C. D. Humphreys, Racine, Wis.
A circular containing advice for the treatment of the diseases above mentioned, certificates of MANY actual cures, and full particulars of cases successfully treated will be sent free to applicants.
PULMONA may be obtained through Druggists, or orders may be sent to the Proprietor direct. Price, $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5. OSCAR G. MOSES, 18 Cortlandt Street, New York.

SANDAL-WOOD.
A positive remedy for all diseases of the Kidneys, Bladder and Urinary Organs; also, good in Dropsical Complaints. It never produces sickness, is certain and speedy in its action. It is fast superseding all other remedies. Sixty capsules cure in six or eight days. No other medicine can do this.
Beware of Imitations, for, owing to its great success, many have been offered; some are most dangerous, causing piles, &c.
DUNDAS DICK & CO.'S Genuine Soft Capsules, containing Oil of Sandal-Wood, sold at all Drug Stores. Ask for circular, or send for one to 35 and 37 Wooster street, New York.

C. N. U. No. 50

WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS, please say you saw the advertisement in this paper.

DAVENPORT THE DRUGGIST

Would call the attention of the public to his splendid stock of

PURE DRUGS AND MEDICINES!

Which have been selected with especial refference to the wants of this locality, and warranted fresh and genuine. Also to his fine stock of

HAIR OILS AND PERFUMERY.

The finest in the county. He also keeps a full stock of

Toilet Soaps, Face Powders, Combs, Brushes, Sponges, etc. Also Trusses and Supporters, in large varieties and a full Stock of DRUGGIST'S SUNDRIES.

SCHOOL BOOKS WALL PAPER AND CURTAINS!

The largest and most complete stock in Northern Indiana. Be sure to call on

DAVENPORT.

His stock is very complete and PRICES WAY DOWN. Also a fu line of.

GOLD PENS, ALBUMS, POCKET BOOKS, BLANK BOOKS, INK and STATIONERY.

Be sure and call on

DAVENPORT, THE DRUGGIST,
AUBURN, IND

FRUIT HOUSE PRICES!

Great Reduction on Sugars

All grades reduced 1 cent per pound; the lowest they have sold for fifteen years. Best white coffee sugar 10c, best coffee C 9c, choice yellow sugar 8c.

An immense stock of all goods for

CHRISTMAS AND NEW YEARS!

Candies, Nuts, Toys, Liquors and Cigars.

TEAS!

Fifty more chests of the choice 40c tea and 40 chests of the good 25c tea. We sell large amounts of these two teas; being good drawers, strong and well flavored We now sell more chests of tea in a month than we used to in a year, and this comes simply from our purchasing direct of the importers and selling direct to our customers, thereby saving the profit of the middle men, which is 20 to 40c on the pound.

Young Hyson Tea, - - - -	25, 50, 70, best 90 cents per pound
Gunpowder Tea, - - - -	60, 70, best 90 cents per pound
Imperial Tea, - - - -	40 60, best 90 cents per pound
Ooolong Tea, - - - -	25, 60, best 70 cents per pound
Japan Uncolored Tea, - - - -	35, 50, best 70 cents per pound

COFFEE! COFFEE!

Our Best Rio, 22 cents. Good Fine Rio, 20 cents. Old Government Java, 30 cents.

SYRUPS.

Cuba 40 and 50 cents. New Orleans, 50 and 75 cents White Drips, 75 cts. and $1.

RAISENS, and ZANTEE CURRENTS for CHRISTMAS CAKE, CITRON, LEMON and ORANGE PEEL.

Valencia raisins per pound 6c, Best layers raisins 12½c. Zantee currents 9c Leghorn citron 25c. Orange and Lemon peal 30c,

CANDIES.

Toy candies of all kinds. Stick candy per pound 15c. French mixed 18c, Toy candy all sorts and varieties 30c. Toys for Santa Claus from a penny whistle to a nice album to make presents with a thousand different things to amuse the little ones—Dogs, cats, rats, mice, birds, elephants, lions, tigars, drums, wagons, horses, Chineese lanterns, pistol caps, &c., something for every little one in the country.

And for Christmas tree candles we have a large assortment of every color, from ½ cent to 2 cents each or 50c per box.

OILS. OILS. OILI!

Coal Oil per gallon, 20 cents.	Headlight Oil per gallon 25 cents.	Lard Oil, per gallon, $1.00
Fish Oil per gallon, $1.00.	Best Golden Machine Oil per gal. 70c.	Machine Oil per gal, 30ct

Nuts for Christmas and New Years.

Brazil nuts 10c. Filberts, quart 15c. Almons, qurrt 25c. English walnuts, quart 15c. Pecans, quart 12 1-2c. Roasted pea nuts quart 5c.

Liquors of all Kinds for Medical use Whisky, Rum, Brandy, Gin, Wines and Ales.

Good old bourbon $1 and $1.25. 2 years old $1.40 and 1.50. Best old 76 for medical use $2.50. Sherry Wine as good as any in the country $1.50. Port wine best in the market $1.50. California Angelica wine best $1.50. Gin $1.50 and $2.50. Dublin and Londen Porter 22c. Scotch 22c.

TOBACCOS AND CIGRS-

A No. 1 smoking for 30c per pound. Choice fine cut 50c per pound. No. 1 Plug Tobacco 50c per pound.

We have a large assortment and can sell a good cigar at $1.25 per box. And a choice No. 1 cigar for $1.75 per 100.

FRESH OYSTERS LOWER THIS YEAR THAN MEAT—We sell a fine Oyste at 12½. No. 1 full count saloon oyster 20c. Large A standard 30c.

You can save at least 25 per cent. on the dollar at the

Fruit House, Fort Wayne, Ind

JOHN L. DAVIS,

OF THE

PIONEER HARDWARE STORE,

Would respectfully announce that he has made large additions in every department, and is prepared to turnish everything in the Hardwase line.

He keeps a full stock of

BUILDING MATERIAL.

Which he can sell at prices to suit the times. All kinds of

STOVES and TINWARE

on hand. He keeps a first-class TINMR and prepared todo all kinds of Eaves Trough hangnig Roofing, on short notice, and in a workmanlike manner.

MAIN STREET, OPPOSITE COURT HOUSE AUBURN, IND

EXCELSIOR HARDWARE.

GRAND CLEARANCE SALE OF

STOVES, TINWARE, AXES, CROSS-CUT SAWS, &C., &C.,

That must be sold at some price. We have every kind of saws on the market and parties wanting anything in the

SAW, AXE, STOVE AND TINWARE LINE,

Will do well to call on us before buying elsewhere. We have the goods and can suit you in kinds, quality and the best of all we

GUARANTEE PRICES

Lower than the lowest. We have added Iron and Stéele,

SEAT AND CARRIAGE SPRINGS,

and a general line of Carriage and Wagon Hardware,

WOOD WORK.

Sleigh and Sled Runners, Rims, Hubs and Spokes,

and a general line of Wagon, Carriage and Blacksmiths goods, and will sell just as low

And a Little Lower

Than you can buy the same quality of goods elsewhere. We bu for cash and sell for cash and therefore it is clear that we can compete with any house in the state selling Hardware. Come everybedy and cary away goods at almost your own prices. This is no humbug, but mean just what we say. Come and see for yourselves Remember the place,

EXCELSIOR HARDWATE STCRE

N rth Side Public Squa:e, AUBURN, IND.

W. H. KIBLINGER & CO.

DOWN! DOWN! DOWN!

FROM 10 TO 25 PER CENT.

HARNESS, SADELES,

COLLARS, WHIPS, &c.,

At my new shop on seventh street, opposite Court House, in old Post Office building. Come and see me and I will sell you a good article for less money than you ever heard of before. All work warranted.

G. RHODENBAUGH & CO

$200.000.

GREATEST In order to clear out our stock of very superior Gold-plated Jewelry valued at over $200,000, we will send as below, 20 Pieces, all warranted Gold-plated for $1.00. 1 pair Gold Stone Sleeve Buttons; 1 pair Engraved Sleeve Buttons; 1 set Pointed Studs; 1 set Amethyst Studs; 1 Wedding Ring; 1 Engraved Band Finger Ring; 1 Amethyst Stone Ring, Inlaid with Gold; 1 Elegant Ring, marked "Friendship;" BARGAIN 1 Amethyst Stone Scarf Pin, Inlaid with Gold; 1 Silvered Hat Pin; 1 set Ladies' Jet and Gold Pin and Drops; 1 Misses' set Jet and Gold; 1 Collar Stud; 1 set Handsome Rosebud Ear Drops; 1 Gents' Elegant Lake George Diamond Stud; 1 Cardinal Red Bead Necklace; 1 pair Ladies Amethyst Stone Ear Drops, EVER Inlaid with Gold; 1 Ladies' Ornamented Jet Brooch; 1 Fancy Scarf Ring and Elegant Watch Chain. Take your choice, the entire lot of 20 pieces, sent Post-paid for $1.00 or any 8 pieces you choose for 50 cents. Now is the time to make money. These can easily be retailed at $10.00. CLUB PREMIUM. To any OFFERED one ordering 12 Lots at $1.00 each, we will present Free, an Open Face Coin Silver Watch as Premium. WATCH AND JEWELRY CIRCULAR FREE.

NOTICES OF THE PRESS.

Our cotemporary, the Boston Globe, speaks very highly of both advertiser and goods as being honorable in his dealings, and reliable in his goods, a commendation we heartily endorse.—St. Louis Dispatch, December 7, 1876.

The house is a thoroughly reliable one in every repect.—Boston Globe, Oct. 25, 1876.

His reputation for honesty, fair dealing, and liberality is unequaled by any advertiser in this city.—N. Y. Day Book, December 16, 1876.

Advertises more and sells cheaper than any man in New York.—Herald, April 13, 1877.

F. STOCKMAN, 27 Bond Street, New York.

DAY'S AGUE TONIC

CURES EVERY FORM OF CHILLS, OR MONEY RETURNED.

DAY'S TONIC Cures Chills and Fever.

DAY'S TONIC Cures Dumb Chills.

DAY'S TONIC Supersedes Quinine.

DAY'S TONIC Cures Old Chronic Chills.

DAY'S TONIC Is pleasant for Children.

DAY'S TONIC Cleanses the Stomach.

DAY'S TONIC Acts on Liver and Bowels.

DAY'S TONIC Don't Buzz the Head.

DAY'S TONIC Don't contain Quinine.

DAY'S TONIC

Is a new innovation, and possesses advantages heretofore unknown and unclaimed by others.

It does not contain Quinine or any poison; it does not produce buzzing or roaring in the head, which follows the use of Quinine; it is retained by delicate stomachs; it acts upon the liver and bowels without the use of any other medicine; it never fails to cure, and our agents are authorized to return the money in each and every case of failure; one bottle will cure two cases. Try it and see. Sold by all Druggists at $1.00.

J. P. DROMGOOLE & CO., Proprietors, Louisville, Ky.

RAILROADS.

Lake Shore & Mich Southern R R

AIR LINE DIVISION.

On and after Nov. 19 1877, trains will run as follows:

GOING WEST

	Special Ex.	Pacific Ex.	Accom
Toledo	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Wauseon	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Bryan	12 50	1 50	7 54
Butler	1 25	2 25	8 35
Waterloo	1 40	2 40	8 57
Sedan
Corunna			9 15
Kendallville	2 15	3 05	9 30
Ligonier	2 55	3 40
Goshen	3 28	4 12
Elkhart	3 50	4 35

GOING EAST.

Elkhart	1 10 p m	9 50 p m
Goshen	1 30	10 10
Ligonier	1 58	10 42
Kendallville	2 23	11 17	6 00 a m
Corunna			6 15
Sedan
Waterloo	2 57	11 46	6 33
Butler	3 12	12 01 a m	6 52
Bryan	3 45	12 40	7 38
Wauseon	4 25	1 25	8 34
Toledo	5 40	2 40	10 00

CHAS. PAINE, Gen. Supt.
J. W. CARY, Gen Tic. Agt
J. R. CURTIS, Division Su

Pittsburg, Ft. W. & C. R. R

Condensed time card Nov. 11, 1877.

GOING WEST.

	No 1 Fast ex.	No. 7 Pac. ex.	No. 3 Nigh ex	No 5 Mail.
Pittsburgh	11 45 pm	9 00 am	1 50 pm	6 00 am
Rochester	12 53 am	10 15	2 58	7 45
Alliance	3 10	12 50 pm	5 35	11 00
Orrville	4 45	2 30	7 12	12 56 pm
Mansfield	7 00	4 40	9 20	3 11
Crestl'e ar.	7 30	5 15	9 45	3 50
" lv.	7 50	5 40	9 55
Forest	9 25	7 35	11 25
Lima	10 40	9 00	12 25 am
Ft. Wayne	1 30 pm	11 55	2 40
Plymouth	3 45	2 46 am	4 55
Chicago	7 00	6 30	7 58

GOING EAST

	No. 4 Night ex	No. 2 Fast ex.	No. 6 Pac. ex	No. 8 Mail
Chicago	9 10 pm	8 00 am	5 15 pm
Plymouth	2 46 am	11 25	9 00
Ft. Wayne	6 55	2 15 pm	11 30
Lima	8 55	4 10	1 30 am
Forest	10 10	5 20	2 37
Crestl'e ar.	11 45	6 55	4 20
" lv.	12 05 pm	7 15 pm	4 30	6 05am
Mansfield	12 35	7 44	5 00	6 55
Orrville	2 26	9 38	7 10	9 15
Alliance	4 00	11 15	9 00	11 20
Rochester	6 22	1 20 am	11 06	2 00pm
Pittsburgh	7 30	2 30	12 15	3 30

Trains Nos 3 and 6 run daily. Train No. 1 leaves Pittsburg daily except Sunday. Train No 4 leaves Chicago daily except Saturday. All others daily except Sunday.

F. R. MYERS,
Gen Pass. and Ticket Agent.

Detroit, Eel River & Illinois R. R.

TAKE EFFECT Nov. 19 1877.

GOING EAST.

Stations.	MAIL No. 2,	ACCOM. No. 4,	LOCAL FT No 8,
lv. Logansport	8 15am	7 30pm	6 20am
Mexico	8 57	8 29	7 40
Denver	9 08	9 06	8 25
Chili	9 17	9 12	8 47
Roann	9 35	9 37	9 35
Laketon	9 56	10 00	10 10
N. Manchester	10 05	10 17	10 35
Liberty Mills	10 17	10 30	11 00
Collamer	10 31	10 50	11 40
S. Whitley	10 36	10 55	11 50
Columbia City	11 03	11 31	12 50
Col on's	11 20	11 55	2 03
Churubusco	11 34	12 12	2 31
La Otto	11 47	12 42	3 25
Cedar Creek	12 06	12 53	3 45
Auburn Junct'n	12 22	1 12	4 25
Auburn	12 25	1 17	4 35
Butler	1 00am	2 00am	5 45pm

Going West.

Stations	No. 1,	No. 3,	No. 7,
Logansport ar	7 00pm	1 00pm	6 50pm
Mexico	6 36	12 00	5 40
Denver	6 17	11 46	5 20
Chili	6 10	11 35	5 00
Roann	5 57	11 12	4 15
Laketon	5 45	10 50	3 30
North Mancester	5 33	10 35	3 00
Liberty Mills	5 27	10 17	2 35
Collamar	5 15	9 57	2 05
South Whitley	5 12	9 52	1 53
Columbia City	4 50	9 18	12 10
Collin's	4 32	8 53	11 29
Cherubusco	4 20	8 30	10 55
La Otto	3 55	8 10	10 05
Cedar Creek	3 45	8 00	9 48
Auburn Junction	3 27	7 40	9 15
Auburn	3 22	7 35	8 30
Butler lv	2 45pm	6 55am	7 15

FRANK J. BECKER,
Gen. Sup't

Baltimore & Ohio Railroad.

IN EFFECT Nov. 18 1877.

GOING WEST.

STATIONS:	Express	Express	Cum'l A
lv New York	8 15am	8 55pm
Philadelphia	11 45	11 30
Baltimore	5 15pm	7 00am
Washington	6 55	8 40
Wheeling	8 2 am	10 50pm	4 30pm
Bellaire	8 30am	11 15	4 50
Barnesville	10 10	12 25am	6 12
Cambridge	11 13	1 25	7 30
Zanesville	12 25pm	2 35	8 50
ar Newark	1 30	3 40	10 00
Columbus	3 20	5 20
Shawnee	4 30	10 10
lv Columbus	12 40
Newark	2 20	3 50	5 00pm
Mt Vernon	3 19	4 50	7 15
Mansfield	4 54	6 10	11 25
Shelby	5 11	6 47	12 23am
Monroeville	6 13	8 25	3 00
ar Sandusky	7 00	9 10	4 50
lv Chicago Junction	6 00	7 45	6 15
Republic	6 45	8 19	8 19
Tiffin	7 15	8 39	9 55
Fostoria	7 45	9 10	10 03
Deshler	8 50	10 09	1 35pm
Defiance	9 52	11 06
Hicksville	10 41	11 53
Auburn Junction	11 22	12 35pm
Garrett	11 40pm	1 05
Avilla
Albion	12 17am	1 44
Milford Junction
Walkertown Junction	2 33	3 53
Chicago	5 40	7 00

GOING EAST.

Chicago	8 50am	9 40pm
Walkertown Junction	12 26pm	10 54pm	11 20am
Milford Junction			2 37pm
Albion	2 30	3 10	4 10
Avilla	2 49	3 30	4 55
Garrett	3 20	3 55	6 00am
Auburn Junction	3 28	4 03	6 18
Hicksville	4 07	4 42	7 42
Defiance	4 54	5 27	9 15
Deshler	5 49	6 23	11 35
Fostoria	6 47	7 23	2 10pm
Tiffin	7 15	7 54	3 20
Republic	7 36
Sandusky
Monroeville
Chicago Junction	8 40	9 30	1 25
Shelby Junction	9 15	10 08	2 55
Mansfield	9 44	10 37	3 55
Mt. Vernon	11 13	12 10pm	7 15
Ar Newark	12 15a m	1 15	9 20
lv Columbus	5 50	5 20
Shawnee
Newark	12 30am	2 05	5 55am
Lv Zanesville	1 35	3 10	7 10
Cambridge	2 37	4 06	8 14
Barnesville	3 38	5 05	9 20
Ar Bellaire	4 50	6 20	10 40
Wheeling	6 00	7 40	11 00
Washington	7 20pm	7 50am
Baltimore	8 40	9 20
Philadelphia	3 10am	1 45pm
New York	6 45	5 10pm

Zanesville Accommodation leaves Zanesville daily except Sunday at 6:40 a. m., and arrives a Columbus at 9:45 a. m.

Express trains run daily, other trains daily except Sunday.

L. M COLE, Gen. Tick. Agt.

Ft. Wayne, Muncie & Cin. R. R.

Muncie Route.

THE SHORT LINE TO INDIANAPOLIS,
—AND—
THE SOUTHWEST.

Time Card in effect Nov. 18, 1877.

STATIONS.	GOING SOUTH. 1. Mail.	3. Express.	5. Accom
FORT WAYNE	1 00 pm	6 00 pm
Bluffton	2 10	7 15 pm
Montpelier	2 47	7 57 pm
Hartford	3 17	8 24 pm
MUNCIE	[illegible]	[illegible]	6 15 am
Newcastle	5 08		9 00
Cambridge City	5 40		9 46
Connersville	6 25		10 30
Cincinnati	10 00 pm		12 25 p m
INDIANAPOLIS	6 05	11 20 pm
Louisville	10 00 pm	8 30 am
Terre Haute	10 36 pm	1 50 am
St. Louis	7 25 am	8 30 am

STATIONS	GOING NORTH	6 Express.	4 Accom.
St. Louis		8 45 am
Terre Haute		1 36 pm
Louisville		7 17 pm
Cincinnati	7 30 am		4 10 pm
Indianapolis		4 25 am	4 25 pm
Connersville	10 40 am		7 40 pm
Cambridge City	11 14 am		8 13 pm
New Castle	11 53 am		8 50 pm
Muncie	12 45 pm	8 20 am	9 40 pm
Hartford	1 30 pm	9 15 am
Montpelier	2 04 pm	9 41 am
Bluffton	2 48 pm	10 19 am
Fort Wayne	3 50 pm	11 25 am

All trains daily except Sunday. Trains run on Columbus time Through cars attached to trains 1 and 4, and run between Fort Wayne and Indianapolis via Muncie.

GEO. W. MULLEN, Act'g Gen. Tick. Ag't.
W. W. WORTHINGTON, Gen. Supt.

Ft. Wayne, Jackson & Sag. R. R

Short Line Between

Michigan and the South.

Time card in effect Nov 18—run by Chicago time

Going South.

Stations	Mail	Exp.	Fr't.
Saginaw	3 35 pm	7 15 am
Lansing	7 50 pm	10 00 am
Grand Rapids		8 30 am	11 50 am
Detroit	9 50 pm	7 00 am
Jackson	6 55 am	11 40 am	5 10 pm
Jonesville	8 10	12 50 pm	7 10
Bankers	8 28	1 07	7 47
Reading	8 44	1 20	8 15
Angola	9 45	2 12	9 45
Waterloo	10 28	2 47	10 50
Auburn	10 40	3 01	11 42
Auburn Junction	10 46	3 05	11 35
Ft Wayne	11 40 am	4 00 pm	1 00 am
Indianapolis	6 05 pm	11 20 pm
Louisville	10 50 pm	8 30 am
St. Louis	7 25 am	8 30 am

Going North.

St. Louis		8 45 pm
Louisville		7 15 pm
Indianapolis		4 25 am
Dep. Fort Wayne	4 15 pm	11 15 am	1 30 am
Auburn Junction	5 15	12 05 pm	3 00
Auburn	5 18	12 08	3 05
Waterloo	5 32	12 19	4 05
Ar Angola	6 38	12 57	5 35
Reading	7 35	1 49	7 15
Bankers	7 47	2 08	7 40
Jonesville	8 05	2 30	8 10
Jackson	9 20 pm	2 40	10 00 am
Detroit	3 35 am	6 30	1 00 pm
Grand Rapids	7 05 am	1 00	4 30 pm
Lansing		5 55 pm
Saginaw		9 13 pm

All trains daily except Sunday.

P. S. LOOMIS, Pres't
S. K. HOOPER Gen. Ticket Ag't.

JAS. CLIFFORD,

WATERLOO, IND.

Keeps constantly on hand the best and choicest brands of all kinds of

Wines and Liquors,

Cigars, Tobaccos, &c.

He also has, in connection with the above a fir class

BILLIARD HALL.

To our citizens and the traveling public, we would say that this is the popular resort at Wco. First door south of the railroad.

GOLD. Great chance to make money. I you can't get gold you can ge greenbacks. We need a person in every town to take subscriptions for the largest, cheapest and best illustrated family publication in the world. Any one can become a successful agent. The most elegant works of art given free to subscribers. The price is so low that almost every body subscribes. One Agent reports making over $150 in a week. A lady agent reports taking over 400 subscribers in ten days. All who engage make money fast. You can devote all your time to the business, or only your spare time. You need not be away from home over night. You can do it as well as others. Full directions and terms free. Elegant and expensive outfit free. If you want profitable work send us your address at once. It costs nothing to try the business. No one who engages fails to make great pay. Address "The People's Journal," Portland Maine.

Dr. A. G. OLIN'S Private Hospital, 187 East Washington St., Chicago, Ills, for the cure of all Diseases of a Private nature, resulting from early abuses or infection of either Sex. Seminal Weakness producing Emissions, Loss of Memory, Impaired Sight, Lost Manhood or Impotency, Nervous Debility, permanently cured; diseases of the Bladder, Kidneys, Liver, Lungs, Asthma, Catarrh, Piles, all Chronic Diseases, and DISEASES OF FEMALES, yield to his treatment. Dr. Olin has had a life-long experience, and cures where others fail. He is a graduate of the Reformed School, uses no mercury, has the largest practice in the U. S. LADIES requiring treatment with private home and board, call or write. Every convenience for patients. Send fifty cents for sample of Rubber Goods and circular of Important information by express. DR. OLIN'S Female Pills, $5 per Box. Consultation free.

MARRIAGE GUIDE 272 pages. Secrets & information for the young and middle aged of both Sexes, on all diseases of a private nature. Valuable advice to the married and those contemplating marriage. How to be healthy and truly happy in the married relation. Everybody should get this book. Price 50 cents, to any address, sealed.

A PHYSIOLOGICAL

View of Marriage!

WOMAN AND MARRIAGE A Guide to Wedlock and confidential Treatise on the duties of marriage and the causes that unfit for it; the secrets of Reproduction and the Diseases of Women. A book for private, considerate reading. 260 pages, price 50 cts.

A PRIVATE MEDICAL ADVISER! On all disorders of a Private Nature arising from Self Abuse, Excesses, or Secret Diseases, with the best means of cure. 224 large pages, price 50 cts.

A CLINICAL LECTURE on the above diseases and those of the Throat and Lungs, Catarrh, Rupture, the Opium Habit, &c., price 10 cts.

Either book sent postpaid on receipt of price; or all three, containing 500 pages, beautifully illustrated, for 75 cts. Address DR. BUTTS, No. 12 N. 8th St. St. Loui, Mo.

CHRONIC Diseases Cured. New paths marked out by that plainest of all books—"Plain Home Talk and Medical Common sense,"—nearly 1,000 pages, 200 illustrations by Dr. E. B. FOOTE of 120 Lexington Avenue, N Y. Purchasers of this book are at liberty to consult its auther in person or by mail free. Price by mail $3.25 for the standard edition, or $1.25 for the popular edition, which contains all the same matter and illustrations. Contents free Agents wanted. MURRY HILL PUBLISHING Co. 129 East 28th St. N. Y.

$45 PREMIUM WATCH AND CHAIN—a stem-winder, Free with every order. Outfit free. J. B. Gaylord & Co., Chicago, Ill.

$3 GOLD PLATED WATCHES, Cheapest in the known world, Sure. A Watch Free to Agents. Address, A. COULTER & Co., Chicago.

OPIUM and Morphine Habit absolutely and speedily cured. Painless; no publicity. Send stamp for particulars. Dr. Carlton, 187 Washington St., Chicago, Ill.

$2500 A YEAR. Agents wanted. Business legitimate. Particulars free. Address J. WORTH & CO., St Louis, Mo.

THE AUBURN COURIER.

Devoted to the Interests of the Democratic Party and to the Collection of Local and General News.

Volume 8. AUBURN, DeKALB COUNTY INDIANA, JANUARY 10th, 1878. Number 2.

The Auburn Weekly Courier

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY, BY

TOM. C. MAYS.

One Year, ...$2. | Six Months, ...$1.

Advertising Rates.

Space.	1m.	3 m.	6 m.	1 y.
1 Square ...	2 00	5 00	7 00	12 00
¼ Column	6 00	12 00	18 00	20 00
½ Column........	10 00	18 00	30 00	50 00
1 Column........	15 00	30 00	50 00	100 00

Local Notices 10 cents per line, first insertion cents each insertion thereafter. Business cards ive Dollars.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY

TERMS OF COURT.

OURTS IN DEKALB CO.	COURTS IN STEUBEN CO
th Monday in February	1st Monday in Febr'y
rd Monday in May.	4th Monday in April.
th Monday in Septem'r	1st Monday in Sept'r
rd Monday in Decem'r	4th Monday in Nov'r.

ATTORNEYS.

H. C. PETERSON,

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public. Office over Davis' hardware store, Auburn, Ind.

J. W. RICKEL,

ATTORNEY AT LAW Auburn, Ind. Specia attention given to collections. Office ove First National Bank.

A. F. PINCHIN

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public, Butler, DeKalb Co., Ind. Insurance and real estate business promptly attended to.

GUY PLUM

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public. Office in the Court House. Special attention paid to the collection of claims. Also agent for Home Insurance Company.

D. D. MOODY. P. V. HOFFMAN.

Moody and Hoffman,

ATTORNEYS AT LAW, Office in Odd Fellows' building, opposite Court House, Auburn, Ind.

BEST and McCLELLAN.

ATTORNEYS AT LAW, Waterloo, Ind. Will practice in the Courts of DeKalb & Steuben counties. Liberal Advances Made on all first-class Claims left in our hands for collection.

B. A. FRANKS. O. Z. HUBBELL.

Franks & Hubbell,

ATTORNEYS at law, will practice in DeKalb and adjoining counties. Special attention given to the collection of claims, settlements of decendent estates and conveyance. Office on Broadway opposite Haskins & Son's livery stable, Butler, Ind.

R. WES. M'BRIDE, J. L. MORLAN, W. H. LEAS

McBRIDE, MORLAN and LEAS

ATTORNEYS AT LAW, NOTARIES PUBLIC, COLLECTING AND INSURANCE AGENCY Office over Fisher's Clothing Store, corner of Wayne and Marion streets, Waterloo, Ind. Will practice in all parts of the State. Especial Attention given to collections in DeKalb, Steuben, LaGrange and Noble counties.

DANIEL Z. HOFFMAN.

NOTARY PUBLIC, writer of deeds, mortgages &c., making abstracts and looking up titles, attending to collecting. Also agent for Niagara Fire Insurance Company. Office with County Recorder, Auburn, Ind.

PHYSICIANS.

DR. J. A. COWAN,

PHYSICIAN & SURGEON, Auburn, Ind. Office on Main street, over Central Grocery.

DR. T. G. MATHENY.

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON office up stairs in McIntyre's block, Auburn, Ind. All calls promptly attended to.

W. S. ALLEN.

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, Office West o Court House, on Main Street, over Eldridge's store. Same office lately occupied by Dr. Cowan.

Dr. T. J. Dills,

Especial attention given to Diseases of the EYE and EAR. Rooms 1 and 2 Odd Fellows' building. Office hours—9:30 to 12 a. m.; 1 to 3 p. m. 7 to 8 p. m. Fort Wayne, Ind.

DR. TRITCH,

HOMEOPATHIC PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON Special attention given to Surgery and Chronic diseases. Office in Case's Block, Auburn Indiana.

DR. S. B. JOHNSTON,

DENTIST, WATERLOO, INDIANA, Does all work in the line of his profession at as low figures as possible. Special attention given to gold filling and making new teeth. All work warranted.

W. T. KNAPP, M. D.

Formerly of Chicago, Ill.,

HOMŒOPATHIC PHYSICIAN,

AUBURN, INDIANA.

Office at Residence, Ralston Property, Seventh Street.

Special attention given to

CHRONIC DISEASES

AND

DISEASES OF CHILDREN.

Calls promptly attended, day or night, city or country. Consultation in German or English.

HOTELS.

BUTT'S HOTEL,

FORMERLY THE BIGLER HOUSE, JOHN BUTT & A. B. RICHARDS, Proprietors, Waterloo, Ind. Free omnibus to and from all trains Good sample rooms on first floor.

Central House,

MR. M. C. MARKEL, Prop. Corner Main and Seventh streets. Good Sample Rooms for Drummers.

TREMONT HOUSE.

WASHINGTON, D. C. Accommodates three hundred guests. Terms $2.50 per day. Located corner Second street and Indiana Avenue. In full view of the Capitol City Hall.

F. P. HILL.

SANDS HOUSE.

COR. WABASH AVE. & MADISON ST. CHICAGO, ILL. New House, elegantly furnished. Only $2.00 per day.

Geo. S. Palmer, Late of City Hotel, J. C. sta. O. Sands, Proprietor

BILL BRITTON

THE DRAY MAN

Will attend promptly to all orders for

DRAYING AND HAULING.

Battling good teams and reasonab

CARPETS

ELLSWORTH, ANDREW & Co.,

Offer a large and choice stock of Carpets in all the newest designs.

Body Brussels Carpets,
Tapestry Carpets,
Ingrain Carpets,
COTTON CHAIN CARPETS,
HEMP CARPETS,
RAG CARPETS.
Terry's Reps, Cretonnes, Lace Curtains, Shades, Wall Paper, Stair Rods.

OIL CLOTHS,

Mattings, Rugs and Mats, Druggets

And all goods pertaining to the carpet and upholestry business.

Lambrequins

A Specialty.

Prices Low to Compete with the Times

ELLSWORTH, ANDREW & CO.
26 East Berry Street,
Fort Wayne, Indiana.

NO PEOPLE IN THE WORLD

suffer as much with Neuralgic or Rheumatic complaints as Americans, and no nation is so prolific in remedies to cure, yet we come in contact every day with scores who are suffering without having found the cure they have sought for. To those who have used

Lawson's Curative

we need only to say that it is compounded with the same scientific skill and care as heretofore, and maintains the deserved reputation which it has acquired by the wonderful cures it has performed. To those who have never tested the CURATIVE we urge a trial of its virtues for the diseases named below.

Eminent and Skillful Physicians

use the CURATIVE largely in their practice, and prominent clergymen and editors recommend it from a knowledge of its effects.

Rheumatism,	Diphtheria,
Dyspepsia,	Sciatica,
Neuralgia,	Toothache,
Pleurisy,	Sore Throat,
Swollen Joints,	Chilblains,
Headache,	Sprains,
Lame Back,	Burns,
Erysipelas,	Scalds,

All yield to the magic influence of the CURATIVE, no matter of how long standing. It is only necessary to use it faithfully and perseveringly, according to the directions which accompany each bottle, and you will be cured.

Lawson's Curative

Healing and Cooling to Wounds, Sores, Burns and Scalds.

Try it and you will never be without it.

SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

Price $1.00 per Bottle, 6 for $5.00.

PREPARED BY

Lawson Chemical Co., Cleveland, O.

For sale by F. E. Davenport.

HURRAH.

THE NEW AMERICAN
SEWING MACHINE.
HAS SELF THREADING SHUTTLE
RUNS THE LIGHTEST OF ANY HAS SELF SETTING NEEDLE
SHUTTLE MACHINE
SIMPLEST & BEST.

A MAN CRAZY

Selling

SEWING MACHINES!

For 30 DOLLARS

Go and see them.

G. H. YESBERA, AGT

Local and Miscellaneous.

Capt. J. C. Braden, of Steuben Co., died last week.

Dr. Brown, of Newville, has gone east on a lecturing tour.

Isaac Springer, of Kendallville, has fallen heir to $500,000—Whew!

Court commences at Albion this week with Judge Tousely on the bench.

An ordinance prohibiting teams from stopping upon our crossings wouldn't come amiss.

Dave Bodine has sold his property to Mr. J. P. Widney and will leave for the west soon.

Kapp will not cap any more air guns. He says his name was off doot baper already twice.

This has been an off year as far as concerns sleighs, skating, &c.

Mr. Robinson is getting along slowly with his cut foot. He can now waltz around with the aid of a cane.

The main socials are getting to be very popular. The loudest one we know of was held at this place.

Mr. S. L. Yandes' father and brother were also drowned according to the statement of the Angola Herald.

Michael Long's funeral was largely attended. Many of his old chums from miles around were in attendance.

Two Olive township grangers got drunk, and on their way home from Elkhart got into a fight in which knives and clubs were freely used. One of them was injured so that fears are entertained as to his recovery.—Albion New Era.

Will he be buried by the "honors of the lodge."

Kate Field corrects Jennie June's story that she was obliged to live abroad because she was not appreciated at home. Kate also says: "The best friends I have in the world are American men, and if I have not married it is because I love too many of them."

We think we have had a good supply of mud here during the past month, but Auburn and Waterloo can discount us on that score, at least 25 per cent.—Angola Hearald.

Be aisy, neighbor, be aisy. The roads in the city have not been so terribly bad. Its the ones leading to the place.

Some one has raised a question as to the difference between hugging a well corseted girl and a stove pipe. Well, having no experience with the stove pipes, we'll take ours with the girl at a venture—believing that by close attention to business we could make an impression.

How often, O how often, a man with one solitary button on his shirt, and that one a brass pin, looks with devouring envy upon his wife's new seven button kid gloves, and wishes all the shirts in his collection were just one glove. There does seem to be something wrong in this division of buttons.

A white fifteen year old girl married a negro in Fairfax, Va. No clergyman or magistrate could be found who would perform the ceremony, and so the couple simply swore on the Bible in the presence of witnesses, that they would be faithful as husband and wife. The girl's father on hearing of the marriage killed the negro.

One more year has passed away, but then, old maids, don't despair. Remember that Naomah, daughter of Enoch, was 580 years old when she relinquished her maiden life and married Noah. But notwithstanding this strengthning argument we advise you, one and all to make good use of powder paint, and the next leap year that dawns upon your unlucky fates.

This is the opinion of the Steuben Republican upon those who have not yet put on the halter and worked in double harness: The activity of the market matrimonial has sensibly abated within the last twenty-four hours. A revival, at least one of any special note, is not to be expected at present, as it is alwas very dull in that business following the holidays.

Mr. Crocker is one of the richest of the rich men of California. His silver wedding occurred recently, and at its celebration his wife presented a picture so striking and singular that it deserves mention. Her gown was a mass of silver brocade and gauze; she wore a girdle, necklace, comb, ear rings and fan chatelaine of magnificant diamonds; and crowning all this silvery glitter, was her thick, shining, silver-white hair. It wouldn't do however to have every lady like Mrs. Crocker. They'd soon want the "silver to tread among the gold."

German Syrup.

No other medicine in the world was ever given such a test of its curative qualities as Boschee's German Syrup. In three years two million four hundred thousand small bottles of this medicine was distributed free of charge by Druggists in this country to those afflicted with Consumption, Asthama, Croupe, Severe Coughs, Pheumonia and other diseases of the throat and lungs, giving the American people undeniable proof that German Syrup will cure them The result has been that Druggists in every town an village in the United States are recommending it to their cutomers. Go to your Druggist, F. E. Dvenport, and ask what he knows about it. Sample bottles 10 cents. Regular size 75 cents. Three doses will relieve any case.

For sale by F. E. Davenport.

Assignment of mortgages should be Recorded.

Articles of agreement should be recorded.

Articles of Association should be recorded.

Leases of land should be recorded.

Mechanic's Liens should be recorded.

Deeds and mortgages of real estate should be recorded within forty-five days from date of execution.

Chattel mortgages should be recorded within ten days from date of execution.

Are your deeds recorded?

Are all old deeds in your posession received from previous owners of your land recorded?

Are all old mortgages released?

These are all required to perfect title.

The woman's Journal tells a rather tough one on a man who would rather go to jail than mind the baby. Mrs. Rafferty applied to a Police Judge for advice, saying that she could support the whole family if the husband would mind the baby so she could go out to work. The Judge gave Rafferty the choice of minding the baby or going to the Workhouse, and Rafferty chose the Workhouse. The babe must have been but a few weeks old and Mr. Rafferty did right in standing his ground. A large number of men in this town would be 'tending the babies if their wives would agree to support them.

We learn from the Albion New Era, that a murder was perpetrated in one of the saloons of Warsaw, on Friday last. Two old citizens of that place, named Stephen Boyer and Samuel Holm were in Hoffman's saloon, when in a temporary fit of insanity Boyer stabbed Holm inflicting fatal injuries. The knife broke one of the ribs and penetrated the lungs. Boyer was terribly beaten before his arrest could be effected. There are but few crimes committed now a days but what whiskey is the main instigator. Men who become deranged under its influence, should never touch a glass. It seems strange to us that old men will allow themselves to become its victim—but they do.

Not Guilty.

They held a "criminal court" in Pommett's barber rooms last Thursday evening. Jack was Judge and Gamester, Prosecutor.

Kin was the first victim brought before this "talented magistrate" and after being sworn by "clerk George" the following questions were asked by the Prosecutor:

"You live in this county?'

"Y-eas, sir.'

"How old are you?'

"Seventeen, and past?'

"Did you sleep in Mr. Hoodlim's barn on New Years eve?'

"I slept in a barn on the rear end of the lot he occupies, but I don't know whether it belongs to him or not.'

"Why do you doubt his ownership, sir?'

"Because he owes me $4.00 for digging potatoes and refused to pay it.

"Well, that has nothing to do with the question I asked you. Why, sir, do you doubt his ownership?'

"Well, sir, I was going to sue him, and in looking over the records I found it was in his wife's name.'

"Take the witness, says the Prosecutor.'

"That'll do,' said the huge lawyer Sam.

The arguments on both sides were very forcibly given, and when Prosecutor Gamester was winding up his elegant plea, the house was as quiet as the mid hour of a still night, the Jury's head was bowed in sorrow, and a big tear was passing slowly down the right cheek of the Judge. It dropped, lit on his corn and with a mighty spring he grasped his hammer and bringing it down heavily on the bar of justice cried out: "Silence in the court!" The jury was out long enough to take a drink and returned a verdict of "not guilty."

The court adjourned to the New Years session.

Two performances were given by the Adelphians of Albion this week, at that place. Auburn is dead in the shell, our former theatre talent withdrawing from the stage. The Albion troup would doubtless do well to come over and give us a whirl.

From the Logansport Pharos.

Notes and Items of Early Times.

BY MAJOR M'FADEN.

Aubbeenaubee, of whom I have been writing, was of some note among his tribe, the Pottawottamies. His home as well as his ancestors for many generation back was at the head-waters of the Tippecanoe. Lake Manitou and Muxinkuckee, and with traditons and legends he could take you back at least one hundred and fifty years, and in the language of Blackstone, "So far that the momory of man (or Indian) runneth not to the contrary." You will notice that the Cass county seal (seal of the Cass Circuit Court) represents an Indian chief shaking hands with a white man. The Indian is Aubbeenaubee, and the white man General Cass. They were fast friends for many years. The fact that a township is named after him in Fulton county where he often stayed, shows that he was no common Indian.

It was in the month of August, in a terrible dry time. It had not rained for weeks. Indian Creek and Blue Grass had gone dry, and fish, frogs, turtles, muskrats and tadpoles were all dying for the want of water, and we had to dig deep on the edge of the prairie to get enough water for ourselves. One day it was red hot, and the muttering thunder portended a storm. Along in the afternoon the black clouds began to roll up like a pall in the west, and the thunder, peal on peal, shook the very earth, and the animals and birds sought shelter. I cannot but say I always enjoyed a thunder storm, for if it does kill you, you will never know what hurt you, and you are not troubled with doctors, and it is a kind of an easy death. Night came on apace and a terrible night it was. Thunder and lightning, wind and a deluge of rain that seemed as though it would sweep everything before it, but our little cabin stood the storm manfully. When the storm was at its worst we were somewhat scared. As father was not at home, mother got the Bible began to read, and I kind of laughed before I thought, and she gave me a moral lecture and said it was wrong to laugh then. I told her that it was, but I could not help laughing sometimes, if it killed me, and I do believe that if my best friend was dying, and gave a curious kind of a kick, I would have to laugh right out in meeting. It was such a night, that history tells us, Napoleon Bonapart died. While his spirit was passing away a furious hurricane dashed the waves against the rock-bound coast of the island of St. Helena. While the storm was beating against our cabin like the angry waves of the sea, we heard a scream like that of a panther, that made the hair stand on my head, and scared mother nearly to death. I grabbed the ax and told her we would die game. We then heard some wolves howling, and another scream near by, and all at once the door burst open and in fell Mingo, the Indian boy, and the squaw and papoose that belonged to the Indian that I had found dead in the hollow tree. They were nearly scared to death. We barricaded the door as soon as possible, and in a moment the wolves were around the house. They had started over from the Tippecanoe before the storm had commenced to let us know that Aubbeenaubee was about to die, and wanted some of us to go over and see him. The storm came on and they got lost, and the wolves got after them, and a moment more they would be to late. The only window we had was a log cut out on the north side of the house, and two eight by ten glass put in, and that was the beacon light that guided them, and saved them from the wolves. We were afraid that the wolves would come down the big stick chimney, which was not very high. We put all the rest of the folks up in the clapboard loft, and they pulled the little pole ladder up after them, and Mingo and myself stood guard at the door and fire-place. Looking around I saw a big wolf reared upon his hind legs looking in through our little window. His eyes looked like tin saucers. I told Mingo to lay low and draw his breath as true as a hair, while I gently took down the little old rifle, and carelessly drew a bead on Mr. Wolf and fired, broke the window all to smash and tenderly sent a ball through his physiognomy that spoiled him from ever having his photograph taken; that settled his stomach, and the next morning I salted him down for winter meat. The wolves left us and the storm went down. The sun came up next morning in all his glorious splendor, and peace reigned once more on the Blue Grass. The papoose was very pretty, eyes and hair as black as a raven, and a golden complexion. It was sick and its mother had brought it over to see if my mother could not do something for it, as she never turned away the poor and needy. There are three kinds of poor—the Lord's poor, the devil's poor, and the poor devil's, and we never went back on the Lord's poor. There are three kinds of rich—the Lord's rich, the devil's rich, and the rich devils, and I always went for the rich devils; they are those who dress in purple and fine linen and fare sumptiously every day, and thank God that they are not as other men, and will not give three cents to suffering humanity, and are preparing themselves for a gilt-edge funeral and warm quarters hereafter, and those who consider themselves righteous are much further from the kingdom of heaven than the very sinners whom they despise.

The next morning Mingo and myself took the trail for the Tippecanoe to see how Aubbee was. We arrived there in the afternoon, and Oh, such a sight! There laid poor Aubbee, wasting away with some kind of fever. His face lit up with a sad smile as I shook him by the hand. There were only two old Indians with him, who could not help him, and the worst of all was the storm of the night before had blown down their bark wigwam and nearly drowned them. Aubbee was all wet; but I had brought him a blanket, shirt and some other things that Mingo said he needed. We fixed him up on a litter or bark cot, and he was more comfortable and cheerful. It appears that when young he had met Father De Smett, a Catholic priest, who had passed through this part of the country, and who was the first white man who went up into the Black Hills among the Indians, and found that there was gold there. He then told the Indians to never let the white man know of the gold, or they would come and take their land from them. The Indians guarded it with a jealous care for many years, but at last the white man found out the gold, and it has turned out just as Father De Smett said it would. The white man has robbed the poor Indians and taken their land, the Black Hills country, from them, and drove them away from their homes, which was solmnly guaranteed to them by the treaty of 1868, and Gen. Terrell, who has been hunting down Sitting Bull and his band, even into Canada, was one of the United States Commissioners at the treaty, and it was then and there guarranteed that no white man should cross the boundary line without the consent of the Indians. But you all know the result. Even Gen. Crook has been engaged this fall in moving some remnants of the Indians up into the headwaters of the Missouri, where the climate or soil causes the manes and tails of the ponies to drop off. But of this again.

As I remarked, Aubbee when young had met Father De Smett, who had given him a little cross and a small book—part Latin and part English—and he had them yet. He wanted me to go over to Winamac and see if I could not find a priest, as he had heard there was one there. I went over next day, and found only two or three houses where Winamac now stands. There had been a priest there, but he had gone North to see some other Indians. I returned and told Aubbee, who was very down hearted. He wanted me to talk to him about the future, and asked me about St. Peter, and I told him in Indian. That it was written in the Book, that the Keys of the Kingdom were delivered unto Peter, and that whatsoever was bound on earth should be bound in heaven, &c., &c. "And on this Rock I will build my church and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." He said it was all right and was ready to go. I asked him where he was going and he said, "I am going way west to the happy hunting grounds, where the sun never sets, and where there are thousands of islands filled with game." I told him to look out a good place for me, and I would try to meet him there, and he said he would. He got weaker and weaker, as he could not eat anything. At last on the third night that I was with him, Mingo and myself were watching, he struggled some and beckoned me to come to him. I went and took him by the hand and put my ear to his mouth. He whispered something in Indian, but I could not understand him, and he passed away gently over onto the other shore, and I wish I was as sure of heaven as that poor Indian.

Now, my dear Christian friends, I must close for the present. Some time again I will tell you how, when and where we buried him, and in the meantime will give you this passage of scripture to ponder on: "What will it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" or, "What shall he give in exchange for his soul?"

The Butler Record of last week says W. P. Erwin, the man who jumped out of a second story window at the Commercial House, last week, died to-day at 12:15. His remains was taken to his home, North Fairfield, Hurion county, Ohio.

SUCH IS LIFE.

BY BELLE BRUCE.

One cheerless evening in the early part of May,
The rain, having poured in torrents all the live-long day,
Still drizzled, while swift gusts of chilly wind,
Dark clouds and muddy streets, distracted frame and mind;
A woman, no stranger amid the busy strife,
Of the masses of the city to fill the wants of life,
Turned from her weekly labor, with those heart-throbs keenly light
So well known to working people on the sixth day's cherished night.

She was neither young, nor old, but was somewhat passing fair,
Though better looking might have been, if bearing less of care,
For it helps not woman's beauty, bringing children forth in sorrow,
And sharing Adam's curse besides, taking thought [illegible];
For, in our [illegible], 'tis right-well known, by toil[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible] much in journeyings back and forth, and car-fare more's the pity.
Good people are constrained to spend, in precious time and money,
In getting back and forth from work, 'tis anything but funny!

Our woman had a patient mare, whose Christian name was Bettie,
A business wagon Bettie drew, quite useful, though not pretty,
And, as her mistress stepped aloft, amidst the blast and drizzle,
To take her seat, that evening drear, Bet seemed inclined to grizzle;
She tossed her head, drew back her ears, and, bouncing up her haunches,
Her mistress soused on cushions wet, with unbecoming launches,
Then took to clattering down the street, with such uneasy vigor
That, spiteful, or coquettish grown, Bet surely showed her figure.

"Whoa! Bettie! Stop!" the woman cried, half frantic with the clatter;
Bet, heeding neither sound nor strain, for might and main did patter,
While spry young nags took in the scene with sly, approving glances,
Applauding well her escapade, with sundry rears and prances,
And lines of people going home, along the sidewalk streaming,
With every grade of awe or mirth their countenance beaming,
Just gazed upon the woman lone, buried by them helter skelter!
"Man's inhumanity to man," urged not a soul to help her.

"Push on behind," a newsboy cried, "Wake up," a teamster shouted;
"So-ho! Bettie!" plead the worried dame, but Bet the caution flouted;
She'd have her way, the perverse brute, and, while insisting on it,
A blast more vicious than the rest blew off the woman's bonnet!
Then rose she strongly in her might, her nerve did not forsake her,
And held the reins with steady hands, appealing to her Maker.
God will help those who help themselves, and soon, though fierce and foaming,
A few right well-directed jerks curtailed Bet's random roaming.

Then to the sidewalk drawing close, despite brute force resisting,
With courteous, although piteous voice, to aid her by assisting
Her check-rein tie to ring close by, she begged a passing stranger.
He started, viewed the storm-tossed form, thinks he, some played-out Granger.
Not of my set I see; "what check?" then moved him on right sneaking.
Surprised the lady looked and pained most on the point of weeping.
Would all men in that busy crowd in her sad plight thus scorn her?
She turned one hopeless look about, and, coming round the corner,
Her quick eye caught a sight which caused her heart with joy to quiver;
A young lad holding her poor hat aloft with cheery vigor
Came passing on. God bless the boy! He soon was close beside her,
And, grasping firm the restive mare, with soothing words he plied her
The lady smoothed her toilet tossed, Bet soon gave up the tussle,
The boy smiled on a bright, new coin, as off the parties rustle;
And through long months, that pesky scene recalled mid bursts of laughter,
The lady never fails to bless the staunch young lad who helped her.
—Chicago Ledger.

A HIGHWAYMAN OUTWITTED;

Or, Exchange No Robbery.

[From London Society, Christmas number, 1877.]

Dingle farm was such a pretty place. Charmingly situated at the foot of a slope, it commanded an extensive view of a beautiful Kentish valley, the ground rising to a ridge of wooded hills in the far distance.

Its steep tiled roof, covered with yellow lichens, indicated its antiquity, and the numerous farm-buildings, ricks and barns, which stood around in picturesque confusion, marked it as wealthy and prosperous in a language of their own. An orchard of venerable, but not the less full-bearing, apple and pear trees ran up the incline behind the house; the pasture-fields were intersected by woods of oaks, under which a tangled mass of undergrowth lent a wild beauty to the spot, the birds keeping up a sweet incessant concert from sunrise to sunset in the branches above.

Two shady lanes led down to Dingle farm from the high-road, which was more than half a mile distant. This old and attractive place had been for generations in the possession of the Dales, a respectable and wealthy family of farmers, and among the villages and country round was better known by the name of Dale's farm. It was inhabited at the time of our story—the latter part of the last century—by old Mr. Dale and his widowed daughter-in-law. Richard Dale, her husband, died soon after the birth of their youngest child, the only surviving son out of four, three of whom died in infancy.

This boy, now 13 years old, was doted on by his grandfather and widowed mother. An orphan grandchild of old Mr. Dale's—a bright, clever girl of 20, named Susan Stidolph—lived with them since the death of her mother, his only daughter, and was Mrs. Dale's right hand. She directed the servants, looked after the dairy, fed the poultry, kept the accounts, and always went to market on market days, Mr. Dale being now too infirm to undertake the journey and transact business.

The market was held at Hazleton, a town distant about seven miles; and thither the farmers sent their cattle, poultry and vegetable produce for sale the first Wednesday in every month. These journeys were attended with some anxiety and not a little danger from highwaymen, who still infested the roads, and who did not fail to make use of market day as an available opportunity for plunder. As the road was much frequented on these particular days, Susan went backward and forward without fear of an encounter with these uncomfortable gentry.

It was the evening before market-day. Supper was just over at the farm, and Mrs. Dale was busy removing it from the large old-fashioned oak table in the kitchen. A bright fire blazed on the spacious hearth, though it was the end of June, and old Mr. Dale sat in the chimney-corner under the immense chimney, where a collection of hams hung in various stages of smoking.

"Now mind, Susan, that you be early for market to-morrow," said Mr. Dale, as she seated herself.

"Never fear, aunt; I'll be off betimes. Thomas must start first with the two cows and the heifer, and I'll follow when they're well on their way. Don't you disturb yourself in the morning, aunt dear."

"Bless the child, as if I shouldn't be up and about against your starting! I shall see to your breakfast, of course."

"I wish you'd let me go, too, mother," said Ben, the boy before mentioned, who was whittling a stick at the door. "I know I could help Susy."

"No, no, no, my dear; you're too young," replied his mother, while the old man, removing his pipe, said, coaxingly:

"All in good time, my lad; all in good time. Let things come by degrees. [illegible] your [illegible] all the better farmer for a little book-larning."

"But suppose Susy should meet a highwayman, grandfather. Then I should be of use. Wouldn't I tackle him just! It would be fun."

"Eh, lad, eh! Young folks talk a deal o' nonsense," laughed the old man. "Those gentry you speak of are not so easy to tackle, I can tell you."

"Did you ever meet one, grandfather?" asked the boy.

"Ay, ay, and I rode home as hard as I could, with him at my heels. But it's no use o' frightening Susan, when she's going to-morrow."

"I'm not frightened, grandad," said Susan, going up and kissing the old man.

Ben here ran across and, coming up unperceived, pulled one of Susan's curls, which had tumbled from underneath her cap.

"Don't, Ben, you plague!" cried Susan; and she tried to catch him as he ducked away from her hand and jumped over a settee, where he sat on the floor in the attitude of a frog, ready to leap if she chose to follow him. But, seeing that she took no heed, he crawled up to her, and said:

"What should you do, Susy, if a footpad came up and asked for your money or your life? I wonder whether you'd call me a plague then? Ha, ha!"

"I shouldn't want you," laughed Susan; "for I should tell him to go about his business, and ask what he'd do with my life when he'd got it."

"Ah! it's all very fine to be pert now, but you'll long for poor plaguey Ben then, I know;" and Ben here not only pulled the curl again, but tweaked the cap off the girl's head. She caught him, and was in the act of administering punishment by a box on the ear, when he leaped over her stooping form, and ran up-stairs to bed.

The next morning Susan rose at 5, and dressed herself with much care and neatness. Ben met her as she came to the kitchen door; and Mrs. Dale, who was already down, began to cut large slices of bread-and-butter, and told him to be quiet and get his breakfast.

Susan went to see that her basket of poultry, eggs and butter was ready packed.

"Don't let the ducks go for less than six shillings the couple, child," said Mrs. Dale, "and get as much as you can for the fowls. Ducks are in season, and ought to fetch a good price."

"Susan's a duck herself," chimed in Ben.

"You're a goose, at all events," rejoined Susan; "though I shouldn't like to have the selling of you, for you would not fetch much." And she sat down opposite the boy and began her breakfast, the farm servants coming in soon after to get theirs.

"Tummas started betimes," said Ben; "I heard him go. Make haste, Susy—eat away."

"There's no hurry, my dear," said Mrs. Dale, as she stirred her porridge; "but you can go and see if Jerry's all ready, and bring him round."

Jerry was the horse, of respectable and ancient appearance and somewhat clumsy build, on which Susan usually made her journeys to market. She was a good horsewoman, having been accustomed to ride about the farm with her grandfather since she was quite a child, and she was rather impatient of Jerry's slow paces, though she knew them to be a necessity on market-day.

"Lady, your palfry waits," cried Ben, bowing at the kitchen door with mock dignity.

"Bless the boy!" exclaimed his mother; "he's full of fun, I declare. Come and help Susan with her baskets."

Jerry was led to the mounting-stone, which stood in the yard, Susan was duly settled on her saddle, the baskets adjusted, and the horse ambled away up the wooded lane.

"Think of me when you meet the robbers, Susy," squealed Ben after her, as he pretended to be overcome with grief at her departure.

Susan rode along, enjoying the fresh morning and the song of the birds. The dew twinkled on the grass and herbage, and the sun glinted through the trees overhead, while the scent of the hay, now being made into ricks, filled the air with its delicious fragrance.

When Susan turned into the high-road she found it full of carts, horsemen and farmers, all bent on the same errand as herself.

It was of no moment whether she arrived at Hazleton sooner than her neighbors, so she took no pains to urge on the steady-going old horse, and she was soon left alone at the foot of a steep ascent.

Before many minutes had elapsed, a gentleman on a fine bay horse overtook her, and, reining him in with difficulty, asked if he were right for Hazleton, and if it were market-day there.

Susan looked round at him, and was struck with the handsome aquiline face and piercing dark eyes which seemed to read her through. Dressed in the best fashion of the time, his horse carefully groomed till its glossy coat shone brightly in the sunlight, he made a marked contrast to Susan, on her thick-made, clumsy animal.

"You are bound for the market, too, little maid!" inquired the gentleman, raising his hat as he spoke:

"Yes, sir. All the folks are going there a'most, this morning, I think," answered Susan shyly.

"And what have you there? Chickens and butter?" her interlocutor went on to say. "Do you like the business of buying and selling?"

"It depends on the prices I get for them," returned Susan quickly.

The gentleman laughed, and stopped for a moment to arrange the leather of his stirrup more to his liking; while Susan rode on, wondering what a well-bred man, on a thorough-bred horse, could want at Hazleton on a market-day.

While she mused on these points, he he again overtook her.

"May I ask your name?" he said.

"My name is Susan Stidolph," she answered simply; and, though she would have given much to ask him the same question, she refrained from innate feelings of courtesy.

As if he divined her thoughts, he said:

"My name is Hamilton St. John. Do you like it?"

"Very much; and what do you call your [illegible]"

"Wildfire; and a famous stepper he is! Good-by, Susan; I hope you'll get good prices for your fowls and ducks." And away he sped at a tremendous pace.

The market was becoming very full when Susan reached Hazleton, and many sounds of life resounded on all sides.

Here stood ranges of stalls covered with fruit, heaps of vegetables being piled behind in glorious confusion.

Baskets and coops containing live poultry lined the interior of the market-place. Farther on came the pens full of sheep and lambs; then goodly oxen; then horses of various breeds, sizes and shapes; colts and ponies, grouped in a place set apart for the purpose.

Tins, pans, crockery and wooden vessels attracted the housewives to the center of the market, and toys and sweets-stalls kept their venders perpetually on the alert, so attractive were these wares to the children of the community.

Susan having met Thomas, and given Jerry into his charge, entered the market, and did her best to effect the sale of her poultry; while the farming-man undertook the vending of the cows, submitting his bargains to Susan's judgment before concluding them.

The day soon came to a close; all their marketings were attended with good success, and Susan, having made her purchases at the draper's—an old friend of her aunt's, at whose house she usually dined on these occasions—concealed her money, to the amount of thirty pounds in gold and notes, in the secret pockets of her stays, purposely made to stow away these treasures, and mounted Jerry for her ride homeward. Very blithe was Susan at the result of her day's work. The cows had fetched a capital price, and the heifer alone remained unpurchased. Her poultry was all sold, and not a pat of butter remained in her basket.

Susan determined to return by a lane which wound circuitously from the town of Hazleton to the borders of Dingle farm. By this she would avoid the society of several half-tipsy farmers and rough horsemen, whose proximity was very undesirable. Jerry stepped out as was his wont when he scented his stable in the far distance; and Susan hummed to herself as she looked on the beauty of the evening and the scenery around.

Birds were singing their soft evening lays; shadows fell darkly across the road from the overhanging bows; the last rays of the sun gleamed brightly through every gap in the hedge; and fleecy clouds, tinted with the gay colors of a parrot's wing, floated away eastward in the pale-blue sky.

Susan had not proceeded two miles when the sound of a horse's hoofs struck on her ear; and, as she turned to look up the lane to see who it might be, her well-dressed acquaintance of the morning rode up to her side and greeted her with a polite bow.

"Well met, Susan! Why, you're late from market. I hope you've been successful."

"Pretty well," curtly replied the girl, who was inclined usually to be reserved to strangers.

"Why, you've an empty basket, I perceive. Do you know I was not so far off as you might think; I saw you while you were making your bargains," said the gentleman, looking straight at Susan with a knowing look.

"Well," returned she, raising her eyebrows, "I had a notion that I caught sight of your face once; but, seeing it belonged to a man in a smock-frock, of course I took no heed."

The stranger laughed, and there was something in his manner which made Susan feel uncomfortable.

He proceeded to ask her numerous questions, to which she gave at last only monosyllabic answers; for the courteous manner of Mr. Hamilton St. John, which had so attracted her in the morning, had given place to an unpleasant familiarity of tone, that grated upon the girl's sense of refinement; and she hoped that her disinclination to converse would presently induce him to ride on, and leave her. He soon remarked on her taciturnity, and asked her why she was so silent.

"I don't care to talk much to strangers," she replied.

"But I have told you my name, and you may judge when you see a gentleman," said he.

"How do I know that you are a gentleman?" asked Susan bluntly. "I think its very bad manners to ask so many questions. At all events, it's not the way simple folks are taught."

"Who do you think I can be, then, Susan, my dear?" inquired the horseman insinuatingly.

"You may be a highwayman for aught I know," courageously exclaimed the girl.

Her companion laughed loudly and long; and Susan in anger, and desperation at his pertinacity, endeavored to urge poor old Jerry to a better pace.

"What a good guesser you are, my dear!" cried the horseman. "Suppose I take you at your word, and ask you, after the fashion of real highwaymen, to let me look at your purse."

"I don't carry a purse," replied the girl, now somewhat alarmed, and believing that her suspicions as to his strange behavior were not without foundation.

"Do you see this?" said the man, in a jeering tone, drawing a small pistol from his breast pocket. "It's a little instrument I carry, to induce people to tell the truth. Perhaps it'll make you do so. Come, out with your money," he added, in a rough voice, catching hold of Jerry's bridle at the same moment.

Susan was a spirited girl, but she turned pale. They had arrived at a part of the road where it sank between high hedges, and a rising ground on either side hid it entirely from view.

It was becoming dark, and, as Susan looked right and left, she heard nothing but the faint breeze among the trees, and the chirp of the grasshopper in the long reeds at the roadside, and all idea of assistance from a casual passenger she knew to be almost hopeless. Though quite faint with terror, she rallied all her courage, and determined to brave out the attempt of the man to rob her of her money.

For one moment hope revived. The stranger dismounted and passed his bridle over the low, overhanging bough of an elder-tree, and Susan took the opportunity to whip Jerry into something like a trot; but she had not proceeded many yards when the man came running after, easily overtook her, and, laughing deri[illegible] spot, where he again asked her to deliver up her purse to his care.

"Better do it quietly, Susan, my dear," he urged. "I shall take it by hook or by crook."

Susan still stoutly refused, declaring with many assertions that she carried no purse.

"Well, then, we must try what can be done by searching. It's a tiresome process, but I'm very patient, and not pressed for time to-night."

He lifted Susan out of her saddle as easily as if she had been a baby, unsaddled Jerry, turning him loose to graze as he pleased, and commenced searching her baskets. Finding nothing but a few parcels of tea, calico, and ribbon, which he carelessly threw down in the road, he next begged the terrified girl to remove her hat and cloak, and, coming close to her, began feeling for her pockets.

Susan's indignation knew no bounds; but the robber only laughed, and told her he should take every means to extract the gold from her, and, taking out a large clasp-knife, he said: "It's such a pity to cut this pretty bodice asunder; but I must, if you are so obstinate. Bless you, do you think I've been years on the road, and don't know the ways of you pretty little maids? The money that was paid for the cow is somewhere about, and I am pretty certain it's in a particular pocket of your corset. I shall cut your laces if you try my patience too long;" and he began to insert the knife into the lace of her bodice.

Susan, trembling lest she should lose her senses, now made up her mind to part with her money, and assured him that if he would retire out of sight for a few minutes she would get at her pocket and give it into his hands.

The robber declared that he could not do that, but that he had no objection to turn his back. "I don't want to distress you, my dear," he said; but he pulled out his pistol at the same time, and stood waiting.

The poor girl proceeded to take off her dress, and, after some difficulty, removed her stays, and, donning her cloak hastily, threw them down before the highwayman.

He seized upon them, and, discovering the pocket, soon rifled it of its contents, and then picked up her dress, and began to feel about the linings, to find, if possible, more bank-notes which might be sewn up in them. As Susan stood shaking and irresolute a sudden thought seized her. Catching up Jerry's saddle, which lay on the ground at her side, she threw it over the hedge, exclaiming, "You shan't have it all, at any rate."

The thief, off his guard for the moment, and thinkin that the saddle might contain the greater part of the spoil, threw down the dress with an oath; and, cursing frightfully, clambered into and over the hedge to recover the saddle. One of his pistols fell from his coat to the ground; Susan threw it over the opposite hedge, and, releasing the bridle of the robber's horse, climbed nimbly by the aid of the stirrup on to his back, passing her right knee over the large pistol holster, and giving the animal the reins, golloped up the lane at a tremendous pace.

A loud curse and the crack of a pistol, which only caused the horse to increase its speed, followed; but the bullet missed its aim. Susan heard it whiz past in dangerous proximity to her ear, and it then lodged harmlessly in the trunk of an old oak by the wayside.

Away flew Wildfire like the wind, with Susan on his back, and her courage rose every moment, as she remembered that old Jerry had wandered grazing up the lane, and that it would be impossible for the thief to overtake her on the well-bred animal she rode, even if he attempted pursuit. For an instant, a clattering of hoofs made her look hastily back; but the noise was only a lumbering attempt on the part of old Jerry to follow, and keep up with her. Susan's hurried ride off and the shot of the pistol had disturbed his calm grazings, and he turned with a clumsy start before the robber could lay hold on her, and, unincumbered by Susan, baskets, or saddle, trotted off at a novel and excited pace after her. Certain now of safety, she urged the beautiful animal she sat on to its utmost speed, and dashed desperately homeward.

"Why, here's a go, mother!" cried Ben, rushing into the farm-kitchen full tilt. "Here's Susy tearing down the lane like mad! I never thought Jerry could go so fast. I was on the hayrick, and saw her coming. She's something white on."

"Susan in white! It must have been her ghost," said poor superstitious Mrs. Dale, putting down her dishes, and turning pale with apprehension.

A great clattering of hoofs over the stones of the yard soon divested her mind of this absurd notion; for, rattling up to the entrance, hardly reined in at the house-door, came the dark-bay horse, flecked with foam, having galloped for at least five miles at the top of his speed, with the excited, half-clad girl upon his back.

It was the work of a moment for Ben to seize the bridle, and hold the animal's head, while Susan dropped, rather than dismounted, into her aunt's outstretched arms, and, overcome by her previous emotion, burst into tears.

"Goodness gracious!" cried the good woman, altogether scared, "whatever does it all mean?"

"I've been robbed, aunt! Oh, dear! all the money's gone!" and she sobbed still more.

"Poor girl!" said Ben, affectionately, seeing the girl's almost fainting condition. "Come in-doors, Susy."

Her aunt led her into the kitchen, and Ben, though as curious as a kitten, knew about horses to see that the one he held must not be allowed to stand with his flanks reeking from recent exercise; so he led him off to the stable, and, having fastened and covered him well up, he returned to the house as quickly as his legs could carry him.

At this moment all were startled, as old Jerry came bungling into the yard with a clattering, ungainly gallop, stripped of his usual accoutrements. He made his own way to the stable; and Ben, entering the kitchen, found Susan sitting by his grandfather in the chimney-corner, while she recounted the adventure she had met with.

"Ben was right, you see, and I did meet a highwayman," she said, as her spirits began to return. "But I'm so grieved to have lost your money."

"[illegible] you're safe, my dear!" said old Mr. Dale, patting her hand.

"Why, the horse you were riding is worth more than what you've lost, I'll be bound," cried Ben. "It's a beauty, grandfather! What a brave, clever trick you played in riding off on him, Susy! But why was he so vexed about the saddle? Why, of course he thought there was money in it. That's where robbers hide their plunder. I'll be bound there's something in his saddle. I'll go and fetch it. Hurray!"

Off ran the lad, and, calling one of the men, desired him to unsaddle the animal and groom him down immediately.

The saddle, when removed, proved too heavy for Ben to carry into the house, and old Mr. Dale, who had followed him to see the horse, aided him to bring it in. They laid it on the kitchen table, and commenced searching it all over.

In the padding they found bank notes amounting to £200, and, from an artfully-concealed leather lining, under the saddle-flaps, golden guineas poured out in incredible numbers on to the table.

"Oh, my eye!" cried Ben. "Why, Susy, you're the robber, after all!"

"Oh, don't Ben!" said Susan, beginning to cry.

The astonishment of the old people was unbounded. They went on counting and counting till they arrived at the sum of £1,000, and they looked from one to the other, scarcely crediting their senses.

"Well!" exclaimed old Mr. Dale, "the first thing to be done is to give this up to the proper owners. Susan's nothing to do with it, nor have we. But I think it's our duty to inform the patrol where they are likely to find yonder ruffian. Deprived of his horse, he cannot proceed far from the spot, and Susan may as well have any reward that Government may be ready to give; and this fellow is very likely to be the man who robbed the Yorkshire coach t'other day. They offer £100 to those that find him."

"Oh, pray don't, grandfather—pray don't let me be the cause of his being taken!" cried Susan, imploringly.

"Nonsense, my dear!" replied the old man; "when the path of duty is straight and clear before you, you must walk up to it, though it's hard and unpleasant. You don't wish yonder thief to take more money, do you, from those perhaps who can ill spare it?"

Without delay Mr. Dale dispatched a man with a full description of the robber, and instructions to the patrol as to the likelihood of his being in the neighborhood, and early the next morning a search was set on foot in all directions by the officials at Hazleton.

Within three days the notorious thief Bob Reeve (for such was his real name, and that by which he was known on the road), was taken. The patrol had been on his track since his attack on the Yorkshire coach, and had no difficulty in securing the villain when furnished by Mr. Dale with the particulars of Susan's rencontre with him, and her description of his person.

He was lodged in Greystone jail, and was shortly after convicted and executed. The money found in the saddle was duly handed over to the Government, who offered half the reward set on the man's head to Susan. She, however, could not bring herself to accept it, but entreated that she might keep the robbers horse Wildfire. This, after much correspondence and deliberation, she was permitted to do, to her great satisfaction, as she regarded the beautiful animal as the cause of her escape from danger, and perchance death. The money found on the highwayman was restored to Mr. Dale, and poor Susan's mind was therefore relieved on this point.

She married before long a farmer in the neighborhood, and never ventured to market again.

Ben was in due time invested with the longed-for dignity of selling the farm-produce. He failed to encounter any gentlemen of the road, and, as his grandfather often told him, it was too much to expect two out of the same family to meet and outwit a highwaymen.

A Vermonter on Mr. Evarts.

At the great meeting held in Cooper Institute in October last, to sustain the administration of President Hayes, at which it had been announced that Mr. Evarts would be present, a gentleman from Vermont, who had never seen the Secretary of State, but had a desire to do so, said to the person seated next to him, "Is Mr. E-varts on the platform?"

"No; he has not yet arrived."

"He's expected?"

"Oh, yes; he'll be along presently."

"I've never seen Mr. E-varts, though I've heard a good deal of him. He's got a farm up to Windsor, in our State."

"Well, when he comes in I'll tell you. The boys generally give him a cheer when he comes on the stage. Ah, there he comes!"

"Is that him?"

"Yes."

"William M. E-varts?"

"Certainly."

"Well, I declare!" exclaimed the Vermonter. "Why, he looks as though he boarded!"—Editor's Drawer, in Harper's Magazine for January.

Preservation of the Dead.

The corpse of the great Italian republican, Mazzini, was petrified by the method invented by Senor Gorini, of Lodi. Recent travelers say that it proves entirely successful, the features of the eminent agitator presenting no visible alteration, and the expression well preserved, as he reposes in his tomb, which is open to the inspection of visitors. Senor Gorini has not revealed the secret of his method, but has taken measures to give it to the public at his death.

THE DYING YEAR.

Far, far away, there is a glint of crimson in the West,
A roseate glow, as sparks of fire set in the opal's breast;
And myriad isles of purple cloud float in a sea of gold,
Whose shapes each moment, changed anew, some beauties fresh unfold.

The red leaves strew the garden walk; the autumn shadows fall
Across the path, in gloaming gray; the whistling plovers call
Their comrades to the sheltering fen—the stealthy owl skims by,
What time the white moon 'gins to show her crescent in the sky.

And rise from river side the mists, and cattle cease to graze,
And lay them down beneath the boughs; and in the gathering haze,
The marsh-lights show their glittering sparks of all-deluding fire,
To lure the headless wayfarer unto the treacherous [illegible]

Wet are the last few [illegible] gorgeous crown
Bows heavily its petals bright, with glittering gems bent down;
The crimson fuchsia gently nods her purple-lined bells;
The frosty nights creep on apace, and the short daylight tells

Of coming winter; when the earth shall robed be with snow,
And bare shall be the forest trees; nor shall there longer blow
One bloom of all the blossoms fair that brightened summer hours,
Till the spring shall smile on the earth again, and bring us back the flowers.

PITH AND POINT.

"Put your lips on ice" is the latest slang.

A rum crowd—Toper-graphical engineers.

If you receive a blow from a fellow full of Bourbon, can you be said to have had a whisky punch?

When a faithful mother goes on a whaling expedition, she never fails to get all the blubber she wants.

A Brooklyn girl has been arrested for burglary—as if a young woman had no right to be out with her jimmy.

The great advantage about a lean wife is that you don't have to call in a carpenter every time she falls down stairs

A tramp had entered a widow's cot
One dark, uncanny night.
She felled him with a big slungshot,
Such was the widow's might.

Full many a gem of rarest hue serene
The dark, unfathomed caves of ocean bear;
Full many a maid who toyed with kerosene
Has gently clambered up the golden stair.

It's a wise child that knows its own father, and a wise cask of vinegar that knows its own mother.—Oil City Derrick.

A man who has just had to rig his wife up in a $100 seal-skin cloak, charges it all to the rig-her of the climate.

Customer—"Have my goods been sent home?" Grocer (who has just laid them on the scales)—"They are on the weigh, sir."

"My dear," said a husband in startling tones, after awaking his wife in the night, "I have swallowed a dose of strychnine!" "Well, then, do for goodness sake be still, or it may come up."

Before deciding to marry a poetess, metre and scrutinize her feet. After scanning her, if she prove, in a measure, well versed, and not averse to you, you canto the mark forever after—if you will.

A base, ignoble brute from Oil City says that when he sees a woman neither fat nor fair, but 40, with a cardinal-red plume on her hat, it suggests to him a life and death struggle between nature and art, with art on top with a large majority.

"Well, may I hope, then, dear, that, at some future time, I may have the happiness of making you my wife?" "Yes, I hope so, I'm sure," she replied, "for I'm getting tired of suing fellows for breach of promise."

His wife died recently, and, meeting a friend on the street, he said, despondingly: "Well, the old woman is gone." "Where?" asked his sympathizing friend, who had not heard of her decease. "I don't know, but she is dead anyhow," said Patrick.

"Where no hope is found, is found no fear," wrote the paragraphist, in a sentimental mood; and

"Where no hope is found, is found no beer," was the impecunious compositor's free translation, just from a free lunch and a free drink.—Breakfast Table.

"Don't set on me!" exclaimed a testy old fellow, when, by the lurching of the car, a rough-looking customer was deposited in his lap. "Eggscuse me, Hen-ry," returned the man; "you've run a-fowl o' the wrong chicken, I cackleate! But I'll not brood over your mistake, or lay around this coop a minute longer!" And he scratched out.

A man from Boston would not confess astonishment at anything he saw in Nevada. As he was passing a hotel in Virginia City the cap blew from one of the chimneys. It was a circular piece of sheet-iron, painted black, slightly convex, and the four supports were like legs. The wind carried it down street, and it went straddling along like a living thing. The Boston man asked what it was. "A bed-bug from the hotel," was the reply. "By George, I never saw anything like that—," he began, and then added, "outside of Boston."

Barnwell Rhett, the incorrigible punster, stuck his head in our doorway, day before yesterday, and said: "Why is a blind man eating chestnuts like Martin Luther at the time of his proscription by the imperial edict?" "Get out, you blarsted, ——!" and the ten-pound weight came leaping from under our desk. "Because he's at the Diet of Worms!" screamed Barnwell, trying to dodge. Blood-spatters on the door-jam and a large grease-spot in the hall record the bold adventurer's doom.—Cincinnati Breakfast Table.

A Filter to Purify Air.

At a recent meeting of the New York Academy of Useful Arts, attention was called to a simple method of filtering the air of an apartment. The object is to free the air from dust, excessive dampness, and possibly, from the germs of malaria. The contrivance consists essentially of a fibrous woven fabric, strengthened by brass wire. It is to be applied to windows and ventilators, and may be of service on railway cars to exclude dust. It has the merit of checking draughts, while admitting air. Its general use might tend to prevent the spread of malarial diseases, and modify the dangers that dirty streets occasion to the health of city residents.—New York Tribune.

OHIO PENITENTIARY HORRORS

Described by an Offender Who was for Eleven Months in the Institution.

[From the Cincinnati Commercial.]

There's the case of Frank Bechtel, on three years' sentence, a man who was working in Sill's stove foundry, and, in some way, through over-lifting, no doubt, strained his back. He complained of his back continually for two weeks, but did his task every day. One morning he was unable to leave his bed. The doctor visited him, looked at him, and then said: "Dutchy, you can't play that on me. If you want to be a cripple I will fix you to perfection." He then had him taken in by six convicts and stripped. They put on his [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]. He then took a blow-pipe and spirit-lamp and burnt his back until the flesh began to roll off. After being released from his position he made a rush at the doctor, and would have throttled him had he not been overpowered. He was then put into the dungeon and kept there with his back undressed until the next day. Upon the guards going to him he was unable to walk. He was not allowed to go near the hospital, and in two weeks' time he was not able to walk without the aid of crutches, and he is to-day an incurable cripple.

Then there's the case of James Quill, a five-year man. For a breach of discipline he was kept in the dungeon fourteen days, and ducked in ice-water twice a day during the fourteen days. When released from the dungeon he was unable to stand. He was taken to the hospital. He weighed 192 pounds when he went into the dungeon, and when he came out he scarcely weighed 165 pounds. He was looked upon as the model man in physique of the prison; but since his severe punishment he has contracted heart-disease, doubtless from the intense cold of the water and being put wet into a damp cell, and is now slowly creeping to his grave.

There is a guard who, on the slightest pretext whatever, will strike down a prisoner with his loaded club, and woe to the convict who dares attempt to resist his blows. His revolver is always close at hand, and he uses it without scruple. One instance of this is the case of the man Smith. Smith was under sentence for five years. He worked in the cooper shop under this guard, who was continually getting him punished for trivial offenses, and Smith told him he was not dealing fairly with him. Guard told him that he was going to do as he pleased. He then told him to go to work. Smith refused to work until he had seen the Deputy Warden. The guard got his club to strike him. Smith, seeing this, ran toward the Deputy Warden's office, the guard following close at his heels. Smith tripped and fell. The guard, having his revolver in hand, fired at the prostrate man twice, the balls taking effect and killing him. The guard had a mock trial in Columbus and was acquitted, none of the convict witnesses being heard.

Now for the different modes of punishment at the hands of the Deputy Warden—the sweat-box, the bull ring, the ducking tub, or baptismal font, as the prisoners call it. The sweat box and bull rings, not being barbarous enough, are little used, but the dungeon, or "hole," suffices for both. The ducking tub is situated in the asylum for the insane. A visitor is never allowed to see it. It is a large trough, 10x3 feet, on stanchions. Previous to ducking time it is filled with ice and water. It is presided over by two convicts who act as attendants in the asylum. At 10 a. m. and 4 p. m. the deputy marches over the men to get ducked—their offenses being for looking at a visitor passing them while at work, making a sign at, or speaking to, another prisoner, or such trivial offense. A man is taken out of a foundry, rolling in perspiration, out into the winter air, in his wet shirt, to the asylum. He is then stripped and shackled at the wrists and ankles, lifted up and suspended in the water until his breath is almost gone. He is then set up and water is splashed in his face until he begs pardon, if he can find breath, or until he faints, if he can't or will not beg. Then he's unshackled and put into his clothes, without drying, and taken over to the shop, where he must catch up on his task. If he fails, from weakness, to do so, he gets another ducking, and is then put in the dungeon without supper. In the dungeon he gets one-half rations of corn bread and one-half pint of water every twenty-four hours.

A Sharp Swindle.

A new development in the check-raising line has been manifested within the past few days, and one of our city banks mourns the consequences. The trick is original, although but an adaptation of a very old one, and so far the guilty parties are at large. As usual in such cases the simplicity of the scheme proved to be the cause of the success, and, unless the operators should give themselves away, a wide field lays before them.

The modus operandi was as follows: A decently-dressed man, got up to represent a traveling salesman, entered a country bank and bought a draft on Chicago for $1,500. Later in the day another customer turned up, and he wanted a draft for $15. Both received the documents, paid the charges, and departed. On the following day a draft for $1,500 was presented at the Chicago bank. The teller telegraphed to his country correspondent to know if such draft had been issued on that date, and, of course, received an affirmative reply. The money was paid over, and the recipient walked off with it.

On the following morning the purchaser of the $1,500 draft returns to the country bank, and with some little irritation states that he presented it in Chicago, and was met with a demand for identification, with which he was unable to comply. He, therefore, wants his money back, and, commissions being deducted, it is handed to him. Not for three days was it discovered that the draft presented in Chicago, and there honored, was the $15 one, deftly raised to $1,500, and by that time the swindlers had ample opportunity to cover up their tracks. On whom the loss will fall is an open question, for both banks enforced the usual rules in such cases made and provided, and it would be difficult to prove neglect on either.—Chicago Tribune.

A series of deep-sea researches, after the manner of the Challenger investigations, is to be instituted toward the close of next year, in the Bay of Bengal and the Indian ocean, by an expedition under the direction of the Government of India.

Literary Charades in Rhyme.

Below are a number of ingenious charades, each couplet describing the name of a well known author. They were contributed by various persons to the New York Graphic, and their solution will prove a pleasant pastime for the home circle of a winter evening. The answers will be found appended:

1. My last a little spear, my first a field (in Saxon);
My whole the god with which a farmer drives his oxen.

2. My first is chopping with a heavy ax,
My last denotes departing—making tracks.

3. My first a bee's note singing on a flower,
My last a bolt of lightning in a shower.

4. To wed and [illegible] by his name appears to mean;
The whole suggests the use of Gretna Green.

5. He never was known of his songs to boast;
He is greater than many and less than most.

6. He earned a regal purple gown,
But always wore the garb of a clown.

7. This name—observe it very well—
Is a kind of bread and a hotel.

8. My first may be found on a salt-water slope;
My second in eatables, papers and soap.

9. That, which the shrewdest, most ingenious man
Could never make, a small pig often can.

10. And this (although not very nice, 'tis true),
The last named author always likes to do.

11. Look on this name—a sunbeam in between
A stocking and tormentor, you have seen.

12. An adverb and additions to a house;
The whole a dog does when he can't get loose.

13. My last is to think and my first barking louder;
My whole, you hear people inquire for his powder.

14. A letter that partakes of food,
And thus obtains a livelihood.

15. A carbonic mound, petrified, if you will—
An anthracite range—a bituminous hill.

16. Although he seldom would complain,
His name is an internal pain.

17. My first is a visible line, a signal to convey;
My second goes to its wedding, but never goes away.

18. His dual syllables will represent
A stately tree and what one should repent.

19. His motto always was, as I have heard,
Be virtuous first and wealthy afterward.

20. His name you'll not find difficult to guess—
The leading part in music and a tress.

21. A poet of great worth and fame,
Yet a sick brink will sound his name.

22. Another margin this; but let me tell you,
It is not sick and has some little value.

23. Just half a book my first will represent;
The rest is not a lease, but is a rent.

24. Three of my first in England's royal group;
The last a Cockney calls his feathered troop.

25. If names show tendencies, here is another
Who must have loved to wait upon and bother.

26. This is a vowel which is often read,
But never hears a single thing that's said.

27. Philosopher and savan both together,
And yet his name is lighter than a feather.

28. My first is a curse that people used to fear,
The rest a homestead-meadow lying near.

29. This name, as pronounced by himself, is revealed,
When a Yankee child teases its mother to yield.

30. In his name two syllables see—
A fop and a mountain is he.

31. His name it is used to gain power,
And his readers all laugh by the hour.

32. He wrote charming poetry—all his works show it,
And yet he was only three-fourths of a poet.

ANSWERS TO CHARADES.

1. Hawthorne; 2. Hugo; 3. Humboldt; 4. Marryatt; 5. Moore; 6. Motley; 7. Ruskin; 8. Shelley; 9. Hogg; 10. Waller; 11. Socrates; 12. Howells; 13. Bacon; 14. Keats; 15. Coleridge; 16. Akenside; 17. Mark Twain; 18. Beecher; 19. Goodrich; 20. Mulock; 21. Virgil; 22. Edgeworth; 23. Voltaire; 24. Dickens; 25. Cervantes; 26. De Foe; 27. Agassiz; 28. Bancroft; 29. Dumas; 30. Beaumont; 31. Lever; 32. Poe.

A Horse with Gold Shoes.

By instructions of an American lady, Miss Thomson, who has been resident in Edinburgh for some time back, Messrs. Marshall & Sons, jewelers, Great George street, have manufactured a set of horseshoes of solid gold, at the cost of £200; and on Friday a mare belonging to that lady was shod in the precious metal at the smithy of Prof. Baird, veterinary surgeon, St. James place. The shoes are of the ordinary size, and shape, and the nails with which they were fixed are also of gold. The mare was afterward conveyed to Messrs. Moir's horse repository, where she has been at livery for the past two months, and in the course of the afternoon was mounted and ridden about the yard by Miss Thomson. The animal was purchased for her present owner at one of Messrs. Moir's sales about two years ago, and since then has made a voyage across the Atlantic. Miss Thomson and her steed left Edinburgh on Friday night for London, en route, it is supposed, for America.—Edinburgh Scotsman.

The Length of a Minute.

Few persons realize how long a minute is. The New York World relates this of a witness who frequently used the expression, "several minutes:" "Now, Mr. Small," said the Judge, "when you think a minute is gone say 'now.' I will say 'now' when I wish you to begin." Mr. Small nodded his entire comprehension of the plan and looked confident of his ability to guess well. "Now," cried the Judge, and in a dead silence the court waited. The witness fidgeted about in his chair, and, with a great clock-face staring at him from the wall, stood the suspense as long as he was able, and then cried "Now." "Just twelve seconds," said the Judge, amid a chorus of laughter.

The Bite of a Cherub.

It was in church, and the bright-eyed, restless little cherub would stand up on the seat and spill the hymn-books and keep up an incipient racket, while its mother frowned threateningly in the interests of good order. Cherub committed some particularly flagrant outrage, when the scandalized mother suddenly pointed a threatening forefinger at it, after the manner of long-suffering mothers under such circumstances, and the cherub, after the manner of cherubs under such circumstances, just opened its mouth, took that baleful finger in, and shut down on it with a pressure that made that mother groan out in the wrong place: "Oh! Ouch! Have mercy on us!"—Easton Free Press.

The old and reliable piano manufacturers, George Steck & Co., of New York, have taken a sensible view of the hard times by offering to the public, for the present, their pianos at prices in accordance with these times. Considering that the Steck pianos have the enviable reputation of being the best and most durable instruments made, a good many being in need of such an addition to a comfortable home will not be slow in availing themselves of the rare chance to procure an absolutely reliable piano for near the same price they would have to pay in getting a so-called cheap class instrument with a fictitious and doubtful name.

OREGON politicians estimate, that the vote of that State will be increased 50,000 by immigrants, and are wondering what proportion each party will get.

An Open Letter—It Speaks for Itself.

ROCKPORT, Mass., April 2d, 1877.

MR. EDITOR: Having read in your paper reports of the remarkable cures of catarrh, I am induced to tell "what I know about catarrh," and I fancy the "snuff" and "inhaling-tube" makers (mere dollar grabbers) would be glad if they could emblazon a similar cure in the papers. For 20 years I suffered with catarrh. The nasal passages became completely closed. "Snuff," "dust," "ashes," "inhaling-tubes" and "sticks" wouldn't work, though at intervals I would sniff up the so-called catarrh snuff, until I became a valuable taster for such medicines. I gradually grew worse, and no one can know how much I suffered or what a miserable being I was. My head ached over my eyes so that I was confined to my bed for many successive days, suffering the most intense pain, which at one time lasted continuously for 168 hours. All sense of smell and taste gone, sight and hearing impaired, body shrunken and weakened, nervous system shattered, and constitution broken, and I was hawking and spitting seven-eighths of the time. I prayed for death to relieve me of my suffering. A favorable notice in your paper of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy induced me to purchase a package, and use it with Dr. Pierce's Nasal Douche, which applies the remedy by hydrostatic pressure, the only way compatible with common sense. Well, Mr. Editor, it did not cure me in three-fourths of a second, nor in one hour or month, but in less than eight minutes I was relieved, and in three months entirely cured, and have remained so for over sixteen months. While using the Catarrh Remedy, I used Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery to purify my blood and strengthen my stomach. I also kept my liver active and bowels regular by the use of his Pleasant Purgative Pellets. If my experience will induce other sufferers to seek the same means of relief, this letter will have answered its purpose. Yours truly, S. D. REMICK.

Regular Secretion Essential to Health.

The regular secretion and flow of the gastric juices, and of the bile which the use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters promotes, are effects which conduce materially to the restoration of health, when the system is disordered. Food is not digested in the dyspeptic stomach because the gastric fluid is deficient, superabundant or vitiated; the liver becomes congested and the bowels constipated because the supply of bile is inadequate or misdirected. The Bitters rectifies all this, and removes every ill-consequence of non-assimilation and bilious irregularity. Furthermore, it stimulates the action of the kidneys, by which impurities are, so to speak, strained from the blood, and any tendency in the urinary organs to grow sluggish and disordered counteracted. Whether it be used as a means of regulating gastric or bilious secretion, and relieving the overloaded bowels, or to promote complete, and therefore healthful, urination, Hostetter's Bitters may be relied upon with confidence to accomplish the end in view.

How to Make Good Bread.

Use DOOLEY'S YEAST POWDER, and you will have no difficulty. The substances entering into its composition are perfectly pure, healthy and nutritious.

DO NOT GO HOME Saturday night without a copy of THE CHICAGO LEDGER. You can get it at the news depots.

THE rector of the Episcopal church at Corpus Christi, Tex., opened the Bible a few Sundays ago in his pulpit, and much to the surprise of the congregation, a euchre deck tumbled out.

HAVE you Heart Disease? If so, we would like to call your attention to Dr. Graves' HEART REGULATOR, a preparation specially prepared for the cure of Heart Disease, Nervousness and Sleepless Nights.

When we say it can be cured we know what we say, and can substantiate it by certificates of cures, and, what is best, living witnesses. Send to FRANK E. INGALLS, Concord, N. H., for a pamphlet containing certificates of a few who have been cured by its use. Also, description of various forms of Heart Disease.

You can obtain the HEART REGULATOR of your druggist. Small size 50 cents, large size $1.

CHEW
The Celebrated
"MATCHLESS"
Wood Tag Plug
TOBACCO.
THE PIONEER TOBACCO COMPANY,
New York, Boston and Chicago.

THE propriety of giving condition medicine to horses, cattle and sheep was discussed and admitted by many of the agricultural societies throughout the State last fall, and we believe that in every case but one they decided in favor of Sheridan's Cavalry Condition Powders. Good judgment.

DIPHTHERIA.—This awful disease is raging again this winter, and is almost sure death if neglected but for a single day. If taken in season Johnson's Anodyne Liniment will cure nine cases out of ten. No family should be without it a moment.

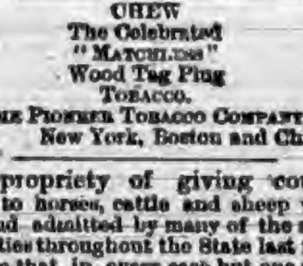
FRANK LESLIE, Esq., of the "Illustrated Weekly," says: "For some time past I have been using your COCOAINE, and I think it far preferable to anything I have ever use for the hair."

ASK YOUR NEWSDEALER for a copy of THE CHICAGO LEDGER the best story paper in the West.

INTERESTING to All is the offer of a Genuine Microscope for a trifle. See advertisement.

PATENTEES and inventors should read advertisement of Edson Bros. in another column.

THE GREAT REGULATOR.



PURELY VEGETABLE.
An Effectual Specific for
Malarious Fevers,
Bowel Complaints, Dyspepsia,
Mental Depression,
Restlessness,
Jaundice,
Nausea, Colic,
Sick Headache,
Constipation and Biliousness.

ASK the recovered dyspeptics, Bilious sufferers, victims of Fever and Ague, the mercurial diseased patient, how they recovered health, cheerful spirits and good appetite—they will tell you by taking Simmons' Liver Regulator.

This justly celebrated medicine Regulates the Liver, promotes digestion, and fortifies the system against malarial disease.

Extract of a letter from Hon. Alexander H. Stephens: "I occasionally use, when my condition requires it, Dr. Simmons' Liver Regulator with good effect. It is mild, and suits me better than more active remedies."

CONSTIPATION.

TESTIMONY OF THE CHIEF JUSTICE OF GEORGIA.—"I have used Simmons' Liver Regulator for constipation of my bowels, caused by a temporary derangement of the liver, for the last three or four years, and always, when used according to the directions, with decided benefit. I think it is a good medicine for the derangement of the liver—at least such has been my personal experience in the use of it."—HIRAM WARNER, Chief Justice of Georgia.

ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE,
MANUFACTURED ONLY BY
J. H. ZEILIN & CO.,
PHILADELPHIA, PA.
Price, $1.00. Sold by all Druggists.

CHICAGO
WEEKLY POST
THE PEOPLE'S PAPER.

32 columns of Editorial, News, Agricultural, Miscellany and Market Reports. One copy 1 year, postage paid, 75c. Same terms to Agents as last year. Address THE POST, 88 Dearborn St., Chicago.

EYE RESTORERS better than Spectacles. The best reduced to $1. Circulars free. Address Box 788, New York.

ALL Who will cut this out and send to us with 50 cents will receive "The Young Folks World" one year, an eight-page 8-column monthly for young and old, and 50 fine mixed visiting cards in a neat card case. No amateur paper; established three years. P. O. stamps taken. Sample copy of paper, with best premium list ever offered, for 3 cents. Address
THE YOUNG FOLKS WORLD,
12 Winter Street, Boston, Mass.

ELASTIC RUPTURE BELT

The Best Truss without Metal Springs ever invented. No humbug claims of a certain radical cure, but a guarantee of a comfortable, secure and satisfactory appliance. We will take back and (or) FULL PRICE for all that do not suit. Price, single, $[illegible], set, $4; for both sides, $6. Sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of price. N. B.—This Truss WILL CURE more Ruptures than any of those for which extravagant claims are made. Circulars free.
POMEROY TRUSS CO., 746 Broadway, New York.

SONG LEADER!
By W. A. OGDEN AND OTHERS.
For Singing Schools and Choirs.
TEACHERS ALL LIKE IT—SAY IT IS THE BEST.
192 pages, large size. $7.50 per doz. Single copy, 75 cts. Sample copy, postpaid, on receipt of this advertisement and 50 cts. Specimen pages free.
Address W. W. WHITNEY, TOLEDO, OHIO.

MILLIONS OF MONEY LOST!—Important suggestions to Farmers and Fruit-Growers in reference to the almost universal waste of fruits and berries. How to utilize and make them profitable. Account of the growing fruit trade of U. S. How to handle fruits and berries to best advantage. Prices and markets. Recent improvements in evaporation and conserving of all kinds of fruits, berries and vegetables. Recipes, and directions how to do it. Their values, and parties who buy them. An interesting Illustrated Pamphlet, sent for 20 cts or P. O. stamps. Its perusal will repay every one having an orchard, or plot of small fruits, many times. Address Purchasing Agency, A. D. Co.'s Evaporated Fruits, Chambersburg, Pa.

TEACHERS of VOCAL MUSIC,
Desiring the Best Book extant, should try FAVORITE SONGS An unequaled collection of Gems compiled for their use by Profs. H. R. and T. H. R. Christie, and supervised by Prof. R. M. McIntosh, the eminent author and teacher. Price $4.00 a dozen. Sample by mail 50 cents. SPECIMEN PAGES FREE. R. W. CARROLL & CO., Publishers, Cincinnati, or LYON & HEALY, Chicago.

THOMSON'S PATENT
GLOVE-FITTING CORSETS.

The friends of this UNRIVALLED CORSET are now numbered by MILLIONS. Prices are much reduced. MEDAL RECEIVED AT CENTENNIAL. Get the Genuine, and beware of imitations. ASK ALSO FOR THOMSON'S UNBREAKABLE STEELS. The best goods made. See that the name of THOMSON and the Trade Mark, a CROWN, are stamped on every Corset & Steel.
GIVE COMPLETE SATISFACTION
FITS THE FIGURE PERFECTLY
SURPASSES A[illegible] FOR COMFORT

Almost for Nothing:
A Genuine, Useful, Highly Interesting
MICROSCOPE
Very Valuable to Every Family—not a Cheap Toy of dropped glass, but Three Fine Lenses, accurately ground, with Stand, Diaphragm, glass Stage, plates, springs, etc. Uses both Reflected and Transmitted Light.—No so good Microscope ever before offered for $2.50. By new inventions, by manufacturing with machinery, on a hundred-fold greater scale than ever before attempted, the cost is so reduced that, by bearing part of expense, the Publishers of the American Agriculturist can offer it to all Subscribers for 1878 (and to such alone) for Only 40 Cents,
though richly WORTH $3.00, to Every Family, in its practical Usefulness, Instruction and Amusement, for OLD and YOUNG.—A cost of ONE CENT, to send your address to the Publishers, by Postal Card, will secure a full description of the Microscope and its uses.
It Will Pay.
ONE DIME (½ price), with your address, will bring a Specimen Copy of American Agriculturist (described below), with full description of the Microscope, and much other valuable reading, worth many times a dime. Send your address only, or one Dime with it; OR send $2 for the American Agriculturist, all of 1878, including the Microscope. (2 Copies and 2 Microscopes for $1.90 each; three for $1.80 each; four for $1.70 each.) 15 cts. extra for each Microscope will prepay its delivery anywhere in the United States or Canadas.

Everybody's Paper.
The Best and Cheapest in the World
For City, Village, and Country; For every Man, Woman, and Child: THE American Agriculturist,
so-called because started 36 years ago as a Rural Journal—(whence its name)—but greatly enlarged in size and scope, without change of name, until now a large, splendid, Illustrated Family Journal, adapted to the Wants, Pleasure, and Improvement of Every Member of Every Family in City, Village, and Country—full of PLAIN, PRACTICAL, USEFUL, INTERESTING, RELIABLE, and HIGHLY INSTRUCTIVE INFORMATION—with Departments most Valuable to Housekeepers, to Youth, and to Children.
Every Volume contains 550 to 650 Original Engravings, finely executed, well printed on fine paper. They are PLEASING and INSTRUCTIVE.
☞ No one can read this Journal without getting numerous hints that will pay back many times its cost.
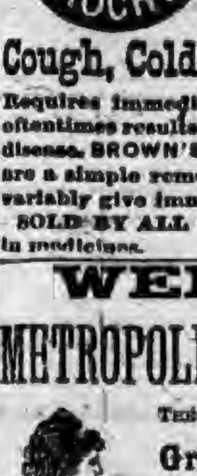
TERMS, for the English or German Edition: $1.60 a Year (sent postpaid). Four copies, $5.20 ($1.30 each). Ten copies, $12.00 ($1.20 each).
(Extra for Microscope, as above.) Published by
TRY IT A YEAR. ORANGE JUDD CO.,
245 Broadway, New York.

BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES
FOR COUGHS AND COLDS
A Cough, Cold, or Sore Throat,
Requires immediate attention, as neglect oftentimes results in some incurable Lung disease. BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES are a simple remedy, and will almost invariably give immediate relief.
SOLD BY ALL CHEMISTS and dealers in medicines.

WEBER'S
METROPOLITAN CORSET!



THE ONLY CORSET COMBINING
Grace, Comfort and Beauty!
Is constructed on purely scientific principles. The back is whale boned and left open at the hips to be laced at pleasure of wearer, and is so placed in back that the fabrics and laces adapt themselves with marvelous accuracy to every curve and undulation of the finest type of figure. For sale by all leading merchants. Lady Agents wanted. Sample by mail on receipt of $1.50.
WESTERN DEP'T, KEITH BROS., Chicago, Ill.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER
ABSOLUTELY PURE.
The leading American powder—Uniformly pure and reliable article—Full weight and full strength, and perfectly wholesome. All Grocers authorized to guarantee it. The "Royal Baker," a complete and valuable receipt book for using it in all forms, sent for 10 cents. Address
ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., New York.

BOUNTY! Soldiers discharged for wounds, rupture, or injury, other than disease, can secure full bounty; those who re-enlisted for three years between Jan. 1, 1864, and April 1, 1864, having previously served nine months, are entitled to $400 bounty; those who enlisted before July 4, 1864, having received but $100, are entitled to bounty, act July 28, 1866; where soldier was discharged for disease, and died of same prior to July 28, 1866, the widow is entitled to bounty; if soldier is dead, the heirs are entitled as above, provided bounty has not been paid. Pensions for all disabled soldiers. Address, with stamp, McNEILL & BIRCH, Washington, D. C. No fee till claim allowed.

AGENTS WANTED FOR
Creative Science;
Or, MANHOOD, WOMANHOOD, AND THEIR MUTUAL INTER-RELATIONS; LOVE, ITS LAWS, POWER, ETC.
Agents are selling from 15 to 25 copies a day. Send for specimen pages and our extra terms to Agents, and see why it sells faster than any other book. Address NATIONAL PUBLISHING CO., Chicago, Ill.

PULMONA IS A SURE CURE FOR CONSUMPTION!
READ THIS STATEMENT FROM A PATIENT. From T. J. Carson, College Hill, Cincinnati: "I was in the last stage of CONSUMPTION. In ten days after taking PULMONA my CHILLS, NIGHT SWEATS and FEVER decreased, and finally altogether disappeared. A mere skeleton before, I am now well stored with flesh. My restoration is a marvel to all who know me."
PULMONA may be ordered through any Dealer in Medicines. Circulars, containing particulars of MANY CASES successfully treated, sent free. Address OSCAR G. MOSES, 18 Cortlandt St., New York.

THE GOOD OLD STAND-BY.
MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT.
FOR MAN AND BEAST.
ESTABLISHED 35 YEARS. Always cures. Always ready. Always handy. Has never yet failed. Thirty millions have tested it. The whole world approves the glorious old Mustang—the Best and Cheapest Liniment in existence. 25 cents a bottle. The Mustang Liniment cures when nothing else will.
SOLD BY ALL MEDICINE VENDERS.

GEO. STECK & CO.,
MANUFACTURERS OF Grand, Square and Upright
Piano Fortes
Established since 1857—Received the Highest Awards.
ONLY GOLD MEDAL
At the World's Fair, Vienna, 1873.
First Medal & Diploma
At the Centennial, Phila., 1876.
These Pianos have been before the public over twenty years, and outrank all others by an uncommonly rich, sympathetic tone, combined with absolute durability, and have proved to stand longer in tune than any other instrument. During these hard times the Steck Pianos will be sold at factory prices, and to those wishing to possess the most reliable Piano made—a life-long treasure—a rare chance is offered now to do so at a moderate cost.
A full warranty, based on a 20 years' excellent reputation, is given with every Piano.
☞ Beware of Bogus Pianos. ☜
For Illustrated Catalogue and Terms apply to nearest Agent, or direct to Headquarters,
No. 25 East 14th St., New York.

VEGETINE.
HER OWN WORDS.
BALTIMORE, Md., Feb. 18, 1877.
MR. H. R. STEVENS:
Dear Sir—Since several years I have got a sore and very painful foot. I had some physicians, but they couldn't cure me. Now, I have heard of your VEGETINE from a lady who was sick for a long time, and became all well from your VEGETINE; and I went and bought me one bottle of VEGETINE, and, after I had used one bottle, the pains left me, and it began to heal, and then I bought one other bottle, and so I take it yet. I thank God for this remedy and yourself, and wishing every sufferer may pay attention to it. It is a blessing for health.
MRS. C. KRABE, 638 West Baltimore Street.

VEGETINE.
SAFE AND SURE.
MR. H. R. STEVENS:
In 1872 your VEGETINE was recommended to me, and, yielding to the persuasions of a friend, I consented to try it. At the time, I was suffering from general debility and nervous prostration, superinduced by overwork and irregular habits. Its wonderful strengthening and curative properties seemed to affect my debilitated system from the first dose; and, under its persistent use, I rapidly recovered, gaining more than usual health and good feeling. Since then I have not hesitated to give VEGETINE my most unqualified indorsement, as being a safe, sure and powerful agent in promoting health and restoring the wasted system to new life and energy. VEGETINE is the only medicine I use; and, as long as I live, I never expect to find a better.
Yours truly, W. H. CLARK,
120 Monterey Street, Allegheny, Pa.

VEGETINE.
THE BEST SPRING MEDICINE.
CHARLESTOWN.
H. R. STEVENS:
Dear Sir—This is to certify that I have used your "Blood Preparation" in my family for several years, and think that, for Scrofula, or Cankerous Humors, or Rheumatic affections, it cannot be excelled; and as a blood purifier and spring medicine it is the best thing I have ever used, and I have used almost everything. I can cheerfully recommend it to any one in need of such a medicine.
Yours respectfully,
MRS. A. A. DINSMORE, 19 Russel Street.

VEGETINE.
WHAT IS NEEDED.
BOSTON, Feb. 13, 1871.
H. R. STEVENS, Esq.:
Dear Sir—About one year since I found myself in a feeble condition from general debility. VEGETINE was strongly recommended to me by a friend who had been much benefited by its use. I procured the article, and, after using several bottles, was restored to health, and discontinued its use. I feel quite confident that there is no medicine superior to it for those complaints for which it is especially prepared, and would cheerfully recommend it to those who feel that they need something to restore them to perfect health. Respectfully yours,
U. L. PETTENGILL,
Firm of S. M. Pettengill & Co.,
No. 10 State Street, Boston.

VEGETINE.
ALL HAVE OBTAINED RELIEF.
SOUTH BERWICK, Me., Jan. 17, 1872.
H. R. STEVENS, Esq.:
Dear Sir—I have had dyspepsia in its worst form for the last ten years, and have taken hundreds of dollars' worth of medicines without obtaining any relief. In September last I commenced taking VEGETINE, since which time my health has steadily improved. My food digests well, and I have gained fifteen pounds of flesh. There are several others in this place taking VEGETINE, and all have obtained relief. Yours truly,
THOMAS E. MOORE,
Overseer of Card Room, Portsmouth Co.'s Mills.

VEGETINE
PREPARED BY
H. R. STEVENS, Boston, Mass.
Vegetine is Sold by All Druggists.

$50 to $12 a week with our popular Books, Bibles, Chromos & Maps. Goodspeed's Pub'g House, Chicago.

GUNS REVOLVERS. Price-List free. Address Great Western Gun Works, Pittsburg, Pa.

$3300 A YEAR. How to Make It. New Agents Goods. COE & YONGE, St. Louis, Mo.

Books Old & New wanted and sold. Immense Catalogue. American Book Exchange, 55 Beekman St., N. Y.

ASK for Kendall & Co.'s Thermometers. They are the best, cheapest and most reliable.

PATENTS obtained or no pay. Send for circular. J. Wm. Mister, ex-Editor of Patents. Box 888, Washington, D. C.

HAIR [illegible]

$200 a month. Agents wanted to [illegible]. [illegible], Cincinnati, O.

PIANOS Retail price $900 only $260. Parlor Organs, price $340 only $95. Paper free. Daniel F. Beatty, Washington, N. J.

$400 A MONTH. AGENTS WANTED. 250 of the latest novelties. Send for Catalog. VAN & CO Chicago.

$2500 a year. Agents wanted everywhere. Business strictly legitimate. Particulars free. Address J. WORTH & Co., St. Louis, Mo.

$350 A MONTH—AGENTS WANTED. 36 best selling articles in the world; one sample free. Address JAY BRONSON, Detroit, Mich.

$3 GOLD PLATED WATCHES. Cheapest in the known world. Sample Watch Free to Agents. Address, A. COULTER & CO., Chicago, Ill.

TURKEY FEATHERS! Don't waste them. Save carefully the wing and tail feathers. We pay cash. Send for prices. HIRAM HADLEY & CO., Chicago.

SIXTY-SIX specimen copies of our BEAUTIFUL OIL CHROMOS free to responsible Agents. Inclose 10 cts. with your application to cover postage. STEIGELMAN & CO., 104 W. Sixth St., Cincinnati, O.

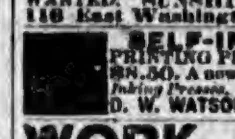
Agents, Read This!
We will pay Agents a Salary of $75 per Month and Expenses to sell our New and Wonderful Inventions. Address L. S. SHERMAN & Co., Marshall, Michigan.

PENSIONS Procured, or NO PAY, for every wounded, ruptured, or accidentally injured or diseased Soldier. Address Col. N. W. FITZGERALD, U. S. Claim Att'y, Washington, D. C.

PATENTS AND INVENTORS. EDSON BROS. U. S. and Foreign Patent Agents, 711 G St., Washington, D. C. Established in 1865. Fee after allowance. Circ'l of instructions, etc., sent free.

KIDDER'S PASTILLES. Sure relief ASTHMA. Price 35 cts by mail. Stowell & Co., Charlestown, Mass.

CLOCKS E. INGRAHAM & CO.'S are superior in design and not equalled in quality, or as timekeepers. Ask your Jeweler for them. Manufactory—Bristol, Ct.



DYKES' BEARD ELIXIR [illegible]. SMITH & CO., Sole Agents, Palatine, Ill.

SUNSHINE A 16-page monthly, for one year; 1 fine Chromo; Box of Fine French Stationery; Centennial Puzzle; Puzzle Sleeve-Buttons and Magic Pen. All for 25c. AGENTS WANTED. SUNSHINE PUBLISHING CO., 118 East Washington Street, Chicago, Ill.

SELF-INKING TRIUMPH PRINTING PRESS, $3.50; Outfit & Press, $8.50. A new line of ROTARY POWER & Self-Inking Presses. Send 3 stamps for catalogue to D. W. WATSON, 73 Cornhill, Boston, Mass.

WORK FOR ALL
In their own localities, canvassing for the Fireside Visitor (enlarged), Weekly and Monthly. Largest Paper in the World, with Mammoth Chromos Free. Big Commissions to Agents. Terms and Outfit Free. Address P. O. VICKERY, Augusta, Maine.

$10 to $25 A DAY SURE made by Agents selling our Chromos, Crayons, Picture and Chromo Cards. 125 samples, worth $5, sent, postpaid, for 85 Cents. Illustrated Catalogue free. J. H. BUFFORD'S SONS, Boston. [Estab'd 1830.]

TRUTH IS MIGHTY!
[illegible]

FREE! FREE! FREE! An immense Descriptive Catalogue of Novels, Song Books, Music, Negro Farces, Acting Plays, Letter Writers, Fortune Tellers, Reciters, Cook Books, Speakers, Dialogues, Joke Books, Ready Reckoners, Playing Cards, Books on Magic, Swimming, Boxing, Draughts, Cricket, BaseBall, Clog Shoes, Burnt Cork, Wigs, Face Preparations, &c., unequaled and unattainable elsewhere. Mailed free on application. DEWITT PUBLISHING HOUSE, 33 Rose Street, New York.

JACKSON'S BEST
SWEET NAVY CHEWING TOBACCO
was awarded the highest prize at Centennial Exposition for its fine chewing qualities, the excellence and lasting character of its sweetening and flavoring. If you want the best tobacco ever made, ask your grocer for this, and see that each plug bears our blue-strip trade-mark with words Jackson's Best on it. Sold wholesale by all jobbers. Send for sample to C. A. JACKSON & CO., Manufacturers, Petersburg, Va.

EXTRA LARGE COMMISSIONS
Paid to Agents on two very elegant and valuable books on popular subjects, filled with the very finest illustrations by noted Artists. Wishing to place Agents in EVERY TOWN on these books AT ONCE, we will give SPECIAL AND UNUSUAL COMMISSIONS to Agents who apply within TWENTY DAYS. We mean business! Send for Circulars, Terms, etc., etc., to the AMERICAN PUBLISHING CO., Chicago, Ill.

AGENTS WANTED!
FOR PARTICULARS, ADDRESS
WILSON SEWING MACHINE CO.
829 Broadway, New York City;
Chicago, Ill.; New Orleans, La.;
or San Francisco, Cal.

KEEP'S SHIRTS.
KEEP'S Patent Partly-made Dress Shirts, best quality, only plain seams to finish, 6 for $7.
KEEP'S Custom Shirts to measure, best quality, 6 for $9, delivered free. Guaranteed perfectly satisfactory.
RED FLANNEL UNDERWEAR.
Undershirts and Drawers, best quality, $1.50 each.
White Flannel Undervests, best quality, $1.50 each.
Canton Flannel Vests & Drawers, ex. heavy, 75c. each.
Twilled Silk Umbrellas, paragon frames, $3 each.
Best Ginghams, patent protected ribs, $1 each.
Circulars and Samples mailed free on application. Shirts only delivered free. KEEP MANUFACTURING COMPANY, 165 and 167 Mercer Street, New York.

"The Best Polish in the World."
THE RISING SUN STOVE POLISH

BABBITT'S TOILET SOAP.

Unrivalled for the Toilet and the Bath. No artificial and deceptive odors to cover common and deleterious ingredients. After years of scientific experiment the manufacturer of B. T. Babbitt's Best Soap has perfected and now offers to the public The FINEST TOILET SOAP in the World. Only the purest vegetable oils used in its manufacture.
For Use in the Nursery it has No Equal.
Worth ten times its cost to every mother and family in Christendom. Sample box, containing 3 cakes of 6 ozs. each, sent free to any address on receipt of 75 cents. Address
B. T. BABBITT, New York City.
☞ For Sale by all Druggists.

SANDAL-WOOD.
A positive remedy for all diseases of the Kidneys, Bladder and Urinary Organs; also, good in Dropsical Complaints. It never produces sickness, is certain and speedy in its action. It is fast superseding all other remedies. Sixty capsules cure in six or eight days. No other medicine can do this.
Beware of Imitations, for, owing to its great success, many have been offered; some are most dangerous, causing piles, &c.
DUNDAS DICK & CO.'S Genuine Soft Capsules, containing Oil of Sandal-Wood, sold at all Drug Stores. Ask for circular, or send for one to 35 and 37 Wooster street, New York.

O. N. U. No. 1

WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS, please say you saw the advertisement in this paper.

Auburn Courier.

AUBURN, INDIANA, JAN. 10, 1878.

—It is somewhat refreshing to hear W. E. Chandler, Secretary of the Republican National Committee, talk of the Louisiana election in the following manner:

"In Louisiana, however, there had been thrown into the ballot-boxes over 7,000 more votes for the Tilden than for the Hayes Electors, and to make Hayes President it became necessary for the Returning Board, acting under peculiar local laws, to throw out more than 7,000 Tilden votes to perform this extraordinary, even-justifiable, work, &c."

—The Indianapolis Herald is one of the Republican papers that speak out what it thinks. After giving a brief review of the proceedings of the Republican Central Committee it says: "The Democrats have taken the bulge on the soft money lunacy and their triumph in this State at the next election is a foregone confusion. If the Republicans had a ghost of a chance for the State election, they could afford to throw it away for the sake of being consistently right in 1880. But they have not the ghost of a chance and there is not even the poor excuse of policy for going wrong now."

—Ex-Governor Hendricks in his remark before the Democratic State Central Committee last week "directed attention to the fact that this year the fight would be in the counties, as the question was should Indiana send Mr. Voorhees to the place to which he has just been appointed. [Applause.] That had got to be settled in the counties. As chief executive of the State he had seen the importance of sending men to the legislature who were able to grasp the problems there presented. No man had a right this year to command the nomination for the Senate or House of Representatives. The people want the man who can command the most votes and make the best race." This is most excellent advice and should be heeded by the Democracy of every county in the State. Nominate the men who are "able to grasp the problems there presented," is advice that should not be thrown away. The struggle for the Legislature is too important to make any mistakes.

—Prof. Tice has been interviewed in regard to the weather. He says: "I have observed that when the weather is cold in Europe it is warm here and when it is cold here it is warm there. Now see, the snows in the Balkan mountains this winter have been heavy and the weather has been severe, that's the reason of our mild weather. Last year the first half of winter was especially mild in Europe. In England the birds were building nests in the hedge-rows while here we were in the midst of our severest weather. About the 20th of January there came a change, the winter from that time on in this country was mild, and in Europe became quite severe. I expect a change here about the 6th of January—it may come two or three day before. It will probably begin with a storm—a snow storm—and then the cold will follow. If the barometer swings in from the northwest it will be intensely cold and cutting. It all depends on the way the barometer swings in. If it swings from the southwest of course the cold will not be extreme. Everything, however, indicates cold weather after that date—January 6th.

The Silver Bill.

—The silver bill as passed by the houses restores the coinage and the legal tender character of the silver dollar of 412½ grains to what they were before the adverse legislation in 1873 and 1874. The senate committee have reported amendments (yet to be voted on) making the dollar a legal tender again, but limiting the coinage to not less than $2,000,000 nor more than $4,000,000 a month, and the money to be coined on account of the government. Gold is now, as the silver dollar was before 1873, coined for any person who should deposit the bullion, a charge being made sufficient to cover the cost of coinage. The amendments, so far as it limits the coinage to four millions a month, will have no practical force, because that sum exceeds the capacity of the mints to coin. The restoration, however, in the hands of a hostil administration, might confine the coinage to the minimum. There is no more reason for authorizing the free coinage of gold than there is for the free coinage of the silver dollar. For a few months, perhaps, the government might make a profit by buying bullion and converting it into dollars, but the price of silver bullion would rapidly advance to what silver will be as coin.

St. Joe Gossip.

—The item last week in regard to Mr. VanHyde was a little premature.... Our restaurant man, Mr. Baker, has employed W. C. Johnson as clerk.... St. Joe wants a bridge across the river east of the station.... Barney & Sons, of Spencerville, have sold the property owned by M. B. Hedge, of Spencerville.... C. Curie and J. Engle are the champion debaters of this place. Engle has the boss smoke pipe.... Ed., our drayman is buying porkers for our old friend Johnny Jenkins.... Ask Johnny how the horse trade he made for Tom Mullen prospers.... J. D. Leights bought of D. Grats 600 bushels of wheat at $1.20 per bushel.... Oats 23c, corn 37c, potatoes 40 cents.

RUSTIC.

NOTICE TO TAX-PAYERS.

To the Tax-Payers of De Kalb County.

In compliance with the laws of the State of Indiana, I, DANIEL GONSER, treasurer of said county, hereby notify the Tax Payers thereof that the rate of taxation for the year A. D. 1877 are correctly stated in the following table, showing the amount of tax in cents levied upon each one hundred dollars valuation, in the several townships and incorporated villages in said county, as the same appears on the tax duplicate of De Kalb county, for said year.

	State Levies.				Town and Township Levies.							County Levies.
	State Taxes		School Tax		Town-ship Tax.	Road Tax	Com. School Tax	Spec'l. School Tax		Addit'l. Special School		County Tax	Bond Int.	Total Tax	Total Poll
TOWNSHIPS AND INCORPORA'D TOWNS	On each $100.	On each Poll.	On each $100.	On each Poll.	On each $100.	On each $100.	On each $100.	On each $100.	On each Poll.	On each $100.	On each Poll.	On each $100.	On each $100.	On each $100.	Total Poll.
Butler Townsip.	13	50	16	50	5	20		[illegible]0	50			45	10	159	150
Jackson "	13	50	16	50	5	15		15	25			45	10	119	125
Concord "	13	50	16	50	5	15		25	50			45	10	129	150
Newville "	13	50	16	50	5	15		35	10			45	10	139	200
Stafford "	13	50	16	50	5	10		40	50			45	10	139	150
Wilmington "	13	50	16	50	5	15		35				45	10	139	100
Union "	13	50	16	50	5	15		5				45	10	109	100
Richland "	13	50	16	50	5	10		25	100			45	10	124	200
Fairfield "	13	50	16	50	5	15		15	40			45	10	119	140
Smithfield "	13	50	16	50	5	15		15	40			45	10	119	140
Franklin "	13	50	16	50	5	20		20	25			45	10	129	125
Troy "	13	50	16	50	5	15		22				45	10	126	100
Keyser "	13	50	16	50	5	15	10	30	50			45	10	134	150
Auburn Town	13	50	16	50	5	15		25	50	50	100	45	10	189	250
Waterloo "	13	50	16	50	5	15		50	100			45	10	154	200
Butler "	13	50	16	50	5	15		50		50		45	10	204	150
Garrett "	13	50	16	50	5	15		25	50			45	10	129	150

DOG TAX:—For every male, $1.00; for every female, $2.00; for each additional dog, $2.00.

Examine your receipt before leaving the office and see that it covers all your property. People are taxed for what they own on April 1st of each year.

Taxes are due on the 15th day of December, and tax-payers may pay the full amount of such taxes on or before the third Monday of April, or may, at their own option, pay one-half thereof on or before said third Monday and the remaining one-half on or before the first Monday in November following, provided, however, that all road taxes charged shall be paid prior to the third Monday in April, as prescribed by law; and provided, further, that in all cases where as much as one-half of the amount of taxes charged against a tax-payer shall not be paid on or before the third Monday in April, the whole amount charged shall become due and returned delinquent, and be collected as provided by law. Delinquent lands are advertised on or about the first Monday in January, and are sold on the second Monday of February of each year.

The treasurer is responsible for the taxes he could have collected. Therefore tax-payers ought to remember that their taxes must be paid every year.

No county order will be paid to any person owing delinquent tax. As the road tax is all due with the first installment, road receipts must be presented on or before the third Monday of April, or they will not be received. For the collection of which I may be found at my office, in Auburn, as directed by law. Pay your taxes promptly and avoid costs.

DANIEL GONSER, Treasurer of De Kalb county.

December 24th, 1877.

Corunna News.

—Mrs M. Slayman is visiting at Sedan.

—This week ends the first half of this term of school.

—The boys at the depot are having their desk enlarged.

—Hans Quince took a car load of hogs to Chicago last week.

—Tom Lipsett has engaged himself with an eastern firm to sell cigars on the road.

—Ed Orr has been confined to the house for a few days from an attack of billiousness.

—The cold weather has been thankfully received. Everybody was sick and tired of the mud.

—Mrs. S. W. Beak, Ligonier, Ind., has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. John Lipsett, for several days past.

—Our old friend Lafe Miller, agent at the depot, informs us that the stock market has been lively for the last few days.

—One of our citizens has a game rooster and christmas the boys had considerable sport dropping dung hill cocks to him.

—There will be a teacher's institute at the corners, south of town, either next Friday or one week from that time, we cannot find out which.

—The protracted effort is meeting with good encouragement. Eight or ten have already been converted and it looks as though there was more to follow.

—Our village is extremely dull this week as far as local matter for the COURIER is concerned. Some weeks, like all other places, we can dish up a large quantity of them, and then again it is too dull for any use.

—Mrs. Heminger, who died three weeks ago, had her funeral sermon preached at the M. E. church last Sabbath. The little infant child that she left to the "cold charities" of the world, found a home with Mr. Heminger's brother.

—We noticed a sign in front of Mr. Williamson's saloon which indicates that a change has been made in that institution. The sign reads "Bascome's saloon." It may be, however, that some of our painters have "put up a job" on Mr. W. There is one thing that he cannot be beaten in and that is cigars. He keeps the best in the place.

—A candy agent from Auburn lost a pair of "dog skin" gloves in this place last Saturday. They were those "dog gone" two button gloves, and to Kapp the thing off they didn't belong to him. He talked seven people to death describing this lost property, and the only way they could get him homward bound was for the citizens to promise him a pension until spring.

—We invite the attention of our readers to one of the most liberal schemes ever offered by a merchant to his patrons, the free railroad transportation to Fort Wayne and return, tendered by Sam, Pete & Max, of the famous Star Clothing House. Inquire of your station agent for particulars.

—Why is not the marshal busy collecting the town tax? Do they propose to wait until the hard times of spring reach us, when even in flush times money is scarce. The other corporations in the county we believe are at work.

—How is this for low prices: Coffee A Sugar, 10½c.; Extra C. Sugar, 9½c.; Choice Dried Peaches, 8½c.; Six Bars of Buffalo Soap, 25c.; Flour per sack, $1.50c and all other goods as low in proportion at SCHABB, BEUGNOT & CO.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein George Ensley is plaintiff and Robert Zacher et ux are defendants require me to make the sum of one hundred and forty two dollars, and thirty cents, $142.30, with interest on said decree and costs. I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder on

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 2nd, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House in DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

Town lot number seventy-two [72] in Ensley's 2nd addition to the town of Auburn, in DeKalb County and State of Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
By THOS. D. GROSS, Deputy.
Penfield & Emanuel, atty's for plff.
Jan. 9th 1878. Pr. fee $7.50.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Thomas H. Sprott, Trustee, is plaintiff, and Andrew J. Little is defendant, requiring me to make the sum of Thirty-five dollars $35.00, with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 2nd, 1878

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House of DeKalb County, Indiana, the rents and profits, for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

Situated in DeKalb county, Ind., to-wit: One and one-half feet front by eighty (80) feet deep adjoining the south half of lot No. ninety-three (93) all in the original plat of the town of Auburn

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said judgment, interest and costs, I will, at the same time and place, expose at public sale, the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation and appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
By THOS. D. GROSS, Deputy.
Penfield & Emanuel, Atty's for plaintiff.
Auburn, Ind. Jan. 9th 1878 Pf. $7.50.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein James Griswold is plaintiff and David Floyd et ux. are defendants, requiring me to make the sum of four hundred and fifty-nine dollars and seventy-eight cents $459.78, with interest on said decree and costs. I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 2nd, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House in DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

Described as follows to-wit: The first five acres off the west side of the south half of the north-east quarter of section twenty [20].

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interests and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
By THOS. D. GROSS, Deputy.
Penfield & Emanuel Att'ys for plaintiff.
Auburn Jan 9th, 1878. Pf. $7.50.

Sheriff's Sale,

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court, in a cause wherein Joseph Boyer et al are plaintiffs, and Albert Widner is defendant, requiring me to make the sum of three hundred and nine dollars and sixty cents, $309.60 with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 2nd, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House of DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit.

North east quarter of the north east quarter of section twenty-four, 24, township thirty four, 34, north of range thirteen, 13, east, in DeKalb county, Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said judgment, interest and costs I will at the same time and place, expose at public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said judgment, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation and appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
By THOS. D. GROSS, Deputy.
McBride, Morlan & Leas Attorneys for plaintiff.
Auburn, Jan 9th, 1878. Pf. [illegible]

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein J. Hemstreet is plaintiff, and Jacob Beck et al, are defendants, requiring me to make the sum of two hundred and ten dollars and fifty cents, $210.50, with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 2nd, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House in DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years of the following real estate, to-wit:

A strip of land thirty feet, 30, in width east and west running the entire length off of west end of lot number sixty-eight, 68, in the original plat to the town of Waterloo, DeKalb county, Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
McBride Morlan & Leas Attorneys for plaintiff.
Auburn, Jan. 9th, 1878. Pr. fee $7.50

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Jonathan Clutter is plaintiff, and Geo. W. Clutter et al are defendants requiring me to make the sum of twenty-six hundred and forty-five dollars and sixty-six cents $2645.66, with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder on

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 2nd, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M., and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House in DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit.

North half of the south east quarter of section five, 5, township thirty four, 34, north of range thirteen, 13, east, containing seventy-five, 75, acres more or less in DeKalb county Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
Best & McClellan Attorneys for plaintiff.
Auburn, Jan. 9th, 1878. Pr. fee $7.50

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Miles Waterman is plaintiff, and John T. Hayke et al, are defendants requiring me to make the sum of three hundred and eighty-eighty dollars and fifty cents, $388.50, with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 2nd 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House in DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

The north west quarter of the north west quarter of section twenty-one, 21, township thirty-five, 35, north of range fourteen, 14, east, containing forty acres, 40, more or less in DeKalb county, Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
McBride Morlan & Leas Atty's. for plaintiff.
Auburn, Jan. 9th, 1878. Pr. fee $7.50

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein William L. Pettit is plaintiff and Geo. Wilmot and Lucinda H. Wilmot are defendants, requiring me to make the sum of two hundred and eighteen dollars with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 2nd, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House in DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years of the following real estate, to-wit:

South half of the north east quarter of section twenty-two, 22, township thirty-three, 33, north of range fourteen, 14, east, containing eighty acres, 80, more or less.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
By Thos. D. Gross, Deputy.
Best & McClellan, Attorneys for plaintiff.
Auburn, Jan. 9th, 1878. Pr. fee $7.25.

1878. 1878.

ROOT & COMPANY

Have commenced their great annual closing out SALE and will offer during the next 30 days

Bargains

in every description of

CARPETS, DRY GOODS,

FANCY GOODS, HOSIERY,

GLOVES, NOTIONS, &c.

We would advise an early visit as the prices we shall put on many will close them out rapidly.

ROOT & COMPA'Y.

46 and 48 Calhoun Street.

FORT WAYNE, IND.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Soloman Mier is plaintiff, and L. S. Goodwin et a are defendants, requiring me to make the sum of three hundred and fifty-six dollars and eighty-five cents, [$356.85], with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY, 2nd, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House in Auburn DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate to-wit:

Being a part of south east quarter of section four, 4, township thirty-four, 34, north of range thirteen, 13, east, commencing in the centre of a road running parallel with the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern railroad at a stake being the north east corner of William Feniton's lot sold by Henry Zerkle to said William Feniton, thence east along the centre of said road seventy-six [76] links thence south two, 2 chains and thirty-four 34 links thence west one, 1, chain and seven, 7, links, thence north one, 1, chain and thirty-four, 34, links, thence east thirty, 30, links, thence north one, 1, chain to the place of beginning.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
McBride, Morlan & Leas Atty's for plaintiff.
Auburn Jan. 9th, 1878. Pr. fee $9.50.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Anthony E. Swineford is plaintiff, and John Treesh is defendant, requiring me to make the sum of six hundred and four dollars and fifty cents, $604.50, with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY, 2nd, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M., and 4 o'clock P. M. of said day, at the door of the Court House in DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate to-wit:

Commencing twenty-two feet, 22, north of south east corner of lot number ninety-seven, 97, in the original plat to the town of Auburn, thence north twenty-two feet, 22, thence east eighty feet, 80, thence south twenty-two feet, 22, thence west to the place of beginning in DeKalb county, Indiana,

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said judgment and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. S. CLAIR, Sheriff.
By Thos. D. Gross. Deputy.
W. H. Dills A'torney for plaintiff.
Auburn, Jan 9th, 1878. Pr. fee $8.00.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of an Execution to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Samuel B. Wood is plaintiff and John Treesh is defendant requiring me to make the sum of Three Hundred and Twenty-Two dollars and Thirty-eight cents, $322.38, with interest on said judgment and costs I will expose at public sale to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, JANUARY 19th, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m., and 4 o'clock p. m. at the door of the Court House of DeKalb County Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years of the following real estate, to-wit:

Lot number thirty two [32] in Brandt & Ashley's addition to the town of Auburn, lot number twenty-seven [27] in the Western addition to the town of Auburn, and part of lot number ninety-seven (97) in the original plat of the town of Auburn, described as follows, to-wit: Commencing twenty-two (22) feet north of the south-west corner of said lot ninety-seven (97) thence north twenty-two 22 feet, thence east eighty 80 feet, thence south twenty-two 22 feet thence west eighty 80 feet to the place of beginning, all in DeKalb county and State of Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said judgment, interest and costs. I will at the same time and place expose at public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said judgment, interest and costs.

Sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
By Thos. D. Gross Deputy.
W. H. Dills, Att'y. for Plaintiff.
Auburn, Ind., Dec. 26, 1877.
P. fee $6.75

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Orlando T. Letcher and William Letcher are plaintiffs, and Martin and Mary Mase, are defendants requiring me to make the sum of Six Thousand and Fifty Two dollars and Seventy-One cents, $6052.71 with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, JANUARY 19th, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House in Auburn DeKalb county, Indiana the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

North-east quarter of section twenty-four, [24] township thirty-four, [34], north of range fourteen [14], east, excepting one acre off the north west corner of said above described real estate, deeded to James Leonard, balance of said land to contain 180 acres more or less, in DeKalb county, Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
By Thos. D. Gross, Deputy.
Ross & Hartman, Attorneys for plff.
Auburn, Dec 26th, 1877. Pf. $8.75.

MOODY & HOFFMAN, Attorneys.

STATE OF INDIANA, }
DEKALB COUNTY }
In the DeKalb Circuit Court, February term 1878

William Shutt,
John D. Leighty,
vs.
Joseph Depew,
Isaac N. Depew,
Ellen Depew
and Jonathan Edwards.
} Complaint

The plaintiffs by Moody & Hoffman their Attorneys file in open Court an affidavit that said defendant Jonathan Edwards is not a resident of the State of Indiana, and the Court orders that publication hereof be made in the Auburn COURIER.

Notice is therefore given said defendant that unless he appear on the second day of the next term of the DeKalb Circuit Court to be holden on the fourth Monday of February, A. D. 1878, at the Court House in Auburn said county and State, and answer or demure to the complaint herein the same will be heard and determined in his absence.

Witness my name and seal of said Court affixed at Auburn, this 26th day of December 1877.

G. H. K. Moss, Clerk DeKalb Circuit Court.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Robert Knott is plaintiff, and Robert M. Lockhart et al are defendants requiring me to make the sum fourteen hundred dollars, [$1400.00] with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, JANUARY 26th, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M. of said day, at the door of the Court House, in DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years of the following real estate to-wit:

As lot number thirty-six [36] in the original plat of the town of Waterloo, in DeKalb county Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interests and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
Penfield & Emanuel Attorneys for plaintiff.
Auburn, Jan. 1st, 1878. Pr. fee $7.00

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of an Execution to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Wm. Dunn is plaintiff, and Ann M. Spencer is defendant requiring me to make the sum of Five Thousand, Nine Hundred and Two Dollars and Seventy-Six Cents $5902.76 with interest on said judgment and costs I will expose at public sale to the highest bidder on

SATURDAY, JANUARY 19th, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m. and 4 o'clock p. m. of said day at the door of the Court House of DeKalb County, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate to-wit:

Lots number twenty-eight, fifty-two, fifty-three, fifty-nine, eighty-two, eighty-three, one hundred and one, one hundred and thirty, one hundred and thirty three, one hundred and thirty-four, one hundred and thirty-one, one hundred thirty-nine, one hundred and forty, one hundred and fifty-seven, and one hundred and fifty-eight, [28, 52, 53, 59, 82, 83, 101, 130, 133, 134, 131, 139, 140, 157 and 158,] all in the western addition to the town of Auburn, DeKalb county Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said judgment interest and costs, I will at the same time and place, expose at public sale, the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
By Thos. D. Gross, deputy.
Zollers & Zollers, Att'ys for Plaintiff.
Auburn, Indiana, Dec. 26th, 1877.
Pr. fee $9.50.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Jacob Sibert is plaintiff and John McClellan is defendant requiring me to make the sum of one hundred and sixty-three dollars and seventy-five cents, ($163.75) with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder on

SATURDAY, JANUARY 19th, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House in DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

Part of out lot number six, (6), in Kuhlman's second addition to the town of Auburn, DeKalb county, Ind., commencing at a point on the south line of said out lot, one hundred and forty (140) feet west of the south east corner of said lot, and running thence west seventy (70) feet on said south line thence north ninety (90) feet to the north line of said lot, thence east seventy (70) feet on the north line of said lot, thence south ninety (90) feet to the place of beginning.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
By THOS. D. GROSS, Deputy.
Ross & Hartman, Attorneys for plaintiff.
Auburn, Dec. 26th, 1877. Pf. $8.75.

—Subscribe for the Auburn COURIER. Only $2.00 a year.

Auburn Courier.

Old Hengland.

A brewer lately died in Old Hengland at the age of one hundred, who had for fifty years drank ten quarts of beer in a day, and the doctors said that's what ale'd him. A tippler was bothered how to honor his mother's birthday. A brilliant idea struck him—kept sober. One set of French China dinner ware for $65.00; 106 pieces Tea and Dinner $10. We warrant every bit of our solid silver ware and silver plated ware to be of the double and tripple plate, and all stamped with the named of Meriden Britanna Co., the best and largest plating company in the world. Tea set, $35 to 100. water set, $18 to 60; castors, $4 to [illegible] Card and Cake stands, [illegible] castors, knives, spoons, ladles, sugar shells, fruit knives, the best stock of plated at Ward's Cheap Crockery Store, No. 9 Columbia street, Fort Wayne, Ind.

—Mace Long, our old friend, and well known here, wants to give us a temperance lecture. When shall we have it, boys? Mace makes a good lecture and we want a big audience for him. He spoke in Elkhart last week, and the papers report the Opera House crowded. Auburn must do her old friend honor, now that he has started out fairly to run with patience the race before him, and she can best show her appreciation of the wise course he has taken by turning out to hear him. We hope to announce the time very soon.

—We have been confidentily told that there is a haunted house in south Auburn, but we have been requested not to locate said house out of respect to the owner of said property. All right. Last fall this same story came to us pretty much the same way, and a few months before that we heard a blood-curdling revelation pointing to the same locality. His ghostship does not appear to the naked eye, but his voice comes from space with ease and fluency quite startling. We hope he will show up so as to remove this embargo on publicity.

—A son of Mr. John McClellan's met with a frightful accident last Tuesday, while at work on a farm in Jackson township hulling clover. His arm was caught by one of the belts of the machine and broken so badly that the bones of the limb penetrated through his clothing. Drs. Cowan and Casebeer were sent for and amputated the arm close to the shoulder. Mr. McClellan is a young man and a hard laboring man and now as he is unfit for work and in very limited circumstances we hope his friends and acquaintances will contribute something to aid him in getting along.

—The wife and baby of one of our prisoners came here last Friday to bid the husband and father a good-bye. A transaction of this nature must have deep impression on a man's mind, and during the two years of prison life which he is now about to enter into, will doubtless think many times of his wife's tears and of the fond kisses left upon the rosy cheeks of his innocent babe. Should either his wife or babe close their eyes in death before the happy meeting time comes again, he will have a relic bound up in his memory that should forever be a warning to him to shun bad company and let the intoxicating bowl alone. Young men, beware.

—W. E. Grose has started in the attempt to publish a paper at Cherubusco Now he may succeed for a short time, but we believe it will prove a failure in the end. This thing of publishing a paper at every cross road will play out as soon as the supply of unexperienced shoemakers are exhausted. No good, live, wide awake printer will start at a point so hazardous, and you will find on close observation, that these ventures and failures can be traced to those who have neither fitness nor ability as newspaper men. We cannot wish this and that one success in a business they know nothing about and we won't make a show of friendship by doing so.

—A clothing house at Fort Wayne, run under the name of Owen, Pixley & Co., published a Rebus in the papers, and offered three prizes for its solution. A ten year old of this place sent in one and the answer returned was that he had got the word people in stead of lovers. Doubtless if he had got it lovers, why then it would have been incorrect as the change could be made in their favor every time. A shody concern might do this and regard it as a smart trick. We notice all the prizes were gived to residents of Fort Wayne, and our rural friends were ignored. We hope this will learn the people to deal with reliable persons. Go to Sam, Pete & Max, if you want to get a square deal and respectable treatment.

SPENCERVILLE, IND., Jan. 4, 1878.

The finest entertainment of the season occurred at the Lutheran church, Tuesday evening, Jan. 1, 1878. The committee of arrangements performed their duties so successfully that not a jar occurred to mar the harmony of the evening. The church was beautifully trimmed with evergreen and the concert was excellent. The little folks performed their part so well that there was not a discord in their execution. And then on repairing to Provines' Hall a bountiful supper was spread with such delicacies as woman's tact alone could devise. Although originally intended as a free supper to a part of the school, the crowd was so large that the net proceeds amounted to about thirty dolars.

O. W. RUMMELL

—Several beer kegs, at the Saginaw depot, were bursted by the cold weather Monday. The loss comes on the manufacturers and it will not be felt by them to any extent.

—The Republicans of this State have fixed upon June 5th, as the day for holding their convention. The Cincinnati Enquirer says, "to parties outside the State this seems an unnecessary piece of trouble."

—We are glad to learn that another effort will be made to organize a band. We have some most ecellent tallent and it should be put in sporting order as soon as possible. The boys will hold a [illegible]

—We wish our friend W. D. Boyle, Esq., of Butler, and his beautiful bride late Miss Alma Boyer, of Waterloo, much happiness and prosperity. They were married at Mr. Abright's, of this city, Tuesday evening last.

—We are authorizen to say that the boot is still upside down, and while Austin is up and ready to please you with anything in the boot and shoe line, the prices are still down at the lowest notch. Come on if you want good bargains.

—Sportsmen should bear in mind that the time during which quails may be legally killed expired on the 1st of January. It is now unlawful to kill this gamey bird, or even to be found in possession of its corpse. So, beware.

—That is not a picture of Dan McDonald, at the head of the local columns of the last Plymouth Democrat. Not by any means. You can't make us believe that you've grown so nice, and sleek, and fat as that, Dan. That's more like Germ Brown, of the Angola Republican.

—Fort Wayne beats that hot place on the Wabash for Doctors. Since that martyr affair two more handles of the scalpel have been arrested for stealing a dead body from the grave in Lindenwood cemetery. They are bound to show up an activity not indulged in by rival towns.

—There is to be a very large sale of stock, farming implements and other articles, at St John's station this county A herd of fine cattle and other stock will be offered for sale next Tuesday the 15th. We have printed a half sheet bill for this sale, and we hope a large crowd will be in attendance.

—Our friend Ben. Gaskell is on the war path about a bridge in Troy township. His communication is not concluded in that language proper for the public eye, but we will investigate the matter and see what can be done. In the mean time we hope Ben will keep a good weight on the safty valve.

—A gentleman who has been prospecting in the city by the name of Sam'l Puffenberger met his "pard"—"Pompy" unloading wood on Main street Tuesday. Pompy and the gentleman had a long talk together after which they came to the conclusion that they were cousins. They shook, Pompy smiled and they parted to meet some more.

—In the case of Spindler, charged with arson, the defense was ably conducted and the plea of imbecility saved the man. But the ablest speech in the case was made by our genial friend, C. M Philips Esq, of Waterloo. It was a clear, forcible, persuasive analysis of the question of man's responsibility for his acts. The prisoner was acquitted.

—At an up-town residence, the other evening, there were several boys playing and singing at the organ to entertain a young lady of that threshold, and when the head of the family appeared, threw up his arms and said: "Ladies shange," and the girl did change from the sitting room into the kitchen too quick.

—James Goetschius, Esq., living a few miles south-east of the city, was kicked by one of his horses last Friday, receiving serious injuries on the head. He was in the act of stooping when the animal lengthened out its right hind leg and if the wound had been a little nearer the top part of his head it would have no doubt resulted in death.

—Those who get the COURIER at Waterloo, and are conscious of being in arrears, will find receipts already made out and in the hands of D. Y. Husselman Esq., where they can call, pay up and get their receipts. We left them there as a matter of convenience to our subscribers who may want to pay up, and we hope all delinquent will give him a call.

—Last winter it was blue glass and this winter it is blue ribbon. But to tell the truth there is but little of the latter practiced in this city. With the exception of a few, the same old bummers can be seen early and late at the "brine rooms" wasting their time and spending their earnings. How much more comfortable would home be were this money distributed there.

—At a meeting of the stock holders of the First Notional Bank of this place last Tuesday, the following were elected Directors for the year:

Geo. Hazzard, J. H. Ford, Jacob Walborn, E. Berry, Wm. McIntyre, J. E. Shilling, Isaac Hague and James McClellan. J. H. Ford. President, Wm. McIntyre, Vice President and Jas. V. Hazzard, Cashier

OUR REPORTER'S ROUND.

He Gathers up the Local News Very Closely.

—No socials this week.

—Court adjourned last Saturday.

—1878—what will the harvest be?

—The Justice courts are very dull.

—Will the silver dollars roll soon?

—The shortning is all out of the days

—Syracuse is organizing a fire company.

—The Garrett grist mill is now in operation.

—Boys were skating on the creek [illegible]

—The wood market was over stocked this week.

—Grubb has a man on the road selling cigars.

—Have you stayed with your new years vow?

—Ladies sandles only 45c at the boot upside down.

—The Sheriff took his party to Michigan this week.

—Several inches of snow would make good sleighing.

—This is no off year. Neither is it 7 to 8, but 8 to 7.

—The sheriff and his deputies can have a rest now.

—Trade has revived considerable since the freeze up.

—Last week it was 'dry up,' this week it is "freeze up."

—A currency reform club will be organized in Ligonier.

—The heaviest snow of the season fell last Friday night.

—Jan Van Auken has a nice new pole for surveying purposes.

—Men's Buckle Artic only $1.60 at the boot upsipe down.

—Sleds and mud boats were plenty on the streets Saturday.

—Go to Kiblinger & Co's. for iron, steele and horse shoes. 4t

—Mr. Pratt and family, of Garrett, have moved to St. Louis.

—The Garrett Herald got out a carriers' address new years.

—Hi. Randall will have a public sale the 12th of January.

—There will be four eclipses this year of the sun and moon.

—Mr. Ed Ditmar is assistant agent at the Junction for the B. & O.

—This town wants better roads and more potatoes in the market.

—Root & Company have a change in their advertisement this week.

—Smith, the egg man, had a breakdown west of town Saturday.

—The club dance is postponed until one week from next Tuesday.

—Frank Griswold is again at his old posish at the Eel River depot.

—Week of prayer. A number of weak prayers will be "spieled."

—The South Bend Herald has moved into its new rooms on first floor.

—Men's best rubber over shoes only 65 cents, at the boot upside down.

—Kapp, the candy man, will move his stock in the old bank building.

—Last Saturday sayeth the Statues, was the last day for shooting quail.

—Mace Long, of Fort Wayne, joined the Baptist church there this week.

—Just think of it, men's Gum boots only $3.40, at the boot upside down.

—Mark Center, a few miles east on the B. & O., is to have a stave factory.

—Will it be possible that after the week of prayer we will have sleighing.

—C. C. Boyer, of Waterloo, has connected himself with the Angola Herald.

—Mich Houston killed a number of porkers at the county house last week.

—The first page of this week's COURIER is filled with interesting local news.

—The Wagoner Noragon case in court last week was settled by the parties.

—30,000 California Salmon have been planted in the Maumee river at Defiance.

—Dr. Huxford, of Fort Wayne, died last week at the advanced age of eighty years.

—Men's wool lined boots till you can't rest at your own price, at the boot upside down.

—We have received quite a number of new subscribers this year. Thanks, gentlemen.

—The merry jingle of the sleigh bells were heard yesterday—in the hardware store.

—We hear that Sam Maxfield will move his bowling alley and air gun to Beugnot's saloon.

—Our thanks are due Dr. Ford and Mr. Ryan for a mess of splendid quails several days ago.

—Geo. Weamer has traded his Michigan property for a house and lot on Van Buren-st., with Joe Link.

—A change has been made at the Lake Shore depot, Waterloo. Mr. Paterson, of Wawaka, now officiates.

—A number of boys attended the protracted meeting at the M. E. church through curiosity and nothing else.

—Court adjourned Saturday. The female part of divorce cases are mad because their trials didn't come off.

—The right thing in the right place is without doubt Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup the best remedy for babies while teething. Price 25 cents.

DEATH OF M. LONG, Sr.

We are pained to announce the death of an old and esteemed citizen of this place, Michael Long, Sr., which occurred on last Thursday evening, Jan. 3rd. He had been suffering for some months past with a disease of the stomac, and his death was not entirely unlooked for.

Mr. Long was born in Lancaster county, Penn., in 1814, and removed to Wayne county, Ohio, in 1845, where he remained about a year. He then removed to this place in 1846, and has been a resident about thirty-one years. He was physically one of the strongest men for his weight in this country. At one time he became very much dissipated, and during that time lost nearly all his property, as he was once a large land holder. About twelve years ago he abandoned his intemperant habit, and from that day to his death not a drop of stimulants passed his lips. He cleared many an acre of ground in early days, and was always a vigorous, industrious citizen. He was a member of the M. E. church, but his last years were more especially directed in the cause of temperance, and his last request was that his funeral sermon should be on the subject of temperance. He was a genial, liberal hearted gentleman, a pleasant neighbor and a good citizen. He leaves two sons, Henry J. and Michael, and his faithful wife, who is about the same age of her husband. Father Long had many friends and few enemies, and we always found him an honest, true, brave-hearted man.

SEDAN, IND, Jan. 7, 1878.

MR. EDITOR.—The temperance club of this place held a meeting new years eve. which resulted in the admission of twenty members. The exercise of the meeting consisted of speeches and relating experiences by the members. Much good is being accomplished here through the temperance movement, and many of the former inebriates, who day after day used to walk in the gutters are now uniting with the church, being thoroughly reformed from the vice of intemperance and their sins. Thus the good work goes on. GEORGE.

While in at Kahn's store, at Waterloo, Tuesday, we saw a splendid lot of dressed poultry, and more still coming in. While Waterloo and Butler are shipping larged amounts of poultry, Auburn does not allow the thought of a dressed foul to disturb her. A live, wide-awake, enterprising citizen like Jake ought to be largely appreciated in any town.

—A telegram received by Mr. Miller, of the late firm of Miller & Casebeer, states that Mr. John Casebeer had his hotel at Lagrange, Ind., entirely destroyed by fire last Monday evening. We sympathize with John, and hope he will be successful in making the loss back again in a short time.

—We learn that D. D. Snyder, Esq., of this place, will take control of the Hub and Spoke Factory, and with activity in that locality, now so grave and quiet, that cannot but be productive of good to all. There is money in it, and we believe the active percistent energetic application of Mr. Snyder, will bring it out. Let all encourage the enterprise.

—A strange phenomena occurred on Seventh street the other day. Al. Dawson was actually seen to run for a few steps, and it so surprised everybody that he was asked several times where the fire was. It is said that he cleared a nickel in the operation.

—People living between here and Butler want to keep a close eye on their cordwood in the woods already cut. Si. Hare and Sime Snyder went in that direction Friday morning with a cross-cut saw and an axe.

—There are other places than book stores for some women to find "That Husband of Mine." Just take a sly glance through the screens of a lager beer saloon and convince yourself.

FOR ADOPTION.—There are three girls from 8 to 12 years old and three boys about the same age, for adoption. Good homes wanted for them. Apply to County Asylum.

—We would like to have a large number of our subscribers who are back on their subscriptions to come forward and square up. We need it just now very badly.

—The editor of the Wabash Courier received three turkeys from different parties as a new years gift. One editor's family had a square meal, thank the Lord.

—Our popular grocer, G. C. Ralston, has two performing cats. One is named Thomas, and the other Mrs. Thomas, we guess. They have been learned several cute tricks.

—We suggest that our Town Dads immediately place a crossing on Fourth street. A good suggestion is like a crying baby at a meeting—it ought to be carried out.

—Reub. Stevens has brought suit against Hi. Parent for false imprisonment, placing his claim at $5,000 damage. Dr. Ford and G. C. Ralston are Hi's. bondsmen.

WANTED.—A good stout girl to do housework, can find a good steady place by addressing, Lock Box 250

—We are glad to hear it. Our druggist informs us that Dr. Bull's Chough Syrup sells better than any other midicine, and always gives staisfactoin.

Here You are Again.

—The hack horses trot.

—No jail birds at present.

—Overcoats are dead sale.

—Nice and pleasant to-day.

—Ten Sheriff sales this week.

—An interesting court trial is brewing.

—The Excelsior Hardware has a new clerk

—Roy Gregg has a potition placed in his cigar room.

—We hear one of our men was quietly married New Years.

—[illegible] gan to work up their claims.

—Sam Pommert hasn't fell in love with bath tubs. We don't blame him.

—Lafayette, Ind., is trying to get the Wabash shops away from Fort Wayne.

—We learn that Tom. Leasure is coming home soon. Come, dear Tommy, come.

—We have had no fires this winter thus far. Not even the burning out of a chimney.

—Parlor and heating stoves at cost for the next 30 days, at Kiblinger & Co's. hardware store. 4t.

—We understand that Al. Dawson is about to purchase the Lewis property on Van Buren street.

—The chimneys on the jail and court house burned out Tuesday evening.—The first of the season.

—We hear of a few cases of sore throat in town. Aside from this we have but very little sickness.

—The little folks will be entertained by Master Johnny McIntyre, at his father's residence this evening.

—A fellow in the Kendallville calaboose set fire to a barrel of benzine and during the excitement escaped.

—There is a letter remaining in the P. O. addressed to Red Cloud, Nebraska, has been returned for correct directions.

—A large number of people visited Dr Casebeer's office yesterday, to gaze upon the amputated arm of J. McClellan's.

—Milt. Roth has been awarded the contract for carrying the B. & O. express from the Junction to this place.

—The Martin Bros. have moved a part of of their groceries stock in their old room opposite the Auburn House.

—We notice by our exchanges that the red ribbon clubs swelled in numbers immediately after new years.

—How about that new leaf you promised to turn over at the begining of the new year. Has it flopped over again?

—Go to Kiblinger & Co's. for your axes and cross cut saws. They are warranted. 4t

—When a tramp dont hault at Fort Wayne they send a small piece of lead after him—it caught the last one in the back.

—Mrs. Long was so ill that she could not attend the funeral of her husband. She is better at present, we are glad to state.

—Warsaw came near having a Charley Ross sensation. Assistance came soon enough to save the lad from being taken away.

—Dr. Van Buskirk, the grave robber at Fort Wayne, has been bound over to criminal court. Dr. Summers was acquitted.

—R. M. Lockhart, of Waterloo, represents the Board of Agriculture for this part of the state at Indianapolis this week.

—Senator Voorhees will remain in Washington during the recess and work on his great speech to be delivered January 15th.

—Jeff Meyers, well known here, has been released from his Michigan home and has signed the Murphy pledge at Fort Wayne.

—A party belling a newly wedded pair at Monroville, Ind., were shot at with shot guns, injuring several who participated.

—Public meetings favoring the restoration of the silver dollar are being held in nearly every town and city in the Nortwest.

—A big black bear has been found in the woods near Tiosa, Ind. It is supposed to be a tame one that has escaped from its master.

—There hasn't been poultry enough bought in this city this winter to "tar and feather" a bald head. What are our dealers about.

—As spring draws nigh the membership of the H. & L. company will increas. They dont have to work the roads, you know.

—Sheriff St. Clair took five young men down to Michigan City last Monday. These fellows are to remain from one to two years.

—The Warsaw Indianian and the Goshen Times both closed the twenty-second year of their existence with the close of the year 1877.

—John Britton had the misfortune to lose his grey horse last Saturday. This is the fourth horse that has died for him since he located here.

QUERY: "Why will men smoke common tobacco, when they can buy Marburg Bros. "Seal of North Carolina," at the same price?" DEC 27.1y

—D. D. Snyder and lady gave a reception to their friends at the Swineford House, last Friday evening. It was an enjoyable affair.

—Go to Kiblinger & Co's. for hardware, stoves and tinware t.

Personal Mention.

—T. D. Gross' little child is quite sick.

—Geo. Hazzard, of New Castle, Ind., is in the city.

—Dr. Littlefield, of Hudson, was in the city Monday.

—Tom. Stevens, of Huntertown, was in town Saturday.

—Billy Miller, of Hicksville, Ohio, was in town Saturday.

—John Simons, of Michigan, formerly of this place, is in the city.

—Miss Shaw, of Bucyrus, Ohio, is the guest of the Misses Shaffer.

—Messrs. Butt, McClellan and Baxter, of Waterloo, were in town Monday.

—Mrs. M. Long will probably make her home with her son Henry at Kendallville.

—W. K. Davis, Esq., and lady, of Wabash, Ind., are the guests of their brother, J. L. Davis.

—Judge M. Clapp was married at Albion, Christmas to Miss Angil Skinner. It was quite an affair.

—Rev. Mr. Long, of Ohio, attended the funeral of his brother Michael, at this place, last Thursday.

—Miss Frankie Stahl, of Waterloo, attended the infair of D. D. Snyder and wife, last Friday evening.

—Geo. Yesbera, of West Unity, Ohio is visiting with his brother Henry and better-half, of this place.

—Billy Edgington has been paying a visit to his parents and friends at Columbia city for several days.

—L. Jackman, wife and baby, of Waterloo, were visiting in the city the latter part of last week. Guests of J. V. Hazzard.

—Mr. Bruce Jones and wife, of Fostoria, Ohio, have been visiting in the city for several weeks. They returned home Tuesday.

—Obe Cool and lady are expected to arrive home this week Obe will take charge of the livery again. He thinks there is a poor show of his lengthing out with the west.

—W. E. Peterson, of Kendallville, was in the city Saturday last. We understand he has purchased the establishment of Mr. Alexander of that place and will continue in the sale of musical instruments, &c. Walt. is a pleasant, genial, enterprising fellow, and we wish him success.

—Dr. Brown will close up business at the Auburn House this week. He will move to the south part of the city.

—Two Freight trains came together a short distance east of Butler, on the Air Line Road, last Saturday. The cars were pretty badly wrecked, but no lives lost.

—The most pleasant and prompt Cough Remedy is Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup. Children cry for it. Call on your druggist and try a bottle. Price 25c. For sale by all druggists.

—Two old citizens, of Warsaw, Ind., by the names of Stephen Boyer and Sam'l Holm engaged in a stabbing affray while in a saloon, wherein the former was cut under the left shoulder penetrating the lung.

—"Shall we gather at the river?" That's what is bothering the ice men. They are fearful that we will not have cold weather enough this winter to make an ice crop.

—Two men were arrested on suspicion for burning Mr. Croxton's barn, at Angola. They were taken to jail, but after a two hours hearing were let go on their way rejoicing.

—The farmers of this vicinity certainly can't squeal on the products of last year. The year 1877 was a bounteous one for the farmer. They, of all classes made money.

—Our druggists are selling large quantities of Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup for coughs, colds, pulmonary complaints generally. It takes the lead of all cough remidies. Try it. Only 25 cents per bottle. Sold by all druggists.

Farm for Sale.

The Somers farm, one mile south-east of Auburn, is for sale. It contains 165 acres, fine orchard, good improvements and will be sold cheap. Terms, one-third down, balance to suit purchaser.

Apply to JAMES McCLELLAN,
Administrator.

GARRETT, IND., Jan. 8, 1878.

DEAR COURIER.—I noticed a letter in your issue of Dec. 28th, from a "would-be historian" of our town, signed M. L. Now, I wish to say in regard to the above mentioned letter, that I think it very ungenerous and unkind of any one to take up my non-de-plume and write a letter over it, in order to impress upon the minds of your readers that I have contradicted myself. One would suppose from the "eloquent" flow of language that he started out with, that he was going to give in brief a history of all the past ages, but the eloquence soon left this modern writer, and in order to get out of the dilemma he concluded to impose his injustice upon some one else by signing M. L. A man who is mean enough to do such a contemptable trick, I look upon as a slanderer and an impostor, and when he gets so far down in the scale of indecency that he would attempt to defend a party of "scallawags," or more strictly speaking a band of "fugitives from justice," he should no longer be tolerated in a respectable community. If that monster fraud would read more history of civilization, and devote less of his time to the Boston Advertiser, he would know how much good christianity has done mankind. I think the orthography of the correspondent's communication must have been better than his letters generally are, or no editor would have been able to ferret out its contents.

M. L.

AUBURN COURIER.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 10, 1878.

THE NEWS CONDENSED.

THE EAST.

AN explosion of fire-damp in a mine at Wilkesbarre, Pa., the other day, caused the death of one or two miners, the wounding of several more, and the destruction of a considerable amount of property.

LAMBERT, the swindling President of the American Popular Life Insurance Company, has been denied a new trial.....Scott and Dunlap, the Northampton (Mass.) bank-robbers, have been each sentenced to twenty years in the State prison.

CONSIDERABLE excitement has been caused in New York financial circles by the failure of Bonner & Co., one of the oldest stock operating firms in the city. Liabilities heavy.

A SHOCKING tragedy was enacted in the village of Ferndale, Pa., last week. John Haddock, crazed by love and jealousy, shot and killed the object of his affections, Miss Lizzie Davis, a beautiful and accomplished young lady, and then blew his own brains out.....J. H. Young, a New York stock broker, has been robbed of $100,000 worth of bonds by some ingenious thief, who entered his office and cabbaged them in broad daylight.

THE Pittsburgh Savings Bank has closed its doors; liabilities about $100,000....Up to the 8th inst. fourteen bodies had been recovered from the ruins of the Barclay street, New York, candy factory. The cause of the disaster still remains a mystery......Indictments have been returned by the Grand Jury of Hartford, Ct., against Walkely, White, Wiggin and Furber, late officers of the Charter Oak Life Insurance Company, for conspiracy to defraud policy-holders......Capt. A. H. Bogardus has just accomplished at New York the remarkable feat of breaking 5,000 glass balls inside of 500 consecutive minutes, with 19 minutes and 25 seconds to spare.......Clarence Boyle, one of the first "Molly Maguires" convicted, has escaped from the Eastern (Pa.) penitentiary. He was under a ten-years' sentence, and had served about four.

THE WEST.

THE Golden Gate Mining Company, of Deadwood, have consummated a sale of their four mines—the Father DeSmet, Golden Gate, Justice, and Belcher—to California capitalists for the handsome sum of $400,000. This is the heaviest mining transaction that has occurred in the Hills.

A LEAGUE has been formed in Chicago, whose object is to suppress the sale of liquor to minors. They have already secured the arrest of a number of saloon-keepers for dealing out poison to boys, and propose to continue in the good work until every saloon-keeper in Chicago is made to realize that it is a crime to engage in making drunkards of the rising generation. It is said that half the saloons in the city are mainly supported by boys between 12 and 21 years old, and that if deprived of this patronage at least 1,000 gin-mills would be compelled to close up.

THE German Savings Bank, of Lafayette, Ind., has failed......The reported discovery of oil in the Black Hills is fully confirmed.

A FRIGHTFUL accident occurred in the vicinity of Negaunee, Mich., on the morning of Jan. 2, by which seven men lost their lives and several others were slightly injured. The Lake Shore Nitro-Glycerine Company were preparing a car-load of nitro-glycerine for shipment by railroad to the Republican mine, and while the explosive was being loaded, by some means wholly unknown, the entire lot of 4,800 pounds exploded with a terrific crash, demolishing the car, engine, and everything within a radius of 500 feet. The concussion shattered the glass of nearly all the stores in Negaunee, and all the dwelling-houses were left without a single window-light unbroken. The names of the unfortunates who have lost their lives are: Wil Myers, engineer; Wm. Spellman, fireman; Chas. Miller and Jerry Foley, brakemen; Ira Hinckley, Seneca; A. Wheeler and Walter Wheeler, employes of the Glycerine Company. The last three named were blown to atoms, their remains scattered in all directions, and were picked up in small pieces, the largest piece found not weighing more than a pound and a half.

THE well-known banking house of Jacob Bunn, at Springfield, Ill., has failed. The liabilities are placed at about $750,000, and the assets at a quarter of a million less....Hickox & Spear, bankers, San Francisco, Cal., have failed....The State Savings Bank, Indianapolis, Ind., has closed its doors; $84,000 due depositors.

THE bank of J. A. Thomas, Des Moines, Iowa, has failed.......J. D. Easter & Co., Chicago, dealers in the Marsh harvesters, have collapsed, owing creditors about a million and a half, and with nominal assets of about an equal amount.......Samuel Bliss & Co., wholesale grocers, Chicago, have failed, with liabilities of $180,000.......The unemployed workingmen of San Francisco are clamoring for bread or blood.

THE SOUTH.

THE extra session of the Tennessee Legislature, which was called for the purpose of considering a proposition for the settlement of the State debt, has adjourned without accomplishing anything.

A NASHVILLE (Tenn.) dispatch says a frightened team backed a wagon containing Mrs. Morris Goodloe and four children off the bridge over the Obion river, resulting in the drowning of the four children.

A DISPATCH from Austin, Tex., to the Galveston News says: "Gen. Reynolds, of the Rangers, and a squad of his men, acting as peace officers, attempted to arrest three negroes, charged with felony, in Menard county. They were resisted, and killed the negroes. One Ranger, named McCarry, was wounded." ....Portions of Virginia had a severe earthquake shock on the 3d inst.

GENERAL.

BUSINESS failures: The Real Estate Savings Bank, of St. Louis, Mo.; John B. Flowers, boot and shoe dealer, Halifax, N. S., liabilities $160,000, assets $100,000; the Rockland County Bank, Nyack, N. Y.; the Jersey City (N. J.) Savings Bank; J. D. Parker & Co., wholesale druggists, Cincinnati, Ohio.... Another member of the "fighting family" of McCooks has joined the ranks of the silent majority. Gen. George W. McCook, of Ohio, died the other day in New York at the residence of Anson G. McCook.

AT the request of Representative Mills, the President has ordered a commission to investigate and report the facts in regard to the El Paso troubles. Gen. Ord is directed to detail two officers of the army to act in conjunction with such person as Gov. Hubbard may appoint, the three to constitute the commission. They will summon witnesses, take testimony, and report all the facts, and whether or not Mexicans from Mexico, and what number, took part in the affair at San Elzario.... The yield of precious metals for the year 1877 in the States and Territories of the United States, British Columbia, and the western coast of Mexico aggregates a value of $98,-500,000, which is an increase of $7,500,000 over the yield of 1876, the largest known previously. During the year the heathen of India and China got $19,000,000 of silver shipped from San Francisco alone.

A DISPATCH from Halifax, N. S., says the ship Nebro, from Cascumpec, Prince Edward's Island, has been lost, with nine men on board. Three of the bodies washed ashore at New Frage.

THE General Superintendent of the United States Life-Saving Service has submitted his annual report of the operations of that service for the last fiscal year. The report shows that there have been during the year 134 disasters to vessels within the limits of the operations of the service. On board these vessels there were just 1,500 persons. Estimated value of the vessels, $1,386,744; and of the cargoes, $1,206,586. Number lives saved, 1,461; lost, 39. Amount of property saved, $1,719,647; amount lost, $1,570,685.

BURNED: The Vulcan iron works, Cairo, Ill., loss $15,000; the malt house of B. M. Grarder & Co., Harrisburg, Pa., loss $70,000; Wood & Co.'s' furniture warerooms, New York, loss $25,000; several houses at Salem, N. J., loss $50,000.

WASHINGTON.

THE Widow Oliver has abandoned her suit for breach of promise against Simon Cameron. ....It is expected in Washington that the present session of Congress will be a lengthy one. The Appropriation Committee will soon be ready to report on the Pension, Consular, Naval, and Postoffice bills, but the condition of general business indicates that slow progress will be made.

THE Secretary of the Interior has issued his report upon the Pacific railroads, called for by Congress. The total indebtedness of the Pacific railroads to the Government on Oct. 31, 1877, amounted to:

Principal	$64,623,512
Interest	28,493,586
		$93,117,108
Total amount earned by companies in transporting troops, mails, supplies, etc., to Oct. 31	$15,407,395
Of which the United States has paid the companies	4,185,981
Balance due the companies		11,221,414
Total amount due the Government		$81,895,784

GEN. ADAM BADEAU has been dropped from the rolls of the army retired list, under the decision of the Attorney General that he was not legally entitled to be carried on this list and hold a civil office at the same time.... The silver-wedding anniversary of President and Mrs. Hayes, which occurred on the 30th ult., proves to have been an affair with no pretensions as to display or social splendor. True to announcement it was a quiet, unostentatious and thoroughly pleasant celebration of an event of general interest....The following is the official statement of the United States currency outstanding:

Old demand notes	$ 63,532
Legal-tender notes (all issues)	349,943,776
One-year notes of 1863	54,162
Two-year notes of 1863	16,050
Two-year coupon notes of 1863	23,950
Compound-interest notes	288,010
Fractional currency	17,764,108
Total	$368,154,092

THE January statement of the public debt is as follows:

Six per cent. bonds	$ 748,667,200
Five per cent. bonds	703,266,650
Four and a half per cent. bonds	200,000,000
Four per cent. bonds	74,900,000
Total coin bonds	$1,726,933,850
Lawful money debt:
Navy pension fund at 3 per cent	$ 14,000,000
Matured debt:
Principal	$ 21,512,240
Legal-tenders	350,077,308
Certificates of deposit	32,830,000
Fractional currency	17,764,108
Coin certificates	33,424,900
Total without interest	$ 434,026,817
Total debt	$2,196,372,407
Total interest	37,430,285
Cash in treasury—coin	$ 139,518,405
Cash in treasury—currency	5,498,845
Currency held for redemption of fractional currency	10,000,000
Special deposits held for redemption of certificates of deposit	32,830,000
Total in treasury	$ 187,847,250
Debt less cash in treasury	$2,045,955,442
Decrease of debt during December	71,623
Decrease since June 30, 1877	14,202,780
Bonds issued to Pacific Railroad Companies, interest payable in lawful money; principal outstanding	64,623,512
Interest accrued and not yet paid	1,938,705
Interest paid by the United States	35,957,029
Interest repaid by transportation of mails, etc	9,006,189
Balance of interest paid by United States	26,951,439

SUMNER HOWARD, formerly of Michigan, has resigned his position of United States District Attorney in Utah......Alexander Stephens' Committee on Weights and Measures is going to report a bill making the metric system obligatory in all governmental transactions. Mr. Stephens is positive that the system is going to be adopted, sooner or later, by all civilized nations, and thinks that the United States ought to take it up promptly...... THE following comparative statement of the condition of the United States Treasury Jan. 1, 1877, and Jan. 1, 1878, has been issued from the treasury:

BALANCES.

	1877.	1878.
Currency	$ 9,483,860	$ 5,436,844
Special fund for redemption of fractional currency	....	10,000,000
Special deposits legal tenders for redemption certificates of deposit	31,100,000	32,830,000
Coin	[illegible]	139,518,416
Coin certificates	47,280,000	33,424,900
Coin less coin certificates	40,267,418	106,093,505
Outstanding called bonds	11,021,990	20,745,300
Other outstanding coin liabilities	8,596,729	5,907,346
Outstanding legal-tenders	366,055,084	349,943,776
Outstanding fractional currency	26,348,206	17,764,108
Outstanding silver coin	25,340,167	38,056,820
Total debt less cash in treasury	2,092,931,241	2,045,955,442
Reduction of debt since July 1	6,818,103	14,202,780
Market value of gold	107	102.81
Imports twelve months, ending Nov. 30	441,784,784	482,150,573
Exports twelve months ending Nov. 30	575,651,068	622,843,282

Increase of debt for December, 1876, $3,585,149; decrease, 1877, $71,622.

POLITICAL.

THE Washington Post, the new Democratic organ at the capital, announces in a double-leaded editorial that hereafter the Democratic Senators will vote to confirm the President's appointments.

PRESIDENT HAYES has been interviewed by a Washington Post representative, and is thus reported: "Without referring specifically to the New York appointments, but evidently having them in mind, he observed that he had not been moved by the action of the Senate either to abate his desire of carrying out the policy generally known as civil-service reform, or to despair of final success in the selection of instrumentalities to that end. He would neither deny nor affirm the statements that had been made in the press relative to his design of greeting Congress next week with a special message on that subject, but it was true that he intended to exhaust his constitutional powers in the promotion of such reforms. The most remarkable thing he said was that no plea or remonstrance based upon purely partisan considerations would have any weight with him, no matter by whom it might be made, and that he attached importance to those representations only which were put upon the ground of the general public welfare. He intimated that there had been of late a cessation of party appeal to him, which was a relief, because his love for the name of Republican and his reverence for the early traditions of his party were so strong that it was not easy or pleasant to him to resist appeals made for their sake, particularly when such appeals came from men whom he had always delighted to honor. But the responsibilities of his position placed duty above personal feelings, and, in his effort to keep the faith of his inaugural with the whole people, he should not hesitate to proceed contrary to the advice of individuals, however dear to him they might be personally, whenever it seemed to him or his constitutional advisers, or rather to the collective judgment of his administration, that such advice was contrary to the letter and spirit of the promises he had made to the country. The whole tenor of the conversation was to the effect that Mr. Hayes regards the situation with calmness, and has been at no time less inflexible in his purposes than now."

THE Maryland Court of Appeals decides that a negro cannot be admitted to practice in the courts of that State....Gen. B. F. Butler predicts that the Silver bill will be a law within sixty days, veto or no veto....Senator Morton's lost report on the Chinese question has been found in the incomplete state in which he left it, and will soon be published. It advocates a policy of justice and protection toward the Celestials.

THE TURKO-RUSSIAN WAR.

THERE seems little doubt that England has consented to accept the office of peacemaker, and will undertake to bring about an adjustment between Russia and Turkey. The announcement is now made officially in the London Advertiser that the British Government has acceded to Turkey's request, and will try what can be done toward prevailing upon Russia to negotiate terms of peace.... Reinforcements ordered for the Russian army exceed 250,000 men. The Army of the Baltic, numbering 90,000 men, is also being formed. Russia has bought 200,000 rifles from Berlin. ....A London dispatch of Dec. 29 says: "I am informed, on good authority, that in English military circles war is considered almost inevitable. Arrangements are completed and regiments allotted for an army of 80,000 men, and steps are already taking toward the formation of the nucleus for a reserve army. Profound uneasiness prevails here, and there is great depression in trade and finance."..... There are no complaints of an unseasonable mildness in the weather on the Danube. Snow at the headquarters of the Russian army near Rustchuk is two feet deep; the roads are no longer passable for wagons; sledges for winter use have not been provided; the quartermasters declare that they cannot keep up the supplies for the cavalry, and grave fears are entertained that the bridges will be broken by ice, completely interrupting the movement of food for man and beast.

RUSSIAN journals are discussing with great earnestness the possibilities of the situation as latterly presented in consequence of England's attitude. Upon one point there is but one expression—that mediation is not possible unless solicited by both parties, and that Russia, while at all times willing to receive peace proposals from the Porte direct, has not invited, and will not favorably receive mediatory offices from any source......Vienna advices render it certain that Greece is about to take up arms and unite with the Servian forces operating in Western Bulgaria......The Servians have begun a regular siege of Widin, which is well provisioned. Its garrison is weak, however, and its capture is expected within two weeks at the farthest.

A VERY few words comprise the document concerning which the entire civilized world is intensely anxious at this time. England's note to Russia is short and to the point—simply informing the Czar that the Porte is ready to open peace negotiations, and that, from the Emperor's wisdom and his frequent expressions of love for peace, Her Majesty's Government infers that he will lend a favorable ear to the Sultan's request. A London dispatch says England's offered mediation has been refused point-blank, though not offensively. The Russian answer is to the effect that, while the Czar wishes peace and is ready to conclude the war on such terms as Russia would consider acceptable, yet no steps can be taken till Turkey is willing to give preliminary guarantees of her desire for actual peace, and not merely for delay.

ANOTHER dashing raid through the Balkan mountains has been accomplished by a Russian force, the strength of which is not now known. The object of the move apparently is to threaten the position taken by Suleiman Pasha, and to hasten the complete withdrawal of the Turkish army beyond the Balkans.

LONDON dispatches of the 4th inst. say "the British Cabinet has decided to inform Russia that no separate negotiation between the belligerents will be sanctioned by Great Britain, and that a statement of the conditions of peace required by Russia will be regarded as necessary before any proposal from Turkey for a truce can be made. While the tone of the note will be courteous, it cannot fail to cause ill feelings."

WITH the fall of Plevna the second line of defense upon which Turkey has depended may be said to have been taken. The latest information is that the Russians have already crossed the Etropol Balkans, and Suleiman Pasha is in retreat. It is reported that the third line of defense, the Balkan range, will be abandoned without a struggle, and that whatever decisive fighting occurs hereafter will be on the plains of Roumelia.

GENERAL FOREIGN NEWS.

EX-PRESIDENT GRANT and family are traveling in Italy....The estimates of the German Government for the coming year are considerably in excess of the last budget. For naval purposes alone an increased expenditure to the amount of nine and a half million marks is demanded. Bismarck is jealous of England's maritime supremacy, and is determined that Germany shall appear in the front rank of naval powers.

MEXICO news: Gen. Ogazon, Minister of War, has resigned, and Gen. Manuel Gonzales has been appointed in his stead. Other Cabinet changes are expected.—The newspapers urge a close alliance of the Hispano-American republics against Northern aggression.—There has been a grand military display at Chapultepec. Five thousand troops were out, well armed, uniformed, and drilled.—Minister Romero, of the treasury, claims to have made improvements which will augment the treasury millions of dollars......Several thousand people, principally of the lower classes, assembled in Trafalgar square, London, on the 29th ult., in response to a call for a public demonstration against Russia. The meeting was very turbulent. A peace procession was broken up and its banners torn to pieces. There was a large display of Turkish flags, and several were torn up in the melee. A heavy police force was necessary to prevent a riot. Bitter speeches were made against Russia. Resolutions were passed demanding such action by Parliament as will put a stop to Russian progress. Despite the efforts of the peace men to pack the meeting, a vast majority of those in attendance were furiously anti-Russian..... Official intelligence has been received announcing the success of the Chinese troops in Kashgar. They had fortified Touchtongarar and Aksu, two strong strategical points. The inhabitants were fleeing in terror into Russian territory.

EX-QUEEN ISABELLA, of Spain, has published a letter in the Figaro protesting against the expulsion of Don Carlos from France on account of an alleged conspiracy against the present King of Spain. She denies that she is a party to any such conspiracy, or that any exists, and declares that the intimate friendship which exists between herself and Carlos has nothing to do with politics.

Fire.

The sun is a natural incendiary, and a most powerful one. Recently, some cartridges had been placed on a table near a window; the concentration of the sun's rays by an "eye" in the glass was sufficent to cause an explosion. In summer conflagrations have arisen along railways by similar action of the glass of the carriage windows on the dried leaves along the track and embankments. It is known that in Algerian forests fire has occurred through drops of water attached to the leaves acting as lenses or burning-glasses.

THE Bank of Russia is supposed to hold a metallic reserve of $125,000,000, to be touched only as a last resource; but now insinuations are thrown out that this great sum is not really there.

THE CHANDLER MANIFESTO.

The Hon. William E. Chandler, of the Republican National Committee, has addressed a letter to the Republicans of New Hampshire. The following were the salient points:

On the morning of the 7th of November it was apparent that Hayes and Wheeler were elected by one majority, if South Carolina, Florida and Louisiana had given them their votes. But immediately the Tilden forces—hungry Northern and desperate Southern Democrats—determined to prevent the counting of the votes of those States for the Republican candidates, and threats, attempts to bribe, and all manner of foul influences were arrayed to seduce or intimidate the local Republican officials who were to declare the result.

To counteract these machinations, Gov. Hayes sent a large army of distinguished persons to the contested States, from Ohio notably the following: Messrs. John Sherman (afterward made Secretary of the Treasury).

Stanley Matthews (private counsel for Gov. Hayes; afterward made United States Senator by his influence).

Edward F. Noyes (afterward made Minister to France).

John Little (Gov. Hayes' Attorney General).

Samuel Shellabarger (Gov. Hayes' private counsel).

James A. Garfield (member of Electoral Commission and administration candidate for Speaker).

And many others went there from other sections. In South Carolina and Florida, owing to the manifest facts and to the noble fearlessness of Gov. Daniel H. Chamberlain and Gov. Marcellus L. Stearns in protecting the canvassing boards, the correct result of the election—the choice of Hayes electors—was declared, without extraordinary assurances from the Northern visitors.

In Louisiana, however, there had been thrown into the ballot boxes over 7,000 more votes for the Tilden than for the Hayes electors, and to make Hayes President it became necessary for the Returning Board, acting under peculiar local laws, to throw out more than 7,000 Tilden votes on account of alleged murder, riot, and intimidation, preventing a fair and free election in certain parishes. To perform this extraordinary, even if justifiable, work in the face of an armed and infuriated Democracy required men of undaunted courage; and such courage the Returning Board possessed. It required also that the board should have assurances that the national exigency demanded its performance; that the moral sentiment of the North would approve it; and that they themselves should be protected from evil consequences to be apprehended from the violence of a mob Government, which it was known would be established by one Nicholls, a pretender to the office of Governor against Stephen B. Packard, who was sure to be elected Governor if the Hayes electors should be found to have been chosen.

All these assurances were freely and forcibly given by Mr. Senator Sherman and his associates. Mr. Stanley Matthews declared to Mr. J. E. Leonard, and on more than one occasion, that Hayes and Packard should stand or fall together.

A reported interview of Gov. Hayes, Dec. 3, with W. R. Roberts, of the New Orleans Times, having occasioned alarm as to the future course of the prospective President toward Southern Republicans and the Louisiana and South Carolina Governments, Gov. Hayes, through his Private Secretary, Capt. A. E. Lee (since made Consul General to Frankfort), and Gen. James M. Comly, of the Ohio State Journal (since made Minister to the Sandwich Islands), denied the reported interview, and all sympathy with the sentiments therein expressed.

Encouraged and forced forward by these assurances, the Returning Board boldly performed its duty, gave voice to the murdered Republicans of the bulldozed parishes of Louisiana, and made Hayes President, and Packard Governor of Louisiana, by titles indissolubly connected in law, in morals, and by every rule of honor that prevails among civilized men.

The same tender regard for the Louisiana Republicans and for the result which they had achieved continued during the ensuing struggle in Congress. The Returning Board were arrested and confined at Washington by the Confederate House of Representatives. Sick, and in prison, they were visited by Senator Sherman and his associates, and urged to stand firm until relief should come from the advent to power of the President whom they had made.

With substantial unanimity the Republicans of the country seconded the determination of their representatives in Congress to declare and achieve the election and inauguration of President Hayes; and the Republican party was never more courageous, harmonious or united than on the day of his accession.

Coming to the Presidency under these remarkable circumstances, Mr. Chandler says the President should have maintained faithful and scrupulous allegiance to the principles of the Republican party.

But almost the first act of the new administration was to fulfill a bargain that had been made during the Presidential count, by which, if Hayes should be President, the lawful Governments of Louisiana and South Carolina were to be abandoned, and the mob Governments in those States were to be recognized and established.

Certain Democrats in the House of Representatives, seeing that, by the recurring decisions of the Electoral Commission, and the regular proceedings of the two houses under the Electoral bill, which they had warmly supported, Hayes would surely be President, had conceived the plan of saving something from the wreck. They had, therefore, threatened by dilatory motions and riotous proceedings to break up the count, and then opened negotiations with such timid or too eagerly expectant Republicans as they could find ready. They had succeeded beyond their most sanguine expectations. Senator Sherman had visited Ohio and consulted Gov. Hayes. Mr. Henry Watterson, a Democratic member, and a nephew of Mr. Stanley Matthews, had acted as go-between; and on the one side, Messrs. Matthews, Charles Foster, John Sherman, James Garfield, and on the other, L. Q. C. Lamar, John B. Gordon, E. J. Ellis, Randall Gibson, E. A. Burke and John Young Brown, had agreed: 1. That the count should not be broken up in the House, but that Hayes should be declared and inaugurated President. 2. That upon Hayes' accession the troops should be withdrawn from protecting Govs. Chamberlain and Packard, and that the new administration should recognize the governments of Wade Hampton in South Carolina, and F. H. Nicholls in Louisiana.

By certain general and indefinite letters since given to the public, by a secret writing now in the hands of E. A. Burke, and other ways, the agreement was authenticated; and President Grant was immediately requested by Gov. Hayes' counsel on no account to recognize Packard or Chamberlain, but to leave the ultimate decision as to their fate to the incoming President.

After the inauguration the bargain was speedily fulfilled. As soon as the electoral vote of their States was safe, Govs. Packard and Chamberlain had been notified by Messrs. Matthews and Evarts to get out. Gov. Chamberlain was now summoned to Washington and informed that he must surrender. He protested against his taking-off. The President hesitated, but Wade Hampton demanded the performance of the bargain. Mr. Matthews was sent for, came from Ohio, and within twenty-four hours the United States flag was ordered down in Charleston and Gov. Chamberlain stamped out.

As to Louisiana, the fulfillment proceeded more slowly, but none the less surely. Packard had made, March 21, a constitutional call for Federal aid, which it was difficult to withhold from one as surely Governor as Hayes was President. And yet there was the bargain.

As a subterfuge, an unconstitutional commission, consisting of Messrs. John M. Harlan, Joseph R. Hawley, C. B. Lawrence, Wayne McVeagh, and John C. Brown, was sent to New Orleans; instructed to gradually destroy the Packard Legislature by seducing or forcing its members into the Nicholls Legislature. But, they proving too stubbornly Republican, the commission telegraphed the President that nothing would destroy Packard but the actual order withdrawing the troops. At the word the President gave the order, Packard was crushed, and the commission returned triumphant to Washington to be "recognized"—one of them, Gen. Harlan, by an appointment as Supreme Court Judge; another, Mr. Lawrence, by the release of Jake Rehm, the great whisky conspirator and defrauder of the revenue at Chicago; Gen. Hawley was offered the appointment as Chief Commissioner to the Paris Exhibition, but declined because the salary was to be only $5,000; and three offices were tendered to Mr. MacVeagh, but declined on the ground that his signal services demanded more ample recognition; the English mission was next assigned him, but circumstances have made its delivery inexpedient or impossible.

Silence is a crime; acquiescence and inaction are political death. Can the Republican party, of heroic achievements, be bound to an administration which is not a free agent, but is bound by a bargain to Gens. John B. Gordon, L. Q. C. Lamar, Wade Hampton, and the Southern Democrats now in high office only through the blood of murdered Republicans? Does not every voter in the land know that Hayes and Packard were elected simultaneously, and held by the same title, and that when Hayes abandoned and trampled down Packard he put an irremovable stain upon his own title? The Republican party has lived long and survived many assaults and many treasons, only because it has been a party founded upon high principles, animated by lofty sentiment, courageously acting up to noble convictions. If it now disgraces its record, and indorses or fails to repudiate the Hayes surrender, its voters will leave it by thousands; its days are numbered; it will die a deserved and unhonored death.

A Convincing Argument.

A Rome journal explains to its subscribers why it can be had cheaper by yearly than by quarterly subscription, as follows: "In repeatedly going to the office to subscribe, you may meet a friend not only in search of a match, but of a cigar and glass of vermouth; you may rub up against two or three beggars; you may get wet on a rainy day, or on a hot day fall in with hydrophobic dogs not led by appropriate little strings; while, by taking a full year's subscription on the 1st of January, all such possible expenses will certainly be avoided."

WAR'S HORRORS.

Heartrending Picture of the Misery at Plevna.

The correspondent of the London Daily News at Plevna sends a horrible story of the state of things prevailing in and around the captured town. Before the recent great storm Plevna was simply a charnel-house. Modern warfare has no parallel for it, and its horrors can only be compared to those which followed in the wake of Genghis Khan, or Timour, as their savage Tartar hordes swept over and desolated Asia. The famished dogs, of which there are always large numbers in every Turkish town, were feeding on the corpses of the dead, and the bodies of the still living wounded. The savage howls of the greedy brutes as they tore the putrid flesh of the dead, or crunched the bones between their teeth, the cries and groans of the wounded as they vainly struggled with the dogs, might be heard for miles around, and made the soul sick. Birds were pecking at the skulls, hopping from body to body with beaks and plumage besmeared with human blood, and screaming with fiendish delight. Dogs fought among themselves, and bird struggled with bird for the possession of a morsel of human flesh, and the most indescribable horror prevailed. In one house alone thirty-seven dead and fifty-three wounded Turks were found, some of the former in a half-decomposed and putrid state, and the wounded in a condition that can be more easily imagined than described. Some of the wounded were able to crawl about, and clutched at odd morsels of food that were found in the hands of the dead, devouring it with feverish avidity; but thousands of them were utterly helpless, and awaited death or succor with a listless fatalism. Eighteen hundred prisoners were huddled together on the banks of the Vida, and the horrors of their position equaled those of the great plague which ravaged Europe in the fourteenth century. Living and dead were piled together promiscuously in heaps like wood and carted away. There were only three carts available for this work, and the confusion was indescribable. Osman's bravery is stained and blackened by his treatment of the Russian wounded that fell into his hands. His gallant defense of Plevna for a moment blinded the victors and Europe to the fact that all prisoners were butchered by the troops under Osman's command. A Bucharest correspondent says that a fearful retribution has overtaken a part of Osman's army, which was caught on the march by that dreadful snow-storm. Fate seems to be wreaking vengeance for the slaughter of the Russian wounded whose corpses lie unburied on the hills around Plevna.

The Roads Blocked with Refugees.

A correspondent of the London Telegraph writes: "I wish those who have made this war could have been with us yesterday and the day before, for we made two days of it from Sophia, halting at Tashkesend, at the southern foot of the hills. A vivid pen might easily draw a lively picture of the wretchedness and misery this war is causing. It is not like other wars, where the peaceful inhabitants remain comparatively unmolested. Here and hereabouts, directly the enemy advances, all the townspeople and villagers decamp, and just now that the Russians have gained a success between Plevna and Orkhanie the whole country is on the move. All the roads in Sophia are blocked with refugees, of whom there are about ten thousand five hundred in and around the town. As we proceeded, we encountered parties of Mussulmans coming in; some Bulgarians and Circassians also were fleeing, but they formed only a small portion of the fugitives. On the first half of the road we counted eleven hundred carts, and estimated eleven persons to a cart. Many flocks of sheep and herds of cattle were being driven in, and every head of a household conducted his own cart, which contained his family, their clothing, food, cooking utensils, and provender for the bullocks. The second half of the road was in a dreadful state. It consisted of a steep ascent, a cut through a gorge in the mountains, and a winding ascent about fifteen miles long. The whole of this was blocked and choked with carts in an indescribable confusion. We estimated them at six thousand, making about twenty-five thousand souls driven from their homes, and wandering they knew not whither. Many of the fugitives appeared to look upon the situation as hopeless, and with a serene confidence in fate camped out, driving their bullocks into the ravines and more practicable places at the sides of the road, but of course leaving their carts to form an impenetrable block. All classes were involved in a common interest, all fled the Russian and the dreaded Cossack, whether Mussulman, Bulgarian, Circassian, Jew, or gypsy—all were struggling in this tohu-bohu of humanity Not that all were equally miserable. After a sickening group of gray-bearded, broken old men, and half-naked, paralytic hags, the eye would light upon the merry, happy faces of a cartload of children, quite enjoying the novelty of the scene. Here delicately nurtured Mussulman women, whose faces had never been exposed to gaze, would be seen picking their way through the deep mud. There a little girl of 7 or 8 years drove a pair of hideous, shaggy buffaloes, striking them feeble blows and pulling at their nose-cord with truly infantine cruelty. A panorama of rural life, in its worst aspect was presented to us. But full of interest and indeed of picturesque beauty as the scene was, with the steep mountains bordering the road, and carrying the eye up, from the colored dress of the people to the snowy tops above, it was impossible to forget that though nearly all these families had food left for a few days, yet that when once that was exhausted, they had nothing to look forward to but starvation. Almost every town, district, villayet is already full of fugitives, who have been placed on the English relief list, and get a sum considered just sufficient to keep body and soul together,—a sum which is to supply them with food, drink, lodging, and clothing. For food they get bread, for drink water, for lodging the ground or cart, for clothing what they have on their backs. The sum that supplies all these luxuries is 2d a day per head."

Wants to be Hung.

Ohio reports a peculiar illustration of the saying, "When a woman says she won't, she won't." In May, 1875, a Mrs. Victor, of Cleveland, was convicted in the Common Pleas Court of Cuyahoga county of poisoning her brother, and was sentenced to be hanged on the 20th of August following. Before the day of execution arrived she became insane, and the Governor respited her till the 20th of November, at which time, she being still insane, he commuted her sentence to imprisonment for life, and she was accordingly confined in the penitentiary. In January, 1876, having recovered her reason, she refused to assent to the commutation of her sentence, and insisted upon either being hung or released. Finally she procured from the Franklin Court of Common Pleas a writ of habeas corpus against the Warden of the penitentiary, claiming that she was entitled to be set at liberty. The court held that she was "in law an escaped prisoner," and ordered that "she be delivered to the Sheriff of Cuyahoga county, to be further dealt with by the Court of Common Pleas of that county according to law." The Warden filed a petition in error to reverse the decision of the Franklin court and have the prisoner remanded back to the penitentiary. The case went before the Supreme Court, and that court decided that the Governor has power to commute the sentence of a lunatic without his or her consent, and that as soon as the commutation is made the new penalty becomes the one fixed by law, and the original penalty cannot be restored. In the language of the decision, "Commutation is not a conditional pardon, but a substitution of a lower for a higher grade of punishment, and is presumed to be for the convict's benefit," therefore "it cannot be defeated or invalidated by the convict's rejection or refusal of it when restored to reason." The judgment of the lower court was reversed, and the prisoner was remanded to the custody of the Warden of the penitentiary.—Inter-Ocean.

One Thing Deaf-Mutes Can Do Well.

Mr. J. C. Davis, of 302 West Thirteenth street, advertised yesterday for 100 deaf-mutes to be made into telegraph operators. Nine years ago, he says, he taught a deaf-mute named Hoffman telegraphy. Hoffman learned the art in less than three months, and became one of the most expert operators in the country, being at the time of his death the chief operator in the Mobile telegraph office. Mr. Davis has since taught twenty deaf-and-dumb persons, and says that they are almost invariably much quicker to learn than persons who speak and hear, and make far better operators. "I had a call from one to-day," he said, "who told me that he had been a bookbinder. He was at first very skeptical, but I convinced him of the ease with which he could learn by giving him one lesson. In three-quarters of an hour he knew more than half of the Morse alphabet, and, by referring occasionally to the alphabet written out for a guide, he could talk with me on the instrument with ease. Of twenty that I taught in Philadelphia, sixteen are now in London, where a number of them are in the telegraph department of the General Postoffice. Two of them have positions in Philadelphia.—New York World.

A PHILADELPHIAN whipped his entire family in one day, beginning with two children, following with his wife, then taking his two sisters-in-law in hand, and finishing with his mother-in-law, with whom, as the narrative says, "he wiped the floor and swept the dinner dishes off the table."

THERE were only seventy cats at Philadelphia's recent cat show. The other 7,000,547 were sitting on back fences and sheds o' nights growling at the small amount of the premiums offered and discussing methods to avert the dangers threatened by the lively sausage season.

THE cost of the famine in Madras is officially stated at $42,500,000, and in Bombay at $10,000,000.

THE publication of lotteries and race sweeps has been prohibited in India.

THE MARKETS.

NEW YORK.

BEEVES	$7 25	@11 00
HOGS	4 60	@ 5 70
COTTON	11⅛	@ 11⅜
FLOUR—Superfine	5 00	@ 5 50
WHEAT—No. 2 Chicago	1 23	@ 1 24
CORN—Western Mixed	50	@ 56
OATS—Mixed	35	@ 40
RYE—Western	73	@ 75
PORK—New Mess	12 62½	@12 87½
LARD	8	@ 8⅜

CHICAGO.

BEEVES—Choice Graded Steers	5 25	@ 5 50
Choice Natives	4 40	@ 4 80
Cows and Heifers	2 25	@ 3 50
Butchers' Steers	3 25	@ 3 50
Medium to Fair	3 60	@ 4 20
HOGS—Live	3 00	@ 4 25
FLOUR—Fancy White Winter	6 75	@ 7 25
Good to Choice Spring Ex.	5 25	@ 5 50
WHEAT—No. 2 Spring	1 09	@ 1 10
No. 3 Spring	1 02	@ 1 03
CORN—No. 2	42	@ 43
OATS—No. 2	24	@ 25
RYE—No. 2	55	@ 56
BARLEY—No. 2	56	@ 57
BUTTER—Choice Creamery	28	@ 30
EGGS—Fresh	19	@ 20
PORK—Mess	11 37½	@11 50
LARD	7½	@ 7⅝

MILWAUKEE.

WHEAT—No. 1	1 14	@ 1 15
No. 2	1 09	@ 1 10
CORN—No. 2	42	@ 43
OATS—No. 2	24	@ 25
RYE—No. 1	55	@ 56
BARLEY—No. 2	63	@ 64

ST. LOUIS.

WHEAT—No. 3 Red Fall	1 19	@ 1 20
CORN—No. 2 Mixed	45	@ 46
OATS—No. 2	28	@ 29
RYE	56	@ 57
PORK—Mess	11 75	@11 85
LARD	7½	@ 7⅝
HOGS	3 70	@ 4 15
CATTLE	3 00	@ 5 25

CINCINNATI.

WHEAT—Red	1 15	@ 1 23
CORN—New	37	@ 39
OATS	29	@ 31
RYE	60	@ 63
PORK—Mess	11 60	@11 75
LARD	7⅜	@ 8⅛

TOLEDO.

WHEAT—No. 1 White Michigan	1 31	@ 1 32
No. 2 Red Winter	1 28	@ 1 29
CORN	47½	@ 50½
OATS—No. 2	28	@ 29

DETROIT.

FLOUR—Choice White	5 80	@ 6 50
WHEAT—No. 1 White	1 30	@ 1 31
No. 1 Amber	1 27	@ 1 28
CORN—No. 1	49	@ 50
OATS—Mixed	29	@ 30
BARLEY (per cental)	1 05	@ 1 55
PORK—Mess	12 25	@12 50

EAST LIBERTY, PA.

CATTLE—Best	5 70	@ 5 80
Fair	4 [illegible]	@ 5 00
Common	3 50	@ 4 25
HOGS	4 25	@ 4 50
SHEEP	3 50	@ 4 50

AUBURN COURIER.

T. C. MAYS, Publisher.

AGRICULTURAL AND DOMESTIC.

Around the Farm.

Pruning of currants, gooseberries, grape vines, omitted in the fall, may be done now on mild days.

Care of the orchard, whether young or old, will require good fences and gates to keep out intruders of all kinds. A stray ox or horse may cause serious damage in a young orchard.

Roots are better pulped than cut for sheep. There are very cheap machines that can cut roots into fine shreds or pulp, which will soon save their cost in the improved condition of the animals thus fed.

Manure may be carted to the orchard and spread over the whole surface. The time of manuring is not of so much importance as to get it on at any rate. It is a mistake to put a little manure close around the trunks of trees.

Covering of strawberries and tender raspberries should be done, if not already completed. In covering strawberries do not get the materials too thick over the plants. An inch or so is better than more.—American Agriculturist.

Calves and yearlings may be made to increase in size and weight considerably, and make a large quantity of fine manure, by keeping them in a roomy shed, bedding them deeply with cut straw or leaves, and feeding them well. With plenty of bedding the shed need not be cleaned out until next spring.

No question is more frequently asked than: "When shall I prune?" If the cutting is such as may be done with a knife, it makes but little difference when it is done, but if on old and neglected trees, where large wounds are to be made, it is better to do it when the severe cold weather is over, but before vegetation starts. In the climate of New York, late in February and early in March.

Cows in milk may be made greatly more profitable by feeding wheat middlings freely; it will pay to feed as high as four quarts of corn-meal, and three of wheat middlings, to some cows producing butter; the butter is increased in quantity and improved in quality and color. The kind of cow, however, is important, as some will fatten upon this feed, while others will only increase in milk and cream.

Sheep and lambs should be kept and fed separately, else the stronger will crowd and rob the weaker; when in separate pens each thrives better, as the food can be properly apportioned. It is convenient to make as many feeding stalls around the feed racks as there are sheep, each large enough for one sheep only, then a weak one will have a secure place from which it cannot be dislodged. Of course the feed should be evenly placed in the rack.

If no accounts have been kept, a beginning of a better system should be made now. At the close of the year make an inventory of every article, and value them, and also put down the debts owing and due. This will show how one stands at the close of the year. By keeping strict account of one's business, it is not only known what goes out and what comes in, but by noting every expenditure and income, we can readily find where we gain or lose; foolish or unwise spendings are thought over a second time, and this naturally leads to avoiding them in the future.

Fruit in cellars is likely to suffer from heat rather than cold. In the slow operation of ripening, heat and carbonic acid are thrown off. Whenever the temperature approaches 40 degrees, the outer air, if cooler, should be let in to reduce it. In the house-cellar, the accumulation of carbonic acid would be injurious to the health of the family, and it is highly important that this be removed by ventilation. In fruit-cellars apart from the house, this is not necessary, as the presence of this gas, so injurious to animal life, tends to preserve the fruit, as it excludes the atmospheric air.

About the House.

To Clean Wall Paper.—Wall paper may be somewhat cleaned by using fine, dry Indian meal—rubbing it on with a soft, dry cloth.

Black Ink.—Bruised galls, two pounds; logwood chips, green copperas, and gum, one pound of each; water, seven gallons. Boil two hours and strain. Product, five gallons.

Mica Windows.—Mica windows of stoves should be removed from the stove and washed in warm water and soap, using fine sand paper. But they are inexpensive and can be bought new to fit old stoves.

Boiled Cauliflower.—Strip off the leaves and cut off the stalk; lay it head downward, in cold water and salt, to draw out the insects. Boil it in boiling water with some salt and sugar for one hour, or until the stalks are tender.

Hair Invigorator.—Bay rum, one pint; alcohol, one-half pint; castor oil, one-half ounce; carbonate of ammonia, one-quarter ounce; tincture of cantharides, one-half ounce; mix them well. This mixture will promote the growth of the hair and prevent it from falling out.

Cocoanut Cake.—Break two eggs in a coffee-cup; fill it with good sour cream, one cupful sugar, two cupfuls flour, one teaspoonful soda, two of cream tartar; stir well; this will make four cakes baked on jelly-tins or any tin; then fix the icing; one-half cupful prepared cocoanut, one-half cupful sour cream, one-half cupful white sugar; spread each cake with this.

Advice to Stout People.—Any medicine or ingredient of any kind taken by a stout person to reduce him in flesh, to be successful, would injure his stomach and produce endless troubles, but any person with sufficient will may do this and be benefited: Eat no slops; live on parched corn, broiled meats, little vegetables, no fruits, but drink water, green tea—no sugar or milk; exercise, plenty of water, and no food, is the safe, healthy cure.

Suggestions to Lean People.—One who has but little exercise daily will not keep lean for want of exercise. Leanness is constitutional with many. Excess of eating by those with small abdomens only induces leanness, but by the proper mode of eating the proper food, they may be kept in good condition. Broiled and baked food, with pure water, stands first; soups, stews, condiments, pastries, cheese and spices last. Plenty of sleep, with proper attention to the relaxation of the system, are helps.

Harris' Carpet.

Mrs. Harris told hubby that she must have a carpet for the front room, and she thought that a fifty-dollar one would suit.

Mr. Harris called in at the auction-room the next day. He didn't know a velvet from a rag-carpet, but he bid as if he had been in the business from childhood.

The auctioneer put up a beautiful ingrain, worth about five cents a mile, and asked how much he heard. Mr. Harris bid fifty cents a yard.

Mr. Beales, who was in another part of the store, had been indulging very freely, and he said, "Five."

"Seventy!" shouted Mr. Harris.

"Five!" came from Beales' corner.

Mr. Harris became angry, and determined to have that carpet if he never laid up a cent; so he yelled, "One dollar!"

Mr. Beales never moved an eyelash, but he said, "Five!"

By the time that the two had run up the carpet to four dollars a yard, both were red in the face. Mr Beales' "Five" came regularly, and all other bidders gave up in despair. Beales gave the people in his neighborhood to understand that "that was his carpet."

Mr. Harris winked at his friends with a wink that said, "If I don't get that carpet, you can put me down for a horse-thief."

Before the matinee was over, Harris had bid eleven dollars, and Beales said, "Five."

The carpet was finally knocked down to Beales; but when it was ascertained that he only had five cents, the auctioneer's trusty assistant showed Mr. Beales the hole the carpenter had left in the front of the building.

Mr. Harris finally got the carpet for nine dollars a yard, and when he got it home, having neglected to measure the room, he found that it wouldn't fit the first floor of a corn-crib.

Mrs. Harris informed H, confidentially that he was a "darned fool," and that he didn't know enough to go in the house when it rained. She uses the carpet for a table-cloth, and Harris buys his carpets at a regularly-organized store now.

How to Preserve a Piano.

It is evident that if the piano is to remain in good order for many years, good care must be taken of it. The instrument should be closed when not in use, in order to prevent the collection of dust, pins, etc., etc., on the sound board; however, it must not be left closed for a period of several months or longer, but be opened occasionally, and the daylight allowed to strike the keys, or else the ivory may turn yellow. Any hard substance, no matter how small, dropped inside of the piano will cause a rattling, jarring noise. It is in every case desirable that an india-rubber or cloth cover should protect the instrument from bruises and scratches. The piano should not be placed in a damp room, or left open in a draft of air—dampness is its most dangerous enemy, causing the strings and tuning pipes to rust, the cloth used in the construction of the keys and action to swell, whereby the mechanism will move sluggishly, or often stick altogether. This occurs chiefly in the summer season, and the best pianos, made of the most thoroughly-seasoned material, are necessarily affected by dampness, the absorption being rapid. Extreme heat is scarcely less injurious. The piano should not be placed very near to an open fire or a heated stove, nor over or close to the hot air furnaces now in general use. Moths are very destructive to the cloth and felt used in the piano, and may be kept out of it by placing a lump of camphor, wrapped in soft paper, in the inside corner, care being taken to renew it from time to time. Many persons are unaware of the great importance of having their pianos kept in order, and only tuned by a competent tuner. A new piano should be tuned by a competent tuner. A new piano should be tuned at least once every three or four months during the first year, and at longer intervals afterward.

Edgar Allen Poe.

The late Charles F. Briggs, an experienced journalist, was a companion of Edgar A. Poe. In a posthumous article from his pen some hard things are told of Poe, like this: "He could write the tenderest and most touching letters, which he would bedabble with real tears as he folded the paper, to women upon whom he had no other designs than an intention of sending his wife or her mother to them to solicit a loan of $50. Some of these women fondly believed in his passionate infatuation for them; but some others were cruelly undeceived before he died." According to Mr. Briggs, there was ample proof in Dr. Griswold's hands to substantiate the worst that has ever been said of Poe. When drunk he was insolent and aggressive, abusive to his wife aunt, and utterly disregardful of decency, treacherous to his friends and physically repulsive. The following is Mr. Briggs' description of the poet at his best. "His remarkably shaped head, high and broad forehead, his pale complexion, large gray eyes, which always had a sad and tearful look, and his finely-formed mouth, all indicated delicacy and refinement of thought and tenderness of feeling. He never laughed, and rarely smiled; but when he did smile there was always a partially-suppressed expression of sadness. He spoke with great precision, as though he were dictating to an amanuensis, and never for a moment gave utterance to what might be thought a spontaneous or unconsidered idea. His dress was neat and free from anything eccentric. He never wore an ornament, and avoided colors. His manners were free from affectation, and, although they were graceful and unrestrained, yet he was respectful and deferential."

DIPHTHERIA.

Means by Which the Prevailing Scourge May be Averted.

[From the New Haven Register.]

At a meeting of the Board of Health last evening, Health Officer Lindsley, in accordance with the suggestions of the board at a previous meeting, submitted the following paper. It will be printed in pamphlet form for general circulation:

Diphtheria is both a contagious and an infectious disease; it is, moreover, one of the class of filth diseases—that is, it occurs most frequently and in the most malignant and fatal form where dampness and dirt do most prevail. The means of protection, therefore, obviously lie in avoidance of exposure to its presence and in the most scrupulous attention to cleanliness. Absolute isolation of the sick, the most rigid purity of surroundings, aided by disinfection when required, would probably exterminate the disease. The veteran sanitarian, Dr. E. M. Snow, of Providence, says that where there is abundant sunlight, dryness, cleanliness and pure air diphtheria cannot prevail. The same conditions will protect almost as effectually from most other dangerous diseases. Such being the truth, neither individuals nor communities can afford to ignore the fact that they are in a great degree responsible for their own health.

When a case occurs in any family, the sick person should be placed in a room apart from the other inmates of the house, and should be nursed as far as possible by one person only. The sick-chamber should be well warmed, well aired, and exposed to sunlight; its furniture should be such as can be cleansed without injury, and all superfluous things, as window and table drapery, woolen carpets, and the like, should be removed. The family should not mingle with other people. Visitors should be warned of the presence of a contagious disease, and children should not be admitted to the house.

All clothing removed from the patient should be at once placed in boiling water; instead of handkerchiefs, soft pieces of linen or cotton cloth should be used and immediately burned. Disinfectants should be placed in all the vessels which receive the expectoration or other discharges from the patient. Disinfectants should also be freely used in the sick-room. Those which destroy bad odors without causing others are best, such as solution of nitrate of lead and chloride of zinc.

The sick person should not mingle with others until fully recovered, and in case of scarlet fever until all roughness of the skin, due to the disease, has disappeared, because the exfoliated skin is especially infectious.

The disinfection of the sick-room should be thorough. The walls should be dry-rubbed and the cloths used burned without shaking, the ceiling should be scraped and lime-washed. The floor and woodwork should be washed with soap and water. The clothing or bedding used by the patient or nurse should be purified by boiling at least one hour, and should always be cleaned by themselves, and under no circumstances should they be sent to a laundry. In case of death the body should be placed as early as practicable in the coffin, with disinfectants, and the coffin tightly closed.

Children certainly, and in most cases adults, should not attend a funeral from a house in which a death from diphtheria or scarlet fever has occurred. But with suitable precautions it is not necessary that the burial should be strictly private, provided that the corpse be not in any way exposed.

Because children are especially liable to take and to spread these diseases, and because schools afford a free opportunity for this, every child from any family in which a case of either of these diseases has occurred should be excluded from school and be readmitted not sooner than one month from the beginning of the disease, except upon the certificate of some competent physician that it will be safe.

All the above precautions concern the dangers of contagion. But the continued prevalence of these diseases in any community is probable evidence of insanitary surroundings, and of sources of sickness, partially or wholly preventable. The most exemplary housewife, whose home is the very model of neatness and order, may have all her efforts defeated in a sanitary sense by a defective sink-trap or a leaky drain-pipe, or an overflowing cesspool, or an undrained cellar, or even by a heap of decaying garbage in her neighbor's yard.

Therefore, look well to the surroundings. Abolish filth, remove dampness and all sources of foul air, especially from living and sleeping rooms. Disinfect thoroughly all suspected places in yards and neglected corners.

The following disinfectant is both very cheap and efficient:

Take of copperas (sulphate of iron) five pounds, and dissolve in three gallons of water.

Why Blaine and Conkling Didn't Speak For Eleven Years.

Mr. Conkling desired to add that no commission, paper, or authority whatever was issued to him, except the letter of retainer which had been read. If the member from Maine had the least idea how profoundly indifferent to him his opinion was on the subject he had been discussing, or on any other subject, he thought he would hardly take the trouble to express it. He apologized to the House for the length of time he had occupied in consequence of being drawn into the matter by an interruption which he had before denounced to be ungentlemanly and impertinent, and having nothing whatever to do with the matter.

Mr. Blaine said he knew that this was what they called down East "running emptyings." The gentleman from New York could not get off on the technical pretense that he did not hold a commission as a Judge Advocate. Many an officer had led a brigade, a division or a corps with no more of a commission than such a one as the gentleman from New York held. As to the getleman's cruel sarcasm, Mr. Blaine continued: "I hope he will let me escape his disdain. His lordly pomposity, his grandiloquent swell, his majestic overtowering, his turkey-gobbler strutting have been so crushing to myself, and to all members of the House that I know it was an act of the grossest temerity on my part to venture on provoking them. But I know who was responsible for it all. I know that for the last five weeks an extra strut has seized the gentleman. It is not his fault—it is the fault of another. That gifted and satirical man, Theodore Tilton, of the New York Independent, was here spending some weeks and writing home letters, in which, among some serious things, he put some jocose things, among the cruelest of which was that the mantle of the late Winter Davis had fallen upon the member from New York. He (Conkling) took it as serious, and has since strutted more than usual. Well, the resemblance is great—as striking as Hyperion to a Satyr, Thersites to Hercules, mud to marble, a dung-hill to a diamond, a singed cat to a Bengal tiger, a whining puppy to a roaring lion. Shade of the mighty Davis, forgive the almost profanation of that jocose satire!
—Debate in the House in 1866.

The Nez-Perces.

The Nez-Perce comes into history as the white man's friend. In September, 1805, the Governmental exploring expedition of Capt. Wm. Clarke, of the First infantry, and Capt. Meriwether Lewis, Private Secretary of President Jefferson, crossed the Rocky mountains, found the various bands of Nez-Perces occupying the plains west of the Bitter Root mountains, and the valleys of the Salmon, Snake, and Clearwater rivers, where they had been from their earliest tradition, and where they all continued till this year of grace 1877. The history of the expedition tells us that when the explorers, "descending the last of the Rocky mountains," reached a beautiful open plain, they came upon an Indian village, "all of whose inhabitants gathered round to view, with a mixture of fear and pleasure, those wonderful strangers." Immediately they brought "a sumptuous treat; we returned the kindness of the people by a few small presents." Two miles distant was another village, and here also the party was "greeted with great kindness. The two villages," continues the account, "consist of about thirty double huts, and the inhabitants call themselves Chopunnish, or Pierced Nose." Among these hospitable people the Government's party spent upward of twenty days, leaving them then to push on to the Pacific. So much had they been impressed with the honesty of their new-found friends, that they left their horses with them, to be called for the following spring. The spring of 1806 came around, and with it, in April, the explorers returned. Toward the ocean they had hard experience with the Indians; but now, among the Wollawollaws, neighbors of the Nez Perces, they found a welcome "peculiarly acceptable after the cold, inhospitable treatment lately received." Passing on to the Chopunnish village, one of the first Indians they met gave Clarke a "very elegant mare, for which all he requested was a vial of eye-water;" another Indian brought two canisters of powder, buried by the party in autumn, which his dog had uncovered—"he had kept them safely, and had honesty enough to return them;" and then followed the recovery of the buried saddles and the horses left in Chopunnish charge. When they asked a fat horse for a lean one, desiring to eat the former—for the Chopunnish lived almost wholly on roots—"the hospitality of the chief was offended at the idea of an exchange; we might have as many horses as we wanted. Accordingly, they soon gave us two fat young horses without asking anything in return—an act of liberal hospitality much greater than any we have witnessed since crossing the Rocky mountains." Other presents of horses are recorded, both for food and riding. "Finding that these people are so kind and liberal, we ordered our men to treat them with great respect."—Galaxy for December.

Andrew Johnson.

H. V. Redfield writes from Greenfield, Tenn., the home of the late Andrew Johnson, to the Cincinnati Commercial:

Johnson's body rests beside that of his wife on a beautiful, cone-shaped hill, and over their graves an $8,000 monument, an arch spanning the two graves and surmounted by a shaft, is being erected. It will bear the inscription, "Andrew Johnson, seventeenth President of the United States," with date of birth and death. The body rests beneath, wrapped in an American flag, and buried with it is a copy of the constitution. Johnson left property of the value of about $100,000.

The little house where Mr. Johnson first went to housekeeping is standing. It contains two rooms, so low that a tall man could easily touch the ceiling, and a fireplace. He was then (1832) a journeyman tailor, getting from $5 to $8 a week, and this was his seven months' store-bill at the village store:

1832.	Andrew Johnson.	Dr.
Sept.	13—1½ pounds sugar, 30 cents; 1 crock, 9 cents; 2 tumblers, 25 cents; 2 quarts molasses, 50 cents; 2 mackerel, 25 cents. Total	$1.39
Sept.	15—Paid on account, $7.
Sept.	27—1½ pounds sugar	25
Oct.	15—Shirting	25
Oct.	19—2 packages needles, 25 cents; 1½ pounds sugar, 30 cents	55
Nov.	7—1½ pounds sugar	30
Nov.	10—21 pounds pork, 63 cents; 1½ pounds sugar, 30 cents	93
Nov.	10—Cr. by Parrott, $7.
Nov.	19—1½ pounds sugar	30
Nov.	22—9 buttons	25
Nov.	24—1½ pounds sugar	30
Nov.	28—1½ pounds sugar	30
Nov.	30—1 pound coffee, 30 cents; 1 pound sugar, 20 cents	50
Dec.	3—2 pounds sugar	40
Dec.	12—2 pounds sugar, 40 cents; pepper, 9 cents; ginger, 9 cents	58
Dec.	15—1½ pounds sugar	30
Dec.	17—2 pounds putty	25
Dec.	18—2 pounds sugar	40
1833.
Jan.	2—1½ yards shirting	25
Jan.	23—1½ pounds sugar	30
Feb.	12—Cheese	25
Feb.	14—Essence peppermint	25
March	2—Half pint brandy, 25 cents; 2 mackerel, 25 cents	50
March	15—Thomas Porter, by Andrew Johnson, trimming for one coat	2 18
March	25—1 pound coffee	30
March	30—1½ pounds sugar	30
March	31—34 pounds bacon	2.72
	Total store account for seven months	$13.69

The amount of sugar annually consumed in Great Britain is 900,000 tons, being about sixty pounds for every one of the population. Raw sugar, when imported, contains from 2 to 3 per cent of impurities. As much as three tons of stones have been found in a single cargo. According to experiments made by Dr Cameron, of Dublin, and Dr. Hassel, of London, as many as 100,000 mites are sometimes found in a pound of raw sugar.

A KANSAS HORROR.

Murder of a New York Merchant by His Crazy Son, Who Nurses the Headless Corpse in Solitude a Week Before Discovery.

[From the Kansas City Times.

Some time during the year 1875 a young man named Arthur G. Wells arrived at Merriweather's ranch, on Beaver creek, Kansas, and applied for work as herder or "cow-boy." Not wanting any assistance, Col. Merriweather referred the young man to some Texans who were herding about ten miles west. He returned a few days afterward and applied for board, and offered to attend the cattle herd gratis, if he could be permitted. Being a quiet, honest-looking youth, he was permitted to remain in the dug-out, or cave, and subsequently engaged in herding. It was noticed by the three men in charge of the herd that Wells acted strangely at times. He would remain out at night, and be absent sometimes for two or three days. He had a terrible abhorrence for writing or reading, and appeared to be always in dread of something. On his return from one of his long trips from the ranch, he returned with an old man whom he introduced as his father. They went away, and, after a few weeks' absence, returned to the neighborhood, and seemed to be engaged in purchasing cattle and in herding. The old man was not more communicative than the son, but seemed to devote his whole time and attention to the care and comfort of the boy. They did not want for money, and the old man made frequent trips to Wallace for letters. They soon ceased to excite remark or curiosity among the herders, and were left to themselves.

About three weeks ago the Wells herd, including about 150 head of cattle, was found scattered, and without a herder. This was remarked upon by others, and, as day after day the herd became separated, and was wandering off south, cattle-men in the vicinity began to wonder. Last Sunday a party of three cattle-men rode down to the Wells camp, in a ravine on Beaver creek, and were surprised to find three dead ponies and several dead dogs lying in front of the cave, or "dug-out," in the bank. No sign of life was visible outside. The door was found unfastened, and, on entering, a sight was presented which almost paralyzed them with horror. The headless body of old man Wells was found near the entrance to the cave in a very advanced state of decomposition. The young man was reclining in a berth or bunk in the farthest end of the dimly-lighted den, evidently asleep. When aroused, he sprung from the bed with something in his arms which was wrapped in a blanket. He attempted to shoot the intruders, but was promptly seized, and, in the struggle the head of the father rolled out of the blanket. He cried and begged for his horrible-looking pet, and, when his desire was gratified, sat on the floor and hugged the ghastly, putrid head to his bosom. He was a raving maniac. It required force to bind and control him, but this was promptly furnished.

An examination of the papers and correspondence showed that the old man was L. A. Wells, dealer in leather and hides, New York city. His son had been accused of some crime—the correspondence and the papers found seemed to indicate murder of his wife. His father had followed him out to Kansas, and was endeavoring to reclaim his boy, but lost his life in the attempt. Mr. Knowlton says the circumstances surrounding the affair are briefly these: The maniac son had killed his father and everything living about the ranch at least about a week before the discovery of the tragedy. He had lived alone with the corpse, evidently without food, as when discovered there was no sign of cooking having been done since the murder.

The Sale of Postage Stamps.

The Third Assistant Postmaster General, in his report, devotes considerable space to the abuse of the sale of stamps by country Postmasters of the fourth-class offices, which are allowed commissions on the sale of stamps, and says that they comprise 96 per cent. of the whole number. The commissions on the sale of stamps run from 40 to 60 per cent. The abuse appears when the Postmaster at a fourth-class office sells or trades stamps out of its delivery. The Assistant Postmaster General says that the vigilance that has been exercised has failed to provide an adequate remedy. Experience has shown that second only to the variety of expedients developed by Postmasters in effecting sales is the plausibility of the excuses assigned by them for needing unusual supplies, and, as there are over 30,000 Postmasters of the fourth class, the department must, to a great extent, accept the representations. Some interesting incidents are related of the the thriving business done by the country Postmasters. The two largest business houses in Salt Lake City, receiving 200 letters daily, have not bought $5 worth of stamps from the Salt Lake Postoffice in two years, but they have stamps constantly for sale; and one offered to furnish the Salt Lake Postmaster with $1,500 worth. A Mormon, from Southern Utah, coming into Salt Lake recently, bought new furniture for his entire house and paid for it in postage stamps.—Washington Cor. Chicago Tribune.

Dyed Cigars.

The artificial dyeing of cigars has yet attracted but little attention among smokers, and is conducted very quietly and is apparently harmless, yet under all circumstances it should be condemned. Every artificial change of a natural product like tobacco, to give it a better appearance, should of itself be branded as improper. When we must take into consideration the fact that the natural color of the cover has an essential influence upon the strength of the cigar, and consequently most smokers place great value on the color. By artificial coloring, on the contrary, the judgment is deceived, and it makes it impossible to determine the quality of the cigar from the color of the cover; for every dealer now has it in his power to make splendid dark cigars from his very light ones without any trouble. But we have especially to notice that now poor colored and refuse cigars may acquire a fine color, and may be sold for good ones. On all these grounds dyeing cigars must be ranked as an adulteration for the purpose of swindling the public. Unfortunately no means have yet been devised whereby the people can distinguish such cigars in all cases from the genuine. All we can do at present is to call attention to the fact and recommend caution in the matter.—Scientific American.

ALL SORTS.

There have been 253 Popes.

Fox-tail brushes for dusters are a new idea.

The subsidy projects before Congress aggregate $635,000,000.

An opium-smoking house has been established at Deadwood.

American women, according to a French journalist, live on [illegible].

A Baltimore paper wants to oblige every quack doctor to wear a bell.

Quart-pot street is the name of an avenue in Northampton, England.

The coming dresses for ladies doesn't touch the pavement by about three inches.

A Society for the Preservation of the Irish Language is now in full life in Dublin.

In 1797 the British Government was supporting 5,000 clerical and 2,950 lay emigres.

Pennsylvania reports a man six feet eight inches in height, with a weight of 270 pounds.

A 65-year-old father in Iowa has just kissed his latest girl-baby. It is his twenty-first.

In many parts of Germany taxes now amount to from 17 to 20 per cent. of ascertained income.

A camel race is to be run in Sutro, Nev., which will be followed by a five-mile race against horses.

A Georgia paper asks the State Legislature to pass a law making it an offense to give tobacco to minors.

There are 150,000 Chinese in California, one-fifth being women brought there for immoral purposes.

A baby elephant in New York is brought up on the bottle. The baby's bottle holds four gallons of milk.

An English musical journal says that 15 per cent. of the inmates of lunatic asylums are musicians and singers.

Forty-five millions is the estimate of the St. Louis Republican for the population of the model republic in 1880.

Nearly all the distinguished Californians of the day are said to be self-educated men, guiltless of college training.

FOR THE HOLIDAYS

LORD & TAYLOR
NEW YORK.

WE INVITE ATTENTION TO THE FOLLOWING DEPARTMENTS OF OUR ESTABLISHMENTS. THE LOW PRICES AT WHICH OUR GOODS ARE MARKED, HAVE SPECIAL REFERENCE TO THE HOLIDAY SEASON, AND BARGAINS WILL BE FOUND THROUGHOUT THE HOUSE, THIS SEASON'S IMPORTATIONS GIVING US AN UNEQUALED STOCK OF GOODS.

BLACK SILKS,
handsome and durable, all widths, $1.0? to $3.50. The GREAT AMERICAN INDESTRUCTIBLE SILK, $1.20, $1.35, and $1.50.

PLAIN COLORED SILKS,
new shades, commencing as low as 75c. per yard, and at $1.00, same as quality of last season at $1.25.
Fancy Broche and Damasse Figures of the new Paris shades, from $2.00 upwards. Trimming Satins at $1.00, worth $1.25.
THE PRICES AT WHICH WE OFFER OUR SILKS ARE ONE-QUARTER TO ONE-THIRD LESS THAN LAST SEASON.
☞ A SILK DRESS IS A HANDSOME HOLIDAY PRESENT.

IN DRESS GOODS
there is richer display of colorings and brilliant effects this season than for many years past.
The mixed COSTUME CLOTHS range in price from 50c. a yard to $3.00, and on low-priced DRESS GOODS, from 10c. a yard up, many of them being as effective as the heavier fabrics.

Shawls, Mantles and Wraps.
India Valley Cashmere Shawls from $100.00 up.
India Filled Centers at $50.00 and up.
Real Dacca, Chudda and Striped India Shawls, new designs, from $10.00 upwards. Also, full lines British, French and German Shawls in beautiful new styles, of the best and most reliable manufacture. Paris Mantles and Cloaks of the latest modes from $15.00 up, and Berlin from $5.00.

Ladies' and Children's Suits and Fine Under Clothing.
These departments embrace everything pertaining to Female Costume, suited to all ages and circumstances. For full particulars see catalogues.

HOSIERY.
Ladies', Misses', and Children's Hosiery from $1.50 a dozen, up to the finest goods. All the newest and prettiest designs in Hosiery are represented in our stock in Silk, Cotton and Merino.

FURS.
Alaska Seal Sacques, from $65.00 up.
Alaska Seal Muffs from $6.00 up.
Alaska Seal Boas, from $6.00 up.
Mink Muffs and Boas, from $12.00 a set, upward.
Silk Fur-lined Garments, from $15.00.
Alaska Sable Sets, from $7.50.
A good set of Furs as low as $5.00.
☞ A SET OF FURS IS A SUITABLE AS WELL AS SEASONABLE HOLIDAY PRESENT.

GENTS' FURNISHING.
DRESSING GOWNS, SMOKING JACKETS AND CAPS, SCARFS, TIES, UMBRELLAS, GLOVES, AND OTHER ARTICLES FOR GENTLEMEN, SUITABLE FOR THE HOLIDAYS TO WHICH THE ATTENTION OF LADIES IS INVITED.

GLOVES.
Kid, Silk, Lisle Thread and Merino Gloves of the new colors and shapes, in great variety.
Lord & Taylor's Kid Gloves, 2 buttons, warranted, at $1.00 per pair, price last season $1.50.

ALSO,
Lace, Cambric, Linen and Silk Handkerchiefs, and beautiful Neckerchiefs, all prices from 25c. upward, and all kinds Dress Trimmings to match our goods.

☞ Our Goods are all first-class. We make a point to fill all orders exactly and to the interest of purchasers. We guarantee all purchases to be satisfactory to buyers, and stand ready to remedy all errors. We invite orders, convinced that a first trial will insure us the regular custom hereafter.
Catalogues of our entire stock sent to any address on application.
All orders for Goods to be accompanied by the money, or where parties wish Goods will be sent by Express, C. O. D. Where the remittance is too large, we always return the difference.

Broadway & Twentieth St.
Grand, Chrystie & Forsyth
Streets, N. Y.

DAVENPORT THE DRUGGIST

Would call the attention of the public to his splendid stock of

PURE DRUGS AND MEDICINES!

Which have been selected with especial refference to the wants of this locality, and warranted fresh and genuine. Also to his fine stock of

HAIR OILS AND PERFUMERY.

The finest in the county. He also keeps a full stock of

Toilet Soaps, Face Powders, Combs, Brushes, Sponges, etc. Also Trusses and Supporters, in large varieties and a full Stock of DRUGGIST'S SUNDRIES.

SCHOOL BOOKS WALL PAPER AND CURTAINS!

The largest and most complete stock in Northern Indiana. Be sure to call on

DAVENPORT.

His stock is very complete and PRICES WAY DOWN. Also a fu line of.

GOLD PENS, ALBUMS, POCKET BOOKS, BLANK BOOKS, INK and STATIONERY.

Be sure and call on

DAVENPORT, THE DRUGGIST,
AUBURN, IND

FRUIT HOUSE PRICES!

Great Reduction on Sugars

All grades reduced 1 cent per pound; the lowest they have sold for fifteen years. Best white coffee sugar 10c, best coffee C 9c, choice yellow sugar 8c.

An immense stock of all goods for

CHRISTMAS AND NEW YEARS!

Candies, Nuts, Toys, Liquors and Cigars.

TEAS!

Fifty more chests of the choice 40c tea and 40 chests of the good 25c tea. We sell large amounts of these two teas; being good drawers, strong and well flavored We now sell more chests of tea in a month than we used to in a year, and this comes simply from our purchasing direct of the importers and selling direct to our customers, thereby saving the profit of the middle men, which is 20 to 40c on the pound.

Young Hyson Tea,	25, 50, 70, best 90 cents per pound
Gunpowder Tea,	60, 70, best 90 cents per pound
Imperial Tea,	40 60, best 90 cents per pound
Oolong Tea,	25, 60, best 70 cents per pound
Japan Uncolored Tea.	35, 50, best 70 cents per pound

COFFEE! COFFEE!

Our Best Rio, 22 cents. Good Fine Rio, 20 cents. Old Government Java, 30 cents.

SYRUPS.

Cuba 40 and 50 cents. New Orleans, 50 and 75 cents White Drips, 75 cts. and $1.

RAISENS, and ZANTEE CURRENTS for CHRISTMAS CAKE, CITRON, LEMON and ORANGE PEEL.

Valencia raisins per pound 6c, Best layers raisins 12½c. Zantee currents 9c Leghorn citron 25c. Orange and Lemon peal 30c,

CANDIES.

Toy candies of all kinds. Stick candy per pound 15c. French mixed 18c. Toy candy all sorts and varieties 30c. Toys for Santa Claus from a penny whistle to a nice album to make presents with a thousand different things to amuse the little ones—Dogs, cats, rats, mice, birds, elephants, lions, tigars, drums, wagons, horses, Chineese lanterns, pistol caps, &c., something for every little one in the country.

And for Christmas tree candles we have a large assortment of every color, from ½ cent to 2 cents each or 50c per box.

OILS. OILS. OIL!!

Coal Oil per gallon, 20 cents.	Headlight Oil per gallon 25 cents.	Lard Oil, per gallon, $1.00
Fish Oil per gallon, $1.00,	Best Golden Machine Oil per gal. 70c.	Machine Oil per gal. 30ct

Nuts for Christmas and New Years.

Brazil nuts 10c. Filberts, quart 15c. Almons, quart 25c. English walnuts, quart 15c. Pecans, quart 12 1-2c. Roasted pea nuts quart 5c.

Liquors of all Kinds for Medical use Whisky, Rum, Brandy, Gin, Wines and Ales.

Good old bourbon $1 and $1.25. 2 years old $1.40 and 1.50. Best old 76 for medical use $2.50. Sherry Wine as good as any in the country $1.50. Port wine best in the market $1.50. California Angelica wine best $1.50. Gin $1.50 and $2.50. Dublin and Londen Porter 22c. Scotch 22c.

TOBACCOS AND CIGRS.

A No. 1 smoking for 30c per pound. Choice fine cut 50c per pound. No. 1 Plug Tobacco 50c per pound.

We have a large assortment and can sell a good cigar at $1.25 per box. And a choice No. 1 cigar for $1.75 per e00.

FRESH OYSTERS LOWER THIS YEAR THAN MEAT—We sell a fine Oyste at 12½. No. 1 full count saloon oyster 20c. Large A standard 30c.

You can save at least 25 per cent. on the dollar at the

Fruit House, Fort Wayne, Ind

JOHN L. DAVIS,

OF THE

PIONEER HARDWARE STORE,

Would respectfully announce that he has made large additions in every department, and is prepared to furnish everything in the Hardwase line

He keeps a full stock of

BUILDING MATERIAL.

Whichhe can sell at prices to suit the times. All kinds of

STOVES and TINWARE

on hand. He keeps a first-class TINMR and prepared todo all kinds of Eaves Trough hangnig Roofing, on short notice, and in a workmanlike manner.

MAIN STREET, OPPOSITE COURT HOUSE AUBURN, IND

EXCELSIOR HARDWARE.

GRAND CLEARANCE SALE OF

STOVES, TINWARE, AXES, CROSS-CUT SAWS, &C., &C.,

That must be sold at some price. We have every kind of saws on the market and parties wanting anything in the

SAW, AXE, STOVE AND TINWARE LINE,

Will do well to call on us before buying elsewhere. We have the goods and can suit you in kinds, quality and the best of all we

GUARANTEE PRICES

Lower than the lowest. We have added Iron and Steele,

SEAT AND CARRIAGE SPRINGS,

and a general line of Carriage and Wagon Hardware,

WOOD WORK.

Sleigh and Sled Runners, Rims, Hubs and Spokes,

and a general line of Wagon, Carriage and Blacksmiths goods, and will sell just as low

And a Little Lower

Than you can buy the same quality of goods elsewhere. We b u for cash and sell for cash and therefore it is clear that we can compete with any house in the state selling Hardware. Come everybody and cary away goods at almost your own prices. This is no humbug, but mean just what we say. Come and see for yourselves Remember the place,

EXCELSIOR HARDWATE STORE

N rth Side Public Square, AUBURN. IND.

W. H. KIBLINGER & CO.

DOWN! DOWN! DOWN!

FROM 10 TO 25 PER CENT.

HARNESS, SADELES,

COLLARS, WHIPS, &c.,

At my new shop on seventh street, opposite Court House, in old Post Office building. Come and see me and I will sell you a good article for less money than you ever heard of before. All work warranted.

G. RHODENBAUGH

$200.000.

GREATEST In order to clear out our stock of very superior Gold-plated Jewelry valued at over $200,000, we will send as below, 20 Pieces, all warranted Gold-plated for $1.00. 1 pair Gold Stone Sleeve Buttons; 1 pair Engraved Sleeve Buttons; 1 set Pointed Studs; 1 set Amethyst Studs; 1 Wedding Ring; 1 Engraved Band Finger Ring; 1 Amethyst Stone Ring, Inlaid BARGAIN with Gold; 1 Elegant Ring, marked "Friendship;" 1 Amethyst Stone Scarf Pin, Inlaid with Gold; 1 Silvered Hat Pin; 1 set Ladies' Jet and Gold Pin and Drops; 1 Misses' set Jet and Gold; 1 Collar Stud; 1 set Handsome Rosebud Ear Drops; 1 Gents' Elegant Lake George Diamond Stud; 1 Cardinal Red Bead Necklace; 1 pair Ladies Amethyst Stone Ear Drops, EVER Inlaid with Gold; 1 Ladies' Ornamented Jet Brooch; 1 Fancy Scarf Ring and Elegant Watch Chain. Take your choice, the entire lot of 20 pieces, sent Post-paid for $1.00 or any 8 pieces you choose for 50 cents. Now is the time to make money. These can easily be retailed at $10.00. CLUB PREMIUM. To any OFFERED one ordering 12 Lots at $1.00 each, we will present Free, an Open Face Coin Silver Watch as Premium. WATCH AND JEWELRY CIRCULAR FREE.

NOTICES OF THE PRESS.

Our cotemporary, the Boston Globe, speaks very highly of both advertiser and goods as being honorable in his dealings, and reliable in his goods, a commendation we heartily endorse.—St. Louis Dispatch, December 7, 1876.

The house is a thoroughly reliable one in every repect.—Boston Globe, Oct. 25, 1876.

His reputation for honesty, fair-dealing, and liberality is unequaled by any advertiser in this city.—N. Y. Day Book, December 16, 1876.

Advertises more and sells cheaper than any man in New York.—Herald, April 13, 1877.

F. STOCKMAN, 27 Bond Street, New York.

DAY'S AGUE TONIC

CURES EVERY FORM OF CHILLS, OR MONEY RETURNED.

DAY'S TONIC Cures Chills and Fever.

DAY'S TONIC Cures Dumb Chills.

DAY'S TONIC Supersedes Quinine.

DAY'S TONIC Cures Old Chronic Chills.

DAY'S TONIC Is pleasant for Children.

DAY'S TONIC Cleanses the Stomach.

DAY'S TONIC Acts on Liver and Bowels.

DAY'S TONIC Don't Buzz the Head.

DAY'S TONIC Don't contain Quinine.

DAY'S TONIC

Is a new innovation, and possesses advantages heretofore unknown and unclaimed by others.

It does not contain Quinine or any poison; it does not produce buzzing or roaring in the head, which follows the use of Quinine; it is retained by delicate stomachs; it acts upon the liver and bowels without the use of any other medicine; it never fails to cure, and our agents are authorized to return the money in each and every case of failure; one bottle will cure two cases. Try it and see. Sold by all Druggists at $1.00.

J. P. DROMGOOLE & CO., Proprietors, Louisville, Ky.

RAILROADS.

Lake Shore & Mich Southern R R

AIR LINE DIVISION.

On and after Nov. 19 1877, trains will run as follows:

GOING WEST.

	Special Ex.	Pacific Ex.	Accm
Toledo	11 05 a m	12 01 a m	5 30 p m
Wauseon	12 12 "	1 07 "	6 35 "
Bryan	12 55 "	[illegible]	7 [illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Waterloo	1 60 "	2 60 "	8 57 "
Sedan	"	"	"
Corunna	"	"	9 15 "
Kendallville	2 15 "	3 08 "	9 30 "
Ligonier	2 55 "	3 40 "	"
Goshen	3 26 "	4 12 "	"
Elkhart	3 40 "	4 25 "	"

GOING EAST.

Elkhart	1 10 p m	9 50 p m	"
Goshen	1 30 "	10 10 "	"
Ligonier	1 58 "	10 42 "	"
Kendallville	2 23 "	11 17 "	6 00 a m
Corunna	"	"	6 15 "
Sedan	"	"	"
Waterloo	2 57 "	11 45 "	6 38 "
Butler	3 12 "	12 01 a m	6 54 "
Bryan	3 45 "	12 40 "	7 38 "
Wauseon	4 25 "	1 25 "	8 34 "
Toledo	5 40 "	2 40 "	10 00 "

CHAS. PAINE, Gen. Supt.
J. W. CARY, Gen Tic. Agt
J. R. CURTIS, Division Su

Pittsburg, Ft. W. & C. R. R

Condensed time card Nov. 11, 1877.

GOING WEST.

	No 1 Fast ex.	No. 7 Pac. ex.	No. 3 Nigh ex	No 5 Mail.
Pittsburgh	11 45 pm	9 00 am	1 50 pm	6 00 am
Rochester	12 53 am	10 15	2 56	7 45
Alliance	3 10	12 50 pm	5 35	11 00
Orrville	4 45	2 26	7 12	12 55 pm
Mansfield	7 00	4 40	9 20	3 11
Crestl'a ar.	7 30	5 15	9 45	3 50
" lv.	7 50	5 40	9 55
Forest	9 25	7 55	11 25
Lima	10 40	9 00	12 25 am
Ft. Wayne	1 30 pm	11 55	2 40
Plymouth	3 45	2 46 am	4 55
Chicago	7 00	6 30	7 58

GOING EAST

	No. 4 Night ex	No. 2 Fast ex.	No. 6 Pac. ex	No. 8 Mail
Chicago	9 10 pm	9 00 am	5 15 pm
Plymouth	2 46 am	11 25	9 05
Ft. Wayne	6 55	2 15 pm	11 30
Lima	8 55	4 10	1 30 am
Forest	10 10	5 20	2 37
Crestl'e ar.	11 45	6 55	4 20
" lv.	12 05 pm	7 15 pm	4 30	6 05am
Mansfield	12 35	7 44	5 00	6 55
Orrville	2 26	9 31	7 10	9 18
Alliance	4 00	11 15	9 00	11 20
Rochester	6 22	1 20 am	11 06	2 00pm
Pittsburgh	7 30	2 30	12 15	3 30

Trains Nos 3 and 6 run daily. Train No. 1 leaves Pittsburg daily except Sunday. Train No 4 leaves Chicago daily except Saturday. All others daily except Sunday.

F. R. MYERS,
Gen Pass. and Ticket Agent.

Detroit, Eel River & Illinois R R.

TAKE EFFECT Nov. 19 1877.

GOING EAST.

Stations.	MAIL No. 2,	ACCOM. No. 4,	LOCAL FT No. 8,
lv. Logansport	8 15am	7 30pm	6 20am
Mexico	8 37	8 25	7 40
Denver	9 06	9 06	8 25
Chili	9 17	9 12	8 47
Roann	9 35	9 37	9 35
Laketon	9 58	10 00	10 10
N. Manchester	10 05	10 17	10 35
Liberty Mills	10 17	10 30	11 00
Collamer	10 31	10 50	11 40
S. Whitley	10 35	10 55	11 50
Columbia City	11 01	11 31	12 50
Col'en's	11 20	11 55	2 05
Churubusco	11 34	12 12	2 31
La Otto	11 57	12 42	3 25
Cedar Creek	12 06	12 33	3 48
Auburn Junct'n	12 22	1 12	4 25
Auburn	12 25	1 17	4 35
Butler	1 00am	2 00am	5 45pm

Going West.

Stations	No. 1.	No.	No. 7.
Logansport ar	7 00pm	1 00pm	6 30pm
Mexico	6 26	12 00	5 40
Denver	6 17	11 46	5 20
Chili	6 10	11 35	5 00
Roann	5 57	11 12	4 15
Laketon	5 48	10 50	3 30
North Mancester	5 33	10 35	3 00
Liberty Mills	5 27	10 17	2 35
Collamar	5 15	9 57	2 03
South Whitley	5 12	9 52	1 55
Columbia City	4 50	9 18	12 10
Collin's	4 32	8 53	11 27
Cherubusco	20	8 30	10 55
La Otto	3 55	8 10	10 05
Cedar Creek	3 45	8 00	9 48
Auburn Junction	3 27	7 40	9 15
Auburn	3 22	7 35	8 30
Butler lv	2 45pm	6 35am	7 15

FRANK J. HECKER,
Gen. Sup't

Baltimore & Ohio Railroad.

IN EFFECT Nov. 6 1877.

GOING WEST.

STATIONS:	Express	Express	Com'l A
lv New York	8 15am	8 [illegible]pm
Philadelphia	11 45	11 30
Baltimore	5 15pm	[illegible]am
Washington	6 55	8 40
Wheeling	8 20am	10 50pm	4 30pm
Bellaire	8 50am	11 15	4 50
Barnesville	10 10	12 20 am	6 12
Cambridge	11 18	1 2[illegible]	7 30
Zanesville	12 25pm	2 35	8 50
ar Newark	1 30	3 40	10 00
Columbus	3 20	5 20
Shawnee	4 30	10 10
lv Columbus	12 40
Newark	2 20	[illegible]	5 50pm
Mt Vernon	3 19		7 15
Mansfield	4 54		11 25
Shelby	5 11		12 22am
Monroeville	6 13		3 00
ar Sandusky	7 00		4 50
lv Chicago Junction	6 00	4	6 15
Republic	6 45	1	8 19
Tiffin	7 15	8 30	9 56
Fostoria	7 45	9 10	10 [illegible]
Deshler	8 50	10 09	1 35pm
Defiance	9 52	11 06
Hicksville	10 41	11 53
Auburn Junction	11 22	12 36pm
Garrett	11 40pm	1 05
Avilla
Albion	12 17am	1 46
Milford Junction
Walkertown Junction	2 33	3 53
Chicago	5 40	7 00

GOING EAST.

Chicago	8 50am	9 40pm
Walkertown Junction	12 26pm	10 54pm	11 20am
Milford Junction			2 37pm
Albion	2 30	3 10	4 15
Avilla	2 40	3 30	4 55
Garrett	3 20	3 55	6 00am
Auburn Junction	3 28	4 03.	6 18
Hicksville	4 07	4 42	7 42
Defiance	4 54	5 27	9 15
Deshler	5 48	6 23	11 25
Fostoria	6 47	7 23	2 10pm
Tiffin	7 15	7 54	3 20
Republic	7 36
Sandusky
Monroeville
Chicago Junction	8 40	9 30	1 25
Shelby Junction	9 15	10 06	2 55
Mansfield	9 44	10 37	3 55
Mt. Vernon	11 13	12 10pm	7 15
Ar Newark	12 15a m	1 15	9 20
lv Columbus	5 50	3 20
Shawnee
Newark	12 30am	2 05	5 55am
Lv Zanesville	1 35	3 10	7 10
Cambridge	2 37	4 08	8 14
Barnesville	3 38	5 36	9 20
Ar Bellaire	4 50	6 20	10 40
Wheeling	5 00	7 40	11 55
Washington	7 20pm	7 50am
Baltimore	8 40	9 20
Philadelphia	3 10am	1 45pm
New York	6 45	5 10pm

Zanesville Accommodation leaves Zanesville daily except Sunday at 6:40 a. m., and arrives a Columbus at 9:45 a. m.

Express trains run daily, other trains daily except Sunday.

L. M COLE, Gen. Tick. Agt.

Ft. Wayne, Muncie & Cin. R. R.

Muncie Route.

THE SHORT LINE TO INDIANAPOLIS,
—AND—
THE SOUTHWEST.

Time Card in effect Nov. 18, 1877.

STATIONS.	GOING SOUTH. 1. Mail.	3. Express.	5. Accom
FORT WAYNE	1 00 pm	6 00 pm	....
Bluffton	2 10	7 15 pm	....
Montpelier	2 47	7 57 pm	....
Hartford	3 17	8 24 pm	....
MUNCIE	4 15	9 20 pm	8 40 a m
New Castle	5 00	....	7 [illegible]
Cambridge City	5 40	....	9 45
Connersville	6 2[illegible]	....	10 [illegible]
Cincinnati	10 00 pm	....	12 35 p m
INDIANAPOLIS	4 05	11 25 pm
Louisville	10 05 pm	5 30 am
Terre Haute	10 36 pm	1 50 am
St. Louis	7 35 am	6 30 am

STATIONS	GOING NORTH [illegible]	6 Express.	4 Accom.
St. Louis	....	6 45 am	....
Terre Haute	....	1 36 pm	....
Louisville	....	7 17 pm	....
Cincinnati	7 30 am	....	4 10 pm
Indianapolis	....	4 25 am	pm
Connersville	10 40 am	....	pm
Cambridge City	11 15 am	....	pm
New Castle	11 53 am	....	50 pm
Muncie	12 41 pm	8 20 am	4 0 pm
Hartford	1 36 pm	9 15 am	....
Montpelier	2 04 pm	9 41 am	....
Bluffton	2 48 pm	10 19 am	....
Fort Wayne	3 50 pm	11 25 am	....

All trains daily except Sunday. Trains run on Columbus time Through cars attached to trains 1 and 4, and run between Fort Wayne and Indianapolis via Muncie.

GEO. W. MULLEN, Act'g Gen. Tick. Ag't.
W. W. WORTHINGTON, Gen. Supt.

Ft. Wayne, Jackson & Sag. R. R

Short Line Between

Michigan and the South.

Time card in effect Nov. 18—run by Chicago time

Going South.

Stations	Mail	Exp.	Fr't.
Saginaw	3 35 pm	7 15 am
Lansing	7 20 pm	10 00 am
Grand Rapids		6 30 am	11 50 am
Detroit	9 50 pm	7 00 am
Jackson	6 55 am	11 40 am	5 10 pm
Jonesville	8 10	12 50 pm	7 20
Bankers	8 28	1 07	7 47
Reading	8 44	1 28	8 15
Angola	9 45	2 12	9 45
Waterloo	10 28	2 47	10 50
Auburn	10 40	3 01	11 22
Auburn Junction	10 46	3 06	11 35
Ft Wayne	11 40 am	4 00 pm	1 00 am
Indianapolis	6 05 pm	11 20 pm
Louisville	10 50 pm	6 30 am
St. Louis	7 25 am	8 30 am

Going North.

St. Louis		6 45 pm
Louisville		7 15 pm
Indianapolis		4 25 am
Dep. Fort Wayne	4 15 pm	11 15 am	1 30 am
Auburn Junction	5 15	12 05 pm	3 00
Auburn	5 18	12 08	3 03
Waterloo	5 32	12 19	4 05
Ar Angola	6 35	12 57	5 35
Reading	7 35	1 49	7 15
Bankers	7 47	2 04	7 40
Jonesville	8 05	2 30	8 10
Jackson	9 20 pm	3 40	10 00 am
Detroit	5 35 am	6 30	1 00 pm
Grand Rapids	7 05	1 00	4 30 pm
Lansing		5 55 pm
Saginaw		9 12 pm

All trains daily except Sunday.

P. S. LOOMIS, Pres't
S. K. HOOPER Gen. Ticket Ag't.

JAS. CLIFFORD,

WATERLOO, IND.

Keeps constantly on hand the best and choicest brands of all kinds of

Wines and Liquors,

Cigars, Tobaccos, &c.

He also has, in connection with the above a first class

BILLIARD HALL.

To our citizens and the traveling public, we would say that this is the popular resort at W oo. First door south of the railroad

---

GOLD. Great chance to make money. If you can't get gold you can get greenbacks. We need a person in every town to take subscriptions for the largest, cheapest and best illustrated family publication in the world. Any one can become a successful agent. The most elegant works of art given free to subscribers. The price is so low that almost every body subscribes. One Agent reports making over $150 in a week. A lady agent reports taking over 400 subscribers in ten days. All who engage make money fast You can devote all your time to the business, or only your spare time. You need not be away from home over night. You can do it as well as others. Full directions and terms free. Elegant and expensive outfit free If you want profitable work send us your address at once. It costs nothing to try the business. No one who engages fails to make great pay. Address "The People's Journal," Portland Maine.

Dr. A. G. OLIN'S Private Hospital, 187 East Washington St., Chicago, Ills. for the cure of all Diseases of a Private nature, resulting from early abuses or infection of either sex. Seminal Weakness producing Emissions, Loss of Memory, Impaired Sight, Lost Manhood or Impotency, Nervous Debility, permanently cured; diseases of the Bladder, Kidneys, Liver, Lungs, Asthma, Catarrh, Piles, all Chronic Diseases, and DISEASES OF FEMALES, yield to his treatment. Dr. Olin has had a life-long experience, and cures where others fail. He is a graduate of the Reformed School, uses no mercury, has the largest practice in the U. S. LADIES requiring treatment with private home and board, call or write. Every convenience for patients. Send fifty cents for sample of Rubber Goods and circular of important information by express. DR. OLIN'S Female Pills, $3 per Box. Consultation free.

MARRIAGE GUIDE 272 pages. Secrets & information for the young and middle aged of both Sexes, on all diseases of a private nature. Valuable advice to the married and those contemplating marriage. How to be healthy and truly happy in the married relation. Everybody should get this book. Price 50 cents, to any address, sealed.

A PHYSIOLOGICAL

View of Marriage!

WOMAN AND MARRIAGE A Guide to Wedlock and confidential Treatise on the duties of marriage and the causes that unfit for it; the secrets of Reproduction and the Diseases of Women. A book for private, considerate reading. 260 pages, price 50 cts.

A PRIVATE MEDICAL ADVISER! On all disorders of a Private Nature arising from Self Abuse, Excesses, or Secret Diseases, with the best means of cure, 224 large pages, price 50 cts.

A CLINICAL LECTURE on the above diseases and those of the Throat and Lungs, Catarrh, Rupture, the Opium Habit, &c., price 10 cts.

Either book sent postpaid on receipt of price; or all three, containing 500 pages, beautifully illustrated, for 75 cts.

Address DR. BUTTS, No. 12 N. 8th St. St. Loui , Mo

CHRONIC Diseases Cured. New paths marked out by that plainest of all books—"Plain Home Talk and Medical Common sense,"—nearly 1,000 pages, 200 illustrations by Dr. E. B. FOOTE, of 120 Lexington Avenue, N. Y. Purchasers of this book are at liberty to consult its author in person or by mail free. Price by mail $3.25 for the standard edition, or $1.25 for the popular edition, which contains all the same matter and illustrations. Contents free Agents wanted. MURRY HILL PUBLISHING CO. 129 East 28th St. N. Y.

$45 PREMIUM WATCH AND CHAIN—a stem-winder. Free with every order. Outfit free. J. B. Gaylord & Co., Chicago, Ill.

$3 GOLD PLATED WATCHES. Cheapest in the known world. Sam. le Watch Free to Agents. Address, A. COULTER & Co., Chicago.

OPIUM and Morphine Habit absolutely and speedily cured. Painless; no publicity. Send stamp for particulars. Dr. CARLTON, 187 Washington St., Chicago, Ill.

$2500 A YEAR. Agents wanted. Business legitimate. Particulars free. Address J. WORTH & CO., St Louis, Mo.

Recorder's Office

THE AUBURN COURIER.

Devoted to the Interests of the Democratic Party and to the Collection of Local and General News.

Volume 8. AUBURN, DeKALB COUNTY INDIANA, JANUARY 17th, 1878. Number 3.

The Auburn Weekly Courier

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY, BY

TOM. C. MAYS.

One Year.........$2. | Six Months.......$1.

Advertising Rates.

Space.	1m.	3m.	6m.	1y.
1 Square	2 00	5 00	7 00	12 00
¼ Column........	6 00	12 00	18 00	30 00
½ Column..........	10 00	16 00	30 00	60 00
1 Column.......	15 00	30 00	50 00	100 00

Local Notices 10 cents per line, first insertion 5 cents each insertion thereafter. Business cards five Dollars.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY

TERMS OF COURT.

COURTS IN DEKALB CO.	COURTS IN STEUBEN CO
4th Monday in February	1st Monday in Febr'y
3rd Monday in May.	4th Monday in April.
4th Monday in Septem'r	1st Monday in Sept'r
3rd Monday in Decem'r	4th Monday in Nov'r.

ATTORNEYS.

D. D. MOODY. F. V. HOFFMAN.

Moody and Hoffman,

ATTORNEYS AT LAW. Office over First National Bank, Auburn. Ind.

H. C. PETERSON,

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public. Office over Davis' hardware store, Auburn, Ind.

J. W. RICKEL,

ATTORNEY AT LAW Auburn, Ind. Special attention given to collections. Office over First National Bank.

A. F. PINCHIN

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public, Butler, DeKalb Co., Ind. Insurance and real estate business promptly attended to.

GUY PLUM

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public. Office in the Court House. Special attention paid to the collection of claims. Also agent for Home Insurance Company.

BEST and McCLELLAN.

ATTORNEYS AT LAW, Waterloo, Ind. Will practice in the Courts of DeKalb & Steuben counties. Liberal Advances Made on all first-class Claims left in our hands for collection.

R. A. FRANKS. O. E. HUBBELL.

Franks & Hubbell,

ATTORNEYS at law, will practice in DeKalb and adjoining counties. Special attention given to the collection of claims, settlements of decedent estates and conveyance. Office on Broadway opposite Haskins & Son's livery stable, Butler, Ind.

R. WES. M'BRIDE, J. L. MORLAN, W. H. LEAS

McBRIDE, MORLAN and LEAS

ATTORNEYS AT LAW, NOTARIES PUBLIC, COLLECTING AND INSURANCE AGENCY. Office over Fisher's Clothing Store, corner of Wayne and Marion streets, Waterloo, Ind. Will practice in all parts of the State. Especial Attention given to collections in DeKalb, Steuben, LaGrange and Noble counties.

DANIEL Z. HOFFMAN.

NOTARY PUBLIC, writer of deeds, mortgages, &c., making abstracts and looking up titles, attending to collecting. Also agent for Niagara Fire Insurance Company. Office with County Recorder, Auburn, Ind.

PHYSICIANS.

DR. J. A. COWAN,

PHYSICIAN & SURGEON, Auburn, Ind. Office on Main street, over Central Grocery.

DR. T. G. MATHENY.

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, office up stairs in McIntyre's block, Auburn, Ind. All calls promptly attended to.

W. S. ALLEN.

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, Office West of Court House, on Main Street, over Eldridge's Store. Same office lately occupied by Dr. Cowan.

Dr. T. J. Dills,

Especial attention given to Diseases of the EYE and EAR. Rooms 1 and 2 Odd Fellows' building. Office hours—8:30 to 12 a. m.; 1 to 3 p. m. 7 to 8 p. m. Fort Wayne, Ind.

DR. TRITCH,

HOMEOPATHIC PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON Special attention given to Surgery and Chronic diseases. Office in Case's Block, Auburn Indiana.

DR. S. B. JOHNSTON.

DENTIST, WATERLOO, INDIANA. Does all work in the line of his profession at as low figures as possible. Special attention given to gold filling and making new teeth. All work warranted.

W. T. KNAPP, M. D.

Formerly of Chicago, Ill.,

HOMŒOPATHIC PHYSICIAN,

AUBURN, INDIANA.

Office at Residence, Ralston Property, Seventh Street.

Special attention given to

CHRONIC DISEASES

-AND-

DISEASES OF CHILDREN.

Calls promptly attended, day or night, city or country. Consultation in German or English.

HOTELS.

BUTT'S HOTEL,

FORMERLY THE BIGLER HOUSE. JOHN BUTT & A. B. RICHARDS. Proprietors, Waterloo, Ind. Free omnibus to and from all trains. Good sample rooms on first floor.

Central House,

MR. M. C. MARKEL, Prop. Corner Main and Seventh streets. Good Sample Rooms for Drummers.

TREMONT HOUSE.

WASHINGTON, D. C. Accommodates three hundred guests. Terms $2.50 per day. Located corner Second street and Indiana Avenue, in full view of the Capitol City Hall.

F. P. HILL.

SANDS HOUSE.

COR. WABASH AVE. & MADISON ST. CHICAGO, ILL. New House, elegantly furnished. Only $2.00 per day.

GEO. S. PALMER, Late of City Hotel, Clerk.

O. SANDS, Proprietor.

NOTICE OF ADMINISTRATION.

Notice is hereby given, [illegible] has been appointed by the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court of the State of Indiana, Executor of the will of Hugh Wait deceased, late of said county. Said estate is supposed to be solvent.

GUY PLUM, Administrator.

December 10th, 1877.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Robert Knott is plaintiff, and Robert M. Lockhart et al are defendants requiring me to make the sum fourteen hundred dollars, ($1400.00) with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, JANUARY 26th, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M. of said day, at the door of the Court House, in DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years of the following real estate to-wit:

As lot number thirty-six (36) in the original plat of the town of Waterloo, in DeKalb county Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interests and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.

Penfield & Emanuel Attorneys for plaintiff.

Auburn, Jan. 1st, 1878. Pr. fee $7.00

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Orlando T. Letcher and William Letcher are plaintiffs, and Martin and Mary Maze, are defendants requiring me to make the sum of Six Thousand and Fifty Two dollars and Seventy-One cents, ($6052.71) with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, JANUARY 19th, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House in Auburn DeKalb county, Indiana the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

North-east quarter of section twenty-four, (24) township thirty-four, (34), north of range fourteen (14) east, excepting one acre off the north west corner of said above described real estate, deeded to James Leonard, balance of said land to contain 160 acres more or less, in De Kalb county, Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.

By THOS. D. GROSS, Deputy.

Rose & Hartman, Attorneys for plff.

Auburn, Dec 26th, 1877. Pf. $8.75.

By THOS. D. GROSS, Deputy.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Jacob Sibert is plaintiff and John McClellan is defendant requiring me to make the sum of one hundred and sixty-three dollars and seventy-five cents, ($163.75) with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, JANUARY 19th, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House in DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

Part of out lot number six, (6), in Kuhlman's second addition to the town of Auburn, DeKalb county, Ind., commencing at a point on the south line of said out lot, one hundred and forty (140) feet west of the south east corner of said lot, and running thence west seventy (70) feet on said south line thence north ninety (90) feet to the north line of said lot, thence east seventy (70) feet on the north line of said lot, thence south ninety (90) feet to the place of beginning.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.

By THOS. D. GROSS, Deputy.

Rose & Hartman, Attorneys for plaintiff,

Auburn, Dec. 26th, 1877. Pf. $8.75.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of an Execution to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Samuel B. Wood is plaintiff and John Treesh is defendant requiring me to make the sum of Three Hundred and Twenty-Two dollars and Thirty-eight cents, $322.38, with interest on said judgment and costs I will expose at public sale to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, JANUARY 19th, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m., and 4 o'clock p. m. at the door of the Court House of DeKalb County Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years of the following real estate, to-wit:

Lot number thirty two (32) in Brandt & Ashley's addition to the town of Auburn, lot number twenty-seven (27) in the Western addition to the town of Auburn, and part of lot number ninety-seven (97) in the original plat of the town of Auburn, described as follows, to-wit: Commencing twenty-two (22) feet north of the south-west corner of said lot ninety-seven (97) thence north twenty-two 22 feet, thence east eighty 80 feet, thence south twenty-two 22 feet thence west eighty 80 feet to the place of beginning, all in De Kalb county and State of Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said judgment, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose at public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said judgment, interest and costs.

Sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.

By THOS. D. GROSS, Deputy.

W. H. Dills, Att'y. for Plaintiff.

Auburn, Ind., Dec. 26, 1877. P. fee $9.75

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of an Execution to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Wm. Dunn is plaintiff, and Ann M. Spencer is defendant requiring me to make the sum of Five Thousand, Nine Hundred and Two Dollars and Seventy-Six Cents $5902.76 with interest on said judgment and costs I will expose at public sale to the highest bidder on

SATURDAY, JANUARY 19th, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m. and 4 o'clock p. m. of said day at the door of the Court House of DeKalb County, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate to-wit:

Lots number twenty-eight, fifty-two, fifty-three, fifty-nine, eighty-two, eighty-three, one hundred and one, one hundred and thirty, one hundred and thirty three, one hundred and thirty-four, one hundred and thirty-one, one hundred thirty-nine, one hundred and forty, one hundred and fifty-seven, and one hundred and fifty eight, [28, 52, 53, 59, 82, 83, 101, 130, 133, 134, 131, 139, 140, 157 and 158,] all in the western addition to the town of Auburn, De Kalb county Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said judgment interest and costs, I will at the same time and place, expose at public sale, the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.

By Thos. D. Gross, deputy.

Zollers & Zollers, Att'ys for Plaintiff.

Auburn, Indiana, Dec. 26th, 1877. Pr. fee $9.50.

Auburn Courier.

Local and Miscellaneous.

The motto of lovers: 'E pluri bus, yum, yum.'

Hank Little has got a hoss. Who is on the trade?

Goshen, Ind., now has three papers. Two too many.

Next Tuesday is the accepted time for the club hop.

Mr Kapp's little boy is quite sick with brain fever.

Mr. C. Altenberg has taken up his abode in the west again.

J. J. Martin has received the appointment of agent on the B. & O.

Hank Altenberg attracts the attention of the boys with his mail agent suit on.

Mr. Baker, editor of the Columbia City Commercial, was married last week.

Over 12,000 bushels of grain were taken in at the Eel River Elevators, last Friday.

The marshal had his eye on several tramps last Friday. Sam is always up and adoing.

Mr. Frank Patterson, of Angola, passed through the city Friday last, on his way east.

F. Palmer, who has been working at Pleasant Lake for some time, has again located among us.

Since the cold weather has set in, select committees are invoicing their neighbors' wood pile.

From the present out look, building opperations in Auburn, will by far excell those of last year.

H. J. Long and family, of Kendallville, were called to the bed side of their mother last week.

Another Hop will be given by the Neoteric Club next Tuesday evening. A good time is anticipated.

Look out for Mexican counterfeit dollars. Many of them are made of white metal, and are largely circulated.

Resolutions made on new years don't count now, to judge from several fellows on the streets the other evening.

The party given the little folks at Wm. McIntyre's last week, was an affair long to be remembered by the juveniles.

If all the year were playing holidays, to sport would be as tedious as to work; but when these seldom come, they are wished for.

Just previous to the recent cold snap the strawberry vines on Judge Tousley's farm near town were in full bloom.—Albion New Era.

A number of young folks participated in a dance at the residence of Mr. Reed, a few miles south of town. A good time was had.

Business in town, and in other towns as well, we learn, has sensibly revived since the freeze-up, and consequent improvement of the roads.

Two boys came near being drowned at Newville last week. They were keeping the Sabbath day "holy" by trying their skates on the St. Joe river

We heard a fellow say yesterday, that he assisted in taking the hides off of seven pigs. That man ought to have swore off new year's never to tell a lie.

The Hicksville News is leaning a little from its old political stand point. That's nothing, however for its editor. He'd turn forty somersaults for a nickle.

Waterloo has a band of out door vocalists, who label themselves "H. C. & S. Party," which when written out means "Hoosier Charivari and Serenading Party."

A man named Walter White, a piano tuner by occupation, jumped from the second story window of the Tremont House, at Marion, Ind., last week, and was killed.

Henry Waid Beecher has created another sensation. His trial will doubtless be deferred until after death; then Hank will surely have to stand the verdict rendered.

This is the time of year when every energetic, wide-awake man's wife, will examine her drawers (bureau) and see that the little pestersome mouse, is not building its winter quarters too near the choice lining and valuable papers.

A father of three sons and five daughters was asked what family he had. The answer was, "I have three sons, and they have each five sisters." Mercy! replied the interrogator, such a family.'

A Kendallville man named Cogan last week forged a note upon one Hill for $250, and offered to sell the same for $225, but was discovered and now lodges in jail at Albion.

An old rail-splitter in Indiana put the quietus upon a fellow who chaffed him upon his bald head, in these words: 'Young man, when my head gets as soft as yours, I can raise hair to sell.'

Some one entered Mr. Houston's out-house, at the rear end of his shop last week, and got away with quite a number of hams, shoulders, &c. This seems to be a good season for this kind of work.

Who says the farmers don't help work the roads? They come with their stone boats heavily loaded with wood, which does more good to the roads than one would think, without reflecting carefully.

It is now pretty thoroughly demonstrated that the Democracy of Indiana will be satisfied with nothing less than the unlimited coinage of silver, which shall be received in payment for all debts, both public and private.

PIANO FOR SALE.—A good Piano bought three years ago, very little used and never abused, with velvet stool and cloth cover can be had for $200 if application be made immediately to Mrs. T. R. Dickinson, at Waterloo.
Jan. 1, 1878.

When you notice a man slam the door on leaving home looks solemn as he walks down the street and presently that his wife visits a milliner shop, it is safe to conclude that there has been a discussion upon the variety of dress. "When she will, she will, you may depend on it, and when she won't she won't and that's the end on it.

Any person gifted with ordinary common sense can preceive that life is short, that time flies, that we ought to make good use of the present; but it needs the union of much experience with the most consummate wisdom, to know exactly what ought to be done and what ought to be left undone, the latter be frequently by far the most important of the two.

The pious season of the year is at hand:

Mince sisters, mince,
Mince with care;
Pour your brandy
In "on the square,"
A full half pint
For and old topaire,
Only a scant gill
For the young and tendaire.

When a banker in New York fails, with other people's money in his hands, he is not called a thief or swindler, because it sounds badly and effects his social standing; those harsh epithets are only to be applied in the lower classes. The Stock Exchange now calls the failure of a Fifth Avenue operator the "conversion or utilizations of margins." Only that, nothing more.

A dress that Clara Louise Kellogg wore in Washington, was criticised by a correspondent of the Boston Herald as being indecently low at the neck. Max Strakosch writes in defense of Miss Kellogg that the dress was no more nor less than fashionable, and adds, relative to the fact that the correspondent is a woman. There is nothing so venomous in all this world as woman's inhumanity to woman.

One of the live issues of the day is the "Hell question," which is generally discussed in the press and the pulpit. The ministerial association of Philadelphia refuse to be led astray by Canon Farrar and Henry Ward Beecher, and have recently passed the following resolution:

RESOLVED., That we put on record as the sense of this body that the old orthodox doctrine of future and endless punishment of the finally impenitent is firmly held by all Evangelical Churches of this day within our limits.

Astonishing Success.

It is the duty of every person who has used Boschee's German Syrup to let its wonderful qualities be known to their friends in curing consumption, severe coughs, croup, asthma, pneumonia, and in fact all throat and lung diseases. No person can use it without immediate relief. Three doses will relieve any case, and we consider it the duty of all Druggists to recommend it to the poor dying consumptive, at least to try one bottle, as 40,000 dozen bottles was sold last year, and no one case where it failed was reported. Such a medicine as the German Syrup cannot be too widely known. Ask your Druggist about it. Sample bottles to try sold at 10 cents. Regular size 75 cents. Sold by F. E. Davenport.

The Use of the Lemon.

Few people know the value of lemon juice. A piece of lemon bound upon a corn will cure it in a few days; it should be renewed night and morning. A free use of lemon juice and sugar will always relieve a cough. Most people feel poorly in the spring, but if they would eat a lemon before breakfast every day for a week—with or without sugar, as they like—they would find it better than any medicine. Lemon juice will sometimes cure consumption.

When you see a man with a long willow switch in his hand, sneak cautiously down to the back fence, and stealthily pull himself up until his head is above the top of it, and then look anxiously, longingly, and with a disappointed expression withal, up and down and all around a vast, lifeless, uninhabited scope of vacant lots without a sign of human life about it, you may safely bet your little pile that there is a broken window in that man's house and a 12-year old boy about a thousand miles away and still going.

We have a clever old citizen in the north end of town, who drives a donkey hitched to the hind wheels of a one-horse wagon with a store box, the front end knocked out, for a seat, and here is the way one of those up-town fellows gives him away.

As my wife and I at the window one day
Stood watching a man with a monkey,
A cart came by with "a broth of a boy,"
Who was driving a stout little donkey.
To my wife I then spoke, by way of a joke,
"There's a relation of yours in that carriage"
To which she replied, as the donkey she spied,
"Ah, yes, a relation—by marriage."

He Was Partly Provided For

He had been gone from the paternal roof six months—left home in the first bloom of summer, with a smile upon his brow and a pickax in his hand. The Black Hills his destination, glory and gold the goal. A summer spent amid the auriferous rocks—industry, perseverance and a rare knowledge of chemistry and minerology his useful tools, in addition to the pickax. Results are such that he is enabled to return sooner than his most sanguine expectations had allowed him to dream of doing.

Almost home, he pauses outside the town until nightfall and sends to his waiting expectant parent the following suggestive message:

"Bring me a large blanket and a pair of old pants—I've got a hat!"

A few days ago a teacher in one of the schools not far from here, was instructing her lowest class in natural history. Her subject was the cat and, its habits, and as proceeded with her remarks she was charmed with the wrapt attention of her demunitive auditors. After her task was over she proceeded to question her scholars in order to see how much they knew of the subject under consideration, and many were the answers—showing that she had not wasted her effort—that she received. At last she said to the smallest of her boys, a little mite with chubby cheeks and glistening eyes: "Johnny, what does your mother keep a cat for?" "To lay kittens," was the unexpected reply. The questioning for the session came to an abrupt end.

Words of Warning.

During the present year, as in the past, the grave will close over thousands, simply because they neglect the means which would restore them to health. Meet the fell destroyer at the threshold, and dispute his invasion by that more than wonderful medicine, Dr. Morris' Syrup of Tar, Wild Chery and Horehound. There is no cough or cold, case asthma, bronchitis, blood-spitting, weak lung, croup or whooping cough which will not yield more readily to this great botanical remedy than any other medicine. If you want avoid disappointment, and be speedily cured, ask your druggist for Dr. Morris' Syrup of Tar, Wild Chery and Horehound. Trial size, 10 cents. Regular sizes, 50 cents and one dollar.

For sale by F. E. Davenport.

Prof. Parker's Pleasant Worm Syrup is perfectly safe. Extremely palatable. No physic required. Costs 25 cents. Try it.

Assignment of mortgages should be Recorded.

Articles of agreement should be recorded.

Articles of Association should be recorded.

Leases of land should be recorded.

Mechanic's Liens should be recorded.

Deeds and mortgages of real estate should be recorded within forty-five days from date of execution.

Chattel mortgages should be recorded within ten days from date of execution.

Are your deeds recorded?

Are all old deeds in your posession received from previous owners of your land recorded?

Are all old mortgages released?

These are all requied to perfect title.

Gravel Roads.

There is no good reason why we [illegible] county, because it is possible and of easy attainment, and not very expensive. If two or three in every township will make a move in this direction, about all the others will follow. Now if some one in every neighborhood in the State will get mad—very mad—at the waste of road taxes and the slipshod manner of working highways, and start out among his neighbors and say, "Come on, boys," and keep mad; keep on saying, "Come on, boys," there would be hundreds of miles of good gravel road in Indiana before the 1st of April.

There are in many parts of the State creeks where immense bars of gravel are to be had for nothing but the hauling. There are also ridges and beds of bank gravel. Either of these will make a first class and cheap road bed.

There are hundreds of roads in this State that cross these creeks over beds of this meterial, where to-day the roads each side for miles are a sea of impassable mud.

For years it has been a matter of astonishment to us to see road officers hauling, plowing, and scraping within a stone's throw of these immense beds of gravel. We have often told such road bosses the story of the old chap in Indiana whom everybody knew and respected for his "wagon-horse sense," but who occasionally, when in town, got reasonably full of old rye. One day, on his way home, "full as a tick," he came to a piece of very bad road, where a road boss and a party of his neighbors were making some corduroy (Indiana rail) road. They were piling in the brush and logs, and hauling on dirt to cover them. The old chap in his buggy was "bumping along." When he came up with the party he sang out, "Whoa! (hic) What are you (hic) doing here (hic), you d—d fools, ye (hic)?"

"Why, uncle,' said the "boss," "don't you think this bad place ought to be fixed?'

"Certainly (hic), but not in that (hic) way. Go down to the creek (hic) you d—d fools ye (hic), and haul that gravel (hic), and slap it into this mud-hole (hic), and then it will stay (hic) fixed."

Said the boss: "Uncle, your head is level, drunk or sober. Come on, boys, and tackle that gravel bed!"

Tradition says that road is now one of the best in the State.

The winter season is the best time to put on this gravel because the farmer has the time and teams otherwise idle. The frost will only require additional picking, and a man and team can easily, these short days, make four loads a day and haul two and a half miles.

Dump the gravel in the centre of the road, breaking with a hammar all the large rocks.

Commence with a single track. Three good loads will make a rod five feet wide and ten inches thick in the centre. No grading is required, for the gravel itself fills up the road and makes its own grade. As soon as the travel has packed the gravel, and perhaps made ruts, one load to the rod will fill up the ruts, and you have a good road-bed that will not cost to exceed $2 per rod, and less according to the distance hauled.

Now, if every Commissiner of Highways in the State where bank or creek gravel can be had within three miles will just "get on his ear" and declare he will have a good road, the result will be surprising.

Let him (or any other man) start out among his neighbors saying, "I will give two weeks or more with man hauling gravel; now, neighbors, what will you do?" Just as soon as three have agreed to your offer commence work, and the example, with a little canvassing, will be generally followed by nearly all that neighborhood.

Where any township road-funds are available let the Commissioners say that (to the extent of their ability) they will assist the good work.

Cold weather will make our road simply passable until the next thaw, when, the earth being full of moisture, they will again be in a fearful condition.

Do not delay. Begin now. Do not procrastinate until the big muddy of December, 1877, is forgotten.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician retired from active practice, having had placed in his hands by an East Indian missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthama, and all throat and lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for general debility and all nervous complaints, after having thouroughly tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, feels it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. The receipt will be sent free of charge, to all who desire it, with full directions for preparing and successfully using. Address with stamp naming this paper, Dr. J. C. Stone, 44 North Ninth Street, Philadelphia Pa.

AUBURN COURIER.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 17, 1878.

THE NEWS CONDENSED.

THE EAST.

The returns of the State census of New York show that the total population of the State is 4,698,958, of whom 1,196,658 are foreign-born. The total State debt Jan. 1, 1875, was $244,079,859, from which should be deducted a sinking fund of $82,508,855....Heavy gales are reported on the east Atlantic coast, resulting in considerable damage to shipping and some loss of life....The merchants of New York are discussing the question of abolishing the system of sending out "drummers."

The committee of New York Aldermen appointed by the Council to investigate the Tweed ring robberies have presented an extensive report. In conclusion, they give their opinion that there is sufficient evidence to enable the corporation to defend actions now pending against them to an amount aggregating at least $2,000,000; also, that there are no legal obstacles in the way of a vigorous prosecution, which they recommend, of such ring thieves as are still living in the city in the enjoyment of their stolen goods. The report was accepted, and, in consideration of the portion of it which treated of Tweed's fate as too harsh in comparison with the unwarrantable leniency to his associates, the Council passed a resolution in favor of Tweed's release, the voting being 17 to 7. The conditions are that Tweed surrender his property as he has agreed, and hold himself ready as a witness. The total amount of the ring robberies is estimated by the Aldermen at $50,000,000, $1,000,000 of which has been recovered.

M. Rader & Sons, tobacco dealers, New York, have failed. Liabilities, $180,000; assets, $67,000....D. A. Brigham & Co., extensive dealers in clothing, Springfield, Mass., are "embarrassed." Their liabilities are $250,000. ....Theodore B. Wetmore, late Vice President of the Security Life Insurance Company, has been convicted on a charge of conspiracy, in making false reports of the condition of the institution.

The Great Barrington (Mass.) Savings Bank has suspended, pending investigation by the State Bank Commissioners. Its deposits are $407,000, and its total liabilities, $414,000.

Rev. Dr. J. C. Eccleston, of Trinity Church, Newark, N. J., the Bishop-elect of the Episcopal Diocese of West Virginia, has finally determined to decline the office tendered him.

THE WEST.

Rich coal discoveries are reported in the vicinity of Deadwood, Black Hills. The newly-discovered oil regions of the Hills are beginning to attract considerable attention, and many parties are locating claims....David Gibson, liquor merchant, and W. P. Renner & Co., candy manufacturers, Cincinnati, have failed......Clement, Morton & Co., one of the leading wholesale clothing houses of Chicago, have failed.

The Grand Jury of the Chicago Criminal Court has indicted Maj. R. M. Woods, Insurance Examiner for the State of Illinois, charging him with willfully making an untrue report of the condition of the Protection Life Insurance Company, of Chicago. The officers of the company are also under indictment for perjury....A large number of commercial failures have occurred in Chicago since the beginning of the New Year. Among the suspensions is that of Abe Lipman, for many years the leading pawnbroker of the city. It is a curious development of this case that all the time he has been exacting a heavy per cent. from his customers, he himself has been paying 2½ per cent. a month for borrowed capital...Prof. Swing, of Chicago, in his last Sunday's sermon, astonished his audience by taking ground with Henry Ward Beecher and Canon Farrar and repudiating the doctrine of an everlasting hell. He contended that in theology as in the other affairs of life the meaning of words has undergone a marked change within the past few hundred years, and that it is altogether possible to believe in the Bible and not believe in the creeds and dogmas that have stood still while the world kept moving.

The Second National Bank, of St. Louis, has gone into voluntary liquidation....Gen. John O'Neill died last week, at Omaha, of paralysis. He was a prominent Fenian, and took a leading part in the Fenian movement in 1865 against Canada, and thus acquired national fame, especially among Irishmen.

THE SOUTH.

At Concord, Ky., recently, Deputy Sheriff Ruggles, with a posse, overtook the notorious Underwood brothers, who had been stealing horses from farmers, and demanded their surrender. The Underwoods immediately fired at the party, instantly killing Ruggles. The fire was returned, wounding both outlaws. It is thought the Underwoods would be lynched by the excited farmers.

GENERAL.

The Government Commission to be appointed to investigate the recent disturbances in Texas is intended to be a secret affair—so much so that not even the names of the Commissioners will be disclosed.

Advices from Lima, South America, give particulars of the loss of the steamer Atacama, on the Chilian coast, some weeks ago. In all, it is estimated that 101 persons were drowned. Twenty-nine were saved. The ship was on a trip from Valparaiso to Callao. She struck at 8 p. m., when the majority of the passengers were below, and so instantaneous was the breaking up of the ship that no time was given to gain the deck. The passengers were mostly Chilians, journeying between the ports.

Immigration statistics compiled at the port of New York show that 54,536 immigrants came to this country via New York during 1877, a number 16,729 less than that reached in the previous year, and a decrease from the year 1866 of 178,862 souls.

The annual meeting of the American Social Science Congress was held last week at Boston. David Ames Wells, of Norwich, Ct., was elected President for next year. Rev. H. Wines, of Illinois, and Thomas Wentworth Higginson, of Rhode Island, were chosen delegates to the Prison Congress at Stockholm.

WASHINGTON.

The President has appointed Ulysses S. Grant, Jr., United States District Attorney for the Eastern District of New York....It is understood, says a Washington dispatch, that in the Postmaster General's office the opinion held by the law-officer that complimentary papers cannot go at pound rates is not entertained, but that it is there held that a person receiving a free paper is an actual subscriber. The law-officer, however, without having had the matter submitted formally to him, expresses a decided opinion that dead-head papers can only go at transient rates.

There are rumors and rumors of coming Congressional investigations. Among these is one to declare the seat of M. C. Butler, of South Carolina, vacant; another to investigate the entire Presidential question....The Interior Department investigation has discovered a new abuse in the Indian service. On some reservations the Indians have made progress in agriculture and raised considerable crops. These products have been sold by the Agents and the money accounted for to the department, but the Indians have been paid with brass checks instead of money. These checks the traders received in payment for goods purchased by the Indians, but the traders charge extravagant prices. Seven dollars in money buys as many blankets as $16 in brass checks, and $1 in checks would only purchase two pounds of sugar.

S. A. Galpin, Chief Clerk of the Indian Bureau, has been removed by Secretary Schurz on account of corrupt practices....The report submitted to Secretary Schurz by Joseph K. McCammon, of the Department of Justice, Capt. Thos. H. Bradley, United States army, and George M. Lockwood, Chief Clerk of the Interior Department, the Board of Inquiry convened by him in June last to investigate the Indian service, is a very elaborate and luminous document. The report condemns "the absence of regulation, system and method" in the bureau's administration; also the suppression of charges against agents and contractors; the carrying on of semi-official correspondence by subordinates without authority; the careless disposal of records; the relinquishment of authority by responsible officers; the loss or disappearance of important papers, and the factious opposition by the clerks and others to the Board of Indian Commissioners. It also refers in terms of distrust to the "unfitness of the Chief Clerk, the Corresponding Clerk, the Accounting Clerk, and others; the incompetency displayed in the accounts division; the inefficiency of the land division; the habitual lack of circumspection in the finance division; the uselessness of the civilization division, and the demoralization of the bureau throughout."

The inventors are moving to have the cost of patents reduced from $100 to $5. It is proposed to abolish the models and examinations, granting patents to all who apply, as in England, and leaving the right to an invention to be contested in the courts....The Supreme Court has unanimously decided against the famous McGarrahan claim, which has been the subject of endless controversy.

At the Cabinet meeting, the other day, it was resolved to reopen the 4 per cent. loan for popular subscriptions, offering every possible facility for investments in it through national banks or otherwise....Frederick P. Goodrich, formerly of Michigan, was sentenced to two years' imprisonment at hard labor in the Federal penitentiary in Maryland. Goodrich was a clerk in the disbursing office of the Interior Department, and was charged with forgery of the pay-accounts of his associates.

At a meeting of the Cabinet, one day last week, Secretary Sherman submitted a rough draft of a bill looking to the establishment of postal savings banks. The bill provides that any person may deposit sums of not less than $25 or any multiple thereof not exceeding $300 at any of the money order postoffices throughout the country and receive for such deposit a certificate of deposit entitling him to a small Government bond for the amount named in the certificate. Bonds are to bear interest at the rate of 3 65-100 per cent. per annum, and the proceeds received by the Government in this manner are to be used for the purchase of 5-20 bonds now outstanding. The matter was talked over for a while, but no definite conclusion reached.

POLITICAL.

It is stated that, in view of the retirement of Senator Stanley Matthews from the Senate, the administration has decided to tender him a prominent position under the Government.

A Washington dispatch says: "President Hayes will not send in any new nominations for the New York Custom House, at least for some time to come. This course he believes to be for the best interests of the country and the party."

A special Washington telegram to the Chicago Tribune says: "There are numerous printed statements to the effect that a number of members are coming back, determined to revise the electoral count, and to have an investigation of the Presidential election. Senator Conkling is credited with being the prime mover, and it is asserted that, while no attempt will be made to implicate President Hayes, efforts will be made to involve Stanley Matthews, Secretary Sherman, and Gen. Garfield in an alleged Presidential bargain. The name of Senator Howe, of Wisconsin, is quoted as the person who will consent to introduce the resolution in the Senate in behalf of Senator Conkling, while to Gen. Butler is attributed the leadership of the movement in the House. Democrats claim that there are affidavits in existence from Cassanave and Kenner, members of the Returning Board, in which these two worthies assert that there was a bargain for the Louisiana electoral vote, to which they were parties as members of the board, and that the bargain made with them has not been fulfilled. The name of Gen. Grant is also used as a party to this understanding."

The Republican State Convention of New Hampshire met at Concord last week, and nominated B. F. Prescott for Governor. Resolutions were adopted denouncing any legislation tending to repudiate the public debt, disapproving the remonetizing of silver, opposing money subsidies and land grants to private corporations, condemning as factious and mischievous any attempt to reopen the Presidential controversy, and the following in relation to the national administration:

Resolved, That the Republicans of New Hampshire reaffirm and readopt the Cincinnati platform which pledged the party to these declarations and principles, to-wit: That the United States of America is a nation; the full protection of all citizens in the full enjoyment of all their rights; the permanent pacification of the Southern section of the Union; redemption of United States notes in coin by continuous and steady progress to specie payment; that Senators and Representatives who may be judges and accusers should not dictate appointments to office, the invariable rule for appointment to have reference to the honesty, fidelity, and capabilities of the appointees, giving to the party in power those places where the harmony and vigor of the administration requires its policy to be represented; the deprecation of all sectional feelings and tendencies; the speedy, thorough and unsparing prosecution and punishment of all who betray official trusts; opposition to further land grants to corporations and monopolies; the adjustment of duties or imports for revenue so as to promote the interests of American labor and advance the prosperity of the whole people.

Resolved, That we recognize the paramount duty of President Hayes to render these high and solemn professions actual and living realities; and, while we admit honest difference of opinion in respect to past acts we welcome and approve his patriotic and sincere efforts to keep faith with the people and secure to the whole country the blessings of a just, efficient and honest Republican national administration.

A call is issued for a National Convention of the National party, to be held in Toledo, Ohio, on the 22d of February next. It reads as follows:

The undersigned, believing the present financial policy of those in control of the Federal Government is destructive of the best interests of the people, and that if continued it will bring general ruin and unprecedented suffering on the industrial classes, and also believing that thorough organization and unity of action may induce those in power to take such steps as will avert such calamitous results, call upon those, regardless of political affiliation, who will unite for independent action to select one delegate in each Congressional district, and afterwards, by proper authority, two delegates for each State at large, to meet in national convention, in the city of Toledo, on the 22d day of February, 1878, there to take such action as wisdom may dictate.

Upward of 10 names are appended to the call, prominent among them being those of Wendell Phillips, of Massachusetts; Peter Cooper, of New York; Thomas D. Hoxey, of New Jersey, Alexander Campbell, of Illinois; Blanton Duncan, of Kentucky, and Moses W. Field, of Michigan....The Democrats and Greenbackers in the lower house of the Wisconsin Legislature formed a coalition and captured all the offices—the Greenbackers taking the Speakership and the Democrats the remainder.... In the lower house of the Maryland Legislature, last week, Montgomery Blair introduced a memorial asking Congress to investigate the title of Rutherford B. Hayes to the office of President. He made an elaborate speech, in which he charged that President Hayes obtained his title to office through corrupt bargaining with the Louisiana Returning Board and his political opponents, and urged the importance to the country of obtaining a rightful solution of the question involved. Mr. Lieb, Republican, moved to lay the memorial on the table and called for the ayes and noes, which resulted—ayes 13, noes 54. It was then referred to the Committee on Federal Relations.

Senator Edmunds has embodied in a letter to the President, at the request of the latter, his views of the relations which should exist between the Executive and the Senators and Representatives in the matter of nominations and appointments to office. The right or the propriety of dictation by members of the legislative branch of the Government is distinctly denied by Mr. Edmunds, who holds the belief that a custom which was of itself unobjectionable has grown into an abuse—that is, that from being invited to furnish information concerning the character and fitness of applicants for office, Senators and Representatives have come to regard appointments as their prerogative.

George H. Pendleton will be elected United States Senator from Ohio, to succeed Stanley Matthews, whose term expires March 3, 1879, he having been nominated by a Democratic caucus.

THE TURKO-RUSSIAN WAR.

The Turks have evacuated Sophia....The Journal de St. Petersburg says Russia could not, in the interest of peace itself, do otherwise than refuse all intervention, and make it clearly understood that peace must be discussed between the belligerents.

An important victory was gained by Gourko's command over the Turks, near Sophia. The latter lost 1,000 in killed, while unsuccessfully attempting to surround a brigade of cavalry and five infantry battalions. As an offset to this, the Turks announce the destruction of a Russian force, near Erzeroum, which had been engaged in destroying telegraph lines. The Russians lost only twenty-five men in occupying Sophia, but a portion of their forces suffered terribly in advancing through the mountains. About 1,000 of them were severely frozen, and more than fifty died.

London dispatches of the 9th state that England has advised the Porte to accept the Russian peace preliminaries....A Constantinople dispatch says that after two days' sanguinary fighting, Hafiz Pasha, commanding the Novi-Bazar Division, had reoccupied Karschumeja. The Servian loss was considerable. Evoub Pasha, commanding the civil guard at Novi-Bazar, also defeated the Servians, pursuing them to the frontier, burning six of their military stations, and destroying their intrenchments.

A Russian official telegram states that a Russian detachment which had crossed the Balkans by byways had occupied a position in the rear of the Turkish fortifications in the Trajan pass. The Turks, being also attacked in front, abandoned their positions, which were occupied by the Russians, whose vanguard advanced in the direction of Teke.

A London dispatch of the 10th says: "Turkey has at last decided to propose an armistice to the Russian commanders, and Mehemet Ali has left Constantinople for the front with power to treat for an armistice of six weeks. In Asia Minor Muhktar Pasha will negotiate. The Turkish propositions are, that the belligerents shall maintain the positions each now holds, and that negotiations for peace shall begin at once."

The Grand Duke Nicholas has telegraphed the following to the Emperor: "Jan. 9.—I am happy to congratulate your Majesty upon a brilliant victory gained this day. Gen. Radetzky has, after desperate fighting, captured the whole Turkish army defending the Schipka pass, consisting of forty-nine battalions, ten batteries, and one regiment of cavalry. Prince Mirsky has occupied Kezan'ik. Gen. Skobeloff holds Schipka."

The appointment of Raouf Pasha as Commander-in-Chief of the Turkish armies would seem to signify that the Porte is ready to make great concessions in the approaching peace negotiations. Raouf has been Minister of War in the Cabinet controlled by Mahmoud Damad, the Sultan's brother-in-law, whose voice has been for peace rather than for war during the entire campaign of last year.

GENERAL FOREIGN NEWS.

Stanley, the African explorer, has arrived at Cairo, Egypt, where he was magnificently entertained by the Khedive.... The Advertiser hears, on reliable authority, that official information has been received in St. Petersburg that the Chinese have massacred 15,000 men, women, and children in the Kashgarian town of Manas: committing most frightful atrocities....A terrific explosion of gunpowder recently occurred at Montevideo, S. A., resulting in the killing and mortal wounding of some sixty or seventy officers and soldiers.

The uneasiness in France at the prospect that England would seize upon Egypt was so great as to lead to a diplomatic correspondence on the subject. A note of inquiry was recently addressed by the French Government, and, in response the British Minister of Foreign Affairs gave the most positive assurance that England had no intention of helping herself to the land of the Pharaohs.... Gen. Grant arrived in Egypt on the 5th inst. He was saluted by Turkish vessels in the port, the bands playing American national airs. During the visit the Khedive's barge and the other vessels manned the yards, displayed American flags and saluted with great enthusiasm. The Khedive offered the use of his palace in Cairo to Gen. Grant during his stay there, and a steamer to navigate the Nile was placed at his service....A Rome dispatch states that the Pope continues to improve in health, and his physician is now of the opinion that his Holiness will soon recover the use of his legs....A dispatch from Constantinople states that, if Russia rejects mediation, Turkey will await the meeting of the British Parliament before making direct overtures to Russia....Five thousand more troops have sailed from Egypt for Turkey. A further reinforcement is preparing.

The French held their municipal elections on Sunday, the 6th inst. The republicans seem to have carried everything. In Paris they elected seventy-six councilors out of eighty.

A cable dispatch announces the death of King Victor Emmanuel, of Italy. Prince Humbert, his eldest son, succeeds to the throne.... The expenditures by the English people for the sufferers by the famine in India have reached £9,250,000.

A fire in Honolulu, Sandwich Islands, devastated the esplanade portion of that city, destroying the Government warehouses, the wharves and sheds devoted to the use of ocean mail steamers, and a number of private buildings. Loss about $250,000; insurance, $63,100.

A steam-tug has left the Thames for Ferrol, Spain, to take Cleopatra's obelisk to London.... Failures to the number of 1,890 were reported in the Dominion of Canada in 1877, with liabilities of $15,500,100.

CONGRESSIONAL PROCEEDINGS.

Thursday, Jan. 10.—Senate.—Over forty Senators were in the Chamber before the Senate was called to order at noon....A great part of the morning hour was taken up in the presentation of petitions in favor of the adoption of a sixteenth amendment to the constitution, prohibiting States from disfranchising persons on account of sex, all of which were referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections....A large number of bills were introduced and referred to appropriate Committees, among them the following: By Mr. Sargent, to regulate Chinese immigration; by Mr. Plumb, to reorganize the pay department of the army; by Mr. Voorhees, in relation to prize money to all fleet officers; by Mr. Sargent, to relieve certain legal disabilities of women, providing that any woman who shall have been a member of the bar of the highest court of any State or Territory, or of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, for three years, shall, on motion, be admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of the United States; by Mr. Jones, of Florida, to repeal certain provisions of the acts of Congress making appropriations for the support of the army....Mr. Sargent submitted resolutions in regard to a sixteenth amendment (woman suffrage), which were, on objection, laid over....Mr. Edmunds submitted a joint resolution proposing an amendment to the constitution of the United States, prohibiting States from making an appropriation for sectarian purposes. Referred to the Judiciary Committee....A motion was made to hold a session on Saturday to allow a committee of women an opportunity to address the Senate on a proposed sixteenth amendment. Rejected, yeas, 13 nays, 31.... Adjourned till Monday.

House.—The House met at noon, and 260 members responded to their names. The resolution reported by Mr. Wood, prior to the recess, directing investigations to be made into the management of the several departments of the Government, came up as the first business in order, it having been postponed till after the reading of the journal. ....Mr. Hewitt presented the petition of New York Chamber of Commerce, praying for the passage of a bill to correct all errors in assessment and collection of duties on imports, whether in favor of or against the Government. Referred to the Committee on Ways and Means. ....The following bills were introduced and referred: By Mr. Luttrell, of California, to prohibit the employment of the Chinese, or Mongolians, on any public works of the United States; also, to prevent the naturalization of Chinese, or Mongolians; also, to punish and prevent the practice of polygamy in Territories and other places subject to the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States; by Mr. Cox, of New York, for the coinage of 3-cent silver pieces, and the discontinuance of 3-cent nickel or copper coins. ....Mr. Wood's resolution was then taken up in committee of the whole, and discussed, when Mr. Hale offered a substitute, which was adopted by 161 to 92. [illegible]

PLEVNA.

Scenes at the Surrender of Osman Pasha.

[From the London Daily News.]

A long, loud shout went up from the Russian army when the white flag was seen and its significance was understood—a joyous shout that swept over that dreary plain, and was echoed back sonorously by the sullen, rugged cliffs overhanging the scene. The thrill of gladness in the shout showed how deeply the Russian soldiers had dreaded the long, weary waiting through the winter months among snow and mud round this impregnable stronghold. It was clear that a load had been lifted from every heart. A moment later a Turkish officer was seen riding over the bridge with a white flag in his hand. He rode forward to Gen. Ganetsky, in command of the Grenadiers, halted a moment, and then rode back. As it turned out, he was an officer of inferior rank, and returned because Gen. Ganetsky instructed him to send an officer with the rank of Pasha to negotiate the terms of capitulation. Then thirty or forty of us, headed by Gen. Skobeleff, who had been this morning placed on the Sophia road, rode down the road toward the bridge, within point-blank range of the Turkish rifles, if the Turkish soldiers, grouped in masses on the road behind the bridge on the cliffs overlooking the Vid, had chosen to open on us. About fifty yards from the bridge, and seventy-five from some masses of Turks on the other side, we halted. Gen. Skobeleff and two or three other officers waved white handkerchiefs. This signal of amity was answered by the waving of a piece of white muslin, about two yards square, attached to a flag-staff. Then two horsemen came forward, each carrying a white flag. They rode across the bridge and approached us. There was a moment's conversation with Gen. Skobeleff's interpreter, and then it was announced that Osman himself was coming out, and the two horsemen galloped back.

"Osman himself coming out!" exclaimed all of us with surprise. This was indeed an unlooked-for incident.

"At any rate we will give him a respectful reception," exclaimed one Russian officer, in the gallant spirit of true chivalry.

"That we will," said another. "We must all salute him, and the soldiers must present arms."

"He is certainly a great soldier," exclaimed another, "and he has made a heroic defense."

"He is the greatest General of the age," said Gen. Skobeleff, "for he saved the honor of his country. I will proffer him my hand and tell him so."

All were unanimous in his praise, and the butcheries of Russian wounded committed by the Turkish army of Plevna were forgotten.

All around me the ground was covered with grim relics of battle. Here and there the earth was uptorn by the explosion of shells. Near me lay a horse groaning and struggling in death; close by, an ox, silently bleeding to death; his great, round, patient eyes looking mournfully at us. Just before me was a cart with a dead horse lying in yoke as he had fallen, and a Turkish soldier lying alongside whose head had been carried away. Another man was lying under the wagon, and around were four wounded men, lying gazing up at the murky sky, or covered up with the hood of their ragged gray overcoat drawn over their faces. Not one of them uttered a sound. They lay there and bore their suffering with a calm, stolid fortitude which brought tears to my eyes. Just behind the wagon the ground was ripped to pieces by shell fire, telling how these unfortunates had met their fate. The road and its edges were dotted here and there with dead and wounded Turkish soldiers, oxen, horses and shattered carts, and, a few hundred yards north of the road, the ground over which Osman Pasha's sallying column had made that heroic charge was literally covered with dead and wounded. Russian doctors were already going about on the field looking after the wounded, and giving them temporary dressing, while waiting for the ambulances to come up.

All these things I observed during the pause which was broken at last by shouts of "There he is! He is coming," and I rode forward again to the point of main interest. Two horsemen were again approaching with a white flag, the bearer of which was apparently merely a common soldier. He wore a fez, a long, dirty brown cloak, and very ragged footgear. The other horseman wore a bright red fez, which set off the officer's blue cloak. He was clean and natty, and had on fresh gloves. He was comparatively young, with a round, rosy face; clean shaved, light mustache, straight nose, and blue eyes He did not seem over 35 years old. "This cannot be Osman Pasha," was the general exclamation. In fact it was not he, but Tefik Bey, his Chief of Staff. Was it possible that this boyish-looking face belonged to Osman's right-hand man, who must have played so great a part in the organization and maintenance of Osman's mighty defense? It seems strange, but it was true. The Turks have the merit at least of not being afraid of young men. I saw no tottering gray-bearded officers in this captive host. Everyone on our side saluted as Tefik Bey rode to. He halted for a moment and was silent. He then spoke in French with good accent, but slowly, as if choosing his words.

He said, "Osman Pasha—" then stopped fully ten seconds before he proceeded—"is wounded."

This was the first intimation we had had of this occurrence. All expressed their regret.

"Not severely, we all hope," exclaimed Gen. Skobeleff.

"I do not know," was the answer, with a pause of a second between every word.

"Where is his Excellency?" was the next question.

"There," was Tefik Bey's reply, as he pointed to a small house overlooking the road just beyond the bridge.

Then there was a pause while we scrutinized our strange visitor, and he surveyed us, as it seemed to me, with the most perfect calmness, but obvious curiosity. The pause became embarrassing.

The Turk showed no hurry to speak, and the Russians evidently felt delicacy in asking. It looked as if nobody knew besides which there was really no officer there who had the right to treat with him. The situation was critical, and if it possessed an amusing element was also embarrassing. Both armies were watching us not more than 500 yards apart, with arms in their hands, for the Russian infantry had gradually moved down toward the bridge. Finally Gen. Skobeleff stammered out, "Is there anybody you would like to see?—[pause]—With whom did you wish to speak?—[pause]—Is there anything—?—[pause]—What the devil is the matter with the man? Why don't he speak?" blurted out the General, in English, turning to me. Tefik Bey remained impassive. I have seen more of him since, and I find he is singularly and habitually taciturn, but I believe his extreme taciturnity, on this occasion, was partly owing to emotion, in spite of the steady, inflexible front he maintained.

"Gen. Ganetsky is in command here. He will be here presently, in case you would like to speak to him," Gen. Skobeleff finally observed. Tefik Bey simply nodded.

"Osman Ghazi has made a most glorious defense," said an officer. "We esteem highly his soldierly character." The Turk gazed silently before him, and gave no sign that he had heard.

"We look upon him as a very great General," said another. No answer. The Turk's eyes were bent in the direction of Sophia, as though looking for Mehemet Ali Pasha. There was evidently no use trying to converse with this obstinately silent man, and they gave it up. Fortunately Gen. Strukoff, of the Emperor's staff, soon arrived, with powers to treat. He asked Tefik if he had authority from Osman Pasha to negotiate. It appeared not. I did not catch all that was said; but the final result was that Tefik bowed to us and galloped away back across the bridge. * * *

The terms of capitulation were easily arranged. The surrender is unconditional. Osman consented at once. If surprise be expressed that he should have so suddenly agreed, it is only necessary to state that he could do nothing else. We turned back and over the bridge, and Osman Pasha got into a carriage and drove to Plevna. The Grand Duke Nicholas with his staff arrived a few minutes afterward, and passed the troops in review. He was received with cheers. Halting, he spoke a few words to the Grenadiers, which was greeted with the wildest acclamation. The Grand Duke has certainly the soldierly quality of knowing how to speak to soldiers. Then we pass again slowly across the bridge.

The scene had now changed. No more armed Turks were to be seen. The interview with Osman Pasha had taken place about 2 o'clock. It was now 3, and the Turks had all laid down their arms. They had obeyed the injunction literally, and each man had simply laid his rifle down in the mud where he was standing when the order reached him. The ground was littered with arms, the same Peabody-Martinis that had wrought such destruction in the Russian ranks in July and September. The road lay thick with them, and we rode over them, trampling them under our horses' feet and spoiling hundreds of them. Osman's army was not, however, all armed with Peabodys. I observed some Sniders and a good many Krankas, evidently taken from the battle-fields of July and September.

Osman Pasha was escorted by fifty Cossacks, and there followed him twenty-five or thirty Turkish officers on ponies. They were all, or nearly all, young men. Scarcely one among them seemed over 30. Most had the faces of mere boy students. "Are these the lads," I inwardly exclaimed, "with whom Osman Pasha has accomplished such wonders?" The Grand Duke rode up to the carriage, and for some seconds the two chiefs gazed into each other's faces without the utterance of a word. Then the Grand Duke stretched out his hand and shook the hand of Osman Pasha heartily.

I rode through the Turkish troops after the surrender, when I had time to examine them closely. There were bad, vile faces among the horde, but there were also many bright faces, in whose eyes there was no murderous glare. I shall never forget the face of one young officer, who, with folded arms, stood a prisoner among his men, gazing at us with a look of fierce, defiant hate that was softened by profound despair. The men all wore dirty brown cloaks, with hoods pulled down over their heads, and very ragged foot-gear. They seemed ill fed, and were, mostly, miserably bedraggled and tattered; yet withal each man was a hero in our eyes when we thought of the successive episodes of the long-protracted defense of Plevna, from the repulse of Schrider Schuldner to the final desperate struggle to break the iron band of environment.

Incombustible Paper.

Incombustible writing paper has been invented by two Salamanca savants, which is warranted to resist the most intense heat. A single sheet will carbonize, but will not burn, while if a roll of prepared paper be placed in the fiercest fire, although the outside leaves and the extreme edges may carbonize, the interior will remain unaltered, and the writing or printing will be perfectly legible. Papers already written or printed upon may undergo the process of preparation without injury. This is litera scripta with a vengeance; invaluable in breach-of-promise suits.

A young girl in a theater in London gets $500 a week for diving from a perch ninety feet down toward a net. She drops head first, turns on the way, and strikes on her back.

A Harrowing Story.

Writing from Naples, a correspondent says: "A case was decided last week in the Court of Appeals involving the most harrowing incidents we have heard of for a long time. It was called a case of involuntary homicide, which was committed in a small commune of Castel del Giudice, in the province of Molise, and the persons accused were the Syndic and the municipal doctor. It appears that a poor woman, near her confinement, was suddenly taken ill, and sent for the doctor. On his arrival she had fainted, 'had lost her senses,' and was pronounced to be dead.

"On the doctor being urged to save the child, at least, the answer was that the operation would be useless, and the woman was buried according to the law of the country, within twenty-four hours after her decease.

"Several days afterward the grave was reopened to bury a girl, and it was found that some displacement had occurred in the body of the woman. The report got wind, and an excited population demanded an instant investigation, the result of which was that the swathings by which the legs had been bound were discovered to have been broken, while her hands were raised to the mouth as if the poor creature had desired to tear asunder the ribbons by which they were tied together.

"Worst of all, she had given birth to a son, who lay dead with her. The case was tried in the local courts, and the prisoners found guilty of involuntary homicide.

"The Court of Appeals, on the 20th of November, while approving the verdict, reduced the sentence to three months' imprisonment, 'which was covered,' says the journal from which I cite the details above, 'by sovereign indulgence.' All was done with perfect legality, yet the circumstances of the case, if well analyzed, show the slight value which is attached to human life in this country, or the imperfect guarantees which exist for the preservation of it."

Comparative Value of Woods.

It is a great convenience to know the comparative value of different kinds of wood for fuel. Shell-bark hickory is regarded as the highest standard of our forest trees, and, calling that 100, other trees will compare with it for real value as fuel for house purposes as follows: Shellbark hickory, 100; pignut hickory, 95; white oak, 84; white ash, 77; dogwood, 75; scrub oak, 73; white hazel, 72; apple tree, 70; red oak, 67; white beech, 65; black birch, 62; yellow oak, 60; hard maple, 59; white elm, 58; red cedar, 56; wild cherry, 55; yellow pine, 54; chestnut, 52; yellow poplar, 51; butternut and white birch, 43; white pine, 30. It is worth bearing in mind that in woods of the same species there is a great difference, according to the soil on which they grow. A tree that grows on a wet, low, rich ground will be less solid and less durable for fuel, and therefore of a less value than a tree of the same kind that grows on a dry and poor soil. To the ordinary purchaser oak is oak and pine is pine, but for home use the tree grown on dry upland and standing apart from others is worth a great deal more.

The Louisville Courier-Journal says: "Between 1848 and 1876 the product of gold and silver in Mexico was $702,000,000. During the same period American enterprise produced from the territory acquired from Mexico by the Mexican war $1,389,372,185. In the northern states of Mexico there remains a mineral wealth of enormous value, which, after all the operations of the Spaniards, has scarcely been scratched. Railroads and American enterprise will stir this region into life. Thousands of mines have been abandoned in Sonora and Chihuahua on account of the insecurity of the country, which formerly yielded enormous riches even with insufficient appliances for working them."

Houses in Paris have been greatly improved in comfort of late years. Water is now brought to the upper stories, and a furnace is often maintained by the landlord. Flats vary in prices, from $200 to $5,000 a year; but, while the majority live in this way, the wealthy still reside in "hotels," as in days gone by, and build new ones. Many of these latter, though plain externally, are exquisite within. The Paris houses are excellently built, and made as near fire-proof as possible.

THE MARKETS.

NEW YORK.
Beeves	$8 50	@	12 00
Hogs	4 70	@	5 00
Cotton	11⅛	@	11⅜
Flour—Superfine	4 75	@	5 10
Wheat—No. 2 Chicago	1 30	@	1 31½
Corn—Western Mixed	54	@	64
Oats—Mixed	36	@	40
Rye—Western	71	@	74
Pork—New Mess	12 60	@	12 75
Lard	7⅞	@	8
CHICAGO.
Beeves—Choice Graded Steers	5 60	@	5 80
Choice Natives	4 40	@	4 80
Cows and Heifers	2 75	@	3 75
Butchers' Steers	2 25	@	3 50
Medium to Fair	3 75	@	4 20
Hogs—Live	3 25	@	4 25
Flour—Fancy White Winter	6 75	@	7 00
Good to Choice Spring Ex.	5 25	@	5 50
Wheat—No. 2 Spring	1 07	@	1 08
No. 3 Spring	1 00	@	1 01
Corn—No. 2	42	@	43
Oats—No. 2	24	@	25
Rye—No. 2	56	@	57
Barley—No. 2	57	@	58
Butter—Choice Creamery	30	@	32
Eggs—Fresh	19	@	20
Pork—Mess	11 25	@	11 40
Lard	7⅛	@	7½
MILWAUKEE
Wheat—No. 1	1 12½	@	1 13½
No. 2	1 09	@	1 10
Corn—No. 2	41	@	42
Oats—No. 2	24	@	25
Rye—No. 1	56	@	56
Barley—No. 2	64	@	65
ST. LOUIS.
Wheat—No. 3 Red Fall	1 18	@	1 19
Corn—No. 2 Mixed	42	@	43
Oats—No. 2	28	@	29
Rye	55	@	56
Pork—Mess	11 40	@	11 50
Lard	7⅛	@	7½
Hogs	3 80	@	4 05
Cattle	2 50	@	5 12½
CINCINNATI.
Wheat—Red	1 23	@	1 27
Corn—New	41	@	42
Oats	29	@	32
Rye	62	@	64
Pork—Mess	11 40	@	11 50
Lard	7⅞	@	8⅛
TOLEDO.
Wheat—No. 1 White Michigan	1 30	@	1 30
No. 2 Red Winter	1 25	@	1 26
Corn	48	@	49
Oats—No. 2	27	@	28
DETROIT.
Flour—Choice White	5 80	@	6 00
Wheat—No. 1 White	1 30	@	1 32
No. 1 Amber	1 28	@	1 29
Corn—No. 1	49	@	50
Oats—Mixed	27	@	29
Barley (per cental)	1 50	@	1 60
Pork—Mess	12 00	@	12 25
EAST LIBERTY, PA.
Cattle—Best	5 50	@	5 65
Fair	5 00	@	5 25
Common	4 25	@	4 75
Hogs	4 20	@	4 50
Sheep	3 75	@	4 50

AUBURN COURIER.

T. C. MAYS, PUBLISHER.

AGRICULTURAL AND DOMESTIC.

Around the Farm.

THE best way to protect the bark of trees from mice, rabbits or farm stock, is to tie a small bundle of dead branches around the part to be protected.—Gardener's Chronicle.

I HAVE used oils and fats for the preservation of eggs with considerable success, and find that oils or thin fats are immensely inferior to solid fats or waxes—a fact, I believe, which is very often overlooked.—Mark Lane Express.

TYPHOID fever is now regarded by our best physicians as a filth fever, and in many cases the immediate cause is to be found in the access of filth to the well or spring from which the water is obtained for domestic purposes.—Western Farm Journal.

IN three pens, three hogs, each nearly full grown, and about equal in weight and thriftiness, were fed four months as follows: One pen, soaked corn; one pen, cooked corn-meal; one pen, dry corn. At the close of the experiment, those fed on dry corn had made the most weight.—Producer.

EXPERIENCE has proved that plowing in the fall is one of the most effective as well as one of the quickest and easiest methods of fining the soil, and that land which was plowed in the fall can be worked earlier in the spring, and more easily during the season than will be possible if the plowing is neglected. We have tried this plan and found it to work so well as to merit acceptance as one of the "principles" of agricultural practice."—N. E. Homestead.

TALKING about cutting potato seed, a member of the Elmira Farmers' Club says: "As a rule, it is economy to cut the seed, and cut it small. I took two bushels and twelve pounds and cut to single eyes. They planted half an acre in rows, three feet apart, eighteen inches between the hills. I marked the ground with a plow, dropped the seed in the furrow, and plowed a furrow over for covering, so that there should be fair comparison with large seed put in by the same method. I wanted no coaxing nor playing with fancy seed. In the fall I plowed out and sold 103 bushels from the half acre, and what were not plowed out of course I did not get. I planted fourteen rods of early rose, the seed cut to single eyes and one piece in the hill. From the piece I dug thirty bushels of good-sized potatoes.

BONES are fed to fowls in two forms—in either a fresh or a calcined state. The former method is much the better, as the bones are rich in both organic and inorganic matter, just as they were in the frame-work of the animal from which they were taken. In this condition they are easily and quickly taken up by the secretive organs and appropriated to supply the wastes and wants of the system. Burned or calcined bones are freed from all organic matter, and there remain only the ashes of the bones, which are chiefly lime (phosphate and carbonate), and consequently inferior to fresh bone. The only objection to fresh bones is the difficulty of keeping them fresh. The best and most satisfactory substitute is burnt bones. The water is removed by the heat, leaving the lime in a dry and crisp state easily crushed.—Exchange.

WE find lining the shell a thin skin, which, when kept in healthy condition by the albumen of the egg, is impervious to air; but, if the eggs remain too long in one position, the yelk, being heavier than the albumen, gradually sinks through it, and comes in contact with the skin. As it has none of the qualities requisite for keeping the skin lubricated and healthy, the skin soon becomes dry and pervious to air, which penetrates it to the yelk, causing the mass to rot. Therefore the true plan is to keep the yelk in its central position. By doing this, the egg can be preserved for a long time. My plan for accomplishing this is to take a keg or barrel, and pack the eggs on their sides, end to end, laying a tier first around next to the staves, so continuing until a layer is made, and so on till the barrel is full. Use oats for packing; jar them down as much as is required to keep them firmly in their places, and head up the barrel ready for market. By rolling the barrel about a quarter around every few days, the yelks of the eggs will be kept as required.—Cor. American Stock Journal.

About the House.

TO WHITEN A RED NOSE.—Stop using salt, the cause of erysipelas.

HOW TO CURE BUNIONS.—Tallow dropped from a lighted candle on the affected part will eradicate the heat and finally remove the bunion. A strip of candle should also be wound around the corn. Bandage at night.

DRESSING FOR COLD SLAW.—To the well-beaten yelk of one egg add a little milk, two or three table-spoonfuls of vinegar, a small piece of butter; stir it over the fire until it comes to a boil.

BREAD SAUCE.—Pour boiling milk on a slice of bread without crust, then beat it fine and add a little salt and whole pepper-corns; serve it hot, in a sauce tureen.

TO KEEP JUICE OF A PIE FROM BOILING OVER.—Wet the edges of both crusts; press tightly together; stick a fork several times through the upper crust to allow the steam to escape.

TO PICKLE PEACHES.—Take as much vinegar as will cover the quantity of peaches you have. After it has boiled sufficiently sweeten it to your taste, put in your spices, cloves, cinnamon, or mace. Boil together, for a little while, then put in your peaches (peeled, or with the skins on, as you prefer). Boil for fifteen minutes, or until they are tender. Take them out, and boil the vinegar down until it is strong enough to keep them. Keep in a cool place.

PORK CAKE.—One pound pork, chopped fine; add one pint of hot water to dissolve it; let it cool; then add two cupfuls sugar, two pounds raisins, stoned and chopped; one pound of currants, half pound of citron, cut fine; one tablespoonful of spices—cloves, allspice, cinnamon, mace—one nutmeg, one pound of flour, and two teaspoonfuls of soda. This makes a nice large cake. Bake in a slow oven four hours.

MUSHROOM SAUCE.—One half-pint of button mushrooms, one half-pint of good beef gravy, one table-spoonful of mushroom catchup, thickening of butter and floor; put the gravy into a saucepan, thicken it, and stir over the fire until it boils; prepare mushrooms by cutting off the stalks and wiping them free from grit and dirt; put then into the gravy, and let them simmer very gently about ten minutes; then add catchup and serve.

TO CLEANSE WHITE RIBBON.—Dissolve, by means of gentle heat, one tablespoonful strained honey, one tablespoonful shavings of good common soap in one-half teacupful pure alcohol; spread ribbon smoothly on clean board; rub the mixture on both sides with a piece of white flannel until the stains disappear; rinse thoroughly in cold water, changing it often, blueing the last; do not wring, but strip repeatedly through the fingers; iron while wet between two cloths; if carefully done, only the natural stiffness will be retained; colors can be treated in same manner without injury.

INSECT-RAVAGES.

Labors of the Locust Commission Over for the Year—A Report in Preparation.

The United States Commission which was organized for the purpose of investigating the subject of insect-ravages in the West, and of devising a remedy for the evil, has finished its field-labors for the year. Its members will soon assemble in Washington to complete their annual report to Congress. This report will make a volume of about 500 pages. It will be ready for distribution in February or March.

Among other interesting questions to be treated of in the report, the migratory habits of the locust will be described, showing that, like many species of birds, these insects journey at certain fixed seasons southward, and at certain other seasons return to the place of their origin. These migrations being foreseen, steps may be taken to protect from their ravages the fields which lie under their line of flight. Many methods of accomplishing this are suggested, some of the most effective of which are the direct fruit of the researches and experiments made by this commission. It is shown that the destructive propensities of these pests can, by timely precautions, be practically neutralized. The definite limits, beyond which the locusts have not ventured, are carefully fixed, and the crops which are most liable to destruction, and the best methods of procedure, with regard to the protection of each, are specifically given. The insects' feeding habits are treated of at great length, and form an interesting feature of the report. The examinations of the stomachs of more than ninety species and 690 specimens were made with special reference to this subject, and the value hitherto placed on these aids by entomologists is fully sustained by the results now arrived at.

Among the discoveries made by the commission, those relating to the habits of the silky mite and of the blister beetles will be of interest to entomologists. The former is an eight-legged creature which preys on the locust eggs. It is proved to be the mature form of the little six-legged mite, which is parasitic to the locust. Of the larval habits of the blister beetle nothing has heretofore been known, notwithstanding that the attention of scientific men has been directed to the matter for many years, both on account of its value to commerce under the name of the Spanish fly and of the injury it causes to potatoes and some other plants. Many facts of interest with regard to the origin and habits of this insect have been discovered, and will be made the subject of a chapter in the report.

Birdlime.

Among the many industries of Japan is the manufacture of birdlime. It is, of course, principally employed for the snaring of birds and animals. By its means animals as large as monkeys are caught. When once they get the stuff on their paws they soon cover themselves with it, and so exhaust themselves in trying to get rid of it that they fall an easy prey. Birds also as large as ducks and every variety of smaller ones are taken by it. Rats are easily caught by spreading a small quantity on a piece of board or paper, and placing it near their holes. It is spread upon a bamboo leaf, and used during the summer for catching flies or other insects. Flea traps are made for its service, and occasionally used by the Japanese in bed. Birdlime is also used by the Japanese for medicinal purposes, and considered one of the best cures for wounds. Japan is the only country where it is regularly manufactured on a large scale, the principal tree from which it is made being a dark evergreen from the mountains in the south.

Served Him Right.

A man from this city, with his bride, made a sensation at the Westfield depot yesterday. Leaving his lady at the depot, he started on an errand and was bitten by a dog. Rushing back, he asked the lady for money to pay the doctor, whom he must see instanter. The woman was disgusted, and declared she was tired of paying out money for him. He ventured to inquire if she was not his wife, whereupon she repudiated the idea with scorn, saying the only claim he had upon her was a certificate which she herself had to pay for. This was too much, and the forsaken one burst forth with, "Oh, Clara! is this the way you cast me off? Oh, Clara, Clara!" But Clara was incorrigible, and, ordering all her baggage rechecked, left on the train for New Haven."—Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

A Terrier Dog Eating a Baby Alive.

At 9 o'clock Thursday night an accident occurred at the house of Mrs. Dalby, No. 213 Customhouse street, which is perhaps without a parallel. It appears that the lady placed her baby, aged 5 months, in bed, and on leaving the room locked up a terrier dog in it. On returning to the room she found her child in an insensible condition and the dog gnawing at the unfortunate little creature's foot, which it had already lacerated to a horrible extent. The child's foot is so badly mangled that amputation is thought to be necessary. The vicious animal was taken out and shot by Officer Morrison.—New Orleans Democrat.

DR. TANNER'S LONG FAST.

Going Without Food Forty-two Days.

[Minneapolis Cor. New York World.]

Dr. H. S. Tanner, the hero of "the six-weeks' fast," has published a very long letter on the subject, the main point of which is the offer contained at the close. That such a feat as he claims to have done was not an impossibility, he contends from the cases of the Savior, whom, however, he admits to have been more than human, and of the wife of Dr. Smith, of this city, who is said to have lived fifty-seven days with no other nourishment than a little gum-arabic water. He also cites the instances of Kane, Fremont, and other explorers, who have preserved their vitality under prolonged fasting and hardship; then goes on to argue that in "the hibernations of cold-blooded reptiles and certain superior forms of animated nature we have abundant evidence to support the assumption that total abstinence from food for many months does not involve the total extinction of the vital principle." Hibernating animals, Dr. Tanner says, show no loss of flesh after passing a winter without food (which, indeed, is not usually the case); all through the parental period the embryo child exists without air or food, and there are innumerable well-authenticated cases of catalepsy or trance in which persons, from a variety of causes, have sunk into a morbid state which has been mistaken for death. In these cases, as in hibernating animals, the involuntary forces were suspended, the lungs and heart no longer heaved and pulsated, the blood ceased to circulate, and the limbs grew stiff and cold. Thousands in this condition have been prematurely buried, come to life, turned over in their coffins, and perished. The Doctor contends that this condition of suspended animation is identically the same as that found in animals during the winter repose, and that there is nothing to show why it should not exist for an indefinite period, as the same law that sustains the lower animals through the long, tedious winter months in a condition of suspended animation is amply sufficient to sustain and keep alive the vital spark in the higher forms of animated nature, when conditions are favorable. When the voluntary powers of our bodies are exhausted they fall asleep at night, and in the morning we wake up refreshed. But when the involuntary powers are entirely exhausted by pain or fevers, or sickness in general they fall asleep. This sleep we call death. If not entirely exhausted, but closely approximating to it, then we get the condition above described. Hence at death, could the laws of chemistry that decompose our bodies be suspended, and could the entire system, blood and all, be kept in entirely the same condition as when we expired, we should wake up after few days in perfect health. Says Dr. Tanner:

"It was with a desire to know more about this change, to probe its mysteries, that I voluntarily undertook the discomforting task of exhausting the involuntary forces of my system by forty-two days of total abstinence from food, and by daily exercises I so far succeeded as to be brought to the very portals of the tomb. I could 'almost see over to the other shore'; the heart's action was well-nigh suspended; for a number of days there was no perceptible circulation in the extremities. In consequence of my own imprudence in drinking cold water to excess and unduly exercising on the thirty-eighth day of my fast, which induced persistent retching and vomiting, with intervals of severe hiccough, the experiment was not pushed to the extent desired and intended. I do not hesitate to declare it as my firm belief that it is not impossible for human beings, peculiarly constituted and under favorable conditions, to remain for months in a condition of suspended animation (like the lower animals), deprived of air, food, and water, and buried six feet under ground, withal. It is a well-established fact that hibernating animals do exist for months in a condition of suspended animation. Who, in the face of these facts, dare affirm that man, the crowning glory of all animal creations, is incapable of such experience?"

By way of final argument is adduced the familiar case of the Sikh fakir, who could retain life during a period of ten months when buried under the ground in a sealed box.

The Doctor then announces his willingness to repeat his fast under strict tests, but he does not wish to do so to obtain notoriety, to gratify idle curiosity, or to make money. This, however, he will do: He will repeat the experiment under the strictest surveillance for $5,000, the amount to be raised and deposited in any trustworthy bank in Minneapolis or St. Paul. If he succeeds in totally abstaining from food for forty days $1,000 shall be subject to his order at the expiration of the time allotted to the experiment; the remaining $4,000 shall be subject to the order of the Matron of the House of Refuge at Minneapolis, to aid her in her noble endeavors to reclaim the unfortunate. If he fails in totally abstaining from food for the time specified, then all claim on the money shall be forfeited, but in such event the amount shall constitute a poor fund to be distributed for charitable purposes as properly selected committees shall direct.

A Queer Prescription.

On one occasion when I was ill, the General called in Dr. Hunt, his family physician. The doctor was a tall, lank, ugly man—"as good as gold," but with none of the graces that are supposed to win young ladies; yet he was married to one of the loveliest young creatures I ever knew. Gen. Jackson accompanied him to my room, and, after my pulse had been duly felt and my tongue duly inspected, they drew their chairs to the fire and began to talk. "Hunt," suddenly exclaimed the President, "how came you to get such a young and pretty wife?" "Well, I'll tell you," replied the doctor. "I was called to attend a young lady at the convent in Georgetown. Her eyes were bad; she had to keep them bandaged. I cured her without her ever having a distinct view of me. She left the institution, and a year afterward she appeared here in society, a belle and a beauty. At a ball I introduced myself, without the slightest ulterior design, as the physician who had restored her sight, although I supposed she had never really seen me. She instantly expressed the most heartfelt gratitude. It seemed so deep and genuine that I was touched. That very evening she informed me that she had a severe cold, and that I must again prescribe for her. Well; it don't look reasonable, but I did it. I wrote my name on a bit of paper, folded it and handed it to her, telling her she must take that prescription. She read it and laughed. 'It's a bitter pill,' she said, 'and must be well gilded if ever I take it.' But whether it was bitter or whether it was gilded, we were married."—Lippincott.

No Use Fighting Against Fate.

A boy, about 13 years old, was Saturday forenoon dragging a big, sneakish-looking cur along High street to find an owner for the canine. Ringing a door bell he said to the housemaid who answered it:

"I've brought your dog home."

"My dog!" she exclaimed, as she looked down upon the embarrassed dog.

"Yes; gimme two shillings and I'll tie him up in the back yard."

"I'll give you a broom-sticking if you don't leave!" she screamed as she grabbed for him.

He dragged the dog across the street to where a girl was scrubbing the front steps, and, bringing a smile to his face, he said:

"Your feller in Chicago sent you this dorg by express to put in your Christmas stocking. The charges are 50 cents. Where shall I tie him up?"

"Get out with ye—I'm no greenhorn!" she said, as she raised the brush to hit him.

The boy pulled on the rope with both hands and got the reluctant dog half a block farther, when he met a boy carrying home ten pounds of buckwheat flour. He blocked the way and said:

"Bub, yer father told me to bring this dorg up to you and collec 30 cents."

"I hain't got no farther," answered the lad.

"Who said you had—I was only fooling. Say, bub, this 'ere is the beautifulest dorg you ever sot eyes on. He kin sing, dance, clean off the snow from the walk, and bring in rabbits from the country. I'll take a quarter for him."

"I hain't got a no money," replied the boy.

"I'll trade him for a knife."

"I havn't got a knife."

"Any old skates?"

"No," answered the boy with the flour, as he dodged around the dog and hurried on.

The other looked down on the canine with mingled sadness and indignation. The dog braced back at an acute angle, his eyes shut and his tail lying on the walk, waiting for the boy to say:

"Oh h—h! if I knew how I'd blast ye! I kept you hid away for a week, and I've hauled you all over town, and you ain't even a three-cent dog. I've fit inte for more'n a month to get some chink for Christmas, and here I am, dead-broke and no assets but you, you old sole leather colored skulk! I've got desperate, and I'm going to shed your blood!"

He slackened on the rope to administer a kick, and the dog made a jump and gained his liberty. He ran off around the corner, and the boy leaned against a tree-box and mused:

"There's only one plan left. I'll take paregoric enough to make me sleep from Monday night to Wednesday morning, and I won't know nothin' 'bout Christmas nor nothin'!"—Detroit Free Press.

How Mr. Emery Nominated His Wife.

Enoch Emery is editor of the Peoria (Ill.) Transcript. A few months ago he married a Miss Mary Whitestead, who at the time was Superintendent of Schools in that county. In the course of time the election season rolled around, and the lady aspired for a renomination before the Republican County Convention. Her husband was a delegate, and the following account of how he presented her to the convention is given in an Illinois paper: "When Enoch Emery arose in the Peoria County Convention to nominate the candidate for County Superintendent of Schools, there came a sudden lull in the proceedings. Every one became interested, and the delegates leaned forward in breathless attention. One could have heard a horse cough in that awful stillness. The emotion extended even to the good Enoch himself. He arose, diffidently toying with his spectacles, first cleaning them with a new cambric handkerchief, and then, placing them on his forehead, said: 'I put in nomination for the office of County Superintendent of Schools Mrs. Mary Whitestead [a long pause] Emery. [Fluttering among the delegates.] I nominated her four years ago [sensation], and, as I was in some sense responsible for her as an official, I got to watching her. [Cheers.] I watched her close and saw her real worth. [Encouraging cheers.] I was drawn nearer and nearer to her [Cries of 'Good! Go on!'], and the closer I got to her the better I liked her.' [Storm of cheers and yells and cries of 'Whoopee!'] She was nominated without a dissenting voice."

A Millionaire's Miseries.

Jay Gould is a very recluse in his habits, being evidently afraid of violence. One reason for this is the self-consciousness of having ruined more men than any other stock blower. He was assaulted last summer by Selover (one of his victims), who, had it not been for fear of the law, would have shot him. Being prevented from this, he pitched him down an area and left him to crawl out as best he could. The fact that Gould's former confederate, "Jim Fisk," was murdered by one of his victims shows the former what desperate men may do, and must impress him with a sense of his own danger. Gould is in ill-health, and, though he has made an immense fortune, he is unhappy. He knows how easily such money may be lost. He cannot retire, for that would be greater misery. No, he must remain and fight it out to the last. Then he knows that he is not safe in the street, and it is useless to appeal to the courts of law for protection. Jim Fisk had bought up the courts, but that did not protect him from the assassin. It is a question how many millions are necessary to make a man happy in such a position.—New York Letter to Utica Herald.

JAPAN has 3,691 postoffices, which distributed last year 24,000,000 letters and postal-cards and 5,000,000 papers. Postal-cards, stamped-wrappers, money-orders and savings banks are all included in the system.

LEGISLATIVE JOKES.

Reminiscences of Robert Dale Owen.

Like most of my colleagues who lived in remote portions of the State [Indiana], I traveled on horseback to attend the Legislature; part of the way along bridle-paths; sometimes swimming creeks, or, if we were fortunate enough to find a canoe, depositing therein saddles and saddle-bags, and trailing our horses swimming behind. A trunk for those who indulged in such a luxury was sent on by a carrier.

The Legislature was composed chiefly of farmers, plain, honest, genial men, with a few sharp-witted lawyers and other professionals often taking prominent parts. Now and then I could not forbear a smile at the ignorance, especially in common facts in science, that sometimes peeped out. The hall in which we met being often irregularly heated by two large cast-iron stoves, my friend, Chris Graham, member from Warwick county, moved that the doorkeeper be authorized to buy two thermometers so that an even temperature might be maintained. Thereupon an old farmer from a remote county objected. He did not know, he said, just what sort of machines the gentleman wanted to keep us warm; but these out-of-the-way patent contrivances were always expensive, and he supposed it would need a man to attend to each and keep it in order; for his part, a stove, or what he liked much better—a big wood-fire, was good enough for him.

But, if science was not adequately represented among us, sound judgment in many practical matters and an earnest sense of duty were. The venality which now stains so many of our legislative bodies was unknown. Economy, occasionally degenerating into parsimony, was practiced, and I am very sure that no member went home richer than he came, except what he may have saved out of $3 a day after paying expenses. And they were a lively, genial body in their way. Nothing took better with them than a merry story or a practical joke. Of the latter, one instance came very near having a serious result.

It was toward the close of the session, when we were waiting to receive bills from the Senate, with little else to do meanwhile. Several young ladies of my acquaintance came into the Speaker's lobby, where I then happened to be. One of them told me that, a few evenings before, Mr. Cutter, a young member, had made to them a solemn promise that he would introduce a bill taxing old bachelors, and that they had come to see that he kept his word; would I please tell him so? I did her bidding, of course.

Now, G. W. Cutter was our poet, and one of no mean order; author of the celebrated "Song of Steam," beginning:

> Harness me down with your iron bands
> Be sure of your curb and rein;
> For I scorn the power of your puny hands,
> As the tempest scorns a chain.
> How I laughed, as I lay concealed from sight,
> For many a countless hour,
> At the childish boast of human might,
> And the pride of human power!

a poem which Blackwood, not overprone to commend American literature, pronounced to be "the best lyric of the century." Its author afterwards married the well-known actress, Mrs. Drake, many years his senior.

When I delivered to him the message from the young ladies, he was at first inclined to shirk the matter; but, when encouraged to go through with it, he drew up a bill at once providing that on every bachelor over the age of 30 there be imposed an annual tax of $10, the amount to go the school fund. I suggested an amendment, which he incorporated in his bill, thus: "Provided, that if such bachelor shall make it appear to the satisfaction of the court doing county business that he has twice offered marriage and been twice refused, he shall be exempted from said tax."

Then I posted the Speaker as to what we had on hand, and he recognized Cutter as soon as he rose. The rules were suspended and the bill was read twice. Thereupon we had a jovial debate, interspersed with all manner of gibes against bachelors. One speaker opposed the bill.

"We have adopted the ad-valorem system," he argued; "we tax according to intrinsic values. Therefore, we impose no tax on the contents of the rag-bag, or the chips in the wood-yard; why, then, on an article so utterly useless to society as an old bachelor?"

Finally, the rules again suspended, we actually passed the bill!—rather taken by surprise, when the vote was announced, at what we had done, and a little concerned as to how our constituents might take it. But we were in no mood to reconsider the vote. So we urged the Clerk to report to the Senate at once. Then, having adjourned the House, we followed, accompanied by the young ladies, to see the result.

The spirit of frolic is infectious. The Senate took up our bill at once; it was read a first and second time, and put on its passage. Then two or three of the more "grave and reverend seigniors" made a serious stand against it; and, finding the tide for the time too strong against them, availed themselves of the lateness of the hour to procure an adjournment of the Senate. Next day it was laid on the table by a small majority.

I afterward asked our Governor if he would have signed it.

"Why not?" he replied. "I see no impropriety in the bill; and, as to its expediency, you gentlemen of the House and Senate would have been responsible for that."—Robert Dale Owen, in Scribner.

Cornelius J. Vanderbilt's Recipe for Bores.

Mr. Cornelius J. Vanderbilt rises at times to the height of interest and instruction on his cross-examination. He did this, for instance, when explaining his habit of borrowing money. Though he did not borrow money when he had no need for it, he often used his need and his ability to borrow for a more justifiable purpose than the simple one of getting the wherewithal to meet expenses. He borrowed to relieve himself of bores. He entertained liberally, and some men abused his hospitality. They did this, unwittingly, at their peril. The first thing they knew the host would want to "borrow a little money" of them. In the particular case of which witness was speaking, the guest loaned him money. That was the last of the guest and his money. He was of so retiring a character that he never ventured to prefer a request for repayment. He hadn't the courage to face Cornelius J. after loaning him funds. He ceased to be a bore. This is a valuable recipe. The world of bored people is indebted to Mr. Vanderbilt for it.—Utica Herald.

ALL SORTS.

HORSESHOES are made in California of compressed rawhide.

CALIFORNIA exports $10,000,000 worth of wood per annum.

TENNESSEE'S tobacco crop is estimated at 60,000,000 pounds.

THE cultivation of teas is to be attempted in South Carolina.

COAL was never lower in New York city than it is at present.

THERE are 500 convicts working on one North Carolina railroad.

THE United States now use more postal cards than any other nation.

IT is a fact that 248 English persons went mad from love last year.

PENNSYLVANIA produced over 30,000,000 pounds of tobacco last year.

ORANGES are 40 cents a hundred—twelve for a nickel—in New Orleans.

THE capital of Georgia, by a big vote of the people, is to remain where it is.

AN Iowa farmer recently sold sixty-three hogs which averaged 433 pounds.

OF sixty-nine words which make up the Lord's Prayer, only five are not Saxon.

HEAVY failures in Montreal have brought business feeling there into a ticklish condition.

WHEN a mother goes on a whaling expedition she rarely fails to get all the blubber she wants.

THE Democrats of Indiana will hold their convention Feb. 20, 1878, and it will consist of 1,067 delegates.

REMEDY FOR DANDRUFF.—Cleanse the hair with egg and water; if the dandruff afterward be in excess, it is caused by unwholesome food, probably salt. Stop the use of salt.

BEFORE the war Mississippi and Alabama were the largest cotton-producing regions of the South, but neither one ever exceeded the 650,000 bales produced by Texas last year.

THE Rev. Wm. Gleeson, in a recent lecture in San Francisco, on Ireland's independence, said that there are from 18,000,000 to 20,000,000 Irishmen on the globe, and that an army of 250,000 could be easily raised to remove British supremacy in Ireland.

FOR THE HOLIDAYS

LORD & TAYLOR

NEW YORK.

WE INVITE ATTENTION TO THE FOLLOWING DEPARTMENTS OF OUR ESTABLISHMENTS. THE LOW PRICES AT WHICH OUR GOODS ARE MARKED, HAVE SPECIAL REFERENCE TO THE HOLIDAY SEASON, AND BARGAINS WILL BE FOUND THROUGHOUT THE HOUSE, THIS SEASON'S IMPORTATIONS GIVING US AN UNEQUALED STOCK OF GOODS.

BLACK SILKS,

handsome and durable, all widths $1.00 to $3.50. The GREAT AMERICAN INDESTRUCTIBLE SILK, $1.20, $1.25, and $1.50.

PLAIN COLORED SILKS,

new shades, commencing as low as 75c. per yard, and at $1.00, same as quality of last season at $1.25. Fancy Broche and Damasse Figures of the new Paris shades, from $2.00 upwards. Trimming Satins at $1.00, worth $1.25.

THE PRICES AT WHICH WE OFFER OUR SILKS ARE ONE-QUARTER TO ONE-THIRD LESS THAN LAST SEASON.

☞ A SILK DRESS IS A HANDSOME HOLIDAY PRESENT.

IN DRESS GOODS

there is richer display of colorings and brilliant effects this season than for many years past.

The mixed COSTUME CLOTHS range in price from 50c. a yard to $3.00, and on low-priced DRESS GOODS, from 10c. a yard up, many of them being as effective as the heavier fabrics.

Shawls, Mantles and Wraps.

India Valley Cashmere Shawls from $100.00 up. India Filled Centers at $50.00 and up.

Real Dacca, Chedda and Striped India Shawls, new designs, from $10.00 upwards. Also, full lines British, French and German Shawls in beautiful new styles, of the best and most reliable manufacture. Paris Mantles and Cloaks of the latest modes from $15.00 up, and Berlin from $5.00.

Ladies' and Children's Suits and Fine Under Clothing.

These departments embrace everything pertaining to Female Costume, suited to all ages and circumstances. For full particulars see catalogues

HOSIERY.

Ladies', Misses', and Children's Hosiery from $1.50 a dozen, up to the finest goods. All the newest and prettiest designs in Hosiery are represented in our stock in Silk, Cotton and Merino.

FURS.

Alaska Seal Sacques, from $65.00 up.
Alaska Seal Muffs from $6.00 up.
Alaska Seal Boas, from $6.00 up.
Mink Muffs and Boa, from $12.50 a set, upward.
Silk Fur-lined Garments, from $15.00.
Alaska Sable Sets, from $7.50.
A good set of Furs as low as $5.00.
☞ A SET OF FURS IS A SUITABLE AS WELL AS SEASONABLE HOLIDAY PRESENT.

GENTS' FURNISHING.

DRESSING GOWNS, SMOKING JACKETS AND CAPS, SCARFS, TIES, UMBRELLAS, GLOVES, AND OTHER ARTICLES FOR GENTLEMEN, SUITABLE FOR THE HOLIDAYS TO WHICH THE ATTENTION OF LADIES IS INVITED.

GLOVES.

Kid, Silk, Lisle Thread and Merino Gloves of the new colors and shapes, in great variety.

Lord & Taylor's Kid Gloves, 2 buttons, warranted, at $1.00 per pair, price last season $1.50.

ALSO,

Lace, Cambric, Linen and Silk Handkerchiefs, and beautiful Neckerchiefs, all prices from 25c. upward, and all kinds Dress Trimmings to match our goods.

☞ Our Goods are all first-class. We make a point to fill all orders exactly and to the interest of purchasers. We guarantee all purchases to be satisfactory to buyers, and stand ready to remedy all errors. We invite orders, convinced that a first trial will insure us the regular custom hereafter.

Catalogues of our entire stock sent to any address on application.

All orders for Goods to be accompanied by the money, or where parties wish Goods will be sent by Express, C. O. D. Where the remittance is too large, we always return the difference.

Broadway & Twentieth St.
Grand, Chrystie & Forsyth
Streets, N. Y.

Auburn Courier.

AUBURN, INDIANA, JAN. 17, 1878.

—Gov. Bishop, of Ohio, was inaugurated this week. From the reports of our dailies it was a grand affair.

—"Little Mac" took the oath of office on the 15th. Bishop was just one day ahead of him. Significant, isn't it?

—Why is it that we have not had any silver tongued orators to listen to There are lots of hard money men here.

—Daniel Voorhees will soon shoot off his silver gun. The Senate of the United States will do well to listen to the Tall Sycamore. He has few equals as an orator.

—The opening year is replete with financial disaster. The failures are chronicled thick and fast, and we would ask our Republican friends, how like you the prospects?

—Hayes—beg pardon, perhaps we should have said Mr. Hayes—will not make any more appointments for the New York Custom House at present. The scorer will please tally one for dandy Conkling.

—A great mass meeting in the interest of the "dollar of the fathers" was held at Indianapolis last Thursday evening. Nine-tenths of the citizens of the State indorsed the resolutions adopted at the meeting.

—Our Republican brethren are unduly excited. They must expect these little skirmishes from time to time until the 4th of March, 1881. These are only slices of the day of judgment; then the day of judgment itself will begin.

—The Supreme Court of this State has recently decided, in an appeal case from Tippecanoe county, that claims filed with the Township Trustee for sheep killed by dogs, must be paid in full in the order in which they are filed, untill all the funds are exhausted.

—And now prominent Republicans, who took a leading part in the Presidental campaign and the Electorial Conspiracy, begin to shriek "Fraud!" We shall not be surprised to hear the cry swell to tones so loud as to make Hayes' stolen home in the White House a very uncomfortable place to stay in.

—Senator Edmunds also comes to the rescue of the public faith. He can not recognize the silver dollar, and knows the people will never pay the bonds in that metal. Mr. Edmunds might as well make up his mind that they will be paid in silver or not at all. The west and south will take care of their bonds.

—There is a general feeling of relief in business circles that winter has relieved the country from the mud embargo. The wheels of commerce are once more set in motion, farmers are marketing their products giving them the means to pay debts and buy goods, labor is finding employment, and in a thousand ways has the advent of winter lifted the load of despondency.

—Likely Democratic candidates for President in 1880—Geo. B. McClellan, Governor of New Jersey; Samuel J. Tilden, of New York; Sanford E. Church, of New York; Senator Thurman, Senator Pendleton and Governor R. M. Bishop, of Ohio (with many a dark horse in the stable); Thomas Hendricks, Indiana. If death were to remove all but one of the above mentioned gentlemen, the survivor would wear crape two feet thick.

—The Lagrange correspondent of the Walcottville Gazette writes: "When one man boasts to another of having cleared seven thousand dollars in the last year, out of bonds and mortgages and shaving notes, and after being interrogated as to how much he had given to benevolent purposes, replied, "Not one damned cent," the country may well despair of seeing better times until such sharks are debarred the privilege of robbing the people in this heartless way. "Man's inhumanity to man, makes countless thousands mourn."

—So much has been said in behalf of the silver dollar, and so many sound arguments have been adduced in favor of its remonetization, that it seems superfluous to attempt further ergument, and yet, while there is a chance of the measure being defeated in the Senate, or vetoed in the White House, it will be well for the press to continue the cry until the act is "unfait accompli." Whatever Mr. Hayes' policy may be, and it is hinted that he has an opinion which is adverse to the popular sentiment of the country, he will hardly attempt to exercise the one man power, in opposition to the demand of a nearly united nation.

—Sherman is gathering in his victims at a rate that is alarming. The bankruptcy officers are kept busy. Ruin's harvest seems to be at hand. The daily papers are filled with failures and the details of loss and pauperism. Despite this alarming state of affairs, John Sherman goes on with his schemes for resumption—playing into the hands of the money power without any regard for consequences. The people's representatives in Congress should hasten to put the seal of condemnation on this ruinous policy by passing the Anti-Resumption Act and the Silver Bill

THE NEW YORK STORE,
AUBURN, INDIANA.

NOTICE TO TAX-PAYERS.

To the Tax-Payers of De Kalb County.

In compliance with the laws of the State of Indiana, I, DANIEL GONSER, treasurer of said county, hereby notify the Tax Payers thereof that the rate of taxation for the year A. D. 1877 are correctly stated in the following table, showing the amount of tax in cents levied upon each one hundred dollars valuation, in the several townships and incorporated villages in said county, as the same appears on the tax duplicate of De Kalb county, for said year.

	State Levies.				Town and Township Levies.							County Levies.
	State Taxes		School Tax		Township Tax.	Road Tax	Com. School Tax	Spec'l. School Tax		Addit'l. Special School		County Tax	Bond Int.	Total Tax	Total Poll
TOWNSHIPS AND INCORPORA'D TOWNS	On each $100.	On each Poll.	On each $100.	On each Poll.	On each $100.	On each $100.	On each $100.	On each $100.	On each Poll	On each $100.	On each Poll.	On each $100.	On each $100.	On each $100.	Total Poll.
Butler Townsip.	13	50	16	50	5	20		50	50			45	10	159	150
Jackson “	13	50	16	50	5	15		15	25			45	10	119	125
Concord “	13	50	16	50	5	15		25	50			45	10	129	150
Newville “	13	50	16	50	5	15		35	10			45	10	139	200
Stafford “	13	50	16	50	5	10		40	50			45	10	139	150
Wilmington “	13	50	16	50	5	15		35				45	10	139	100
Union “	13	50	16	50	5	15		5				45	10	109	100
Richland “	13	50	16	50	5	10		25	100			45	10	124	200
Fairfield “	13	50	16	50	5	15		15	40			45	10	119	140
Smithfield “	13	50	16	50	5	15		15	40			45	10	119	14
Franklin “	13	50	16	50	5	20		20	25			45	10	129	125
Troy “	13	50	16	50	5	15		22				45	10	126	100
Keyser “	13	50	16	50	5	15	10	30	50			45	10	134	150
Auburn Town	13	50	16	50	5	15		25	50	50	100	45	10	189	250
Waterloo “	13	50	16	50	5	15		50	100			45	10	154	200
Butler “	13	50	16	50	5	15		50		50		45	10	204	150
Garrett “	13	50	16	50	5	15		25	50			45	10	129	150

DOG TAX:—For every male; $1.00; for every female, $2.00; for each additional dog, $2.00.

Examine your receipt before leaving the office and see that it covers all your property. People are taxed for what they own on April 1st of each year.

Taxes are due on the 15th day of December, and tax-payers may pay the full amount of such taxes on or before the third Monday of April, or may, at their own option, pay one-half thereof on or before said third Monday and the remaining one-half on or before the first Monday in November following, provided, however, that all road taxes charged shall be paid prior to the third Monday in April, as prescribed by law; and provided, further, that in all cases where as much as one-half of the amount of taxes charged against a tax-payer shall not be paid on or before the third Monday in April, the whole amount charged shall become due and returned delinquent, and be collected as provided by law. Delinquent lands are advertised on or about the first Monday in January, and are sold on the second Monday of February of each year.

The treasurer is responsible for the taxes he could have collected. Therefore tax-payers ought to remember that their taxes must be paid every year.

No county order will be paid to any person owing delinquent tax. As the road tax is all due with the first installment, road receipts must be presented on or before the third Monday of April, or they will not be received. For the collection of which I may be found at my office, in Auburn, as directed by law. Pay your taxes promptly and avoid costs.

DANIEL GONSER, Treasurer of De Kalb county.

December 24th, 1877.

1878. 1878.

ROOT & COMPANY

Have commenced their great annual closing out SALE and will offer during the next 30 days

Bargains

in every description of

CARPETS, DRY GOODS,

FANCY GOODS, HOSIERY,

GLOVES, NOTIONS, &c.

We would advise an early visit as the prices we shall put on many will close them out rapidly.

ROOT & COMPA'Y.

46 and 48 Calhoun Street.

FORT WAYNE, IND.

St. Joe. Gossip.

—W. H. Dills, of Auburn, in town to-day.

—Mrs. A. A. Bittinger, of Ft. Wayne, is visiting friends in this vicinity.

—Miss Green, of Zanesville, O., is visiting her sister, Mrs Van Hyde of this place.

—W. Leighty, of St. Joe hotel, is engaged in buying wheat for M. Case of Spencerville.

—Coburn's corners grangers are in town with their four dollar hogs, selling them at $3.60.

—Constable Jones of Garrett, arrested an old man at that place, on a writ of attachment, I believe.

—George Wilmot says he has not shaved for 23 years, and yet he has not a very abundant crop of Sampson's strength.

—Someone visited Frank Engle's flour barrel one night last week, and got away with all the flour Frank had. Jake says that comes of not locking up the barrel.

—David Andress, of the corners, has the finest lot of porkers sold in the market. If a certain other man in that neighborhood would pay a little more attention to watering his squealers perhaps he would get more for them.

RUSTIC.

—Old Tommy Monks has taken up his quarters at the County Farm. Tommy is old and badly crippled with rheumatism, but for all that can do a fair day's work yet.

—The Wabash Courier is one of the best local papers in Indiana. A paper so ably conducted as this one, should have an immense patronage from the community where it is published.

—The man who swore off New Year's day, can be selected from a dozen, by the size of the quid he stuffs into his cheek when he gets hold of another man's box.

—This is a singular winter. There has been a heavy snow storm in Louisiana, and the weather was so cold in Memphis that a negro was frozen to death.

BOY LOST.—A little boy 8 years old, son of John Reesch, this city, left home Wednesday morning and has not returned. Any information will be thankfully received by the parents.

—The question of the Fort Wayne fair grounds has been settled, and the organization will hold another fair next season.

—Francis Murphy, the temperance revivalist, has surprised his friends a little by entering the regular lecture field under the management of the bureau.

DEATH.

Thomas C. only son of Mr. and Mrs T. D. Gross, died last Wednesday, aged 4 months.

The little unfortunate one was named after the editor of this paper and being the only boy baby of our fellow townsman, it's death was greatly regretted by all the mourners of the several families. We sympathize with the parents and friends, as do all who know them.

"There are sighs and tears in yon darkened room,
And every face wears the deepest gloom;
For visions of coffin, and shroud, and pall,
Like midnight shades round their spirits fall.

They have gathered in tears round a loved one's bed,
Who is soon to repose with the silent dead;
And ready they part from his forehead fair
The clustering tresses of golden hair.

'Tis over—the soul, from its prison of clay,
To the land of the blessed hath taken its way;
But a smile, like a sunbeam, yet lingers above,
The lips whose last accents breathed mercy and love.

O, happy the soul that can fearlessly brook,
On the presence of death, with its terrors, to look!

That can lift to the cross an unwavering eye,
And, with faith in the promises, joyfully die."

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of an execution to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court, in a cause wherein Solomon Mier is plaintiff, and Samuel R. Hughes is defendant, requiring me to make the sum of three hundred and seventy-seven dollars and fourteen cents, $377.14, with interest on said judgment and costs, I will expose at public sale to the highest bidder, on SATURDAY, FEBRUARY, 9th, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M., and 4 o'clock P. M. of said day, at the door of the Court House of DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

The south half of the east half of the north east quarter of section thirty-six, 36, in township thirty-four, 34, north of range fourteen, 14, east, in DeKalb county, Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said judgment interest and costs, I will at the same time and place, expose at public sale, the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
By Thos. D. Gross deputy.
Young & Ralston, Att'ys for Plaintiff.
Auburn, Indiana, Jan. 16th, 1878. Pf. $7.25.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Geo. Egnew is plaintiff, and William Strough et al are defendants, requiring me to make the sum of five hundred and ninety dollars and fifteen cents, $590.15, with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder, on SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 9th, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House in Auburn DeKalb county, Indiana the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate; to-wit:

As the undivided one half of lots number twenty, 20, and twenty-one, 21, twenty-two, 22, twenty-nine, 29, thirty, 30, thirty-one, 31, and thirty-two, 32, in Danforth's addition to the town of Butler, in DeKalb county, Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
Pinchin & Boyle, Atty's for plaintiff.
Auburn, Jan. 16th, 1878. Pf. $7.50.

$777 is not easily earned in these times but it can be made in three months by any one of either sex, in any part of the country who is willing to work steadily at the employment we furnish. $66 per week in your own town. You need not be away from home over night. You can give your whole time to the work or only your spare time. We have agents who are making over $20 per day. All who engage at once can make money fast. At the present time money cannot be made so easily and rapidly at any other business. It costs nothing to try the business. Terms and $5 outfit free. Address at once.

H. HALLETT & Co., Portland, Maine.

October 11, 6m [illegible]

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein James Griswold is plaintiff and David Floyd et ux. are defendants, requiring me to make the sum of four hundred and fifty-nine dollars and seventy-eight cents $459.78, with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 2nd, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House in DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

Described as follows to-wit: The first five acres off the west side of the south half of the north-east quarter of section twenty [20].

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interests and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs,

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
By Thos. D. Gross, Deputy.
Penfield & Emanuel Att'ys for plaintiff.
Auburn Jan 9ht, 1878. Pf. $7.50.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Solomon Mier is plaintiff, and L. S. Goodwin et al are defendants, requiring me to make the sum of three hundred and fifty-six dollars and eighty-five cents, [$365.85], with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY, 2nd, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House in Auburn DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate to-wit:

Being a part of south east quarter of section four, 4, township thirty-four, 34 north of range thirteen, 13, east, commencing in the centre of a road running parallel with the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern railroad at a stake being the north east corner of William Peniton's lot sold by Henry Zerkle to said William Peniton, thence east along the centre of said road seventy-six [76] links thence south two 2 chains and thirty-four 34 links thence west one, 1, chain and seven, 7, links, thence north one, 1, chain and thirty-four, 34, links, thence east thirty, 30, links, thence north one, 1, chain to the place of beginning.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
McBride, Morlan & Leas Att'y's for plaintiff.
Auburn Jan. 9th, 1878. Pr. fee $9.50.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Anthony E. Swineford is plaintiff, and John Treesh is defendant, requiring me to make the sum of six hundred and four dollars and fifty cents, $604.50, with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY, 2nd, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M., and 4 o'clock P. M. of said day, at the door of the Court House in DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate to-wit:

Commencing twenty-two feet, 22, north of south east corner of lot number ninety-seven, 97, in the original plat to the town of Auburn, thence north twenty-two feet, 22, thence east eighty feet, 80, thence south twenty-two feet, 22, thence west to the place of begining in DeKalb county, Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said judgment and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
By Thos. D. Gross, Deputy.
W. H. Dills Attorney for plaintiff.
Auburn, Jan 9th, 1878. Pr. fee $8.00.

—Six thousand dollars of Waterloo's debt is due in March, three thousand of which will be paid, and three thousand funded in long bonds.—Press.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein George Ensley is plaintiff and Robert Zacher et ux are defendants requiring me to make the sum of one hundred and forty two dollars, and thirty cents, $142.30, with interest on said decree and costs. I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder on

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 2nd, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House in DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

Town lot number seventy-two [72] in Ensley's 2nd addition to the town of Auburn, in DeKalb County and State of Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs. I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
By THOS. D. GROSS, Deputy.
Penfield & Emanuel, atty's for plff.
Jan. 9th 1878. Pr. fee $7.00.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Thomas H. Spratt, Trustee, is plaintiff, and Andrew J. Little is defendant, requiring me to make the sum of Thirty-five dollars $35.00, with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 2nd, 1878

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House of DeKalb County, Indiana, the rents and profits, for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

Situated in DeKalb county, Ind., to-wit: One and one-half feet front by eighty (80) feet deep adjoining the south half of lot No. ninety-three (93) all in the original plat of the town of Auburn

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said judgment, interest and costs, I will, at the same time and place, expose at public sale, the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation and appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR Sheriff.
By THOS. D. GROSS, Deputy.
Penfield & Emanuel, Atty's for plaintiff
Auburn, Ind., Jan. 9th 1878 Pf. $7.50.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein J. Hemstreet is plaintiff, and Jacob Beck et al, are defendants, requiring me to make the sum of two hundred and ten dollars and fifty cents, $210.50, with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 2nd, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House in DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years of the following real estate, to-wit:

A strip of land thirty feet, 30, in width east and west running the entire length off of west end of lot number sixty-eight, 68, in the original plat to the town of Waterloo, DeKalb county, Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
McBride Morlan & Leas Attorneys for plaintiff.
Auburn, Jan. 9th, 1878. Pr. fee $7.50.

MOODY & HOFFMAN, Attorneys.

STATE OF INDIANA }
DEKALB COUNTY }

In the DeKalb Circuit Court, February term 1878.

William Shutt,
John D. Leighty,
vs.
Joseph Depew,
Isaac N. Depew,
Ellen Depew
and Jonathan Edwards. } Complaint

The plaintiffs by Moody & Hoffman their Attorneys file in open Court an affidavit that said defendant Jonathan Edwards is not a resident of the State of Indiana, and the Court orders that publication hereof be made in the Auburn COURIER.

Notice is therefore given said defendant that unless he appear on the second day of the next term of the DeKalb Circuit Court to be holden on the fourth Monday of February, A. D. 1878, at the court House in Auburn said county and State, and answer or demure to the complaint, herein the same will be heard and determined in his absence.

Witness my name and seal of said Court affixed at Auburn, this 29th day of December 1877.

G. H. K. Moss, Clerk DeKalb Circuit Court.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court, in a cause wherein Joseph Boyer et al are plaintiffs, and Albert Widner is defendant, requiring me to make the sum of three hundred and nine dollars and sixty cents, $309.60 with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 2nd, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House of DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit.

North west quarter of the north east quarter of section twenty-four, 24, township thirty four, 34, north of range thirteen, 13, east, in DeKalb county, Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said judgment, interest and costs I will at the same time and place, expose at public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said judgment, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation and appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
McBride, Morlan & Leas Attorneys for plaintiff.
Auburn, Jan 9th, 1878. Pf. $7.50.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Miles Waterman is plaintiff, and John T. Huykent et al, are defendants requiring me to make the sum of three hundred and eighty-eight dollars and fifty cents, $388.50, with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 2nd 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House in DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

The north west quarter of the north west quarter of section twenty-one, 21, township thirty-five, 35, north of range fourteen, 14, east, containing forty acres, 40, more or less in DeKalb county, Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
McBride Morlan & Leas Atty's. for plaintiff.
Auburn, Jan. 9th, 1878. Pr. fee $7.50

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Jonathan Clutter is plaintiff, and Geo. W. Clutter et al are defendants requiring me to make the sum of twenty-six hundred and forty-five dollars and sixty-six cents $2245.66, with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder on

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 2nd, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M., and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House in DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit.

North half of the south east quarter of section five, 5, township thirty four, 34, north of range thirteen, 13, east, containing seventy-five, 75, acres more or less in DeKalb county Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple, of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
Best & McClellan Attorneys for plaintiff.
Auburn, Jan. 6th, 1878. Pr. fee $7.50

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein William L. Pettit is plaintiff and Geo. Wilmot and Lucinda H. Wilmot are defendants, requiring me to make the sum of two hundred and eighteen dollars with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 2nd, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House in DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years of the following real estate, to-wit:

South half of the north east quarter of section twenty-two, 22, township thirty-three, 33, north of range fourteen, 14, east, containing eighty acres, 80, more or less.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
By Thos. D. Gross, Deputy.
Best & McClellan, Attorneys for plaintiff.
Auburn, Jan. 9th, 1878. Pr. fee $7.25.

Auburn Courier.

Local and Miscellaneous.

Do You Call This a Church.

My soul is in fetters here, its wings are earth-clipped. Things are all too fine; nobody can come in at the door, whose hat and coat and bonnet are not fashionably cut. "Fortune may favor fools, but that's a poor reason why you should make a fool of yourself. One set of French China dinner ware for $35.00; 100 pieces Tea and Dinner $10. We warrant every bit of our solid silver ware and silver plated ware to be of the double and tripple plate, and all stamped with the names of Meriden Britanna Co., the best and largest plating company in the world. Tea set, $25 to 100. writer set, $18 to 60; castors, $4 to 50. Card and Cake stands, pickle castors, knives, spoons, ladles, sugar shells, fruit knives, the best stock of plated at Ward's Cheap Crockery Store, No. 9 Columbia street, Fort Wayne, Ind.

◆

—The editor of this paper having disposed of White Stocking, the difficulty of running a live paper without a fast horse, has been obviated by a former foreman of this office, who has purchased at great expense a fine blooded mare, who has the peculiar faculty of a double motion in her hind legs. On her arrival at Auburn, the owner, although she had been fitted and trained for the race track exclusively, concluded he would have a load of wood. The result was, the wood rack was left in the woods, the wagon near the railroad track with a broken shaft, and the mare after making three somersaults and once lighting on her head, came rushing up to the stable door all white with foam and mud, snorting and panting from the conflict.

MORAL.—Every one to their trade and training, even if it be a horse.

—The rumor that a shooting affray occurred at Cedar Creek, this county, was not built on a "solid foundation." It was near Columbia City, on the Eel River, and we give the report as it appears in the Chicago Times. It says: "For a number of years past a bitter feud has existed between the families of U. Tinkham and S. Kiser. Many unpleasant encounters have taken place which, it has been feared, would yet prove fatal. Monday night an affray occurred which will probably cost Kiser his life. The parties met at a singing school, twelve miles north-west of Columbia City, at the old Centre school house. The difficulty was soon fanned from a spark to a flame, and Tinkham drew a revolver and shot Kiser, the ball taking effect in his breast, penetrating the lungs and producing a fatal wound. Tinkham fled to the woods, hotly pursued by J. Kiser, a brother of Silas, shooting at him at every available opportunity, but without effect. Tinkham gained the woods and made good his escape, and is still at large."

◆

—We have heard of some small fry, Jay Cook's, at Auburn, who are in the habit of getting poor men to work for them for extremely low wages, and then when pay-day comes they pretend, while their purses are well filled, to be out of money, and force their man to take a note from them on as long time as they can get. When he goes away with the note, wondering how he can turn in into bread for his children, the dishonest employer goes to a third party and gives him the money with which to buy the note at a heavy shave, and then the two divide the profits. We cannot tell just how this may suit their idea of fair dealing over at Auburn, but if such a game should be played on a laboring man in this town, we believe the citizens would drum the prepetrators out of town.—Butler Record.

We think the editor of the Butler "Hand Bill" is off the path. We have no firm in this city, to our knowledge, who gives notes to employees. The Hub and Spoke Factory did, about a year ago, pay their hands partly with orders, but these was good at any business house in town for their face. Men of any newspaper ability don't generally come out on their neighboring towns in this manner.

◆

—A peculiar looking tramp was wandering from one saloon to the other all day last Friday. He was a southener having the negro brogue in his speech to perfection. He was very poorly attired, and acted as though he possessed only about half wit. However, there was a keenness about his eye and a manner of grace in his jestures that showed plainly that he was endowed with good natural abilities. He carried a roll of "government paper" as big as your hat, and of course this attracted the especial attention of some of our "smart elicks." He was picked up by one of them and dropped by him ditto. All the detectives in the city and the marshal kept a close eye on him, waiting perhaps for the telegraph wires to announce his arrest. He was offered lodging in the calaboose free of charge, but this was not the place he "had sought," and his followers were left on that plan. He didn't have to go there because his wallot contained the wherewith to buy an ordinary hotel. He finally disappeared and to the Junction went where he was met by his pards and they laid low for suckers in the three card monte business.

◆

—We have received a communication from Garrett, answering the one signed "M. L." We don't know who it is from there being no name attached, and of course to publish it would be against our customs. Articles to appear in the COURIER must be signed by the one who writes them, so that we will know who the persons are.

BOTTLED UP.

A Reporter's Beverage taken Before or After Meals.

—Ask Crist who hit him.

—Blacksmiths are busy.

—Fresh fish in the market.

—Boys, do not be too risky on the ice.

—When are we to have our "January thaw."

—Katie Kapp is learning the cigar trade.

—Not much demand for daily papers just now.

—The beautiful snow fell Sunday afternoon.

—The town was full of teams last Saturday.

—Our schools are largely attended this winter.

—Billy Seward is working on the Republican.

—The churches was largely attended last Sabbath.

—Mel Bowers looks bad. He has the consumption.

Our farmers all speak well of the growing wheat.

—Constable Jones, of Garrett, was in the city Monday.

—Fort Wayne is working up a rape case in high life.

—Have we packed up enough locals for you this week?

—"Rise up and tell what the Lord has done for you."

—The Washington Legislature is in active operation.

—This week ends the publication of the delinquent list

—The Steuben Republican issued a tripple sheet last week.

—Go to Kiblinger & Co's. for iron, steele and horse shoes. 4t

—Pay car on the B & O. Tuesday. The boys are happy.

—Jerry McCartney, of Hicksville, O. was in town Tuesday.

—Our Corunna correspondent is out of sorts. Why is it thus?

—Go to Kiblinger & Co's. for hard ware, stoves and tinware t.

—A new house is going up in Rainier & Headley's Addition.

—Calvin Powers, an old resident of Angola, died last week.

—Jno. Leasure never takes less than three ladies to church.

—Saturday wood sold cheap. 85 cts. buying a wagon-box full.

—We have received the Kendallville News once in three weeks.

—The cigar makers take their "grub" with Mr. Grub this week.

—Young man if you want to cutter fellow out, sleigh the girl.

—Moody & Hoffman appear this week with a new business card.

—Jno. Britton and Tom Cool are trying to make a donkey trade.

—M. F. Long sold one of his celebrated pianos to J. V. Hazzard.

—There were not many dry goods boxes whittled last Sunday.

—Mrs. Long has been taken to the residence of her son Michael —Several tramps were around begging something to eat yesterday.

—The protracted meetings at the M. E. and Baptist churches continue.

—W. B. McConnell has severed his connection with the Angola Herald.

—Our livery men look a little more good natured as the roads get better.

—Obe Cool and lady will occupy the Altenberg property on Seventh street.

—Auburn is without a saw mill One mill in this place would certainly pay.

—The beautiful rain mixed up somewhat with the beautiful snow Monday.

—We are glad to state that our subscribers are paying up pretty promptly.

—Mr. James Anderson, son and better-half visited friends in Angola over Sunday.

—This is the kind of weather that tramps freeze—to everything they get hold of.

—The editor has been away from home on a visit, but is expected back this week.

—We have quite a large supply of old papers on hand just now. Forty cents a hundred.

—After February 1st, don't shoot any more turkeys, or you may have some costs to pay.

—The Justices of the county forked over what fines they collected, to Clerk Moss last week.

—There is not many firms advertised to commence the "Ready Pay System" this year as of old.

—The Republican foreman went last week. He said he had gone far enough west to satisfy himself.

—Carter held the crowd Saturday night. The billiard fever has taken the boys by storm it seems.

—Warren McMeans, one of the members of the Adelphian company, of Albion, died last week.

—The man you can have to work on a farm for nothing and board himself, just about earns his wages.

—Do not flirt with the married women. It annoys their husbands and may possibly shorten your days.

—The song of the Cincinnatian, according to the New York Graphic—"Hold the pork fry ham coming."

—Mice can live any where comfortable but in a church; they fat very slowly in a church. This proves that they can't live on religion any more than a minister can. If our church going people would pay up their dues regularly, one would not hear so much harsh talk from outsiders. To speak plainly, collections and duns from the pulpit, keeps more people away from the church than poor clothes does.

◆

—This is the way a Van Wert lady writes to one of her sister chums. She is visiting in a large city, and making every effort to attract attention. We clip the following from the Van Wert Press: "We attrackled a good eal attenshun while promenandin' the streets like other ladies and holding up our cloze Nobody isn't nothing now which don't hold up their cloze, and the higher you hold 'em the more attenshun you attracx.

◆

—Henry Ward Beecher's recent sermon in which he stated that he had no belief whatever in a future punishment has set all the preachers of New York and elsewhere preaching upon the subject of hell, and many are the beliefs in regard to the state of existance of that unknown place. Beecher, by the standpoint he has taken, has created no small excitement in the minds of the people and many of the press are denouncing him in strong terms for his infidelity.

◆

—He is not handsome, but he has such a pleasant way one cannot help liking him, is a remark often made concerning some popular man. And there are a thousand pretty, engaging little ways which every person may put on without running the risk of being deemed fopish. The sweet smile, the cordial bow, the earnest movement, in addressing a friend, the graceful attention which is so captivating when united with self possession, this will ensure us the good regards of even a churl.

◆

—There is no motto like hope, for one's guidance through life. Storms, shadows and darkness may and must assail our pathway, but the star of hope is always beaming, if we only will but see it, white as a white sail on a dusky sea For a person determined to make the best of everything, there are a variety of proverbial encouragements which never come amiss. "It's a long lane that has no turning." "Fortune's wheel is ever revolving." "Bad luck this time, better next," are all golden legends for the poor and struggling.

◆

—Weamer came out last week with a half column of editorial matter answering a small item that appeared in the COURIER the week previous. An item from his pen generally falls so weak and faint upon the reader's mind that we think we can find other matter that will be more interesting to our readers, than to answer his "lingo of wind." Weamer stands by his party whether the party stands by him or not and a man that possesses this amount of cheek would take the last chew of tobacco from a blind tramp.

◆

—We publish the following by request of the New York Herald. They know the COURIER has a large circulation even in N. Y:

Information wanted of Louis Obly. German decent, 19 years old, 5 feet 6 inches high, light complexion, smooth face, auburn hair, speaks English and German: last heard from in Memphis, Tenn., and Louisville, Ky., in November last. His present whereabouts or information regarding him will be liberally rewarded by his anxious and sick mother, Mrs. Obly, 97 Cedar st., New York City. Southern papers please copy.

◆

—The farmers of Elkhart county have made grand use of the mild open weather through December, by turning over their sod ground and getting it ready for spring planting. Nothing pulverizes such ground half so well as the freezing and thawing process of spring, cleaning it of the eggs and larvæ of worms and insects which prey upon the crops. Winter plowing also enriches the earth by absorbing the fertilizing properties of the snow and spring rains. Land thus worked hardly ever fails to produce heavy summer crops.

◆

—Mason Long and several others were taken into the Baptist church, at Fort Wayne, and from the papers we learn there's more to follow. The Reverend gentlemen in that city have been studiously active in looking to the spiritual wants of the reformed men, and if our ministers would be a little more active with this class of men, they would find a rich and abundant field in which to work in this city, where a harvest can be reaped, if our christian workers will but go out and work in the watery vine yard.

◆

—The New York Store is now open and under full headway, selling more goods than ever, and we predict a large and prosperous trade for it the coming year. The proprietors have merited the good will and wishes of all, and are worthy of a liberal patronage from the citizens of Auburn and DeKalb county. They have the largest and best selected stock of dry goods in the county, and we are glad to know that they are determined to remain with us. We hope the public will lend a helping hand in sustaining them, by patronizing them liberally.

◆

—We are always pleased to recommend a good article. Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup never fails to cure a cough or cold in a short time. Sold in every drug store.

GOOD GOODS.

News of all Kinds Warranted to the Courier Readers.

—The Kendallville Standard gave each of its advertisers a notice last week.

—The boys have found a good skating pond in Mr. Gibson's woods west of town.

—We are glad to learn that the health of Miss Sadie Grogg is improving somewhat.

—I. D. Ryan, Esq. has been down the Eel River buying grain for Mr. Cuppy.

—Go to Kiblinger & Co's. for your axes and cross cut saws. They are warranted. 4t

—It matters not for the present to the Republicans of Indiana what the "harvest shall be."

—Two sisters and a friend of Mrs. E. D. Hartman, of Ohio, are paying the family a pleasant visit.

—We might have furnished more local matter this week, but new "ads." have taken up our space.

—Parlor and heating stoves at cost for the next 30 days, at Kiblinger & Co's. hardware store. 4t.

—Harper's Monthly for February was received last week, full to overflowing with interesting matter.

—The week of prayer has passed. It will be one year again until the angels will have another harvest.

—T. J. Kinsey, a barber from Hicksville, Ohio, was in the city yesterday looking up a location.

—The Wabash Courier suggests that the Republicans of this State call a convention to "nominate a leader."

—The last few cold nights cause a young man to soliloquize upon his forlorn condition in single blessedness.

WANTED.—A good stout girl to do housework, can find a good steady place by addressing, LOCK BOX 250

—We have again placed local matter on first page this week, in order to give us more room upon our inside pages.

—A runaway horse stood on his head on Seventh street last Saturday. He hasn't had exercise enough this winter.

—We hear that Mr. Bert. Killinger, of Waterloo, is making arrangements to buy the Locke saloon in this place.

—We acknowledge the receipt of an invitation, from the Pirouette Club, of Fort Wayne, given January 19th, 1878.

—How about that new leaf you promised to turn over at the begining of the new year. Has it flopped over again?

QUERY: "Why will men smoke common tobacco, when they can buy Marburg Bros. "Seal of North Carolina," at the same price?" DEC 27.1y

—We make our own faces, in a measure, and old ladies are sometimes far more beautiful than their grand-daughters.

—The singing at the M. E. church in the afternoon is conducted by M. F. Long, and at the Presbyterian by Prof. Siler.

—We know of one who has not written the figure seven instead of eight in putting down the new year. He can't write.

—Mr. and Mrs. Dr. Knapp, lately of Fort Wayne, were united with the Presbyterian church by letter last Sabbath.

—There may or may not be a hell in the hereafter, but if there is Beecher will see the "side shown" to his heart's content —Our Butler items did not reach us last week. Come, brace-up, correspondents, we cannot do without your weekly letters.

—The man who was the most anxious for it to freeze up, is now sitting shivering around the kitchen stove anxiously awaiting a thaw.

—A sleeve cuff supplied with a button was tacked up on the corner of Main and Seventh streets yesterday, for the owner to gobble.

—Billy Burlingame, one of the best horsemen in this part of the country, has withdrew his connection from the Cool livery barn.

—The sale at St. John's Tuesday was a large affair. It was thoroughly advertised which accounts for the large crowd in attendance.

MARRIED.—On the 8th of January, by 'Squire Smith, of Fairfield. Mr. Joseph Albright to Miss Mary Hines, both of DeKalb county, Ind.

—Jno. Britton has a new Milburn wagon that he wants to trade for a horse. Here's a good chance for a anyone wanting a wagon.

—The boys are getting mittens nightly at the church. The girls are kind in giving them when the weather so much demands them as now.

—Several weeks have passed and not a fight has occurred nor a "mon" placed into our calaboose. Hard times may have something to do with it.

—We see by a notice in the post office that Mr. Capp found a black valice on the street. The owner can have it by calling at his establishment.

—It is a noticable fact that several of our old gentlemen, who in the past were not church going citizens, attend the services regularly each Sabbath.

—The right thing in the right place is without doubt Dr. Bull's baby syrup, the best remedy for babies while teething. Price only 35c a bottle. Sold by F. E. Davenport.

MONEY MAKES THE HORSE GO.

A Baltimore Express Agent puts Down a Few Hundred.

We heard on the streets a few days ago that there was a little trouble in the express business, but did not publish it on account of the rumor not having a reliable foundation, but now the tale is told in the Cincinnati Enquirer, and we give it as it appears in that paper. It says: "Several months ago a package containing $100 was handed to Ex-Messenger Tanner by the driver of the express company's wagon at Auburn. The package never reached its destination, and no trace could be had of it. The company having confidence in both parties handling the money, let the matter drop, thinking it was accidently lost. On January 9th the same thing happened to both again. The package contained $500 this time. Tanner must have gone with it, as he has not been seen since that trip, nor can any clue be had of him. The driver has Tanner's receipt for both packages."

◆

—A young lad giving his name as Ervin Ritter, about 11 years old, was wandering around the city yesterday, without money, and not very cofortably clothed. From his story he lives between here and Jonesville, on the Saginaw road. He is very forward giving evidence of a poor bringing up. His stories are full of romance, and he has launched himself for a hard row to travel, we think —One thousand shingles, says a newspaper item, will cover one hundred square feet of surface. One shingle, by the way, will cover six inches of a bad boy, and if properly applied where it will do the most good, will be productive of as much benefit and more noise than the one thousand shingles on one hundred square feet of sufarce. Figures won't lie.

◆

◆

—The Elkhart Review states that Mrs Stocking gave birth to a pair of Stockings, weighing 10 pounds each.—Kendallville Standard.

The man that built them Stockings certainly got down to his "knitting" in a lively manner. Just think of 20 lbs. of Stockings for a person to carry, such a mild winter as we have had. Too much yarn, Bro. Myers.

—People with whom a little joke falls upon through the columns of a newspaper, should not get angry or give the writer thereof a cross look as they pass him by on the public streets. There is nothing wrong ment upon our part, and if all would take these things in the same spirit they were given, we could all laugh and grow fat. Remember this, friends.

◆

—List of unclaimed letters remaining in the Auburn post office, up to January 12th, 1878: Boillof Cathrine, DeLong Betsey, Dudley Alice, Heirheart Mrs. M Long F. B., McCoy Joseph, McGran T. M., Miller Jess. M., Park John W., Pirgsley Geo., Smith Mrs. John, Valk J. E., Wilson W. F.

JOSEPH RAINIER, P. M.

◆

Since Beecher's famous sermon declaring against the "old-time hell" nearly every newspaper man in the country has taken to airing his opinion concerning that much talked of brimstone factory. As for us, we are willing to "walk humbly, deal justly" and take the chances.

◆

—It is somewhat to early in the season—not yet quite cold enough, ladies to remind the good husband, after he is nicely encoused in bed, that he has forgotten to wind up the clock, turn off the water, lock the back gate, take in the front door mat and set the buckwheat batter on the kitchen hearth.

◆

—The prettiest bonnet worn at present flares very much at the top of the head and fits closely at the sides, and the wearer can sit down without disarranging her front frizetts. It is predicted that by the next change that they will not extend much below the 18th vertebra of the spinal column.

◆

Groceries Cheaper Than Ever.

—Coffee A. Sugar, 10½c; Coffee C. sugar 9½c; Choice Dried Peaches, 8½c Best Rio Coffee, 25c; 6 Bars Buffalo Soap, 25c; The Best 75c Tea, 50c; and all other goods as low in proportion, at Schabb, Beugnot & Co.

◆

—Hicksville, in our adjoining county was named after the husband of Mrs. Hicks, the gay and festive widow who has lately created such a bobbery by connubiating with the millionaire, Lord We believe she still owns a large amount of real estate there.

Accident.

Mr. John Mitchell, fireman at the lower grist mill, had his finger cut off Tuesday by the falling of a stick of cord wood. The wound was dressed by Dr. Tritch.

◆

—Jno. Casebeer, Esq., who burned out at the recent Lagrange fire, informs us that he did not save anything. His goods were insured for $2,300, which beats nothing all to pieces.

◆

—A little boy named Jacob Kapp, aged 13 years and 7 months, died Monday morning about 2 o'clock with typhoid fever. The funeral services were preached at the residence on Main-st., Tuesday afternoon.

◆

—South Bend Register: The Cincinnatti, Wabash and Michigan road, running from Goshen to Anderson, within a short distance of Cincinnatti, has fallen into the hands of the Lake Shore road.

◆

—James W. McClellan, who had the misfortune to lose his arm, we are informed by Dr. Casebeer, the surgeon in charge, is improving fast and has been removed to his home, the accident having occured at one of his neighbors.

◆

—Ed. Carter and Miss Katie Blake, of Columbia City, were arrested for theft and found guilty, last week. The Post says they have been carrying on this business for a number of years in that city.

◆

—It was on Fluke's corner. "Pard, whose writing for the COURIER?" "I dunno." "Well," says the other, "if he gives me away I'll put a nose on him, that's what." We wish to inform all "air-guns" that we have a nose.

◆

—The DeKalb County Bar Association will meet at Waterloo Feb. 5th, with the following officers: J. I. Best, President; E. D. Hartman, Vice President; J. W. Baxter, Secretary; Guy Plum, Treasurer.

◆

—We extend our heartiest congratulations to our young friends, Billy Rickel and his beautiful bride, Miss Ella Cadwalter, of this city. The marriage was a quiet one, and no invited guests were present to witness the ceremony.

◆

—Mr. H. Lesh, who has been in the employ of our hardware merchant, J. L. Davis, for a few years past, will leave to-morrow for a brief visit to his paternal home in Ohio.

◆

—James McClellan, who had his arm amputated last week, is getting along as well as could be expected. His friends gave him about $50 in money to help him along.

◆

—A young man kissing his "Marier" in the dark, may be likened unto a dry goods merchant who who don't advertise, he knows what he's doing, but the world don't. Its sweet to be alone.

◆

—A new temperance society termed the "White Ribbons," now figure prominently in the temperance work of Iowa and Illinois. A small, still voice whispers, "on to victory, on!"

◆

—Railroad companies, by decision of the Supreme Court, are not compelled to carry persons when drunk. The Republicans at Washington will have a nice time getting home.

◆

—The party at Spencerville who offers to correspond for us can do so. We would be glad to have him prompt and get his matter in by Tuesday of each week.

◆

—The wife of J. M Shandel, Jr., of Smithfield, died last week. Mrs. R. T. Duncan, of the same township also died of consumption about the same time.

◆

—We are glad to hear it. Our druggist informs us that Dr. Bull's cough syrup sells better than any other medicine, and always gives satisfaction. For sale by F. E. Davenport.

◆

—The Baltimore and Ohio train No. 1 ran off the track at East Zanesville last Friday, seriously injuring engineer Moore, and slightly wounding the fireman.

◆

—Moody & Hoffman have removed their office over First National Bank, formerly occupied by Mr. Rickel. Mr. Rickel now occupies rooms in Odd Fellows Building.

◆

—We have about all the wood now that we need at present. Notice will be given when we want more. In the language of Dr. Fox, "wait a minute."

◆

—Just as we go to press we hear that Mrs. M. Long, Sr., died this morning.—Funeral services to-morrow at 2 o'clock p. m. at M. E. Church.

A LIBERAL OFFER.

Railroad fare to Ft. Wayne

FREE!

A Splendid Scheme.

For particulars enquire of your Station Agent.

SAM, PETE & MAX.

FORT WAYNE.

OLD MAN GRAM.

BY J. T. TROWBRIDGE.

In little Gram Court lives old man Gram,
The patriarch of the place,
Where often you'll see his face,
[illegible] and greedy, peering about,
As he goes bustling in and out
At a wriggling, rickety pace—
Brisk octogenarian's pace.
He rattles his stick at his heels, and brags,
As he comes shuffling along the flags—
Brags of his riches and brags of his rags,
Much work and little play.
"You see where I am," says old man Gram—
"You see where I am to-day.

"I came to town at twelve years old,
With a shilling in this 'ere pocket"—
You should see him chuckle and knock it!
"The town to me was a big stout chest,
With fortunes locked in the till; but I guessed [illegible] key would unlock it.
My [illegible] would unlock it.
[illegible] by a Jew
A place to sleep and a job to do,
And managed to make my shilling two;
And that's always been my way.
Now see where I am," cries old man Gram—
"Now see where I am to-day!"

In his den atop of the butcher's shop
He lies in his lair of husks,
And sups on gruel and rusks,
And a bone now and then to pick and gnaw,
With hardly a tooth in his old jaw,
But a couple of curious tusks!
Though half Gram Court he calls his own,
Here, hoarding his rents, he has lived alone,
Till, like a hungry wolf, he has grown
Gaunt and shaggy and gray.
"You see where I am," growled old man Gram,
As I looked in to-day.

"I might have a wife to make my broth,
Which would be convenient—rather!
And younkers to call me father.
But a wife would be after my chink, you see;
And bantlings for them that like" snarls he;
"I never would have the bother—
They're an awful expense and bother!
I went to propose at fifty-four,
But stopped as I raised my hand to the door;
'To think of a dozen brats or more!'
Says I, and I turned away.
Now see where I am," brags old man Gram—
"Only see where I am to-day!

"I had once a niece, who came to town
As poor as any church mouse;
She wanted to keep my house.
'Tut! I have no house to keep; go back.'
I gave her a dollar, and told her to pack;
At which she made such a touse—
You never did see such a touse!
Whole rows of houses were mine, she said;
I had more bank shares than hairs in my head,
And gold like so much iron or lead—
All which I couldn't gainsay.
Men see where I am," grins old man Gram—
"They see where I am to-day.

"But if there is anything I detest,
And for which I have no occasion,
Sir, it's a poor relation.
They're always plenty and always in need;
Take one, and soon you will have to feed
Just about half the nation—
They'll swarm from all over the nation!
And I have a rule, though it's nothing new—
'Tis one that I learned from my friend the Jew:
Whatever I fancy, whatever I do,
I always ask, Will it pay?
Now see where I am," boasts old man Gram—
"Just see where I am to-day!"

The little boys dread his coming tread,
They are pale as he passes by,
And the sauciest cure are shy.
His stick is so thick and he looks so grim,
Not even a beggar will beg of him;
You should hear him mention why!—
There's a very good reason why.
The poor he hates, and he hasn't a friend,
And none but a fool will give or lend;
"For, only begin, there'll be no end—
That's what I always say.
Now see where I am," crows old man Gram—
"Just see where I am to-day!"

His miserly gain is the harvest grain;
All the rest is chaff and stubble;
And the life beyond is a bubble.
We are as the beasts; and he thinks, on the whole,
'Tis quite as well that he has no soul,
For that might give him trouble—
Might give him a deal of trouble.
The long and short of the old man's creed
Is to live for himself and to feed his greed.
The world is a very good world indeed,
If only a chap might stay;
"Only stay where I am," whines old man Gram—
"Stay just where I am to-day!"
—Harper's Magazine for January.

THE STAIN OF PARENTAGE.

In the woods forming what remains of the forest of Ardennes, about a mile from a small village called Solenthal, a narrow path leads from a high road to a spot once occupied by charcoal burners, but now abandoned. It was a gloomy place. The ground for about an acre was black, where charcoal had been burned and stored, while a small fringe of green grass had perched itself forward from the forest, and commenced regaining the lost ground. In the center was a deep hole, to be entered only on one side by a path of narrow dimensions. In this was a small hut, of wretched aspect, one of millions in France, where glitter and glory hide misery worse than that of Ireland in her worst days, where sound and show conceal from us 16,000,000 of paupers. This hut had no window. It was curved in shape and closely resembled a wigwam of the poorest class. It consisted of three poles stuck in the ground, meeting at the top, these tied together, and then, of course, thatch and mud. A hole was left in the top for the smoke to pass through. The floor was of mud. In one corner was a pile of straw, which, with two chairs and a table, formed the whole of the furniture. It was occupied by two women and a large dog. At the moment when our narrative commences one only was at home. She was about 36, poorly but not meanly clad. She was clean, neat and tidy, and she plied her needle with unceasing energy. She was sewing for a livelihood.

A short distance off, on the edge of the wood, another woman, or rather a young girl, dressed in the same manner, was picking up wood and laying it in an outspread cloth on the ground. She, too, plied her work industriously, for, until sufficient fuel had been collected she could not cook their humble dinner. Presently she seemed satisfied with what she had done, and was about to proceed, when two horsemen issued from the wood and came along, walking their horses slowly. One was a young man, about five-and-twenty, rosy-cheeked, handsome and full of health; the other was ten years older, and evidently an habitue of the boulevards and the cafes of Paris. His pale face, made paler by a thin, black mustache and jet-black hair, his hollow, sunken eyes, spoke of the man of late hours and pleasures. His face was cold and repulsive, while that of the other was open and frank.

"What a wretched occupation for so pretty a girl," said the young man, riding quickly on, so as to speak first; "surely, ma chere, you might put your taper fingers to a better use. Here's will buy you firewood for months."

And he cast a double Napoleon at her feet.

The girl raised her angelic face to his, sadly and reproachfully. She was about 18. Her white skin, her blue eyes, her curly, golden hair, her simple, childlike manner, was something he had never seen before. Her expression was timid and yet proud, and, looking into her eyes, the young man was not surprised at the reply he received.

"Monsieur, I have done nothing to give you a right to insult me. What you have done may have been meant kindly, but I ask alms of no one."

"Pardon, mademoiselle," exclaimed the other, confused and stammering, "I meant no insult. Pardon me, mademoiselle, I pray you. I thought you poor, and my impulse was to aid you."

"Thank you, monsieur, for the first kind word I have heard these fifteen years, except from my own mother," said the young girl. "But go your way, or else the whole country will shun you too."

"Begone, wretch!" exclaimed the other, riding up and raising his whip menacingly; "begone, viper, and dare not speak to an honest man."

The young man listened in amazement.

"I did not speak to monsieur; monsieur spoke to me," said the girl gently, with, however, a smile of pity and contempt.

"Raise your accursed lips to me again," cried the other furiously, "and I will scourge you with my whip."

"Monsieur is perhaps a coward," said the gentle girl, stung to anger for once, turning at the same time to face his insults.

"What! you dare answer me," and he raised his hand again.

"Nay, Edward, you would not hit a woman?"

"A woman! Do you call Madeleine de Pierrepont, the child of the assassin of my Uncle Dubois, a woman? Say, rather, a fiend," screamed the usually calm dandy.

"Madeleine de Pierrepont!" replied the other, staggering so that his friend had to turn his assistance to him. "Madeleine de Pierrepont? And this is Madeleine de Pierrepont! Truly," he muttered, as he remounted his horse, "she is not a woman."

The other imitated him, and they rode off, leaving the young girl to weep alone. In a few minutes, however, she wiped her eyes, and then, fearful she might be suspected of appropriating the gold-piece, she took it up, wrapped it in a piece of paper, with the intention of returning it to its owner. She then lifted up her bundle and walked slowly toward the hut.

"Tell me the story of the girl," said the young man, gravely.

The other told it: "Fifteen years before, the father of Madeleine de Pierrepont and a Monsieur Dubois, a rich proprietor, had been intimate friends. De Pierrepont was comfortably off, from the fact of his having several occupations. He was collector of the rent of a rich member of his noble family; he was tax-gatherer and adjoint to the Maire. The Maire was M. Dubois, a rich man, but somewhat of a miser. It appeared that one afternoon Dubois asked Pierrepont to walk over to a small town at some distance to receive with him a large remittance, with which he had to pay a body of workmen employed on public works, and other expenses incurred in the building of a church and school-room. Dubois felt safer with a companion. It was afterward proved that they received the money, dined together at the Soleil d'Or, drank rather more than they were used to, and then, despite every representation, set out to walk home, though De Pierrepont wished to hire a gig. Next morning the body of Dubois was found about a hundred yards beyond the house of De Pierrepont, which was at the foot of a hill that led up to the village. All his money was gone as well as his watch and rings.

"A search took place instantly, and De Pierrepont, as his companion, was visited by the police agent. De Pierrepont deposed that Dubois, on his reaching his house, bade him go in, for that he could go the hill safely alone; but still he requested him to keep a bag of 1,000 francs in silver, because it was so heavy, until the morning. This 1,000 francs he gave up to the police. Of 16,000 francs in notes he solemnly declared he knew nothing. On this he was arrested as the assassin, tried, found guilty and sent to the galleys for life. His wife solemnly declared that she heard Dubois wish her husband good-night, and say, laughingly, "I'll send a cart for the silver in the morning." But, instead of benefiting him in the eyes of the world, she became his accomplice. To avoid being hooted at in the streets, she left the village, and, every penny being spent ere her husband's trial was over, she obtained reluctant permission to dwell in the charcoal-burner's deserted hut. But all shunned her and her child as they would lepers, and, to live, she was obliged to walk nine miles in search of work of the coarsest description. Leave the country she would not, because she was born there, and she felt convinced that her husband would be ultimately pardoned."

"And you join, Edward, in the infamous persecution. Supposing the father guilty (which to me is not clearly proved—and you know I am a lawyer), why should this poor girl suffer for the sins of her father? Why, the savages of North America, where I have just come from, are more civilized than you. I see in this heroic couple subject of wonder and admiration, but not of hate. Poor creatures! Fifteen years of misery have not satisfied you all, but you must still treat them as outcasts."

"My dear Arthur, you have just come from America, where it appears to me you pick up very singular notions. For my part the wife and daughter of an assassin, and the assassin of my uncle, are detestable wretches whom I must hate," said the other, in his usual cool way. His fit of anger was passed.

"Injustice, infamous injustice! Poor girl! I think I see her meek face now, looking at me so proudly and yet so sweetly. I never saw anything so lovely in my life."

"Why, the man is in love!" exclaimed Edward Dubois, the heir to the murdered man's property.

"Half; and what's more, Edward, do you know I'd marry that girl to-morrow if she'd have me, but I know she wouldn't."

"By my faith," said Edward, "you amaze me, and I am not easily amazed. Of course you are joking."

"Time will show. But now, my dear fellow, adieu; you follow that path in search of pleasure, I this on business."

"Adieu, a demain."

"Yes. You breakfast with me at the little inn, you know."

"Agreed, my philosopher. Adieu."

And Edward Dubois galloped down a narrow path leading to the chateau of a certain Count de Jesson, who that day gave a grand dinner and evening party. As soon as Arthur saw that he was out of sight he turned his horse's steps and galloped hard toward the charcoal-burner's hut.

When Madeleine returned to the hut and began making a fire she told her mother what had passed and showed her the gold piece. They were used to this kind of treatment, and the mother did not feel it much now. The scorn of fifteen years had made her despise the world. But Madeleine seemed hurt.

"I do not care," she exclaimed aloud, at last, "for what young Monsieur Dubois said; but I am vexed that the good-looking stranger should have said that I was not a woman."

"You are not a woman, but an angel," exclaimed Arthur, solemnly. He had approached on foot and had heard a portion of their conversation.

The mother and daughter stood still in dumb amazement.

"You seem surprised, madam," said the young man, addressing the mother. "You will be still more so when I add that I have returned with the deliberate intention of imploring you to give me your daughter's hand in marriage; not now, instantly, but when you know me better."

"Monsieur!" exclaimed the mother, indignantly, "this is too much. Go. The felon's daughter is still too good for insult."

"Madam," said Arthur, respectfully, "perhaps your astonishment will cease when I add that your husband is innocent, and that I have come 16,000 miles to prove it."

"You are—speaking—seriously?" gasped the poor woman.

"On my soul and conscience," said Arthur, solemnly.

"Oh joy! oh joy!" shrieked the girl, clasping the stranger round the neck, "the savior has come at last."

"Be calm, my dear young lady, and I will tell you my story in a few words. You will then understand my motives in coming here. I scarcely expected to find you at Solenthal, but at last determined to try. I came yesterday night, and soon heard of your heroic resignation and courage. Be seated, dear girl, and listen to tidings that will be joyful indeed to your filial heart."

Madeleine, blushing, her color going and coming, obeyed and seated herself on a log near the young stranger.

"I am a young Frenchman, and about seven years ago I emigrated to Peru in search of fortune. I started as a lawyer, and found business plentiful enough. I knew many Frenchmen in the place, but a merchant of the name of Gaillard was my most intimate friend. He was twice my age, grave even sullen and saturnine; but he had quaint ways, was very charitable, and I liked him. Besides, the others were married, had families, and he was alone. We used to meet of an evening at a cafe, play piquet, drink sherbet, and then walk home together. He was rich, and lived in great style, but not in any way up to his income. People wondered he never married, but he said he had been married, and was not inclined to try the experiment again. He looked with alarm at the prospects of my settling in life, and did all he could to preserve unto himself one bachelor friend.

"About a year ago he fell ill, and the doctor at once intimated to him that he would not recover. Apart from disease, it was a general break-up of nature.

"When he found there was no hope he sent for me.

"'Versan,' said he, 'listen to a dying man, and interrupt me not. You see on this bed an assassin, a thief, a murderer. Fourteen years ago, sitting in a hotel, I saw two men dining, one of whom had received sixteen or seventeen thousand francs. A dreadful thought came into my head. I was not poor, but I was wicked. I followed these two men. They walked on their way to Solenthal together. I dare not attack both, and once or twice I thought of giving up my fearful design. But at the house of one De Pierrepont they parted, and my victim, Dubois, advanced alone.

"'I was monster enough to think that Heaven gave him up to me. I bounded after him; I gave myself no time for thought; I stabbed him in the neck; killed him; took his money and fled. I spare you my thoughts and my fifteen years of suffering. I fled my country; I became a merchant—rich—respected; but I have never had one happy moment. Not only had I murdered him, but Pierrepont was suspected, and sentenced for my crime, only not to death, because the jury hesitated. I thus ruined an honest man, and sent his family to beg their bread.'

"He paused. I spoke not; too absorbed in my horror.

"'De Versan, listen to me, my friend. Do not turn against me; I have left you my sole heir.'

"'Never will I——'

"'Hark! you must and you will. Take my property, and think, when you enjoy it, with pity on its guilty present owner, and I will make a public confession, pay the heirs of Dubois their 16,000 francs, and, by proving my own guilt, obtain the pardon of the innocent De Pierrepont. Refuse and I will die impenitent, for my only friend will have deserted me.'

"I accepted."

"And may Heaven bless you!" said the weeping and sobbing mother, while Madeleine hid her head in her mother's lap.

"An hour later, in presence of the French and English Consuls—four Englishmen and four Frenchmen, two priests and the Alcalde—Gaillard, or rather, Mesnard, made his solemn confession, which was signed by all present, sealed, and one of two copies given to me. That copy is now in the hand of the Minister of Justice, and here," drawing forth a letter, "is a copy of your father's free pardon."

A wild shriek from both women was his reply.

"And now, Madeleine," said he, taking the girl's hand, "before I have the chance of rivals may I renew my request for your hand and heart?"

"Monsieur, no man on earth can ever do for me what you have done. In an hour I have lived years of joy; that joy I owe to you. Give me my father, and the love of my whole life, if you value it, shall be your poor reward."

This sudden resolution of the young girl, so natural under the circumstances, was approved of heartily by the mother. Next morning there sat in a small inn in Solenthal, waiting for breakfast, a man, not old, but bowed by years of woe, gray-haired and pale. On each side of him sat a woman—one his wife, the other his daughter. They had been talking for hours, and were not wearied yet. A young man sat opposite, his face beaming with delight. Several times the waiter had announced breakfast, but the young man had always bade him be quiet and wait still a while.

At length a hurried step was heard, and the young Edward Dubois entered. He started as if bit by a snake, and would have left the room.

"Stop!" said Arthur, sternly, as he caught him by the wrist. "Rather kneel and ask for pardon than fly. Read this, man," and he put in his hand the printed bill proclaiming the injustice of Pierrepont's sentence, his free pardon, and containing the certified confession of Mesnard.

Edward Dubois read it in silence. When he had finished he turned and grasped the ex-convict's hand.

"No apology can make up for my conduct," he said, "but what I can do I will. This bill will satisfy the whole country."

"Monsieur," replied De Pierrepont, in husky tones, "you did but as the world did. Appearances were against me and all condemned me."

"Edward, my friend," said Arthur, "you see the danger of judging from appearances. Had De Pierrepont been truly guilty, his wife and child would have been pitied, not scorned. As it is, a vile prejudice has made these two women for fifteen years outcasts and pariahs."

Edward made no reply, as the breakfast came in. He, like all the country round, was horrified now they found how unjust they had been; and never was wedding more tumultuously hailed and feted than that of Arthur de Versan and Madeleine de Pierrepont. Still I have not heard that one man, woman or child in the forest of Ardennes has been cured of the evil habit of judging always from appearances, and visiting on the innocent the sins of the guilty.

A Prophecy of the Pacific Coast.

Twenty years hence nearly all the breadstuffs for export from the United States will be produced in the country west of the Rocky mountains. The exception will be the surplus production of corn in the Mississippi valley. Ohio has ceased to be a great wheat-producing State. This crop is yearly diminishing in Illinois; in Minnesota, the production this year was only about as much as in California, where we had one of the dryest seasons ever known. The agriculture of all the vast region west of the Rocky mountains is still in its infancy. Some of the great Territories are not yet producing breadstuffs enough for home consumption. That was true of Oregon a few years ago. Now there is a large fleet of wheat-laden ships sailing from her principal port every year. Utah Territory, with the exception of a little spot about Salt Lake, made no show of agricultural products. Now the best potatoes found west of the Mississippi river are produced in Utah, and sent over to California in large quantities for consumption. Fruit culture has been pushed beyond the Sierra. The great apple orchards will be far up the mountains on either slope. The culture of the grape and the wine interest will probably be west of the Sierra, although it is just possible we have not yet found the best soils for the production of wine grapes. The maximum of lumber production has already been reached in the States east of the Mississippi. The eastern timber belt has been explored, and most of the lands reduced to private possession. The timber belt of the Pacific coast, north of Oregon, covers an area clear up to the north limit of Alaska, or as far as the climate will permit. No impression has been made upon the forests of Alaska, and the timber resources of Washington Territory will last a long time.—San Francisco Bulletin.

No Labor-Saving Devices for Her.

"Then you don't want a clothes-wringer to-day?" said the man.

"No, I don't," replied the woman. "Times are too hard to think about it. Here it is the middle o' winter, and me with my summer hat yet. I think I see myself buying a clothes-wringer and goin' bareheaded till next summer. Not much."

"But I can sell you one on weekly payments," put in the man. "Give it to you at the wholesale price, and let you pay $1 a week on it, and before you knew it you'd have it all paid for, and be getting the use of it all the time. Ain't that fair enough?"

"I'm not finding any fault with your terms, said the woman. "But do I want to hide all that money where it can't be seen? A clothes-wringer wouldn't look well propped up in a front window, would it? Six dollars is right smart o' money, and I could get a hat with it that would just more'n make the plasterer's wife wish she'd stayed in the old country."

"But," urged the man, persuasively, "think of the hard work it would save you, and besides it's dirt-cheap at the price. No twistin' your fingers out of joint if you have one o' them. Shall we call it a trade?"

"Not if I know myself!" returned the woman. "Why, sir, with $6 I could almost get a cloak that would make nearly every woman on the square catch cold peeping through the door crack, and I have my mind on a piece of alpaca that could be sent home to me for about that figure, that would take the peace out of every family within seven doors each way. I don't spend much money these hard times, but when I do I want to get a little satisfaction out of it. So you can move on with your squeezin' machine, an' sell it to some woman who hain't got no pride about her," and she slammed the door in his face.—Cincinnati Breakfast Table.

Romantic Stoves.

He wore sheepskin mittens, had his trousers in his boots, and he covered his horses with old pieces of rag carpet, and entered a hardware store and asked to look at a sheet-iron stove. He was shown several patterns, one after the other, but none seemed exactly to suit his ideas. "I have shown you every style of parlor stove on sale by any house in Detroit," said the dealer as they stood before the last one. "Yes, I s'pose so, but none o' them quite fills the bill," was the dubious answer. "Why not? Aren't they big enough, tall enough, handsome enough, or what is the trouble?" "Waal, I'll tell you?" slowly replied the would-be customer. "The ole woman, she takes a story paper, and her head is chuck full of such names as Evangeline, Emilene, Maud, Arabella, and Riverbell. The gals they read Shakspeare, and they are all the time talking about Hamlet, Claudius, Petruchio, Romeo, and so on. I'm kinder postin' up on astronomy myself, and I'm all the time thinkin' about Venus, Mars, Saturn, and Jupiter. Now, you haven' got a stove in the lot with a more romantic name than 'Ajax,' and just imagine folks like us sittin' around a stove with a plug name like that!" He thought he'd look further, and as he unhitched his team he called out: "Whoa, now, Lady Estella; stand around there, Othello!"—Detroit Free Press.

CLAY AND KING.

A Parallel to the Conkling-Gordon Quarrel.

[Washington Cor. Chicago Tribune.]

The more that the Gordon-Conkling fiasco is talked about the more it is laughed at. Sharper and harsher words are frequently uttered without rendering it necessary for four solemn old Senatorial roosters to sit up over them and concoct a Pickwickian declaration of peace and harmony. But the gallant Gordon, who is a candidate for re-election, and the arrogant Conkling had to have their angry passions assuaged as Clay and King had theirs in 1841.

Francis P. Blair had been dismissed from acting as Senate Printer by a party vote, and King, of Alabama (afterward Vice President), made an elaborate defense of him. He went into Blair's personal history, and his former intimate relations with Mr. Clay (it may be stated here that Mr. Clay had befriended Francis P. Blair, in Kentucky, when he was quite a young man and in needy circumstances), and concluded by saying that the character of Mr. Blair would not suffer by comparison with that of the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. Clay responded by saying that he should not have referred to Mr. Blair personally had his name not been before the Senate in an official character. That for ten years he sat in silence under the personal abuse of the Globe; that it was an infamous paper, and its chief editor an infamous man. He considered him a common libeler, and the paper itself a libel; and for Mr. King to undertake to put him on an equality with Blair constrained him "to say it was false and cowardly."

Mr. King immediately rose, and, addressing the chair, said: "Mr. President, I have no reply to make—none whatever."

Within a very short time Mr. Clay was approached by a gentleman whom he recognized as a mutual friend, bearing in his hand what he took to be a written missive, and, without waiting for him to speak, Mr. Clay exclaimed with much excitement of manner, "You have a challenge from Mr. King, I suppose; I accept it." Both gentlemen were determined to fight, and, as the law of the District of Columbia prohibited dueling within its limits, it was greatly feared they would escape to Virginia or Maryland for the purpose of a hostile meeting. The friends of both, without regard to party feeling, made the strongest appeals to them for forbearance and explanation, and probably no similar case ever excited so much interest. Firstly, after the lapse of six days, an arrangement was made by which Preston, of South Carolina, made a statement, after which King and Clay each withdrew their words, and there was a general love-feast. Hamlin played the part of Preston, but neither Conkling nor Gordon spoke their little pieces. Gordon is not so quick-tempered as his colleague, Ben Hill, who once, in the Confederate Senate, had a fearful row with Yancey, of Alabama. They indulged in some pretty rough talk, and at last Yancey said that Hill had made some statements about him which were false. Hill responded quickly from his seat that he threw the falsehood back in his teeth. Upon motion, the Senate went into secret session. Yancey was then appealed to adjust the matter, but reiterated what he had said, and took his seat. Thereupon Hill threw a heavy glass inkstand, which struck Yancey on the side of his face, bruising it and causing the blood to flow profusely, but not knocking him down or doing any visible injury. Yancey rushed at Hill, but was prevented from striking him, and here the fight ended. After much trouble the parties were reconciled and the Senators were bound to secrecy, but the story leaked out. Many think that the blow brought on the spinal disease which caused Yancey's death.

An Arizona Tragedy.

Bob White had some words with a stranger named Frank McNiel, about a trivial matter, which resulted in White's resuming the controversy the next day. White attempted to shoot McNiel, who knocked him down, disarmed him, and, upon his begging for his life, led him to the saloon and told him to go about his business. Charlie Rice, whom you also remember, shortly afterwards came into camp, and approaching McNiel, to whom he was unknown, he emptied his six-shooter at him, five shots taking effect; death ensued in a few hours. The citizens turned out en masse to arrest the murderer; a fight ensued, Rice was badly wounded, but, refusing to submit, was hanged by the neck from the ridge-pole of the blacksmith-shop, where he remained till next morning. In the meantime, White attempted to escape, but soon fell dead, pierced with bullets. —Letter from Hackberry, Arizona.

The Lecture Field.

Joseph Cook is getting rich in the lecture business. John B. Gough is to make a lecture tour in England. Collector Simmons, of Boston, lectures to New England audiences on "Reform." Joaquin Miller is on the platform this season. Thirty-one women are giving readings throughout the country. They are cheaper than lecturers, and exceed the demand. Burdette, of the Burlington Hawk-Eye, is on a lecture tour in the East. Gen. Banks has made a few engagements. Mrs. Livermore is booked for the winter. Beecher lectures two or three times every week, and has reduced his price from $500 to $200. Wendell Phillips has just completed a tour of six weeks in the West.

Dr. Stamataki has discovered another tomb in the Acropolis of Mycenæ, making the sixth now found. This does not look altogether well for Dr. Schliemann's theory of the five tombs.

TO CORA F——.

Love thee, Cora? Within my heart
Thine image ever has a shrine,
From which thy love shall never depart
While life and mental powers are mine;
And 'twould crush my heart with sorrow
Make existence life-long pain,
If I thought thy smiles to-morrow,
In their love for me should wane.

Love thee, Cora? Do you ask me
If my love for thee be true,
And if I will ever love thee
As I promised once to do?
Then my heart fore'er unceasing,
Would, in love, to thee o'erflow,
Till, by token still increasing
Thou at last its depth should know.

Love thee, Cora? As the river,
Trickling down the mountain's side,
Gains in breadth and depth forever
As it flows to join the tide,
So my love in thee abiding,
As I journey down life's way,
Ever in thy truth confiding
Grows more lasting day by day.

Love, thee, Cora? Sad and dreary
Seem the hours away from you,
And my heart is sad and weary,
Though my love none less the true;
But, in truth, I can not tell thee
If my love with me shall die,
For a spirit fondly tells me
"It shall live beyond the sky."

BELOIT, Wis. GEORGE.

PITH AND POINT.

THE latest out—The hired girl.

"CAN marine animals talk?" Certainly; seal skin.

THE best definition of quicksilver is the nimble sixpence.

DEALERS report the slowest toys this season to be the tor toise.

A HINT to hotel keepers—How to treat a guest: Treat him with inn-civility.

MAY not the venerable editor who prefers old to new jokes be called an old saw sage?

"LIFE is made up of sunshine and shaddow"—about five shaddos to one sunshine.—Josh Billings.

A RECENT poem has the following line: "A tear danced in her eye." That tear must have been at the eye-ball.

THE reason why the stove pipe is so popular among paragraphers is that it always looks funnelly when put together.

WHEN the landlady discovered that her boarders were dropping off, the burden of her song became, "Nothing but leaves."

MRS. SPRIGGINS, after preparing her two little "Presidents of the future" for their bath, called them "a pair of undressed kids."

WHATEVER else may be said against the Chinese, no one can truthfully say that he ever saw one who parted his hair in the middle.

A PHILOSOPHER who went to a church where the people came in late said it was the fashion there for nobody to go till everybody got there.

"WHEN is the best time to pick apples?" This is a very simple question. The best time for such work is when the farmer is not looking, and there is no big dog in the orchard.

THE people in a town in Iowa wanted a flouring-mill, and finally they got it; and they are now very anxious to have a bank established, so that they can borrow money to buy flour.

SOME soured bachelor says: "Heaven in its merciful providence gave no beard to woman, because he well knew they could not hold their tongues long enough to be shaved."

"HAVE the animals a sense of humor?" asks an owlish exchange. Certainly they have. You'll always find that jackasses are ready to laugh immoderately at the poorest jokes.

SAID an excessively fleshy woman: "I can scarcely make a remark but that my husband is always ready to take me up." "Madam," replied a printer, "your husband is always ready, then, for a fat take."

"LET me see," said Mr. Spilkins, "this year Christmas fell on Tuesday." That accounts for it! We thought it must have fallen on something, and got hurt, too. It was the "lamest" Christmas that ever fell on a week-day.

"DON'T touch this," said Mrs. Gobble, as she laid before her husband a specimen of her Christmas baking; "it's only a sample." "My dear," replied Gobble, as he gobbled it down, "in future it will be an ex-(a)mple to you."

A LITTLE girl down in Maine was listening with much interest to the story of Jonah. When the question was asked, "What should you suppose would be the first thing Jonah would do after the great fish threw him upon the land?" she answered promptly, "I sh'd fink he'd go home quick as he could and get cleaned up."

MRS. BROOKS found a dreaming beauty in a roll of butter. Jowler says the nearest approach he could ever make to the same thing, during a boarding-house experience of fifteen years, was a stray lock of hair now and then, which indicated that the damsel had been there, but left before he went to dinner. —Cincinnati Breakfast Table.

A LADY correspondent, who assumes to know how boys ought to be trained, writes as follows: "Oh, mothers! hunt out the soft, tender, genial side of your boy's nature." Mothers often do—with an old shoe.

'Tis Augustus Adolphus de Toots
Writes down his New Year's resolutes.
Ere the morrow is over
He'll wake to discover
He meandered to bed in his boots.—Puck.

Gen. Custer's Widow.

A letter from the widow of Gen. Custer to Gen. Wells, of the Vermont cavalry organization, written in September just before the funeral ceremonies took place at West Point, has been published. Mrs. Custer says that since her recovery she had taxed her nerve in some work that helped her to forget herself, and adds: "If the soldiers who so loved their heroic commander think me worthy to have been his companion and wife I shall go to my grave comforted with such a tribute. God has answered my prayers and given me back the sacred dust that I may do as he wished. Gen. Custer loved West Point, and, when he lies at rest peacefully where he asked to lie, I shall be thankful for his sake. I wish that I might some time see you and the loved soldiers and officers who followed my husband so faithfully. I long to believe that they claim me as belonging to them, in a measure. New York is my home solely because I can find the work there that will make my life less useless."

TOWN VERSUS COUNTRY.

Comparative Growth of Urban and Rural Population.

Scribner's Monthly for January contains what ought to have been made an interesting article on the comparative increase of urban and rural population in the United States; but it only gives the chief cities, leaving out the large town and village population, and hence its article is of no value. The Cincinnati Commercial has tried to supply this omission in the case of ten States, and it points out the following among the consequences of excessive urban growth:

1. Concentration of population.
2. Concentration of wealth.
3. [illegible] down the great middle class.
4. The increase of the poor at a very much greater ratio than that of the population.
5. The increase of the power of realized wealth.
6. Increase of mortality and effeminacy.
7. Increase of vice and crime.
8. Physical and moral degeneracy.
9. Increasing peril to free institutions.

Accurate statistics, carefully and honestly handled, are indispensable to a full understanding of our economical, social, political, moral and educational relations. We have made a somewhat tedious scrutiny of the State of New York, and separated the entire town population from that of the purely rural, and find the grand aggregate to have been, in 1870, 2,824,986, against 1,652,317 in 1850. We have now the following:

	1870.	1850.
Total population	4,382,759	3,097,394
Urban population	2,824,986	1,682,317
Rural population	1,557,773	1,415,077
Increase of total population		1,285,365
Increase of urban population		1,172,669
Increase of rural population		112,699

Increase per cent.—Total, 43; urban, 71; rural, 8.

A thorough analysis for the whole State of Massachusetts gives a rural increase, during the two decades, of but 7 per cent., against an urban increase of 92 per cent. Were all the town population of Pennsylvania gathered up, the rural increase would be found to have been about 10 per cent., and the urban 120 per cent. In Illinois, a comparatively new State that was chiefly settled during the two decades, we find thirteen cities and towns of over 7,000 people in 1870 that can be compared with 1850. The aggregates are:

	1870.	1850.
State population	2,539,891	851,470
Urban	448,475	66,187
Rural	2,091,416	785,283
Increase of State population		1,687,421
Increase of urban population		382,288
Increase of rural population		1,306,133

Rural, 166 per cent.; city, 579 per cent.

Were all the towns and villages of the State sifted out, the rural increase would be found to have been much less than 166 per cent. Ohio is a fair average between the old and the new States. How is it with us? There are but six cities and towns of over 10,000 in 1870 that admit of comparison by the official figures. The aggregates are:

	1870.	1850.
State population	2,665,260	1,980,329
Urban population	412,410	163,568
State over city	2,252,850	1,816,761
State increase		684,931
City increase		248,841
Rural increase		436,089

Increase per cent., State, 34½; city, 151; rural, 24.

After scanning all the townships of Ohio, and separating the village, town and city population from the grand total of the State, we have reached the following results:

	1870.	1850.
Urban population	1,000,000	480,000
Purely rural	1,665,260	1,500,329
Urban increase	520,000	108 per ct.
Rural increase	164,931	11 per ct.

In a political point of view, the rural majority in 1850 was 1,020,329, against 665,260 in 1870; a loss in numerical strength of 520,000, or over 50 per cent., during those twenty years. The aggregates for ten of the principal Northwestern States are as follows:

	1870.	1850.
Ten States	20,988,767	12,192,089
Seventy cities	5,141,925	2,198,157
Cities deducted	15,846,842	9,993,875
Increase of population		8,796,738
Increase of urban population		2,943,768
Increase of rural population		5,852,967

Increase per cent. total population, 83¾; city, 137; rural, 58.

These States are New York, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Wisconsin and Michigan. The great lesson from these facts is that efforts to prevent the increase of vice and crime, and to mitigate the calamities of poverty in our cities, should be increased in proportion to the increase of concentration. The Christian philosophers and philanthropists can study the problem at their leisure, and the more they study the more they will find it necessary to do in order to counteract the unfortunate results of this tendency of population.

The Hangman's Work for 1877.

The hangman's record for the past year shows that 83 murderers were hanged in the United States. Of this number 47 were white, 34 colored, 1 Indian and 1 Chinaman; 4 were hanged for indecent assaults, 1 for burglary, 8 for wife-murder, 1 for filicide and 1 for fratricide. There were three double executions, one triple, two quadruple, and one in which six men were hanged. Not a single woman was hanged; the only one sentenced to death, Mrs. Louisa Lawsar, of Virginia, had her sentence commuted to imprisonment for life by the Governor. Friday still maintains its reputation in the black list as the favorite day on which to enforce the death penalty, more murderers having hanged on that day than on all the other days of the week combined. Forty-seven murderers were hanged on Friday, 17 on Thursday, 8 on Saturday, 6 on Monday, 3 on Tuesday and 2 on Wednesday. There were 5 executions in January, 5 in February, 6 in March, 6 in April, 10 in May, 15 in June, 11 in July, 1 in August, 5 in September, none in October, 9 in November and 10 in December. Pennsylvania stands first in the line of States for the greatest number of executions during the past year, South Carolina being second. The executions were distributed among twenty-five States as follows:

Pennsylvania	16	Ohio	2
South Carolina	12	New Jersey	1
North Carolina	8	New Hampshire	1
California	5	Delaware	1
Missouri	4	Alabama	1
Maryland	4	Kentucky	1
Georgia	4	Texas	1
Virginia	4	Utah	1
New York	3	Dakota	1
Louisiana	3	Oregon	1
Arkansas	3	Wyoming	1
Nevada	3
Tennessee	3	Total	83
Mississippi	2

"What is the Balsa?"

There was, no doubt, a question in the minds of many who read Ensign Lucien Young's graphic description of the wreck of the Huron and of his own escape on "the balsa." The latter is a raft or float, and on the Pacific coast of South America, whence the name is derived, it is made of whole hides of bullocks sewed into air-tight bags, two of which are fastened together at the smaller end, and form a flat, upon which a board is laid crossways. On this board the occupant of the balsa sits, with legs dangling in the water, and by means of a paddle guides the buoyant craft through the surf. The balsa is much used by Peruvian women, who go out to vessels at anchor off shore to sell provisions, fruits and whisky to the sailors. As they sit on the cross-board, with the inflated bags spread out like two wings from their point of junction, near which the board is placed, one end of the balsa is elevated high above the water, and it is only necessary to turn this end to shore as the balsa approaches the breakers to insure a safe passage through them. The balsa of the Huron was probably an air-filled India-rubber float, sufficiently like its South American prototype to bear the family name. It saved the lives of two men, and, under more favorable circumstances, might have carried a line ashore and been instrumental in saving the lives of others.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Tearless Lunatics.

One of the most curious facts connected with insanity is the utter absence of tears amid the insane. Whatever the form of madness, tears are conspicuous by their absence, as much in the depression of melancholia, or the excitement of mania, as in the utter apathy of dementia. If a patient in a lunatic asylum be discovered in tears, it will be found that it is either a patient beginning to recover or an emotional outbreak in an epileptic who is scarcely truly insane, while actually insane patients appear to have lost the power of weeping; it is only returning reason which can once more unloose the fountains of their tears. Even when a lunatic is telling one in fervid language how she has been deprived of her children, or the outrages that have been perpetrated on herself, her eye is never even moist. The ready gush of tears which accompanies the plaint of the sane woman contrasts with the dry-eyed appeal of the lunatic. It would, indeed, seem that tears give relief to feelings which when pent up lead to madness. It is one of the privileges of reason to be able to weep. Amid all the misery of the insane they can find no relief in tears.—British Medical Journal.

Centenarians.

The following centenarians paid the debt of nature during the past year: Margaret McNaught, Dumbarton, Scotland, aged 102; Stephen G. Hooper, Newark, N. J., 100; Mlle. Alida Marchand, Paris, 111; Angelique Muller, Chicago, 110; Martha Sinington, Joliet, Ill., 100; Caroline Lambert, Omaha, Neb., 101; Lady Smith, England, 104; Mary Dunham, Glenville, N. Y., 105; Abner Huntly, Cuba, N. Y., 109; Pauline Spitz, Einanowitz, Austria, 108; Eunice White, Macedon, N. Y., 102; Samuel Vann, Trumansburg, N. Y., 104; Augustin Picard, Rochester, N. Y., 110; William Devine, Dover, N. H., 101; Heister Johnson, Baltimore, Md., 107; Capt. Frederick Lahrbush, New York, 111; Mrs. Rosa Brady, New York, 108; Martin Kelly, Chicago, Ill., 103; John Francis Harrison, New York, 108; William Goodman, New York, 101; Elizabeth Allen, Charlestown, R. I., 105; Thomas Grimaldi, Knoxville, Tenn., 106; Margaret Gray, Charlotte, N. C., 116.

The Temperance Wave.

The great temperance revival has closed in Troy, and the Committee of Arrangements say: "The total number of pledges taken is estimated by Mr. Murphy to be 17,000, and we have put out to signers over two miles of blue ribbons, at a cost, at the lowest trade prices, of nearly $100." The assertion is made by a local Police Justice that public drunkenness in that city is lessened 60 per cent., as shown by the number of arrests. Many bar-rooms have been closed, and "it is believed that the consumption of strong drink has been materially reduced."

Vegetable Diet for Drunkenness.

Charles Napier, an Englishman of good standing in science, has been testing the theory that alcoholic drink is compatible with animal food, but not with farinaceous. He announces, as the practical result of many experiments, that a vegetable diet is a remarkable help to the cure of drunkenness. He mentions the case of an old man, whose constitution had been shattered by repeated attacks of delirium tremens, and who was cured of his appetite for liquor in seven months by eschewing meat.

Boiler Explosions.

The Chicago Tribune prints a carefully recorded list of steam-boiler explosions in the United States for the year 1877. There were in all 63 explosions of boilers, involving a loss of life to 131 persons, and the wounding and maiming of 123. The majority of the accidents were caused by the ignorance or neglect of those placed in charge of the engines, generally cheap men or mere boys.

ONE of the most dangerous counterfeits ever issued has just made its appearance. It is printed from the same plate as was used for the counterfeit $5 bills on the First National Bank of Tamaqua, the title of the bank being changed to Hanover, Pa.

A YOUNG man in Saline county, Mo., playfully attempted to kiss a pretty young widow who was boarding in the same house with him. In the scuffle the widow suddenly thrust a finger into one of the young man's eyes, totally destroying the sight.

THE Michigan salt inspector's report shows the product of the year to be as follows: Fine salt, 1,590,841 barrels; packers' salt, 20,858; solar salt, 22,949; second-quality salt, 26,249; total, 1,660,897 barrels.

IN 1859 there were 1,600 miles of railway in Italy; on Jan. 1, 1877, 8,000 miles of rail were in operation. The total cost of these railways was $478,436,260.

THE champion corn-shucker this time is from Dodge county, Neb., 2,300 bushels; time thirty-three days, and his name is William Dale.

TURKISH soldiers have recovered from their wounds in a marvelous manner in many instances, owing to their strictly temperate lives.

THE population of France on the last day of the last year was 36,905,788; Paris, 2,410,349.

A PRUSSIAN military journal says that France can put on a war footing 1,738,000 men and 209,400 horses.

A MICHIGAN Judge decides that oysters are fish

Strange Experience of a Duelist.

The late Alexandre Grailhe, whose remains were brought to this city from Europe in the steamship Nuremburg, had a singular and rather unpleasant experience on the field of honor in his younger days. Like all adventurous young Frenchmen, forty years ago, he could not avoid involvement in some of those numerous personal affairs which were then so frequent between Frenchmen and fiery young Creoles. With two very prominent and gallant gentlemen of the latter race Mr. Grailhe became engaged in controversies which led to meetings on the field of honor.

In the first instance the duel was fought with swords, and the unfortunate Frenchman was run through the body, and not only suffered greatly from his wound, but exhibited for two years afterward the effect of the injury in a certain inclination of his body which was not natural, owing to the internal abscess resulting from the wound. Some time after he engaged in his second rencounter, in which he received the bullet of his adversary right through his body. Strange to say, the beneficent missile passed right through the former wound, opening the abscess which threatened the estimable gentleman's life; and, by inflicting a new, severe and painful wound, not only cured him, but had the effect of straightening his person to a rigid and exact perpendicularity, so that his carriage appeared even unnaturally stiff and haughty.

Quite a similar experience of the effect of wounds is related by Dr. Guthrie in his celebrated work on gunshot wounds, of that distinguished British chieftain who received his death wound on the plains of Chalmette in the memorable battle on the 8th of January, 1815. We refer to Lieut. Gen. Sir Edward Packenham. In the attack by the British at the close of the last century on the French fortifications on the island of Martinique, Col. Packenham, who led the storming party, received a musket-ball, which passed through his neck. He recovered from the wound, but was for some years afterward very marked by it, bearing his head with a strong inclination to one side of his body.

Seven or eight years subsequently Packenham was the second man to ascend the ladders which had been established against the walls of Badajos, in Spain, in the brilliant assault of the British on that fortified town, and was again shot through the neck, the ball entering on the opposite side to that of his old wound, and passed apparently through the same track. On recovering his neck was brought into its original erect and natural position.—New Orleans Democrat.

A Phenomenal Winter.

Discussing the balmy weather of this winter, a gentleman well known in Harrisburg, Pa., as one of the oldest and most successful business men of that city, states that he plucked peaches on a tree on his premises on Christmas day, 1852, and served them as part of the dessert for the dinner on the occasion. Gen. Cameron, if he reads this paragraph, will recall the incident, as he ate a portion of the fruit, and also examined the tree on the day referred to which contained it. This, as an incident of past propitious winter weather, has not often been surpassed in the fruit line in that latitude.

Savings Banks in Massachusetts.

The annual report of the Massachusetts Commissioners of Savings Banks shows that the 179 banks hold $244,596,614.18 deposits, against $243,340,642.75 in 1876. The surplus of the banks is $4,267,923.08, a decrease of of nearly $1,000,000, which is nearly made good by the new guarantee fund. The only noticeable change in the investments of the banks is the increase $5,000,000 in the amount invested in mortgages on real estate, and the increase of nearly $5,000,000 in the amount invested in public funds. More than one-half the deposits is invested, directly or indirectly, in real estate.

They Trotted Him Out.

A bright story is told of the accomplished wife—now dead—of Gen. Hooker. When she was the admired Miss Groesbeck, of Cincinnati, she was once at an evening party when a fashionable young dandy was asked if he would like to be presented to her. "Oh, yes," said he, languidly, "trot her out." The lady overheard the remark, and when he was presented, she adjusted her eyeglasses deliberately and slowly scanned his clothing from boot to collar. The survey finished, she waved her hand and carelessly said: "Trot him back, I have seen all there is of him."

Remarkable Success.

The success of the leading literary paper of the West, THE CHICAGO LEDGER, is truly remarkable. Since its introduction to the reading public, six years ago, THE LEDGER has steadily advanced in favor, and is now acknowledged second to no paper of the kind in the country. Its circulation is national, and has been obtained through the efforts of its publishers to produce a paper of high moral character, and at the same time sell it at a price consistent with the present hard times. That they have succeeded, and well, too, the thousands of readers of THE LEDGER scattered from Maine to Texas and from Oregon to Florida will bear testimony. THE CHICAGO LEDGER is a large forty-eight column weekly paper, which contains stories both complete and continued, in each number, written by the best authors of the day, and a great variety of information interesting to every one. The subscription price of THE LEDGER is only $1.50 per year, postage paid, and it is equal in every particular to other papers of the same character which sell for $3 a year. Three copies of this valuable paper will be sent to any one who sends 10 cents and their address to THE LEDGER, Chicago, Ill.

Wives Know That the Brow of Care

Is often soothed by a delicious supper, to which perfect bread, rolls, biscuit, etc., are so important. To have these delicate products of baking always reliable, the use of DOOLEY'S YEAST POWDER is very important. This article is among the most valuable of the day in its bearing on health. It is put up in cans always full in weight.

I HAVE sold Hatch's Universal Cough Syrup for four years. I keep in stock all the cough remedies considered standard in this section. None sell so rapidly or give such general satisfaction as "The Universal." Hadn't you better try a remedy that is commended so highly by your neighbors?

EDWIN P. FALLING, Oswego, N. Y.

Sold by J. Blocki & Co., Chicago, Ill.

CHEW
The Celebrated
"MATCHLESS"
Wood Tag Plug
TOBACCO.
THE PIONEER TOBACCO COMPANY,
New York, Boston and Chicago.

Death in His Favorite Robe.

The mortuary statistics of the whole civilized world show that about one-fifth of all mankind die of consumption alone, and the number of deaths due to consumption bears a greater ratio to the whole number than that of any other three diseases together. Moreover, investigation proves that this ratio is steadily increasing. Its increasing prevalence has led to the popular belief that consumption is incurable. Every year hundreds of these sufferers seek, in the sunny retreats of Florida or the dry atmosphere of Colorado, for health, and find only a grave. The influence of the atmosphere—the only remedial agent that either Florida or Colorado can afford the consumptive—is at best only palliative. The cure of consumption depends upon two essential conditions: 1st, the arrest of the abnormal breaking down of the tissues, which prevents emaciation, and, 2d, the restoration of healthy nutrition, in order to stop the formation of tuberculous matter. Fulfill these conditions, and consumption is as curable as fever. To fulfill these conditions the required remedy must increase the appetite, favor the assimilation of food, and enrich the blood, thus retarding the development of tubercles. To accomplish this, a more powerful alterative than Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has never been discovered. At the same time, it soothes the irritation of the nervous system produced by violent coughing, which, in its turn, so often leads to more serious results. The use of "expectorants" in consumption is absolutely suicidal. For, while removing the tubercles already formed, they produce yet more serious results by inflaming and destroying the sound and healthy tissues. Consumption requires a remedy that will soothe while it relieves; harsh medicines but add fuel to the flame that already threatens to consume the system. The Golden Medical Discovery fulfills these conditions, and has been pronounced the best remedy yet discovered to allay and arrest consumption.

Disease Grows Apace,

Like an ill wind, and cannot be mastered too early. What is a trifling attack of sickness today may, if unattended to, become a serious case in a week. Small ailments should be nipped in the bud before they blossom into full-blown maladies. If this advice were attended to, many a heavy bill for medical attendance might be avoided. When the liver is disordered, the stomach foul, the bowels obstructed, or the nerves disturbed, resort should at once be had to that supreme remedy, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a few doses of which will restore healthy action and put the system in perfect order. It is a wise precaution to keep this incomparable preventive in the house, since it checks, with unrivaled promptitude, disorders which breed others far more dangerous, and in their latest developments are themselves often fatal.

HEART Disease, by its insidious workings, has brought many persons to an untimely grave. The valves and various parts of the Heart are very tender and easily disarranged, which in time will become settled Heart Disease, for the relief and cure of which we offer you Dr. Graves' HEART REGULATOR, a preparation long and favorably known in New Hampshire, where the Doctor practiced as a regular physician. It is not a cureall, but is a medicine which goes straight to its work.

The HEART REGULATOR will assist the action of the Heart, and its continued use will afford a permanent cure. Send for a pamphlet, containing a full description of its merits, to FRANK E. INGALLS, Concord, N. H. For sale at 50 cents and $1 per bottle.

A LIFE SAVED FOR THIRTY-FIVE CENTS.—A lady in Boston had diphtheria and was almost dead from strangulation. She was instantly relieved and finally cured by Johnson's Anodyne Liniment. Every family should have a bottle ready for instant use.

BURNETT'S FLAVORING EXTRACTS are used and indorsed by the best Hotels, Confectioners and Grocers throughout the country. They are perfectly pure, and of great strength—at once the cheapest and best—and received the highest award at the Centennial Exhibition.

PROFITABLE INVESTMENT.—One dollar's worth of Sheridan's Cavalry Condition Powders, fed to a coop of of thirty hens, will yield a profit of $3, besides preventing all manner of disease.

IT will pay to read advt. "Florida Homes!"

TO CONSUMPTIVES.

The advertiser, having been permanently cured of that dread disease, Consumption, by a simple remedy, is anxious to make known to his fellow-sufferers the means of cure. To all who desire it, he will send a copy of the prescription used (free of charge), with the directions for preparing and using the same, which they will find a SURE CURE for CONSUMPTION, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, &c.

Parties wishing the prescription will please address
REV. EDWARD A. WILSON,
194 Penn Street, Williamsburgh, N. Y.

Coughs and Colds yield readily to Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup, which is a most agreeable remedy. It heals the soreness, loosens the phlegm, and expels it from the system with scarcely an effort on the part of the patient.

For sale by all Druggists.

FLORIDA HOMES!
Location elevated, fertile and healthy. Close to R. R. Stations and Northern Colonies. Price ONLY $1.25 PER ACRE. Cheap transportation. Settlers are delighted. Send stamp for State Map, Views, and Report Chicago Excursion. Brainerd T. Smith & Co., 205 LaSalle st., Chicago.

$350 A MONTH—AGENTS WANTED—36 best selling articles in the world; one sample free. Address JAY BRONSON, Detroit, Mich.

CLOCKS E. INGRAHAM & CO.'s are superior in design and not equaled in quality, or as timekeepers. Ask your Jeweler for them. Manufactory—Bristol, Ct.

KANSAS
AS IT IS.
AN ELEGANT NEW BOOK, answering 1000 questions about this great State. JUST OUT. 180 pages; 50 engravings, with an accurate State map. 50 cts. in paper; $1 in cloth, postpaid. AGENTS WANTED. C. S. BURCH & CO., Pubs., Chicago.

KEEP'S SHIRTS.
KEEP'S Patent Partly-made Dress Shirts, best quality, only plain seams to finish, 6 for $7.
KEEP'S Custom Shirts to measure, best quality, 6 for $9, delivered free. Guaranteed perfectly satisfactory.
RED FLANNEL UNDERWEAR.
Undershirts and Drawers, best quality, $1.50 each.
White Flannel Undervests, best quality, $1.50 each.
Canton Flannel Vests & Drawers, ex. heavy, 75c. each.
Twilled Silk Umbrellas, paragon frames, $3 each.
Best Gingham, patent protected ribs, $1 each.
Circulars and Samples mailed free on application.
Shirts only delivered free. KEEP MANUFACTURING COMPANY, 165 and 167 Mercer Street, New York.

AGENTS WANTED FOR
Creative Science;
Or, MANHOOD, WOMANHOOD, AND THEIR MUTUAL INTER-RELATIONS; LOVE, ITS LAWS, POWER, ETC.
Agents are selling from 15 to 25 copies a day. Send for specimen pages and our extra terms to Agents, and see why it sells faster than any other book. Address NATIONAL PUBLISHING CO., Chicago, Ill.

DR. WARNER'S
HEALTH CORSET
With Skirt Supporter and Self-Adjusting Pads.
Unequaled for Beauty, Style & Comfort.
APPROVED BY ALL PHYSICIANS.
For Sale by Leading Merchants
Samples, any size, by mail. In Satteen, $1.50; Coutil, $1.75; Nursing Corset, $2.00; Misses' Corset, $1.00.
AGENTS WANTED
WARNER BROS., 351 Broadway, N. Y.

PULMONA IS A SURE CURE FOR CONSUMPTION!
READ THIS STATEMENT FROM A PATIENT. "From T. J. Carson, College Hill, Cincinnati: "I was in the last stage of CONSUMPTION. In ten days after taking PULMONA my CHILLS, NIGHT SWEATS and FEVER decreased, and finally altogether disappeared. A mere skeleton before, I am now well covered with flesh. My restoration is a marvel to all who know me."
PULMONA may be ordered through any Dealer in Medicines. Circulars, containing particulars of MANY CASES successfully treated, sent free. Address OSCAR G. MOSES, 18 Cortlandt St., New York.

Caution to the Public.

To avoid imposition, purchasers of Waltham Watches will observe that every genuine Watch, whether gold or silver, bears our own trade-mark on both case and movements.

Gold cases are stamped "A. W. Co.," and guarantee certificates accompany them. Silver cases are stamped "Am. Watch Co., Waltham, Mass., Coin Silver," or "Am. Watch Co., Waltham, Mass., Sterling Silver," according to quality, and are accompanied by guarantee certificate signed R. E. Robbins, Treasurer. The name "WALTHAM" is plainly engraved upon all movements, irrespective of other distinguishing marks.

This caution is rendered necessary by reason of the fact that our cases are frequently separated from our movements and put upon worthless movements of other makers, and vice versa, thus affecting injuriously the performance of the Watches, and vitiating our guaranty, which is intended only to cover our complete Watches wholly made by us. Every buyer should make a close inspection as indicated.

AMERICAN WATCH CO.,
By R. E. ROBBINS, Treas.

YOU WANT IT.
To mark your Clothing, Books and Cards, your name and fancy Initial Letter, with Indelible Ink, sent by mail for 50 Cents.
Send for Circular to
C. HAYNES,
Auburn, N. Y.

DUNHAM PIANOS.
Dunham & Sons, Manufacturers.
Warerooms, 18 East 14th St.,
[Established 1834.] NEW YORK.
Prices Reasonable. Terms Easy.

HUNT'S REMEDY
THE GREAT
KIDNEY MEDICINE
A positive remedy for Dropsy and all diseases of the Kidneys, Bladder and Urinary Organs. Hunt's Remedy is purely vegetable and prepared expressly for the above diseases. It has cured thousands. Every bottle warranted. Send to W. E. Clarke, Providence, R.I., for illustrated pamphlet. If your druggist don't have it, he will order it for you.

LAND CENTRAL-WESTERN IOWA
1,200 000 ACRES for
Sale at $5 and $6 per Acre, in farm lots, and on terms to suit all classes. Round-trip tickets from Chicago and return free to purchasers. Send postal card for maps and pamphlet describing climate, soil and products in 16 counties. Call on or address IOWA R. R. LAND COMPANY, 92 Randolph Street, Chicago, or Cedar Rapids, Iowa.
J. B. CALHOUN, Land Commissioner.

A FARM AND HOME
OF YOUR OWN.
NOW IS THE TIME TO SECURE IT.
ONLY FIVE DOLLARS
FOR AN ACRE
Of the best Land in America. 2,000,000 Acres in Eastern Nebraska, on the line of the Union Pacific Railroad, now for sale. 10 years' credit given, interest only 6 per cent. These are the only lands FOR SALE on the line of this GREAT RAILROAD, the WORLD'S HIGHWAY. Send for THE NEW "PIONEER," the best paper for those seeking new homes ever published. Full information, with maps, sent FREE. O. F. DAVIS, Land Agent U. P. R. R., Omaha, Neb.

BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES FOR COUGHS AND COLDS
A
Cough, Cold, or Sore Throat,
Requires immediate attention, as neglect oftentimes results in some incurable Lung disease. BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES are a simple remedy, and will almost invariably give immediate relief.
SOLD BY ALL CHEMISTS and dealers in medicines.

POND'S EXTRACT
CATARRH.—Pond's Extract is nearly a Specific for this disease. It can hardly be excelled, even in old and obstinate cases. The relief is so prompt that no one who has ever tried it will be without it.
CHAPPED HANDS AND FACE. Pond's Extract should be in every family this rough weather. It removes the soreness and roughness, and softens and heals the skin promptly.
RHEUMATISM.—During severe and changeable weather, no one subject to Rheumatic Pains should be one day without Pond's Extract, which always relieves.
SORE LUNGS, CONSUMPTION, COUGHS, COLDS.—This cold weather tries the Lungs sorely. Have Pond's Extract on hand always. It relieves the pain and cures the disease.
CHILBLAINS will be promptly relieved and ultimately cured by bathing the afflicted parts with Pond's Extract.
FROSTED LIMBS.—Pond's Extract invariably relieves the pain and finally cures.
SORE THROAT, QUINSY, INFLAMED TONSILS AND AIR PASSAGES are promptly cured by the use of Pond's Extract. It never fails.
HISTORY and Uses of Pond's Extract, in pamphlet form, sent free on application to POND'S EXTRACT CO., 98 Maiden Lane, New York.

GRAFF'S IMPROVED POTASH OR LYE
SOAP IS MADE IN ONE HOUR
WILL MAKE NINE POUNDS OF PURE SOAP IN ONLY ONE HOUR
PROF. BEDFORD'S LETTER SHOWING SUPERIORITY OF THIS ARTICLE OVER ALL OTHERS FOR SOAP MAKING, SENT FREE BY MAIL ON APPLICATION TO H.M. ANTHONY 104 READE ST. NEW YORK.

THE CHEAPEST & BEST
ADVERTISING
TO REACH READERS OUTSIDE OF THE LARGE CITIES.
We represent over 1,000 Newspapers, having a weekly circulation of over 600,000 Copies, divided into six different lists, covering different sections of the country.
Advertisements received for one or more lists. For catalogues, containing names of papers and other information, and for estimates, address
BEALS & FOSTER,
41 Park Row (Times Building), New York.

NATURE'S REMEDY.
VEGETINE
THE GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER
An Excellent Medicine.
SPRINGFIELD, O., Feb. 28, 1877.
This is to certify that I have used VEGETINE, manufactured by H. R. Stevens, Boston, Mass., for Rheumatism and General Prostration of the Nervous System with good success. I recommend VEGETINE as an excellent medicine for such complaints.
Yours very truly,
C. W. VANDEGRIFT.
Vegetine is Sold by all Druggists.

$50 to $75 a week with our popular Books, Bibles, Chromos & Maps. Goodspeed's Pub'g House, Chicago.
Books Old & New wanted and sold. Immense Catalogue. American Book Exchange, 55 Beekman St., N. Y.
$200 a month. Agents wanted to represent Child & Pratt, Cincinnati, O.
WONDER box, contains 27 useful articles; for 25c stamps. Miss Eve Grant, Middleboro, Mass.
3 new vocal and 3 new instrumental pieces Sheet Music, 10c. Globe Music Co., Middleboro, Mass.
GUNS REVOLVERS. Price-List free. Address Great Western Gun Works, Pittsburgh, Pa.
$3300 A YEAR. How to Make it. New Agents' Goods. COE & YONGE, St. Louis, Mo.
PIANOS Retail price $900 only $260. Organs, price $340 only $95. [illegible] free. Daniel F. Beatty, Washington, N. J.
$3 GOLD PLATED WATCHES. Cheapest in the known world. Sample Watch Free to Agents. Address, A. COULTER & CO., Chicago, Ill.
$2500 a year. Agents wanted everywhere. Business strictly legitimate. Particulars free. Address J. WORTH & Co., St. Louis, Mo.
SIXTY-SIX specimen copies of our BEAUTIFUL OIL CHROMOS free to responsible Agents [illegible] STEINMAN & CO., 186 W. Sixth St., Cincinnati, O.
AGUE and Fever quickly and positively Cured by the Great Central American Fever Remedy. [illegible] Address, postpaid, on receipt of $1, by M. L. WHITNEY, Cincinnati, O., Sole Proprietor.

Agents. Read This!
We will pay Agents a Salary of $75 per Month and Expenses to sell our New and Wonderful Inventions. Address SHERMAN & CO., Marshall, Michigan.

YOUNG MEN! Learn Telegraphy and earn from $35 to $100 a month. Small salary while learning. Situations furnished. Address, with stamp, R. VALENTINE, Manager, Janesville, Wis.

SWINDLERS All devices resorted to by rogues, ADVERTISERS and others, defrauding the public EXPOSED. DETECTIVES are WANTED [illegible] Address, Publishers American Criminal Gazetteer, Cincinnati, Ohio.

ARTIFICIAL LIMBS.
Best and Cheapest. Satisfaction Guaranteed in Every Case. Soldiers' Limbs on Government Order.
CHAS. M. EVANS, Manuf'r,
150 W. 4th St., CINCINNATI, O.

NORTH STAR SEEDS.
"The further North seeds are grown, the sooner the product will mature." Send for Catalogue of the most Northern Seed Farm in America. HOLLISTER CARTER & CO., St. Paul Minn.

WATERPROOF COVERS,
Awnings, Tents, Signs, Window Shades, &c. MURRAY & BAKER, 149 S. Desplaines St., Chicago. Send for Illustrated Price-List.

WORK FOR ALL
In their own localities, canvassing for the Fireside Visitor (enlarged), Weekly and Monthly. Largest Paper in the World, with Mammoth Chromos Free. Big Commissions to Agents. Terms and Outfit Free. Address P. O. VICKERY, Augusta, Maine.

$10 to $25 A DAY SURE made by Agents selling our Chromos, Crayons, Picture and Chromo Cards. 125 samples, worth $5, sent, postpaid, for 85 Cents. Illustrated Catalogue free. J. H. BUFFORD'S SONS, Boston. [Established 1830.]

FREE! FREE! FREE! An immense Descriptive Catalogue of Novels, Song Books, Music, Negro Farces, Acting Plays, Letter Writers, Fortune Tellers, Reciters, Cook Books, Speakers, Dialogues, Joke Books, Ready Reckoners, Playing Cards, Books on Magic, Swimming, Boxing, Draughts, Cricket, Base-Ball, Clog Shoes, Burnt Cork, Wigs, Face Preparations, &c., unequaled and unattainable elsewhere. Mailed free on application. DEWITT PUBLISHING HOUSE, 33 Rose Street, New York.

MAGIC LANTERNS AND VIEWS

EXTRA LARGE COMMISSIONS
Paid to Agents on two very elegant and valuable books on popular subjects, filled with the very finest illustrations by noted Artists. Wishing to place Agents in EVERY TOWN on these books AT ONCE, we will give SPECIAL AND UNUSUAL COMMISSIONS to Agents who apply within TWENTY DAYS. We mean business! Send for Circulars, Terms, etc., etc., to the AMERICAN PUBLISHING CO., Chicago, Ill.

JACKSON'S BEST
SWEET NAVY CHEWING TOBACCO
was awarded the highest prize at Centennial Exposition for its fine chewing qualities, the excellence and lasting character of its sweetening and flavoring. If you want the best tobacco ever made, ask your grocer for this, and see that each plug bears our blue-strip trade-mark, with words Jackson's Best on it. Sold wholesale by all jobbers. Send for sample to C. A. JACKSON & CO., Manufacturers, Petersburg, Va.

HULL & SCOTNEY, General Commission Merchants, 346 N. Water St., Philadelphia, and wholesale dealers in Butter, Cheese, Eggs, Poultry, Game, Potatoes, Apples, Grain, Flour, Fur, Wool, Cotton, Peanuts, Broom Corn, Foreign and Domestic Fruits, and, in fact, we can sell any and everything at the highest market price, make prompt returns, and LIBERAL CASH ADVANCES made on all shipments except perishable articles. To show that we do an extensive business, any game dealer in Philadelphia will tell you we handled more game last season than all other Houses in Philadelphia put together. Send for Price-List, Stencil, &c., &c. REFERENCE CASH, or we refer you to any responsible House in our city.

BABBITT'S TOILET SOAP.
Unrivaled for the Toilet and the Bath. No artificial and deceptive odors to cover common and deleterious ingredients. After years of scientific experiment the manufacturer of B. T. Babbitt's Best Soap has perfected and now offers to the public The FINEST TOILET SOAP in the World. Only the purest vegetable oils used in its manufacture. For Use in the Nursery it has No Equal. Worth ten times its cost to every mother and family in Christendom. Sample box, containing 3 cakes of 6 oz. each, sent free to any address on receipt of 75 cents. Address B. T. BABBITT, New York City. For sale by all Druggists.

THE
GOOD OLD STAND-BY.
MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT.
FOR MAN AND BEAST.
ESTABLISHED 35 YEARS. Always cures. Always ready. Always handy. Has never yet failed. Thirty millions have tested it. The whole world approves the glorious old Mustang—the Best and Cheapest Liniment in existence. 25 cents a bottle. The Mustang Liniment cures when nothing else will.
SOLD BY ALL MEDICINE VENDERS

WEBER'S
METROPOLITAN CORSET!
THE ONLY CORSET COMBINING
Grace Comfort and Beauty!
Is constructed on purely scientific principles. The back is whale boned and left open at the hips to be laced at pleasure of wearer, and is so curved in back that the fabrics and bones adapt themselves with marvelous accuracy to every curve and undulation of the finest type of figure. For sale by all leading merchants. Lady Agents wanted. Samples by mail on receipt of $1.50.
WESTERN DEPOT, KEITH BROS., Chicago, Ill.

SANDAL-WOOD.
A positive remedy for all Diseases of the Kidneys, Bladder and Urinary Organs; also good in Dropsical Complaints. It never produces sickness, is certain and speedy in its action. It is fast superseding all other remedies. Sixty capsules cure in six or eight days. No other medicine can do this.
Beware of Imitations, for, owing to its great success, many have been offered; some are most dangerous, causing piles, &c.
DUNDAS DICK & CO.'S Genuine Soft Capsules, containing Oil of Sandal-Wood, sold at all Drug Stores. Ask for circular, or send for one to 35 and 37 Wooster street, New York.

WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS please say you saw the advertisement in this paper.

DAVENPORT THE DRUGGIST

Would call the attention of the public to his splendid stock of

PURE DRUGS AND MEDICINES!

Which have been selected with especial reflerence to the wants of this locality, and warranted fresh and genuine. Also to his fine stock of

HAIR OILS AND PERFUMERY.

The finest in the county. He also keeps a full stock of Toilet Soaps, Face Powders, Combs, Brushes, Sponges, etc. Also Trusses and Supporters, in large varieties and a full Stock of DRUGGIST'S SUNDRIES.

SCHOOL BOOKS WALL PAPER AND CURTAINS!

The largest and most complete stock in Northern Indiana. Be sure to call on

DAVENPORT.

His stock is very complete and PRICES WAY DOWN. Also a fu line of.

GOLD PENS, ALBUMS, POCKET BOOKS, BLANK BOOKS, INK and STATIONERY.

Be sure and call on

DAVENPORT, THE DRUGGIST,
AUBURN, IND

FRUIT HOUSE PRICES!

Great Reduction on Sugars

All grades reduced 1 cent per pound; the lowest they have sold for fifteen years. Best white coffee sugar 10c, best coffee C 9c, choice yellow sugar 8c.

An immense stock of all goods for

CHRISTMAS AND NEW YEARS!

Candies, Nuts, Toys, Liquors and Cigars.

TEAS!

Fifty more chests of the choice 40c tea and 40 chests of the good 25c tea. We sell large amounts of these two teas; being good drawers, strong and well flavored We now sell more chests of tea in a mouth than we used to in a year, and this comes simply from our purchasing direct of the importers and selling direct to our customers, thoroby saving the profit of the middle men, which is 20 to 40c on the pound.

Young Hyson Tea, - - - - -	25, 50, 70, best 90 cents per pound
Gunpowder Tea, - - - - -	60, 70, best 90 cents per pound
Imperial Tea, - - - - -	40 60, best 90 cents per pound
Ooolong Tea, - - - - -	25, 60, best 70 cents per pound
Japan Uncolored Tea, - - - - -	35, 50, best 70 cents per pound

COFFEE! COFFEE!

Our Best Rio, 22 cents. Good Fine Rio, 20 cents. Old Government Java, 30 cents.

SYRUPS.

Cuba 40 and 50 cents. New Orleans, 50 and 75 cents White Drips, 75 cts. and $1.

RAISENS, and ZANTEE CURRENTS for CHRISTMAS CAKE, CITRON, LEMON and ORANGE PEEL.

Valencia raisins per pound 6c. Best layers raisins 12½c. Zantee currents 9c Leghorn citron 25c, Orange and Lemon peal 30c,

CANDIES.

Toy candies of all kinds. Stick candy per pound 15c. French mixed 18c. Toy candy all sorts and varieties 30c. Toys for Santa Claus from a penny whistle to a nice album to make presents with a thousand different things to amuse the little ones—Dogs, cats, rats, mice, birds, elephants, lions, tigars, drums, wagons, horses, Chineese lanterns, pistol caps, &c., something for every little one in the country.

And for Christmas tree candles we have a large assortment of every color, from ½ cent to 2 cents each or 50c per box.

OILS. OILS. OILI!

Coal Oil per gallon, 20 cents. Fish Oil per gallon, $1.00. Headlight Oil per gallon 25 cents. Best Golden Machine Oil per gal. 70c. Lard Oil, per gallon, $1.00 Machine Oil per gal. 30ct

Nut for Christms and New Years.

Brazil nuts 10c. Filberts, quart 15c. Almons, qurrt 25c. English walnuts, quart 15c. Pecans, quart 12 1-2c. Roasted pea nute quart 5c.

Liquors of all Kinds for Medical use Whisky, Rum, Brandy, Gin, Wines and Ales.

Good old bourbon $1 and $1.25. 2 years old $1.40 and 1.50. Best old 76 for medical use $2.50. Sherry Wine as good as any in the country $1.50. Port wine best in the market $1.50. California Angelica wine best $1.50. Gin $1.50 and $2 50. Dublin and Londen Porter 22c. Scotch 22c.

TOBACCOS AND CIGRS.

A No. 1 smoking for 30c per pound. Choice fine cut 50c per pound. No. 1 Plug Tobacco 50c per pound.

—We have a large assortment and can sell a good cigar at $1.25 per box. And a choice No. 1 cigar for $1.75 per c00.

FRESH OYSTERS LOWER THIS YEAR THAN MEAT—We sell a fine Oyste at 12½. No. 1 full count saloon oyster 20c. Large A standard 30c.—

You can save at least 25 per cent. on the dollar at the

Fruit House, Fort Wyne, Ind

BOOK STORE

WILLIS &CO.!

Successors to C. P. Houser, having purchased the above named stock, we wish to say to the people of Auburn and vicinity that by the patronage that we hope to merit, we expect to build up a first-class

BOOK AND NEWS STORE,

that will be a credit to the place. We are adding a large variety of goods, and shall endeavor to keep on hand the novelties of the season. We solicit orders for

Books, Magazines, Papers, etc.,

which will be furnished promptly at the publishers prices by

WILLIS & CO.

October 11, '77—no11.

CARPETS

ELLSWORTH, ANDREW & Co.,

Offer a large and choice stock of Carpets in all the newest designs.

Body Brussels Carpets,
Tapestry Carpets,
Ingrain Carpets,
COTTON CHAIN CARPETS,
HEMP CARPETS,
RAG CARPETS.

Terry's Reps, Cretonnes, Lace Curtains, Shades, Wall Paper, Stair Rods.

OIL CLOTHS,

Mattings, Rugs and Mats, Druggets

And all goods pertaining to the carpet and upholestry business.

Lambrequins
A Specialty.

Prices Low to Compete with the Times

ELLSWORTH, ANDREW & CO.
26 East Berry Street,
Fort Wayne, Indiana.

BOSS HARNESS SHOP

I have purchased the harness stock of Geo. Nock, and added largely to every description of stock that is usually kept in my line of trade, such as

HARNESS, DOUBLE AND SINGLE!
Buffalo Robes, Lap Robes,
Horse Blankets, Collars,
Whips, Brushes, Combs.
Harness Oil, Axel Greese,
Fine Ready-made Harness,
Double and Single a Specialty.

Manufactured by the most experienced workmau that can be found in Northern Indiana, I employ none other, none other neee apply. I would say to all customer frends that I will warrant ad stock and work that goes out of my shop as recommended. I usl none but the best Oak tanned Leather. I would invite all in need of goods in my line to call at my shop before purchasing elsewhere Shop in Flukes old Tannery Building on corner Jackson and seventh St. As I am bound not be undersold in the same class of goods in Northern Indiana

Being an old farmer formily I keep a very effable experienced Foreman to see that all work is well done. Repairing done with neatness and dispatch.

J. E. SHILLING, Sole Proprietor.
W. SHEFFER, Foreman.

JOHN L. DAVIS,

OF THE

PIONEER HARDWARE STORE,

Would respectfully announce that he has made large additions in every department, and is prepared to furnish everything in the Hardwase line

He keeps a full stock of

BUILDING MATERIAL.

Whichhe can sell at prices to suit the times. All kinds of

STOVES and TINWARE

on hand. He keeps a first-class TINMR and prepared todo all kinds of Eaves Trough hangnig Roofing, on short notice, and in a workmanlike manner.

MAIN STREET, OPPOSITE COURT HOUSE AUBURN, IND

$200.000.

GREATEST BARGAIN EVER OFFERED

In order to clear out our stock of very superior Gold-plated Jewelry valued at over $200,000, we will send as below, 20 Pieces, all warranted Gold-plated for $1.00. 1 pair Gold Stone Sleeve Buttons; 1 pair Engraved Sleeve Buttons; 1 set Pointed Studs; 1 set Amethyst Studs; 1 Wedding Ring; 1 Engraved Band Finger Ring; 1 Amethyst Stone Ring, Inlaid with Gold; 1 Elegant Ring, marked "Friendship;" 1 Amethyst Stone Scarf Pin, Inlaid with Gold; 1 Silvered Hat Pin; 1 set Ladies' Jet and Gold Pin and Drops; 1 Misses' set Jet and Gold; 1 set Handsome Rosebud Ear Drops; 1 Gents' Elegant Lake George Diamond Stud; 1 Cardinal Red Bead Necklace; 1 pair Ladies Amethyst Stone Ear Drops, 1 Collar Stud; 1 Ladies' Ornamented Jet Brooch; 1 Fancy Scarf Ring and Elegant Watch Chain. Take your choice, the entire lot of 20 pieces, sent Post-paid for $1.00 or any 8 pieces you choose for 50 cents. Now is the time to make money. These can easily be retailed at $10.00. CLUB PREMIUM. To any one ordering 12 Lots at $1.00 each, we will present Free, an Open Face Coin Silver Watch as Premium. WATCH AND JEWELRY CIRCULAR FREE.

NOTICES OF THE PRESS.

Our cotemporary, the Boston Globe, speaks very highly of both advertiser and goods as being honorable in his dealings, and reliable in his goods, a commendation we heartily endorse.—St. Louis Dispatch, December 7, 1876.

The house is a thoroughly reliable one in every repect.—Boston Globe, Oct. 25, 1876.

His reputation for honesty, fair dealing, and liberality is unequaled by any advertiser in this city.—N. Y. Day Book, December 16, 1876.

Advertises more and sells cheaper than any man in New York.—Herald, April 13, 1877.

F. STOCKMAN, 27 Bond Street, New York.

DOWN! DOWN! DOWN!

FROM 10 TO 25 PER CENT.

—o—

HARNESS, SADELES,

COLLARS, WHIPS, &c.,

At my new shop on seventh street, opposite Court House, in old Post Office building. Come and see me and I will sell you a good article for less money than you ever heard of before. All work warranted.

G. RHODENBAUGH

DAY'S AGUE TONIC

CURES EVERY FORM OF CHILLS, OR MONEY RETURNED.

DAY'S TONIC Cures Chills and Fever.
DAY'S TONIC Cures Dumb Chills.
DAY'S TONIC Supersedes Quinine.
DAY'S TONIC Cures Old Chronic Chills.
DAY'S TONIC Is pleasant for Children.
DAY'S TONIC Cleanses the Stomach.
DAY'S TONIC Acts on Liver and Bowels.
DAY'S TONIC Don't Buzz the Head.
DAY'S TONIC Don't contain Quinine.

DAY'S TONIC

Is a new innovation, and possesses advantages heretofore unknown and unclaimed by others.

It does not contain Quinine or any poison; it does not produce buzzing or roaring in the head which follows the use of Quinine; it is retained by delicate stomachs; it acts upon the liver and bowels without the use of any other medicine; it never fails to cure, and our agents are authorised to return the money in each and every case of failure; one bottle will cure two cases. Try it and see. Sold by all Druggists at $1.00.

J. P. DROMGOOLE & CO., Proprietors, Louisville, Ky.

RAILROADS.

Lake Shore & Mich Southern R R

AIR LINE DIVISION.

On and after Nov. 19 1877, trains will run as follows:

GOING WEST

	Special Ex.	Pacific Ex.	Accm
Toledo	11 15 a m	12 [illegible] a m	5 50 p m
Wauseon	12 18 "	1 07 "	[illegible] "
Bryan	12 52 "	1 50 "	7 54 "
Butler	1 [illegible] "	2 [illegible] "	"
Waterloo	1 50 "	2 40 "	8 51 "
Sedan	"	"	"
Corunna	"	"	9 15 "
Kendallville	2 15 "	3 05 "	9 30 "
Ligonier	2 35 "	3 40 "	"
Goshen	3 24 "	4 12 "	"
Elkhart	3 50 "	4 25 "	"

GOING EAST.

Elkhart	1 10 p m	9 50 p m	"
Goshen	1 30 "	10 10 "	"
Ligonier	1 58 "	10 42 "	"
Kendallville	2 23 "	11 27 "	6 00 a m
Corunna	"	"	6 15 "
Sedan	"	"	"
Waterloo	2 57 "	11 46 "	6 38 "
Butler	3 12 "	12 01 a m	6 52 "
Bryan	3 45 "	12 40 "	7 36 "
Wauseon	4 25 "	1 25 "	8 34 "
Toledo	5 40 "	2 40 "	10 00 "

CHAS. PAINE, Gen. Supt.
J. W. CARY, Gen Tic. Agt
J. H. CURTIS, Division Su

Pittsburg, Ft. W. & C. R. R

Condensed time card Nov. 11, 1877.

GOING WEST.

	No 1 Fast ex.	No. 7 Pac. ex.	No. 3 Nigh ex	No 5 Mail.
Pittsburgh	11 45 pm	9 00 am	1 50 pm	6 00 am
Rochester	12 53 am	10 15	2 56	7 45
Alliance	3 10	12 50 pm	5 35	11 00
Orrville	4 45	2 26	7 12	12 55 pm
Mansfield	7 00	4 40	9 20	3 11
Crestl'e ar.	7 30	5 15	9 45	3 50
" lv.	7 50	5 40	9 55
Forest	9 25	7 35	11 25
Lima	10 40	9 00	12 25 am
Ft. Wayne	1 30 pm	11 55	3 40
Plymouth	3 45	2 46 am	4 55
Chicago	7 00	6 30	7 58

GOING EAST

	No. 4 Night ex.	No. 2 Fast ex.	No. 6 Pac. ex	No. 8 Mail
Chicago	9 10 pm	8 00 am	5 15 pm
Plymouth	2 46 am	11 25	9 00
Ft. Wayne	6 55	2 15 pm	11 30
Lima	8 55	4 10	1 30 am
Forest	10 10	5 20	2 37
Crestl'e ar.	11 45	6 55	4 20
" lv.	12 05 pm	7 15 pm	4 30	6 05am
Mansfield	12 35	7 44	5 00	6 55
Orrville	2 26	9 23	7 10	9 15
Alliance	4 00	11 15	9 00	11 20
Rochester	6 22	1 20 am	11 06	2 00pm
Pittsburgh	7 30	2 30	12 15	3 30

Trains Nos 3 and 6 run daily. Train No. 1 leaves Pittsburg daily except Sunday. Train No 4 leaves Chicago daily except Saturday. All others daily except Sunday.

F. R. MYERS,
Gen Pass. and Ticket Agent.

Detroit, Eel River & Illinois R R.

TAKE EFFECT Nov. 19 1877.

GOIMG EAST.

Stations.	MAIL No. 2,	ACCOM. No. 4,	LOCAL FT No. 6,
lv. Logansport	8 15am	7 25pm	6 30am
Mexico	8 57	8 25	7 40
Denver	9 00	9 07	8 25
Chili	9 17	9 12	8 47
Roann	9 35	9 37	9 35
Laketon	9 53	10 00	10 10
N. Manchester	10 05	10 17	10 35
Liberty Mills	10 17	10 30	11 00
Collamer	10 31	10 50	11 40
S. Whitley	10 25	10 55	11 50
Columbia City	11 01	11 31	12 50
Collin's	11 20	11 55	2 00
Churubusco	11 34	12 12	2 31
La Otto	11 57	12 42	3 25
Cedar Creek	12 06	12 54	3 45
Auburn Junct'n	12 22	1 12	4 25
Auburn	12 25	1 17	4 35
Butler	1 00am	2 10am	5 45pm

Going West.

Stations	No. 1.	No.	No. 7
Logansport ar	7 00pm	1 00pm	6 50pm
Mexico	6 26	12 40	5 40
Denver	6 17	11 46	5 20
Chili	6 10	11 35	5 00
Roann	5 57	11 12	4 15
Laketon	5 43	10 50	3 30
North Manchester	5 28	10 35	3 00
Liberty Mills	5 27	10 17	2 35
Collamer	5 15	9 57	2 05
South Whitley	5 12	9 52	1 53
Columbia City	4 50	9 18	12 10
Collin's	4 32	8 53	11 29
Cherubusco	20	8 38	10 55
La Otto	3 55	8 10	10 05
Cedar Creek	3 45	8 00	9 48
Auburn Junction	3 27	7 40	9 15
Auburn	3 22	7 35	8 30
Butler lv	2 45pm	6 55am	7 15

FRANK J. HECKER,
Gen. Sup't

Baltimore & Ohio Railroad.

IN EFFECT Nov. 9 1877.

GOING WEST.

STATIONS:	Express	Express	Cum'l A
lv New York	8 15am	8 35pm
Philadelphia	11 45	11 30
Baltimore	5 13pm	7 00am
Washington	6 35	8 40
Wheeling	8 20am	10 50pm	4 30pm
Bellaire	8 50am	11 15	4 50
Barnesville	10 10	12 25am	6 12
Cambridge	11 18	25	7 30
Zanesville	12 25pm	35	8 50
ar Newark	1 30	40	10 00
Columbus	3 20	1 20
Shawnee	4 30	2 10
lv Columbus	12 40
Newark	2 20		6 00pm
Mt Vernon	3 19		7 15
Mansfield	4 54		11 25
Shelby	5 11		12 23am
Monroeville	6 18		3 00
ar Sandusky	7 00		4 50
lv Chicago Junction	6 00	4	8 15
Republic	6 45	1	8 10
Tiffin	7 15	8 39	9 55
Fostoria	7 45	9 10	10 [illegible]
Deshler	8 50	10 09	1 35pm
Defiance	9 52	11 06
Hicksville	10 41	11 53
Auburn Junction	11 22	12 35pm
Garrett	11 40pm	1 05	m
Avilla
Albion	12 17am	1 44
Milford Junction
Walkertown Junction	2 33	3 53
Chicago	5 40	7 00

GOING EAST.

Chicago	8 50am	9 40pm
Walkertown Junction	12 26pm	10 54pm	11 20am
Milford Junction			2 27pm
Albion	2 30	3 10	4 15
Avilla	2 49	3 30	4 55
Garrett	3 20	3 55	6 00am
Auburn Junction	3 28	4 03	6 18
Hicksville	4 07	4 42	7 42
Defiance	4 54	5 27	9 15
Deshler	5 48	6 23	11 35
Fostoria	6 47	7 23	2 10pm
Tiffin	7 15	7 54	3 20
Republic	7 36
Sandusky
Monroeville
Chicago Junction	8 40	9 30	1 25
Shelby Junction	9 15	10 06	2 55
Mansfield	9 44	10 37	3 55
Mt. Vernon	11 13	12 10pm	7 15
ar Newark	12 15a m	1 15	9 20
lv Columbus	5 50	3 20
Shawnee
Newark	12 30am	2 05	5 55am
Lv Zanesville	1 35	3 10	7 10
Cambridge	2 37	4 08	8 14
Barnesville	3 38	5 35	9 20
Ar Bellaire	4 50	6 20	10 40
Wheeling	6 00	7 40	11 55
Washington	7 20pm	7 50am
Baltimore	8 40	9 20
Philadelphia	3 10am	1 45pm
New York	6 45	5 10pm

Zanesville Accommodation leaves Zanesville daily except Sunday at 6:40 a. m., and arrives at Columbus at 9:15 a. m.

Express trains run daily, other trains daily except Sunday.

L. M. COLE, Gen. Tick. Agt.

Ft. Wayne, Muncie & Cin. R. R.

Muncie Route.

THE SHORT LINE TO INDIANAPOLIS,
—AND—
THE SOUTHWEST.

Time Card in effect Nov. 18, 1877.

GOING SOUTH.

STATIONS.	1. Mail.	3. Express.	Accomo.
FORT WAYNE	1 00 pm	6 00 pm
Bluffton	2 10	7 15 pm
Montpelier	2 47	7 57 pm
Hartford	3 17	8 24 pm
MUNCIE	4 [illegible]	9 20 pm	9 10 am
Newcastle	5 05	....	9 [illegible]
Cambridge City	5 40	....	9 [illegible]
Connersville	6 2[illegible]	....	10 [illegible]
Cincinnati	10 00 pm	....	12 20 pm
INDIANAPOLIS	6 05	11 20 pm
Louisville	10 05 pm	3 20 am
Terre Haute	10 34 pm	1 50 am
St. Louis	7 [illegible] am	[illegible] am

GOING NORTH

STATIONS		6 3.	4 Accom.
St. Louis	....	5 am	....
Terre Haute	....	1 35 pm	....
Louisville	....	7 17 pm	....
Cincinnati	7 30 am	....	4 10 pm
Indianapolis	....	4 20 am	pm
Connersville	12 41 am	....	pm
Cambridge City	am	....	pm
New Castle	am	....	50 pm
Muncie	pm	8 27 am	4 0 pm
Hartford	pm	9 15 am	....
Montpelier	pm	9 41 am	....
Bluffton	2 43 pm	10 19 am	....
Fort Wayne	3 50 pm	11 25 am	....

All trains daily except Sunday. Trains run on Columbus time Through cars attached to trains 1 and 4, and run between Fort Wayne and Indianapolis via Muncie.

GEO. W. MULLEN, Act'g Gen. Tick. Ag't.
W. W. WORTHINGTON, Gen. Supt.

Ft. Wayne, Jackson & Sag. R. R

Short Line Between

Michigan and the South.

Time card in effect Nov 18—run by Chicago time

Going South.

Stations	Mail	Exp.	Fr't.
Saginaw	3 35 pm	7 15 am
Lansing	7 20 pm	10 00 am
Grand Rapids		6 30 am	11 50 am
Detroit	9 50 pm	7 00 am
Jackson	6 55 am	11 40 am	5 10 pm
Jonesville	8 10	12 50 pm	7 20
Bankers	8 28	1 07	7 47
Reading	8 44	1 20	8 15
Angola	9 45	2 12	9 4[illegible]
Waterloo	10 28	2 47	10 50
Auburn	10 40	3 01	11 42
Auburn Junction	10 46	3 06	11 35
Ft Wayne	11 40 am	4 00 pm	1 00 am
Indianapolis	6 05 pm	11 20 pm
Louisville	10 50 pm	8 30 am
St. Louis	7 25 am	8 30 am

Going North.

St. Louis		6 45 pm
Louisville		7 15 pm
Indianapolis		4 25 am
Dep. Fort Wayne	4 15 pm	11 15 am	1 30 am
Auburn Junction	5 10	12 05 pm	3 00
Auburn	5 18	12 08	3 03
Waterloo	5 32	12 19	4 05
Ar Angola	6 35	12 57	6 26
Reading	7 35	1 49	7 15
Bankers	7 47	2 04	7 40
Jonesville	8 05	2 30	8 10
Jackson	9 20 pm	3 40	10 00 am
Detroit	8 35 am	6 30	1 00 pm
Grand Rapids	7 05	1 00	4 30 pm
Lansing		5 55 pm
Saginaw	m	9 13 pm

All trains daily except Sunday.
P. S. LOOMIS, Pres't
S. K. HOOPER Gen. Ticket Ag't.

JAS. CLIFFORD.

WATERLOO, IND.

Keeps constantly on hand the best and choices brands of all kinds of

Wines and Liquors,

Cigars, Tobaccos, &c.

He also has, in connection with the above a first class

BILLIARD HALL.

To our citizens and the traveling public, we would say that this is the popular resort at Waterloo. First door south of the railroad

---

GOLD. Great chance to make money. If you can't get gold you can get greenbacks. We need a person in every town to take subscriptions for the largest, cheapest and best illustrated family publication in the world. Any one can become a successful agent. The most elegant works of art given free to subscribers. The price is so low that almost every body subscribes. One Agent reports making over $150 in a week. A lady agent reports taking over 400 subscribers in ten days. All who engage make money fast. You can devote all your time to the business, or only your spare time. You need not be away from home over night. You can do it as well as others. Full directions and terms free. Elegant and expensive outfit free. If you want profitable work send us your address at once. It costs nothing to try the business. No one who engages fails to make great pay. Address "The People's Journal," Portland Maine.

Dr. A. G. OLIN'S Private Hospital, 187 East Washington St., Chicago, Ills. for the cure of all Diseases of a Private nature, resulting from early abuses or infection of either Sex. Seminal Weakness producing Emissions, Loss of Memory, Impaired Sight, Lost Manhood or Impotency, Nervous Debility, permanently cured; diseases of the Bladder, Kidneys, Liver, Lungs, Asthma, Catarrh, Piles, all Chronic Diseases, and DISEASES OF FEMALES, yield to his treatment. Dr. Olin has had a life-long experience, and cures where others fail. He is a graduate of the Reformed School, uses no mercury, has the largest practice in the U. S. LADIES requiring treatment with private home and board, call or write. Every convenience for patients. Send fifty cents for sample of Rubber Goods and circular of important information by express. DR. OLIN'S Female Pills, $2 per Box. Consultation free.

MARRIAGE GUIDE 200 pages. Secrets & information for the young and middle aged of both sexes, on all diseases of a private nature. Valuable advice to the married and those contemplating marriage. How to be healthy and truly happy in the married relation. Everybody should get this book. Price 50 cents, to any address, sealed.

A PHYSIOLOGICAL

View of Marriage!

WOMAN AND MARRIAGE A Guide to Wedlock and confidential Treatise on the duties of marriage and the causes that unfit for it; the secrets of Reproduction and the Diseases of Women. A book for private, considerate reading. 260 pages, price 50 cts.

A PRIVATE MEDICAL ADVISER! On all disorders of a Private Nature arising from Self Abuse, Excesses, or Secret Diseases, with the best means of cure, 224 large pages, price 50 cts.

A CLINICAL LECTURE on the above diseases and those of the Throat and Lungs, Catarrh, Rupture, the Opium Habit, &c., price 10 cts.

Either book sent postpaid on receipt of price; or all three, containing 500 pages, beautifully illustrated, for 75 cts. Address DR. BUTTS, No. 12 N. 8th St. St. Louis, Mo.

CHRONIC Diseases Cured. New paths marked out by that plainest of all books—"Plain Home Talk and Medical Common sense,"—nearly 1,000 pages, 200 illustrations by Dr. E. B. Foote, of 120 Lexington Avenue, N. Y. Purchasers of this book are at liberty to consult its author in person or by mail free. Price by mail $3.25 for the standard edition, or $1.25 for the popular edition, which contains all the same matter and illustrations. Contents free Agents wanted. MURRAY HILL PUBLISHING CO. 129 East 28th St. N. Y.

$45 PREMIUM WATCH AND CHAIN—a stem-winder. Free with every order. Outfit free. J. B. Gaylord & Co., Chicago, Ills.

$3 GOLD PLATED WATCHES. Cheapest in the known world. Sam. le Watch Free to Agents. Address, A. COULTER & Co., Chicago.

OPIUM and Morphine Habit absolutely and speedily cured. Painless; no publicity. Send stamp for particulars. Dr. Carlton, 187 Washington St., Chicago, Ill.

$2500 A YEAR. Agents wanted. Business legitimate. Particulars free. Address J. WORTH & CO., St Louis, Mo.

Recorder's Office

THE AUBURN COURIER.

Devoted to the Interests of the Democratic Party and to the Collection of Local and General News.

Volume 8. AUBURN, DeKALB COUNTY INDIANA, JANUARY 24th, 1878. Number 4.

The Auburn Weekly Courier

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY, BY

TOM. C. MAYS.

One Year,........$2. | Six Months,.......$1.

Advertising Rates.

Space.	1m.	3m.	6m.	1 y.
1 Square	3 00	5 00	7 00	12 00
¼ Column........	6 00	12 00	18 00	30 00
½ Column.........	10 00	18 00	30 00	50 00
1 Column.........	15 00	30 00	50 00	100 00

Local Notices 10 cents per line, first insertion cents each insertion thereafter. Business cards ive Dollars.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY

TERMS OF COURT.

OURTS IN DEKALB CO.	COURTS IN STEUBEN CO
th Monday in February	1st Monday in Febr'y
rd Monday in May.	4th Monday in April.
th Monday in Septem'r	1st Monday in Sept'r
rd Monday in Decem'r	4th Monday in Nov'r.

ATTORNEYS.

B. D. MOODY. P. V. HOFFMAN.

Moody and Hoffman,

ATTORNEYS AT LAW. Office over First National Bank, Auburn, Ind.

H. C. PETERSON,

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public. Office over Davis' hardware store, Auburn, Ind.

J. W. RICKEL,

ATTORNEY AT LAW Auburn, Ind. Special attention given to collections. Office over First National Bank.

A. F. PINCHIN

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public, Butler, DeKalb Co., Ind. Insurance and real estate business promptly attended to.

GUY PLUM

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public. Office in the Court House. Special attention paid to the collection of claims. Also agent for Home Insurance Company.

BEST and McCLELLAN.

ATTORNEYS AT LAW, Waterloo, Ind. Will practice in the Courts of DeKalb & Steuben counties. Liberal Advance Made on all first-class Claims left in our hands for collection.

E. A. FRANKS. O. Z. HUBBELL.

Franks & Hubbell,

ATTORNEYS at law, will practice in DeKalb and adjoining counties. Special attention given to the collection of claims, settlements of decendent estates and conveyance. Office on Broadway opposite Haskins & Son's livery stable, Butler, Ind.

E. WES. M'BRIDE, J. L. MORLAN, W. H. LEAS

McBRIDE, MORLAN and LEAS

ATTORNEYS AT LAW, NOTARIES PUBLIC, COLLECTING AND INSURANCE AGENCY Office over Fisher's Clothing Store, corner of Wayne and Marion streets, Waterloo, Ind. Will practice in all parts of the State. Especial Attention given to collections in DeKalb, Steuben, LaGrange and Noble counties.

DANIEL Z. HOFFMAN.

NOTARY PUBLIC, writer of deeds, mortgages, &c., making abstracts and looking up titles, attending to collecting. Also agent for Niagara Fire Insurance Company. Office with County Recorder, Auburn, Ind.

PHYSICIANS.

DR. J. A. COWAN,

PHYSICIAN & SURGEON, Auburn, Ind. Office on Main street, over Central Grocery.

DR. T. G. MATHENY.

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, office up stairs in McIntyre's block, Auburn, Ind. All calls promptly attended to.

W. S. ALLEN.

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, Office West of Court House, on Main Street, over Eldridge's store. Same office lately occupied by Dr. Cowan.

Dr. T. J. Dills,

Especial attention given to Diseases of the EYE and EAR. Rooms 1 and 2 Odd Fellows' building. Office hours—9:30 to 12 a. m.; 1 to 3 p. m., 7 to 8 p. m. Fort Wayne, Ind.

DR. TRITCH,

HOMEOPATHIC PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON Special attention given to Surgery and Chronic diseases. Office in Case's Block, Auburn Indiana.

DR. S. B. JOHNSTON.

DENTIST, WATERLOO, INDIANA, Does all work in the line of his profession at as low figures as possible. Special attention given to gold filling and making new teeth. All work warranted.

W. T. KNAPP, M. D.

Formerly of Chicago, Ill.,

HOMŒOPATHIC PHYSICIAN,

AUBURN, INDIANA.

Office at Residence, Ralston Property, Seventh Street.

Special attention given to

CHRONIC DISEASES

—AND—

DISEASES OF CHILDREN.

Calls promptly attended, day or night, city or country. Consultation in German or English.

HOTELS.

BUTT'S HOTEL,

FORMERLY THE BIGLER HOUSE, JOHN BUTT & A. B. RICHARDS, Proprietors, Waterloo, Ind. Free omnibus to and from all trains Good sample rooms on first floor.

Central House,

MR. M. C. MARKEL, Prop. Corner Main and Seventh streets. Good Sample Rooms for Drummers.

TREMONT HOUSE.

WASHINGTON, D. C. Accommodates three hundred guests. Terms $2.50 per day. Located corner Second street and Indiana Avenue in full view of the Capitol City Hall.

F. P. HILL.

SANDS HOUSE.

COR. WABASH AVE. & MADISON ST. CHICAGO, ILL. New House, elegantly furnished. Only $2.00 per day.

Geo. S. Palmer, Late of City Hotel,} Clerk. O. Sands, Proprietor

BILL BRITTON

THE DRAY MAN

Will attend promptly to all orders for

DRAYING AND HAULING.

Rattling good teams and reasonab

EAGLE MILLS.

FLOUR, CORN MEAL, FEED, &c.

The reputation of the Eagle Mills, its excellent facilities for making good flour together with the advantages it possesses in the way of improved machinery enables the proprietor to announce that he is now prepared to meet all demands in the way of custom work. The Eagle Mill brand of flour will be found on hand at reasonable rates. Orders delivered in any part of town free of charge.

P. W. SILVERS.

J. G. FLEDDERMAN

No. 27, East Main-St.

FORT WAYNE, IND'A

as the largest and finest stock of

CLOTHS, COATINGS, CHEVIOTS,

AND

CassimereS

in Ft. Wayne. The finest line of

Made up Clothing

ever shown in Fort Wayne

Youths' and Children's Clothing!

Furnishing Goods, &c.

Merchant Tailoring

All work done in all the latest styles, prompt attended. seehisbiggestone a

JUST RECEIV'D

—AT—

J. ABRIGHT'S

Fine Gold and Plated Jewelry.
Ladies Gold Watches,
American Watches,

Rogers & Bro. Silverware,

A splendid line of imported Vases
Watch Chains, magnificent
Holiday Gifts, Lockets,
Ladies Sets, Gents

GOLD & SILVER SET

Sleeve and Collar Buttons, Jet
Shell and Horn Jewelry,
All at astonishingly

LOW PRICES.

Watches and Jewelry repaired on short notice and in good style.

NO PEOPLE IN THE WORLD

suffer as much with Neuralgic or Rheumatic complaints as Americans, and no nation is so prolific in remedies to cure, yet we come in contact every day with scores who are suffering without having found the cure they have sought for. To those who have used

Lawson's Curative

we need only to say that it is compounded with the same scientific skill and care as heretofore, and maintains the deserved reputation which it has acquired by the wonderful cures it has performed. To those who have never tested the CURATIVE we urge a trial of its virtues for the diseases named below.

Eminent and Skillful Physicians

use the CURATIVE largely in their practice, and prominent clergymen and editors recommend it from a knowledge of its effects.

Rheumatism,	Diphtheria,
Dyspepsia,	Sciatica,
Neuralgia,	Toothache,
Pleurisy,	Sore Throat,
Swollen Joints,	Chilblains,
Headache,	Sprains,
Lame Back,	Burns,
Erysipelas,	Scalds,

All yield to the magic influence of the CURATIVE, no matter of how long standing. It is only necessary to use it faithfully and perseveringly, according to the directions which accompany each bottle, and you will be cured.

Lawson's Curative

Is Healing and Cooling to Wounds, Sores, Burns and Scalds.

Try it and you will never be without it.

SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

Price $1.00 per Bottle, 6 for $5.00.

PREPARED BY

Lawson Chemical Co., Cleveland, O.

For sale by F. E. Davenport.

Auburn Courier.

Local and Miscellaneous.

A poor young man remarks that the only advice he gets from capitalists is to "live within his income," whereas the difficulty he experiences is to live without an income.

A Spanish illustrated newspaper is threatened with prosecution for publishing a portrait of the Princess Mercedas, the destined bride of King Alfonso, the portrait being by no means flattering.

If the female Washington correspondent keeps on talking of "the simple old-fashioned style in which Mrs. Hayes' hair is laid smoothly down," the public will rise up and demand that Mrs. Hayes should bang her hair, if only for a little variety.

A country couple newly married, stopped at a hotel, and the bridegroom called for some wine. When asked what kind he would have, he replied: "We want that kind of wine where the corks pop out and the liquor boils up like soap suds."

It is when a dry goods clerk of ninety-seven pounds weight attempts to help from a farm wagon a farmer's wife of two hundred and three pounds weight, that the reporter seats himself contentedly on the curbstone and waits for the catastrophe.

Mark Hamilton, speaking of a belle, who was a great favorite, said: "She has a mouth like an elephant!" Oh, Mr. Hamilton, said a lady present, how can you be so rude?' 'Rude, ladies, rude! I said she had a mouth like an elephant because it's full of ivory."

PIANO FOR SALE.—A good Piano bought three years ago, very little used and never abused, with velvet stool and cloth cover can be had for $200 if application be made immediately to Mrs. T. R. Dickinson, at Waterloo.

Jan. 1, 1878.

The newest styles in dresses are made with a hollow pocket, through which the train may be drawn; thus enabling a lady to carry her train in her pockets, much to the relief of gentlemen. But how would a fellow look with the bottom of his trousers tucked in his coat tail pockets.

A boy was sent for a doctor, his mother being ill, when looking down the street he saw a great crowd. Then come a great struggle between duty and curiosity, but he finally started for the crowd, saying: "The old lady's pretty badly off, but I know she wouldn't want me to miss that fight."

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician retired from active practice, having had placed in his hands by an East Indian missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitus, Catarrh, Asthama, and all throat and lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for general debility and all nervous complaints, after having thouroughly tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, feels it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. The receipt will be sent free of charge, to all who desire it, with full directions for preparing and successfully using. Address with stamp naming this paper, Dr. J. C. Stone, 44 North Ninth Street, Philadelphia Pa.

Assignment of mortgages should be Recorded.

Articles of agreement should be recorded.

Articles of Association should be recorded.

Leases of land should be recorded.

Mechanic's Liens should be recorded.

Deeds and mortgages of real estate should be recorded within forty-five days from date of execution.

Chattel mortgages should be recorded within ten days from date of execution.

Are your deeds recorded?

Are all old deeds in your posession received from previous owners of your land recorded?

Are all old mortgages released?

These are all required to perfect title.

German Syrup.

No other medicine in the world was ever given such a test of its curative qualities as Boschee's German Syrup. In three years two million four hundred thousand small bottles of this medicine was distributed free of charge by Druggists in this country to those afflicted with Consumtion, Asthama, Croupe, Severe Coughs, Pheumonia and other diseases of the throat and lungs, giving the American people undeniable proof that German Syrup will cure them The result has been that Druggists in every town an village in the United States are recommending it to their cutomers. Go to your Druggist, F. E. Devenport, and ask what he knows about it. Sample bottles 10 cents. Regular size 75 cents. Three doses will relieve any case.

For sale by F. E. Davenport.

Plain Talk to a Girl.

Your every day toilet is a part of your character. A girl who looks like a "fury" or sloven in the morning is not to be trusted, however finely she may look in the evening. No matter how humble your room be, there are eight things it should contain, viz: a mirror, washstand, soap, towel, comb, hair, nail and tooth brushes. These are just essential as your breakfast, before which you should make good and free use of them. Parents who fail to provide for their children with such appliances not only make a great mistake, but commit a sin of ommission. Look tidy in the morning, and after the dinner work is over improve your toilet. Make it a rule of your daily life to "dress up" in the afternoon. Your dress may or may not be anything better than calico, but with a ribbon or flower, or some bit of ornament, you can have an airy self-respect and satisfaction that invariably comes with being well dressed.

Words of Warning.

During the present year, as in the past, the grave will close over thousands, simply because they neglect the means which would restore them to health. Meet the fell destroyer at the threshold, and dispute his invasion by that more than wonderful medicine, Dr. Morris' Syrup of Tar, Wild Chery and Horehound. There is no cough or cold, case asthma, bronchitis, blood-spitting, weak lung, croup or whooping cough which will not yield more readily to this great botanical remedy than any other medicine. If you want avoid disappointment, and be speedily cured, ask your druggist for Dr. Morris' Syrup of Tar, Wild Cherry and Horehound. Trial size, 10 cents. Regular sizes, 50 cents and one dollar.

For sale by F. E. Davenport.

Prof. Parker's Pleasant Worm Syrup is perfectly safe. Extremely palatable. No physic required. Costs 25 cents. Try it.

The Press and the Pulpit.

We find the following article from the Fairfield, Main, Chronicle, in an exchange and it so aptly illustrates the frequent experience of an editor that we give it entrie. It shows both sides of the case so plainly that all must see it.

He was manager of a church fair and one morning he walked into the newspaper office and said:

"Want an item this morning?"

"Of course," said the editor. Whereupon the visitor laid the following note upon the table.

"The ladies of the —— street church will give a festival at their vestry hal! next Friday evening. Literary and musical entertainments will be provided and a supper will be servered to all who desire. The ladies in charge of the affair have much experience in such matters and are sure to provide a good time. The admission will be only fifteen cents, and it is certain that no one can spend that amount to a better advantage. Be sure to go and take your friends."

When the editor had red it, he said: "Oh, I see, an advertisement."

"No, not an advertisement. We prefer to have it go in the local column," replied the manager.

And seeing that the editor looked skeptical, he continued:

"It will interest a great many of your readers and help a good cause; besides, we have spent so much money getting up our entertainment that we can't afford to anvertise it without increasing the price of the tickets. In such a matter as this we ought to be willing to help each other."

"Well,' said the editor, "If it goes into the locals, I suppose you would reciprocate by reading a little notice in your church next Sunday."

The visiting brother asked what notice, and the editor wrote and handed him the following:

"The Weekly Chronicle for the coming year will be the best and cheapest family paper in Main. Its proprietor has had much experience, and has all the helps which an outlay of money can procure. His paper has a larger circulation than any other published in the country, and it is to be furnished at only $2. It is certain that no one can spend that amount to better advantage. Be sure to take the Chronical and subscribe for your friends."

The manager hemmed and hesitated and then said, solemnly, that he doubted whether it would be judicious to read such a notice, but suggested that if it was printed, copies of it might be distributed at the door of the vestry on the evening of the entertainment.

"Yes,' said the editor, 'but it would attract more attention in the middle of a sermon. It will interest a great number of your congregation and help a good cause and, besides so much money is spent upon the Chronicle that I don't see how the owner can afford to print a handbill to adver ise it without increasing the subscription price. In such a matter as this we ought to be willing to help each other."

Then the gentleman saw the situation.

From the Logansport Pharos.

Notes and Items of Early Times.

BY MAJOR M'FADEN.

My last related to you the death of Aubbeenaubbee, and that the Indian woman and her child, which was sick, stayed with my mother while Mingo and myself went over to see Aubbee.

The Indian woman was called White Swan, from the fact that one flew over the wigwam when she was born. Her pretty little child was called Leni Leoti, or Prairie Flower, as they were in full bloom when she first saw the light. If you remember I have not mentioned the name of the Indian found dead in the hollow tree. His name was Whippoorwill, as they serenaded him at his birth. Indians are named after some trifling incident that may occur at the time they first come into existance. Sitting Bull was named from the fact that an old buffalo bull was kind of sitting on his haunches. Crazy Horse on account of a wild horse running round the wigwam and Red Cloud on account of the clouds being red at the time, &c.

I forgot to tell you in my last that every time I eat bologna sausage I think about that wolf that I salted down for winter's meat, and I want you to do so, too.

After Aubbee died we laid him out in state, on a log, and covered him with green walnut limbs and leaves, to keep the flies away, as it was very warm, and we wanted to send word to different Indians in the country. Mingo and the rest concluded to bring over the remains of Whippoorwill, from where he was buried, and bury him with Aubbee near the graves of their fathers, at lake Muxinkuckee. Mingo and myself started over from the Tippecanoe on two ponies with only one saddle and a lasso, with which Mingo was good. Arriving at home we found little Leni Leoti nearly well, and its mother ready to go over to the burial of Aubbee. Indians strap their papooses to a piece of bark and set them up against a tree or log and leave them for hours. While over at the Tippecanoe mother heard a noise like the flopping of wings and running out they found an eagle trying to carry off Prairie Flower, who had been left standing against a tree. They had hard work to drive it off, as it was hungry and showed fight, and wanted a warm meal. At last they clubbed it off. Leni was nearly scared to death, but only got a sligot scratch on its face, that soon got well.

We went and dug up the remains of Whippoorwill and found nothing but bones. We had nothing to put them in but an old coffee sack. We had no boxes then, and if we had could not have carried it. We tied the sack to the saddle on the pony and led him: White Swan and Leni Leoti rode the other. While the procession was moving quietly along a prairie owl flew up right in front of the pony carrying the remains, scaring him so that he jerked away from Mingo and run off and was perfectly wild. The bones rattleing agains his side like John Gilpin's bottles. scared him the worse. He would run way ahead for about a quarter of a mile, and then come tearing back on the home stretch; and, horror of horrors! at last the coffee sack came open and scattered poor Whippoorwill's bones all along. We had to hunt them up, and the worst of all was they got mixed with some other kind of bones, and we could not tell which was which. At last Mingo lassoed the pony and choked him down, and we hobbled him so he could not run. We gathered up what bones we could find, but they were a good deal mixed, and I have often wondered how they will come out, or come to gether, at the resurrection morn. At last we reached the camp and found a few Indians watching the remains of poor Aubbee. The big white owl came every night and watched with them and kept them company. They called it the Good Spirit: but let a black owl come and they are almost scared to death, as they believe it is the evil spirit or the devil. They had sent out runners to all the Indians they knew of. Kilkomic and one of the Godfreys came over from the Mississinewa, several from lake Manitou, a few from Muxinkuckee, and three four from Indian Garden, on the Kankakee and the country around.

It would take too long to tell you of all the pow-wows and ceremonies they went through. I had hard work to keep from laughing some times, as that would not do on such a solemn occasion, and I wanted to have some respect for public opinion. Suffice it to say that after he had laid in state for three days the Indians prepared for his burial. A kind of litter or bier was fixed and lashed between two poules, and Aubbee placed in it and securely fastened, so that he could not jolt or slip out. There were twenty Indians all told—a small remnant of the mighty nations of the Pottawattamies and Miamies. The funeral cortege started and took the trail, single file, for lake Muxinkuckee. After two days hard traveling and much watching and praying, and something that sounded like swearing in French and Indian, at the ponies we arrived at the lake. They then pointed out to me the places where their ancestors had been buried for many generations back. There was a point of land, with a fine grove, extending out into the lake from the south side, and that was their burial ground. The Indians cut down a Linn tree and peeled the bark off, like you would to make a bark canoe, and put Aubbee, with tomahawk and gun, in it and then carefully laid him, like Jacob of old, away with his fathers—covered him over to wait for the last trumpet. They then killed his pony and dog, to accompany him to the happy hunting ground, and placed some food near by to last him on his long journey. His cross was given to Mingo. The remenants of poor Whippoorwill were buried at the foot of a tree, and they did not kill anything for him, as he had been dead so long they concluded he had got through all right. It was a fit time and place for their burial. Night came on before we got thought with the ceremonies, and the moon rose in all her splendor and grandeur, like a great silver ball. An Indian sadly remarked that there would not be many more moons before the last Indian would be gone. I thought of the lines of the death of Sir John Moore, who was buried by his comrades after night:

> "Not a drum was heard, or a funeral note,
> As his corpse to the ramparts were hurried;
> Not a soldier discharged his farewell shot
> O'er the grave where our hero was buried.
> Slowly and sadly we laid him down," &c.

After lingering around the place for a day we started for home and left Aubbee with the wild winds and birds, wolves and thunder pumpers, to sing, wail, howl and chant his requiem.

I must now close again for the present, and at some future time will tell you what became of White Swan, Leni Leoti, or Prairie Flower, with raven hair, and the tragic fate of Mingo, the Indian boy, and how he died, all for his own true love.

Golden Rules.

The person who first sent these rules to be printed says truly if any boy or girl thinks "it would be hard work to keep so many of them in mind all the time, just think also what a happy place it would make of home if you only could":

1. Shut every door after you, and without slamming it.
2. Never shout, jump or run in the house.
3. Never call to persons up-stairs, or in the next room; if you wish to speak to them, go quietly where they are.
4. Always speak kindly and politely to servants if you would have them do the same to you.
5. When told to do, or not to do, a thing by either parent, never ask why you should or should not.
6. Tell of your own faults and misdoings, not those of your brothers and sisters.
7. Carefully clean the mud or snow off your boots before entering the house.
8. Be prompt at every meal hour.
9. Never sit down at the table, or in the parlor, with dirty hands or tumbled hair.
10. Never interrupt any conversation, but wait patiently your turn to speak.
11. Never reserve your good manners for company, but be equally polite at home and abroad.
12. Let your first last and best friend be your mother.

What A Paper Costs.

It costs less than half a cent a day to take a weekly paper; less than a diligent hen would earn in a year at the market price of eggs; less than a cigar a fortnight, and a very cheap one at that; less than a barber would charge by the year to keep ones hair trimmed; less than a good sized christmas turkey; less than an energetic kitchen girl will waste in a week. A penny a day can be saved in many a better way than stopping your paper.

Farm for Sale.

The Somers farm, one mile south-east of Auburn, is for sale. It contains 165 acres, fine orchard, good improvements and will be sold cheap. Terms, one-third down, balance to suit purchaser.

Apply to JAMES McCLELLAN, Administrator.

$777 is not easily earned in these times but it can be made in three months by any one of either sex, in any part of the country who is willing to work steadily at the employment we furnish. $66 per week in your own town You need not be away from home over night. You can give your whole time to the work, or only your spare time We have agents who are making over $20 per day. All who engage at once can make money fast. At the present time money cannot be made so easily and rapidly at any other business It costs nothing to try the business. Terms and $5 outfit free. Address at once,

H. HALLETT & Co., Portland, Maine.

October 11,—6m l.014.

THE SEEKING OF THE WATERFALL.

BY JOHN G. WHITTIER.

They left their home of summer ease
Beneath the lowland's sheltering trees,
To seek, by ways unknown to all,
The promise of the waterfall.

Some vague, faint rumor to the vale
Had crept—perchance a hunter's tale—
Of its wild mirth of waters lost
On the dark woods through which it tossed.

Somewhere it laughed and sang; somewhere
Whirled in mad dance its misty hair;
But who had raised its veil or seen
The rainbow skirts of that Undine?

They sought it where the mountain brook
Its swift way to the valley took;
Along the rugged slope they clomb,
Their guide a thread of sound and foam.

Height after height they slowly won:
The fiery javelins of the sun
Smote the bare ledge; the tangled shade
With rock and vine their steps delayed.

But, through leaf-openings, now and then
They saw the cheerful homes of men,
And the great mountains with their wall
Of misty purple girdling all.

The leaves through which the glad winds blew
Shared the wild dance the waters knew;
And where the shadows deepest fell
The wood-thrush rang his silver bell.

Fringing the stream at every turn
Swung low the waving fronds of fern;
From stony cleft and mossy sod
Pale asters sprung, and golden-rod.

And still the water sang the sweet,
Glad song that stirred its gliding feet,
And found in rock and root the keys
Of its beguiling melodies.

Beyond, above, its signals flew
Of tossing foam the birch-trees through;
Now seen, now lost, but baffling still
The weary seekers' slackening will.

Each called to each: "Lo here! Lo there!
Its white scarf flutters in the air!"
They climbed anew; the vision fled,
To beckon higher overhead.

So toiled they up the mountain slope
With faint and ever fainter hope;
With faint and fainter voice the brook
Still bade them listen, pause, and look.

Meanwhile below the day was done;
Above the tall peaks saw the sun
Sink, beam-shorn, to its misty set
Behind the hills of violet.

"Here ends our quest!" the seekers cried,
"The brook and rumor both have lied!
The phantom of a waterfall
Has led us at its beck and call."

But one, with years grown wiser, said:
"So, always baffled, not misled,
We follow where before us runs
The vision of the shining ones.

"Not where they seem their signals fly,
Their voices while we listen die;
We cannot keep, however fleet,
The quick time of their winged feet.

"From youth to age unresting stray
These kindly mockers in our way;
Yet lead they not, the baffling elves,
To something better than themselves?

"Here, though unreached the goal we sought,
Its own reward our toil has brought;
The winding water's sounding rush,
The long note of the hermit thrush,

"The turquoise lakes, the glimpse of pond
And river track, and, vast, beyond
Broad meadows belted round with pines,
The grand uplift of mountain lines!

What matter though we seek with pain
The garden of the gods in vain,
If lured thereby we climb to greet
Some wayside blossom Eden-sweet?

"To seek is better than to gain,
The fond hope dies as we attain;
Life's fairest things are those which seem,
The best is that of which we dream,

"Then let us trust our waterfall
Still flashing down its rocky wall,
With rainbow crescent curved across
Its sunlit spray from moss to moss.

"And we, forgetful of our pain,
In thought shall seek it oft again;
Shall see the aster-blossomed sod,
This sunshine of the golden-rod,

"And haply gain, through parting boughs,
Grand glimpses of great mountain brows,
Cloud-turbaned, and the sharp steel sheen
Of lakes deep set in valleys green.

"So failure wins; the consequence
Of loss becomes its recompense;
And evermore the end shall tell
The unreached ideal guided well.

"Our sweet illusions only die
Fulfilling love's sure prophecy;
And every wish for better things
An undreamed beauty nearer brings.

"For fate is servitor of love;
Desire and hope and longing prove
The secret of immortal youth,
And nature cheats us into truth.

"O kind allurers, wisely sent,
Beguiling with benign intent,
Still move us, through divine unrest,
To seek the loveliest and the best!

"Erelong the flitting glimpse of good
Shall rest in full beatitude;
And more than all to earth denied
Shall greet us on the other side!"

—Atlantic Monthly.

MY FIRST CUSTOMER.

Grandfather didn't leave me his property, after all. I might have known he wouldn't, because he said he would. Grandfather always did something entirely different from what he set out to do.

There, for instance, was the day—we had just got nicely settled in our country home—that we were all waiting patiently for the cow grandfather had gone to buy. Goodness gracious knows how many quarts of delicious milk we had drunk, how much luscious cream and strawberries we had eaten, how many crocks of sweet golden butter we had churned, and how many pats of cottage cheese we had made—in imagination—when he returned, with no cow, and a handsome parlor organ. Nobody could play on it. Grandfather said somebody could learn; but nobody ever did, and so we had to try and console ourselves for the disappointment by reflecting what a fine addition to our somewhat scanty parlor furniture the organ was, until the morning grandfather suddenly made up his mind that he needed another horse, and brought our gentle, star-faced Daisy home instead.

There were four of us in the family; grandfather, a tall, straight, eccentric, obstinate old man; mother, the sweetest and dearest woman that ever lived—and who should know better than her only child?—myself, a plain, quiet girl of five-and-twenty; and my cousin Etta, just of age, but looking about 17—pretty, selfish, idle, and vain.

Now you're thinking I added the last three adjectives on account of the first one. But I didn't, upon my word, for I tried my very best to love the blue-eyed, fair-haired, tossing thing when she first came among us, her father and mother both having died during the previous year; but I couldn't; she was so thoroughly wrapped up in herself, so sensible to her own wants and wishes, and so utterly insensible to even the rights of others.

Grandfather was forever scolding and finding fault about her, and wondering how his grave, honest, elder son John came to have such a good-for-naught daughter, and always praising me, who was the child of his second son William, and saying that I was the comfort of his life, and should have the cottage and grounds when he died, but I "must promise"—this was the invariable conclusion—"to take care of Etta until she married, which is sure to be before long, as men are always taken with a pretty, doll-like face and kittenish ways, and never care much for sensible-looking, sensible-acting girls like you, my dear."

Of course I promised, although I hadn't the slightest idea of grandfather's dying soon when he talked in this way; neither had he, or he would have said nothing on the subject, for he was a hale, hearty man of 70, apparently good for another twenty years' lease of life, when one day, having started to build a hen-coop, and beginning to dig a well instead, he had a terrible chill, and died in an hour.

And when his will was read, the day after the funeral, I for one, was very little surprised to hear that all his possessions, with the exception of $500 to my mother and $500 to myself, were left to "that good-for-naught," the daughter of his son John.

And it was only a week after the reading of the will when my cousin Etta said to me, with a calmness and coolness somewhat astonishing in such a babyish-looking little thing, "You must be looking for another home, Faith. I am going to marry James Read"—a young man grandfather had detested—"in a short time, and we will want the whole cottage ourselves."

So mother and I went up into our room—a fine large square room it was, right over the porch, where the branches of a hundred-year-old oak-tree served us in summer for window-blinds and curtains, and the birds that made their nests there awoke us in the early morning with their musical chatter—and held a consultation as to what we had better do.

I wasn't well enough educated to be a governess, and couldn't sew well enough to be a seamstress, and, besides that, mother and I couldn't bear the thought of being separated—we never had been since the day father died, ten years before; and we finally came to the conclusion that a small store was the very thing.

What kind should it be? was the next question. I inclined to books, papers, and stationery; but mother shook her head, and said, "You know that books and papers are an almost irresistible temptation to you, Faith, and when you find one that interests you, you forget everything else. I think confectionery and fruit would be a good idea."

"Ah, yes," said I, shaking my head in turn; "but you know your weakness is children, and you'd give away all the profits gained through larger buyers to the poor little things who had only a penny to spend."

"I'm afraid I should," confessed she, with a smile. "How would millinery do?"

"That requires some knowledge of the business, and necessitates strange women about us," said I. "The only thing that I can think of as at all suitable is a fancy store, with a great variety of small goods. That I am sure we could manage, and make enough to support us comfortably all our lives long; for of course I shall never marry, being so plain and sensible, as grandfather used to say, and we will never, never be parted;" and I kissed her, and she kissed me in return, with a tender look in her gray eyes, and the very next day we set about looking for the store, and in less than a week had found it; a nice new little place in a thriving village a few miles away from grandfather's—I mean Cousin Etta's—cottage, just completed the very morning the agent sent us to look at it. The street on which it stood was the main one of the village, and before the door grew a splendid old hickory-tree, which made it less sad to part with our oak, and directly opposite was a large, comfortable-looking house, sitting well back from the road, with half an acre of garden about it.

Well that small store did look pretty when mother and I put the finishing touches to the contents of the good-sized window, and stepped out on the sidewalk to observe the general effect.

It was a lovely, sunshiny summer morning, and, feeling singularly hopeful and cheerful after observing the general effect, I seated myself in the sitting-room at the back of the store and waited for my first customer.

Mother went into the tiny kitchen and began making cherry-tarts for dinner—we had an enormous cherry-tree in the garden—and had just called to me to come and see how splendid the cherries were, when the store-bell rang loudly, and some one came in and shut the door with a bang.

I went out as quickly as I could, and there stood a rather stout middle-aged gentleman, very red in the face, and evidently in a very bad temper.

"Look at that, ma'am, look at that," said he, as I came forward, holding out his hand, and directing my attention to the buttonless wristband of his shirt-sleeve. "No buttons, and I buy buttons by the gross, and, by heavens, there's never one in the house. You keep buttons?"

"Yes, sir."

"I'll take one—and you look as though you would sew it on for me."

"With pleasure," said I, going for a needle and thread, with a smile, for it struck me as being somewhat odd that my first customer should want one shirt-button, and almost demand my services as a seamstress, and it was with the greatest difficulty I resumed and kept a demure countenance while sewing it on.

"Um!" said the gentleman, half aloud, as I fastened the thread; "nice, though not handsome, and would wear well, I should think."

I looked up and saw his eyes fixed upon a crimson and green rose-and-bud tidy (one of mother's prettiest patterns), and thought that if it didn't suit him, he must be hard to suit in the way of tidies.

After the gentleman had said "Good-day, ma'am," to mother, who came into the store looking as sweet as a roll (by-the-by, he was a jolly-looking, blue-eyed, rather handsome man when he ceased frowning), and "Thank you, miss," to me, and gone away, we had a dozen or more callers, among them two dear little girls, to whom mother—God bless her!—gave the two biggest cherry tarts, and altogether our first day of shop-keeping was a profitable one, although I had refused to take anything for the very first sale I had ever made; no, it couldn't have been a sale either, but it was the beginning of my business life, anyhow.

We soon discovered that the jolly-faced gentleman was owner of the comfortable-looking house across the way, Mr. Multahney by name (though that blessed mother of mine always called him Mr. Mullagatawny, after a fashion she had of mixing up names in her mind, as, for instance, calling the baker, Mr. Black, "Mr. White," and our old lawyer, whom we had known for twenty years, "Mr. France," instead of Mr. Paris), and a widower with six children, the oldest only 9 years old.

His wife had died nearly two years before we came to the village, and the household since that time had been in the charge of an old nurse, who, though she loved the children as dearly as she had loved their mother, was totally incompetent to manage so large an establishment.

"But you see, ma'am," said Mr. Multahney, one afternoon, to my mother (she was sitting under the big cherry-tree, to which he had found his way in search of Mollie, his youngest—a darling with rosebud mouth and violet eyes). "I couldn't place any one over nurse. It would break her heart, and I'm not good at breaking hearts—never was, and never will be; but, to tell the truth, ma'am, we're all at sixes and sevens at our house. Bless your heart, ma'am, I found Rosie and Frankie yesterday afternoon just about playing tea-party with the blue tea-set I bought here the day before; and what do you suppose they had for tea and milk and pudding sauce, ma'am?"

"I'm sure I can't guess, Mr. Mullagatawny," said mother.

"Laudanum in the tea-pot, hydrate of chloral in the milk jug, and arnica in the sauce-boat! Yes, ma'am, they had taken the bottles from my medicine chest, which nurse had placed on the floor of my room while she tried to capture the canary which Mollie had let out of its cage."

"The darlings!" said my mother, kissing the dear little upturned face of the child on her knee.

"Certainly, ma'am," said Mr. Multahney; "but I was frightened all the more because they are darlings, and I came nearer discharging nurse than I ever did before, and I've been devilish near it before, ma'am; but the young ones set up such a hullabaloo that, to stop it, I was glad to let her stay. And so, ma'am, the old confusion and mismanagement go on, with meals so irregular that I don't know whether I'm eating my breakfast or my lunch, my dinner or my supper."

"I assure you I sympathize with you heartily," said my dear mother.

"I believe you do, ma'am. Good-evening," said Mr. Multahney, carrying sleepy little Mollie away in his arms.

The Multahney children were the most lovable children I ever met, and it was quite a pleasure to have them running in every day to visit mother and me.

Harry, the oldest, named after his father, was a frank-faced, merry-hearted boy, immensely pleased when I made him a gay neck-tie, or hemmed his new handkerchief, or arranged a bouquet for his button-hole. "No one does such things for me but you, Miss Faith," he would say, "and I think you're a darling."

The second child was Lily—a bright little thing, and, like all the human Lilies I have ever known, brown as a berry.

It was her delight to keep store. "It's awful cunning to truly sell things, Miss Faith, Faith, Faithey," was the burden of her song; "and when I grow up I mean to have a store zackly like this, if papa will let me; or p'r'aps you'll take me for a partner, dear Faith—papa has a partner."

"Most certainly I will, my dear. I promise, if at that time you continue to wish it, and papa consents."

Then came Robbie, a lame little fellow, with large, serious, brown eyes and pale, wistful face, who had fallen from the high porch one day (nurse was showing the new servant-girl how to can peaches, and thought he was safe in the nursery) and broken his leg. Mother and I used to spend hour after hour telling him stories, and reading to him from his favorite fairy-books, and teaching him pretty verses, which he was very fond of reciting. We had a small lounge on purpose for him in our pleasant sitting-room, and, when the noise in the big house made him nervous and restless, he would limp over to us, and lie down, his head on a soft little pillow I had made, and on which I had embroidered his name, and his pet kitten curled up by his side. He was only 6 years old, but a wise little chap for his years; and I used to smile with a tear in my eye when he said, as he often did, "I don't know how I ever lived before you and Auntie Welton came here. I was so sick, and papa had to go away every day, and Harry and Lily went to school, and the little children teased me awful. I think the fairies sent you here—don't you?"

Three more girls followed Robbie—Rosie and Frankie (round, rosy, dimpled wee bodies, with a great liking for mother's tarts) and Mollie, the 2-year-old baby.

The shirt-button I gave away on "opening-day" brought us luck, for the Multahney family bought more at our store than any other three families in the village—never going, as some of the well-to-do people did, to the neighboring city for things which we had equally good and cheap, but getting everything they could get from mother and me. And, bless me, what a quantity of things they did buy!—pins, needles, stockings, handkerchiefs, ribbons, hats, ruffling, laces—all sorts of things. Yes, indeed, the Multahney shirt-button proved a lucky one.

Well, life went on smoothly and happily, mother growing prettier every day, and Mr. Multahney and nurse and the children in and out all the time, and before we were really aware that autumn had left us, behold, it was the day before Christmas!

Mother and I had bought a large assortment of toys and candies, and had been well patronized all day, but were disappointed and surprised when evening came and 9 o'clock struck and Mr. Multahney had not made his appearance; for the dear, romping, laughing children had confided to us, weeks before, what gifts they hoped Santa Claus would bring them, and, of course, we had procured them all, with the exception of a pony for Harry and a diamond ring for Lily, which articles were a little beyond our means, and had laid them aside to produce when the indulgent father asked our advice on the subject, as we were sure he would.

But the clock had scarcely ceased striking when he came in.

The small store looked uncommonly pretty, dressed in Christmas greens and bright paper flowers (mother had a great knack at making paper flowers, and had taught me so that I made them almost as well as herself), and we had four wax candles on the counter and two in the window besides the regular lamps; and I wore my new gray merino dress with a blue bow at the throat and another in my hair (my hair doesn't ripple and wave as much as mother's, but it is the very same color), and mother wore her gray dress with a handsome black lace rosette among the waves and ripples.

"Very pretty indeed!" said Mr. Multahney, going up to the stove to warm his hands a moment, and then turning his back upon it and smiling approvingly around.

"We're trying to rig up a Christmas tree at our house, Mrs. Welton," he went on to say, "and I'd be pleased to have you and Miss Faith come over as soon as you can, and give us the benefit of your excellent taste. The children will be gone to bed in a few moments—"

Just then the door flew open, and the two eldest children came running in, little Robbie limping after them.

"Oh, papa!" cried Lily, "nurse says if you don't come back immediately she'll go crazy, for we will peep into the room where she's fixing something, and pound on the door when she locks us out, and the grocer forgot the raisins and currants for the pudding, and—"

"Oh dear! oh dear!" said Mr. Multahney, grasping his curly black hair as though he meant to tear it out then and there.

"I will go with you, Mr. Mullagatawny," said my mother, distressed for the poor man, as she always is for any body in trouble, "and do all I can toward preparing a merry Christmas for you."

The fact is, mother and I had often been over in odd moments and smoothed things in this tangled household, and made the children presentable before "the master," as the nurse called him, returned home; so we knew the ways of the place as well as we did our own.

"Thank you, ma'am," said Mr. Multahney. "It's very kind of you; and if any body can bring order out of discord, you can. I wish from the bottom of my heart you would stay there forever!"

Mother looked at him in mild surprise, and went for her bonnet and shawl.

"Dear me," I thought to myself, "can he be going to ask mother to be his housekeeper? I'll never consent, though he offer her ever so much, and it is only across the way."

"Please come too, Miss Faith, for half an hour," said Mr. Multahney, coaxingly; "we can come back to the store afterward, and—"

"And I wish you'd stay forever," broke in that darling Harry, who had been prancing about, flourishing a wooden sword he had taken from the counter.

"And so do I," said dear little Robbie, climbing upon the stool at my side and putting his arms about my neck. "Don't you, papa?"

"With all my heart," said papa.

"Why can't she?" asked Lily dropping the cat and looking earnestly up in her father's face. "We all love her dearly—best of any body but you."

"The Gray children have a new mamma," said that dreadful Harry, "and she ain't half as nice as Faith and Faith's mother."

I felt the blushes rising to my face and spreading all over it, until I must have been red from my chin to my forehead and away back to my ears.

"My dear Faith," said Mr. Multahney, his eyes sparkling mischievously, "the children have proposed to you. Will you accept them—and me?"

I stood confused and silent; for, though I liked Mr. Multahney very, very much, I had never thought of him as a husband, having, in the first place, made up my mind to be an old maid, and, in the next, never having suspected for an instant that he thought of me save as the daughter of my mother, she being so much more attractive. When mother returned:

"Say yes, dear Fairy," whispered Robbie, kissing my cheek.

"Say yes, Miss Faith," shouted Harry, "and we'll have no end of fun."

"Say yes, say yes, say yes!" teased Lily.

"Yes to what?" asked my mother, smilingly.

"To a question I've just asked her," answered Mr. Multahney—"whether she would be my wife."

"Mr. Mullagatawny!" said my mother; and then laid her bonnet on a chair and sat down upon it.

"Why, ma'am, there's nothing surprising about my part of the affair," said Mr. Multahney. "A young lady, sunny-faced, sweet-tempered, devoted to her mother, endowed, in fact, with more virtues than any woman I have ever met before, comes to a country place where a poor devil of a widower is struggling along with six young children, and from the very first day she smiles on him his life seems brighter, and ever since that day she and her no less charming mother have quietly done all they could to promote his happiness and that of the children, and the children have grown to love them both, and so has the father, too. And I shall be honored, proud and honored, ma'am, if you will accept me for a son-in-law, and Faith for a husband."

"Mrs. Mullagatawny!" murmured my mother. "I never thought Faith would have such a queer name as that. But, dear me" (in a louder tone), "it isn't hers yet, and perhaps never will be."

"Don't say that," said Mr. Multahney, with emphasis, "or I'll go and drown myself."

The children set up a howl, Robbie hanging around my neck, and Harry and Lily clinging to their father. "Oh! oh! oh! our darling papa going to drown himself! Dear, dear, DEAR, Miss Faith, you won't let papa drown himself?"

"I won't," said I.—Harper's Bazar.

In Paris they are warming the street cars by small hot-water pipes connected with a little stove placed beneath one of the platforms. The cost is about ten American cents a day, the fuel used being just sufficient to keep a moderate quantity of water hot. The Parisians are greatly pleased with the plan.

Not the Kind She Wanted.

"Are these young chickens?" asked a lady of a market woman.

"Oh, yes, indeed, lady. They're nice and tender—as fine as any you ever saw," said the woman.

"They don't look like it," remarked the customer, pinching one of them critically.

"It's the honest Christian truth I'm telling you, lady. I raised 'em myself, and could give you their age to a day if my old man was here, for he put it down in the almanac the self-same day they was hatched. And they're nice and fat, too, lady, see"—holding up the choicest in the lot.

"You're quite sure they are not tough, then? Young chickens are sometimes nearly as tough as old ones, you know."

"Yes, yes, very true. But I'm certain you'll find these tender. I had a couple out of the same brood for dinner, Tuesday, and they were as nice as could be."

The customer opened her purse and took out a brand-new trade dollar, as she placed her basket on the stall, and the market woman bustled around with a feeling of charity in her heart for all humanity, as she brought out a fresh quire of wrapping paper, and prepared to fill what she believed would be the biggest order of the morning.

"You'll stand by all you've said about those chickens?" queried the lady, pausing with the coin in her hand; "and I believe you are here every market, ain't you?"

"Oh, yes, lady; I'd sooner have every one of 'em spile on my hands than to say a single word that wasn't true, and, if you don't find it just as I told you, come back and get your money."

"They won't do for me, then," said the lady, putting back the money and picking up her basket; "I want a fowl that'll do to make soup of for a couple o' days without falling all to pieces, and then do for pot-pie afterward. Times are very hard, and it takes close fighting to keep boarders nowadays without losing money."

The market-woman stood with her hands on her hips and watched the landlady in speechless wonder until her figure was lost in the crowd, and then she huddled down again over her charcoal furnace and muttered:

"Why didn't I stick to the truth and close out the lot to her. She may search this market over and not find anything that ever wore feathers that can stand bilin' like these old roosters will. Well, well; honesty's the best policy after all, but it don't always look that way. Here you are, lady—chickens? Just the thing for boarders. Three years old last fall, and tougher'n a boot-black."—Cincinnati Breakfast Table.

Ruined by Whisky.

Murray was a soldier of Company F, Fifth United States Cavalry (Capt. Payne). Will Baker, the man who thrust the fatal knife into his bosom, is a son of the late Gov. N. B. Baker, of New Hampshire, and is only 21 years of age. About two and a half years ago he came to Cheyenne, and, being a smart, active, and, so far as known, a reliable young man, he was made one of the bailiffs under Sheriff O'Brien, and acted as such during the greater part of May (1876) term of the District Court here. Subsequently he went to the Hills, or on a surveying party, and, after a time, taking a fancy to a military life, he enlisted in Company F, Fifth Cavalry, but soon grew tired of his bargain, and, through the influence of his friends in Iowa, he not being of age, he was discharged from the service. Since that time he has been radiating between Cheyenne and the Hills, and lately has been at Fort Russell, most of his time, seeking again to be taken into the United States service. During all this time whisky, etc., had been gradually demoralizing him. On Friday, Dec. 21, Baker and Murray had an altercation in the bar-room at the sutler shop. Finally Baker went out and bought a butcher-knife, came back to where he left Murray, sprung upon his victim, and with his knife struck him three terrible blows, the last one penetrating into the region of the heart. Murray died in about ten minutes. Baker then backed up into a corner, and threatened others of the bystanders, who made no attempt to arrest him. He then ran out with the knife, and before he was secured he attempted to stab two other soldiers. The murderer is now in irons. On Monday night, Dec. 24, eight masked men seized the guard of the Federal Marshal's office at Cheyenne, and demanded the key to the jail where Baker was confined for murder. But the guard did not have the key, and the Sheriff, in whose possession he was, was out of town, and so the scheme to lynch Baker was frustrated.—Cheyenne Sun.

The Use of Dynamite in Arctic Explorations.

The reports of Capt. Nares, commander of the English expedition to the North pole, point out several novel applications of recent scientific inventions. The electric light will transform into day the unbroken night of five months, while dynamite will open the way across barriers of ice hitherto regarded as impassible. It is only necessary to lay the cartridges on the surface, and their explosion will rapidly create a passage. When great masses of ice are encountered they can be rapidly pierced by tunnels. By causing the simultaneous explosion of several charges, it is possible to open up free channels for the passage of ships. If Capt. Nares had resorted to these expedients, it is believed that he would have reached the pole in safety.

How He Didn't Cheat His Pastor.

A mean Covington (Ky.) grocer was nicely sold at Christmas. He purchased from a dollar store a table caster, which he marked with a tag inscribed "$14," and gave it to a Methodist preacher, whose church his family attended. The reverend gentleman next day brought the castor back to the groceryman and said to him: "I am too poor in this world's goods to afford to display so valuable a caster on my table, and, if you have no objections, I should like to return it and take $14 worth of groceries for my family in its stead." The merchant could do nothing but acquiesce.—Baltimore American.

The mountains of Nevada are rapidly being denuded of the pine forests.

THE "SONG OF THE BONNET."

AFTER HOOD, AS WRITTEN IN A MILLINER'S ALBUM.

With fingers weary and worn,
Yet working the dreary while,
A milliner sat in a little back room,
Trimming a hat "in style;"
Her face was the face of an angel,
And bordered with golden curls,
And she smiled at this "Song of the Bonnet!"
As sung by "one of the girls."

"Work! Work! Work!
In a little room back of the store,
Where fragments of lining and trimmings
Are scattered all over the floor;
It's oh! to be cast ashore
On some Southern Pacific isle,
Where women are never worried
About the 'change of style!'

"Oh! woman, thou fashion's slave,
Whether mother, or sister, or wife,
It isn't a bonnet you're wearing out,
But a patient milliner's life!
Trim! Trim! Trim!
Every kind of bonnet and hat,
From the stylish chapeau of the city belle
[illegible]

"Work! Work! Work!
Till my brain begins to swim!
Work! Work! Work!
Nor wait on fortune's whim!
Seams, and ribbon, and shape,
Of every kind they seem—
When I go to bed I cannot sleep,
And of bonnets all night I dream.

"Work! Work! Work!
Till my fingers are worn to the bone
Till my cheeks are as thin as paper,
And my head feels like a stone!—
A stone covered over with hair,
And pebbles set in for eyes—
Some night I'll lie down on my weary couch,
And from it I never will rise.

"Work! Work! Work!
My labor is never done!
It begins with the gray of the morning,
Nor vanishes with the sun!
Work! Work! Work!
And never 'let up' a bit,
Till the shades of night come over the scene
And after the gas is lit!

"Oh! for the joyous rest
That comes in vacation time!
To roam in the fields and forest,
And over the hills to climb!
To sit by the running brooks,
And hear the birds sing in the trees,
Where no one can say, in commanding tone,
'Trim this right away, if you please!'

'Work! Work! Work!
That ladies may 'put on style'
When they enter late at the church's gate,
And amble down the aisle!
They serenely scan their neighbor's clothes—
Bonnet, and dress, and shawl—
And never dream that the preacher's theme
Is 'Pride must have a fall.'

"My aching temples throb,
Like the sound of a muffled drum;
I wish it could be that milliners
Might millionaires become!
Lest I should ask too much—
For I don't want more than's fair—
I'd even be satisfied to be
The wife of a millionaire.

"But it's Work! Work! Work!
Chilled by November's breath!
And Work! Work! Work!
When roasted half to death!
Ribbons, and flowers, and bows,
And bows, and ribbons, and flowers,
I must labor on, with a patient heart,
And hope for brighter hours."

With fingers weary and worn,
She trimmed in the latest style,
And her pale lips faintly murmured,
"Only a little while!"
Her face was of angelic sweetness,
All shaded by sunny curls,
And she joined in the "Song of the Bonnet,"
And sang it along with "the girls."

J. V. McElheny.

Wooster, Ohio.

PITH AND POINT.

Quicksilver—The nimble sixpence.

The cat on the woodshed—She loves not wisely but to wail.

There is no doubt but the dollar of our fathers would be useful, in a pay-rental sense.

The difference between a pig and a porcupine is that one uses a pen and the other a quill.

Why didn't he eat up the whole desk? We refer to the anaconda who swallowed a pigeon-whole.

"Moral force is never lost," observes a contemporary. The same can be said of a broken-bladed pocket-knife.

A man can lick a postage-stamp with his lip, but a boy is so much bigger that he has to lick him with his slipper.

A youngster says he hasn't much reverence for royal persons, for, ever since his dad whaled him, he has to sit on the prints of whales.

A minister who had twice married the same couple—a divorce ensuing between the two marriages—remarked that he didn't wish to add a repairing department to his business.

"What constitutes marriage?" asks the Boston Advertiser. Getting down to one cigar a day in order to pour money into the coffers of the man who sells striped stockings.

"Mister, will you lend pa your paper? He wants to send it to his uncle in the country." "Oh! certainly. And ask your father if he'll lend me the roof of his house. I only want it to make the tea-kettle boil."

"You must have been drinking strong coffee," remarked a billiard player to his opponent, whose hand trembled. "No, but I've been using considerable chalk o' late," replied the other, as he caromed on both reds—and went out.

The cold world little realizes the sense of desolation that shuts down on a man who thinks he has been handed too much change by his grocer, when he dodges around the corner and finds it right to a cent.—Bridgeport Standard.

President in political economy class—"You know, Mr. S., that there was a fall in the price of whisky a year or so ago." Mr. S. (anxious to remove suspicion)—"Oh, no, Mr. President! I didn't know anything about it!"—Columbia Spectator.

A man reads a book for entertainment and instruction. A woman skips all the nuggets of wisdom, and skims impatiently through the volume to find out whether the dark-skinned misanthrope married the blue-eyed consumptive.—Cincinnati Breakfast Table.

"Mamma, where do the cows get the milk?" asked Willie, looking up from the foaming pan of milk which he had been intently regarding. "Where do you get your tears?" was the answer. After a thoughtful silence he again broke out, "Mamma, do the cows have to be spanked?"

Tommy came home from school and handed to his father the teacher's report on his progress during the month. "This is very unsatisfactory, Tom; you've a very small number of good marks. I'm not at all pleased with it." "I told the teacher you wouldn't be, but he wouldn't alter it."

"I wish I was short-sighted," said a little boy to his mother, the other day. "Why, my dear?" said the fond parent. "Because," replied the precocious 6-year-old, "I should not then be blamed for always taking the largest plums off the dish; for, of course, I should not be able to see the small ones."

VALUE OF MONEY.

Report of the Treasury Department Showing the Comparative Value of the Coins of All Other Nations and the United States.

The following circular has been sent to the parties concerned by Secretary Sherman:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
WASHINGTON, Jan. 1, 1878.

The first section of the act of March 3, 1873, Statutes at Large, volume 17, page 602, reproduced in section 3,564 of the Revised Statutes, provides "that the value of foreign coin, as expressed in the money of account of the United States, shall be that of the pure metal of such coin of standard value," and that "the values of the standard coins in circulation of the various nations of the world shall be estimated annually by the Director of the Mint, and be proclaimed on the 1st day of January by the Secretary of the Treasury."

The estimate of values contained in the following table has been made by the Director of the Mint, and is hereby proclaimed in compliance with the above-stated provisions of law:

Country.	Monetary Unit.	Standard.	Value in United States Money.
Austria	Florin	Silver	.45.3
Belgium	Franc	Gold & sil.	.19.3
Bolivia	Dollar	Gold & sil.	.96.5
Brazil	Mil. of 1,000 reis	Gold	.54.5
Brit. Possess., N'h Amer	Dollar	Gold	1.00
Bogota	Peso	Gold	.96.5
Cen. Amer	Dollar	Silver	.91.8
Chili	Peso	Gold	.91.2
Denmark	Crown	Gold	.26.8
Ecuador	Dollar	Silver	.91.8
Egypt	Pound of 100 piastres	Gold	4.97.4
France	Franc	Gold & sil.	.19.3
G. Britain	Pound sterling	Gold	4.86.6½
Greece	Drachma	Gold & sil.	.19.3
Ger. Em.	Mark	Gold	.23.8
Japan	Yen	Gold	.99.7
India	Rupee of 16 annas	Silver	.43.6
Italy	Lira	Gold & sil.	.19.3
Liberia	Dollar	Gold	1.00
Mexico	Dollar	Silver	.99.8
Neth'l'nds	Florin	Gold & sil.	.38.5
Norway	Crown	Gold	.26.8
Peru	Dollar	Silver	.91.8
Portugal	Milr. of 1,000 reis	Gold	1.08
Russia	Rou. of 1,000 cop.	Silver	.73.4
Sandwich Islands	Dollar	Gold	1.00
Spain	Peseta of 1,000 c.	Gold & sil.	.19.3
Sweden	Crown	Gold	.26.8
Switz'l'nd	Franc	Gold & sil.	.19.3
Tripoli	Mahbub of 20 pias.	Silver	.82.9
Tunis	Pias. of 16 caroubs	Silver	.11.8
Turkey	Piaster	Gold	.04.3
U'd States Colombia	Peso	Silver	.91.8

The above rates will be taken in estimating the values of all foreign merchandise made out in any of the said currencies imported on or after Jan. 1, 1878. I am, very respectfully,

JOHN SHERMAN,
Secretary of the Treasury.

A Great Lawyer With a Weakness.

Luther Martin was one of the most famous lawyers of his time. He was a little above the medium height, and was slovenly in appearance. His dress was a compound of the fine and the coarse, and seemed never to have felt the brush. He wore ruffles at the wrist richly edged with lace after every one else had abandoned them. These ruffles were conspicuously broad, and were always dirty with tobacco juice. Judge Taney said that in his speech he used vulgarisms, and that he heard him say "cotch" him, instead of caught him, and we sot down, instead of sat down.

His genius was frequently clouded by the excessive use of strong drink. Being engaged in an important case, he promised his clients the day before the suit was to be tried not to drink any liquor. He retired to his room, but could not resist his desire for stimulants. He sent for a bottle of brandy and a loaf of bread, and, after saturating the bread thoroughly with the brandy, he ate it, and his unfortunate appetite was satisfied, and he claimed he had kept his promise not to drink. He tried the cause in the ablest possible manner, but, on being reproached by his clients for his virtual violation of his promise, he remarked, "I did not drink a drop; besides, say no more about it. Had it not been for the bread I would have lost the case."

He had a paralytic stroke, and, having squandered his large earnings at the bar as fast as they were acquired, in his old age, under the goadings of penury, he removed to New York, and received the hospitalities and kind attentions of Aaron Burr, whom he had ably defended at Richmond. Before his death the Legislature passed a resolution that every one on being admitted to the bar should pay $1 cash for his use. He died on July 10, 1826, when he was 82 years of age.—Baltimore Gazette.

The Legal Status of Complimentary Copies of Newspapers.

The opinion rendered two or three days ago by the law officer of the Post-office Department, interpreting the act of Congress relative to postage on newspapers in bulk, has caused several important questions to be raised. Among them is one in regard to the sending of complimentary copies of newspapers to Government officers and others who are not actual subscribers. The Solicitor for the department has given it as his private opinion that the publisher of a newspaper who places in the bag with those issues of his journal intended for bona-fide subscribers a daily or weekly copy for the President of the United States, or for any one else who does not actually pay for it, incurs the risk of having to pay postage on the entire lot, at the rate of 2 cents for every four ounces or fraction thereof. This opinion, it is understood, is not shared by the Postmaster General himself, who holds that a person receiving a free paper is an actual subscriber. This question is likely to come before the department within a few days in regular form for decision; and the solution of it will be looked for with interest, not only by all the publishers of newspapers, but also by those who are now receiving their papers without having actually subscribed for them.—Washington Cor. New York Tribune.

Diphtheria.

A Bridgeport (Ct.), physician sends to the Standard the following: Our advice to parents is—for this is mostly a disease of childhood—protect the feet, legs and bodies of your children well, by suitable clothing. Give them plain, substantial food, plenty of rest, with fresh air and sunshine. Discard late hours and exciting amusements and too hot rooms. If your child take cold, keep it at home in a pleasantly-warmed room, and admit sunlight freely. If with the cold there is some sore throat, use simple remedies to promote perspiration and a water compress about the throat. In the meantime keep a vigilant watch of the throat, and upon the first appearance of white or gray patches send for your physician. Do not put it off to see if it will not get well itself. Twelve hours may decide the fate of your child—prompt, thorough, efficient medication at this stage of the disease will rarely fail of success; later the system may be too depressed to respond to any remedies.

Daniel Webster's Courtship.

The following has been related as the manner in which Mr. Webster became engaged to his loving and devoted wife. He saw her first when he was a young lawyer at Portsmouth, and she was Miss Grace Fletcher. At one of his visits he had, probably with a view of utility and enjoyment, been holding skeins of silk thread for her, when suddenly he stopped, saying: "Grace, we have been engaged in untying knots, let us see if we can tie a knot which will not untie for a lifetime." He then took a piece of tape, and after beginning a knot of peculiar kind, gave it up to her to complete. This was the ceremony and ratification of the engagement. And in the little box marked by him with the words "Precious Documents," containing the letters of his early courtship, this unique memorial was found—the knot never untied. To the memory of the lady who won his earliest affection, who shared the trials and the triumph of his early manhood, Mr. Webster retained to the end of life an unfaltering devotion. He could never speak of his first wife without visible emotion. Grace Fletcher Webster was a person of very delicate organization, both physically and intellectually; yet she was energetic, and, when occasion required, she exhibited a rare fortitude. To her husband's welfare she was entirely devoted, she presided over his household with peculiar grace and dignity, and really seemed to live for him. When he was at home she sought his comfort and pleasure; when he was absent her thoughts, as her beautiful letters testify, were of him day and night. She wrote to him almost daily.

Old Si on Hell.

While they were resting from work at noon yesterday, Amos said:

"I heah'd er white man readin' in de paper dis mornin' dat folks was 'batin' now whudder dere wuz enny hell or not!"

"Shucks!" said old Si; "you'se got dat wrong eend fo'must, sho!"

"No, sah; dat wuz what he red in de paper!"

"Whudder dere wuz enny hell?" repeated Si.

"Yas, sah; whudder, when er man give out up hyar he went ter hell, or jess dissolved ter dus' agin!"

"Lookie heah! I don't want no 'spute wid nobody, but ef enny man come foolin' 'round me wid dat sorter skriptur, he's gwine ter heah me git up yander inter shouting tones!" said Si.

"Why is dat?"

"Kase taint gwine ter do! Yer jess make er nigger belebe dar aint no heah-arter an' see what yer comes ter. Ebery sdcon' house'll be er Court Hous' an' de houses twixt 'em'll be jale-houses. Hit's moughty hard ter keep 'em strate now wide de Sheriff an' hell bofe 'fore dar eyes!"

"Den you'se on de side ob de fiah an' brimstone?"

"You'se right, honey! Ef you tink you'se gwine ter leebe dis wurld ter play snow-ball somewhar, you'se 'rong. Dar's er warm place jess beyant heah for der manigers ob de Freedman Bank an' chickin-lifters giurully, else I'se gwine ter swap my him-book for er pack er kyards."—Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution.

How Woman Loves and Suffers.

As a reporter was walking through one of the streets on the South Side last night he saw a woman sitting on a horse-block in front of a saloon, weeping bitterly. The reporter stopped and asked if he could aid her in any way, for she was a neat, tidy little women, with a pleasing, honest face. After several questions the story came out. Her husband, who is a workman, had been paid some money that morning, and had gone to this saloon and was carousing inside with some of his companions. Her little girl was sick at home, and several things were needed for her, which the father had promised to buy, but she was sorely afraid that the money would all be gone before the morning. As the woman told her sad story, with an air of patient resignation, her hands lay folded in her lap, and on the upper one was a long, ugly scratch. "Does your husband ever ill-treat you?" asked the reporter. She drew the wounded hand quickly under her shawl, and answered promptly, "Oh, no, sir; he is a good man, only when he's drinking he is sometimes a little quick with the children."

"Why don't you ask some of your friends to aid you in trying to stop his drinking, or else get a magistrate to interfere?"

She sprung up from the stone, and, drawing herself up, said in a trembling, indignant voice: "He is my husband, sir; do you think I would go to a magistrate about my husband, sir! my Harry? Oh no, sir, I never could do that, no matter what he did."—Wheeling (W. Va.) Register.

Fashionable Conversation.

First Swell—I say, Plevna has fallen.

Second ditto—Ya-as, so I see.

First Swell—Gweat blow to the—ah the—ah.

Second ditto—To the ah, yes—the Wussians.

First Swell—Ya-as. He was their pwincipal Genewal, I believe.

Second ditto—Ya-as, something of the sort; but, weally, I don't twouble to wead about the waw. It's too much.

First Swell—Quite awfully too much, weally; only evewbody's saying Plevna's fallen, you know; and it's fashionable.

Second ditto—Ya-as. Come to my chambers. Got some doosid fine Chartweuse. Come over. A pwesent. Come along, old fellah.

First Swell—All wight. I suppose old Plevna was a vewy gweat General, else they wouldn't have made such a doosid fuss about him.—London Fun.

The Eads Jetties.

Capt. James B. Eads is apparently making a success of his jetty system of deepening the mouth of the Mississippi river and rendering navigation more practicable and secure. About Christmas he reported to the Secretary of War that he had established a channel in the South pass of the mouth of the Mississippi river of a minimum depth of twenty-two feet and a minimum width of 200 feet, as required by the act of March 3, 1875, and applied for the $500,000 due to him under said act upon said work. A Government commission was dispatched to examine the work. They report to the effect that the depth and width of the channel required by the act have been obtained; that the jetties and auxiliary works contemplated by the act are completed in permanent, substantial form, and that Capt. Eads is entitled to the $500,000. This report was considered in Cabinet meeting recently, and the President authorized the Secretary of War to draw the proper warrant for the money.

Brandy and a Big Rattlesnake.

James Mitchell, Fred Bivins, Johnnie Woodward of Butler, went out squirrel hunting last Saturday. Mr. Mitchell got into a rattlesnake's nest, and was bitten four times before he could extricate himself. There was a flask of brandy in the party, and after drinking the contents he says he felt no inconvenience from it. Mr. Woodward, while attempting to shoot the snake, accidentally shot Mr. Bivins in the left arm just below the elbow. The snake was killed, and measured fifteen feet, with twenty-one rattles and a button.—Butler (Ga.) Herald.

THE bank of Bartlett & Smith, in Columbus, Ohio, went to pieces last spring, and the cause was a mystery. Now one member of the firm sues the proprietors of four gambling establishments to recover about $100,000. He says that the teller, the cashier and his partner gambled away the bank's money.

Honor in His Own Land.

Says Comley in his recently-issued work, The History of New York State, "The day has passed when the benefactors of humanity were allowed to live in ignominious poverty—their sacrifices, their labors, unrecompensed. To-day, the benefactors of the people—the men who devote their lives and energies to the interests of humanity—these are the men whom the world delights to honor, and whom it rewards with princely fortunes. As an earnest worker for the welfare of his fellow-men, Dr. R. V. Pierce has won their warmest sympathy and esteem. While seeking to be their servant only, he has become a prince among them. Yet the immense fortune lavished upon him by a generous people he hoards not, but invests in the erection and establishment of institutions directly contributive to the public good, the people thus realizing, in their liberal patronage, a new meaning of that beautiful Oriental custom of casting bread upon the waters. Noted in both public and private life for his unswerving integrity and all those sterling virtues that ennoble manhood, Dr. Pierce ranks high among those few men, whose names the Empire State is justly proud to inscribe upon her roll of honor. Ambitious, yet moved by an ambition strictly amenable to the most discriminating and well-balanced judgment, his future career promises to be one of unparalleled activity and usefulness, ably supplementing the work he has already accomplished, by a life at once noble in effort, enviable in its grand results." While Dr. Pierce's genius and energy have won for him so enviable a position on the records of nation, having been elected Senator by an overwhelming majority, his justly celebrated Household Remedies have gained for him a yet more desirable place in the hearts of a grateful people. His Golden Medical Discovery and Favorite Prescription have brought health and happiness to ten thousand households.

Remarkable Success.

The success of the leading literary paper of the West, THE CHICAGO LEDGER, is truly remarkable. Since its introduction to the reading public, six years ago, THE LEDGER has steadily advanced in favor, and is now acknowledged second to no paper of the kind in the country. Its circulation is national; and has been obtained through the efforts of its publishers to produce a paper of high moral character, and at the same time sell it at a price consistent with the present hard times. That they have succeeded, and well, too, the thousands of readers of THE LEDGER scattered from Maine to Texas and from Oregon to Florida will bear testimony. THE CHICAGO LEDGER is a large forty-eight column weekly paper, which contains stories both complete and continued, in each number, written by the best authors of the day, and a great variety of information interesting to every one. The subscription price of THE LEDGER is only $1.50 per year, postage paid, and it is equal in every particular to other papers of the same character which sell for $3 a year. Three copies of this valuable paper will be sent to any one who sends 10 cents and their address to THE LEDGER, Chicago, Ill.

Happy Influence of a Great Specific.

For the preservation or recovery of health and strength, the diet should be wholesome and nutritious. When it happens that the alimentary processes are disturbed by improper or half-masticated food, the best remedy for the evil results of abusing the digestive organs is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a most agreeable, prompt and gentle remedy for dyspepsia, and for the bilious and evacuative irregularities which result from it. The liver and bowels, in common with the stomach, experience its beneficent influences. The refuse of the system is carried off through its natural outlet, a healthy flow and secretion of the bile is promoted, and a powerful impetus is given to assimilation in consequence of its use. It healthfully stimulates the bladder and kidneys when they are inactive, and by its tonic and regulating action fortifies the system against malaria.

HEART Disease, by its insidious workings, has brought many persons to an untimely grave. The valves and various parts of the Heart are very tender and easily disarranged, which in time will become settled Heart Disease, for the relief and cure of which we offer you Dr. Graves' HEART REGULATOR, a preparation long and favorably known in New Hampshire, where the Doctor practiced as a regular physician. It is not a cureall, but is a medicine which goes straight to its work.

The HEART REGULATOR will assist the action of the Heart, and its continued use will afford a permanent cure. Send for a pamphlet, containing a full description of its merits, to FRANK E. INGALLS, Concord, N. H. For sale at 50 cents and $1 per bottle.

Get the Genuine

The genuine DOOLEY'S YEAST POWDER is sold only in cans. Always refuse it if offered loose or in bulk. It is the practice of many grocers and dealers to keep cheap Baking or Yeast Powder loose, and sell it for any brand that is called for. We, therefore, caution purchasers to see that they get it only in cans, under the Label and Trade Mark of the Manufacturers, DOOLEY & BROTHER, New York.

THE constantly-increasing sale of BURNETT'S COLOGNE confirms the opinion of the best judges that it is equal, if not superior, to any, domestic or foreign. It also received the highest award at the Centennial Exposition.

"AN OUNCE OF PREVENTION, ETC."—Sheridan's Cavalry Condition Powders will positively prevent all ordinary diseases common to horses, cattle, sheep, hogs and fowls, besides constantly improving them in appearance and in value.

PATENTEES and inventors should read advertisement of Edson Bros. in another column.

CAUTION.—We caution our readers to beware of diphtheria, pneumonia, influenza, bronchitis, congestion of the lungs, coughs, and colds at this season of the year. Get a bottle of Johnson's Anodyne Liniment and keep it ready for instant use. It may save your life. It has saved thousands.

CHEW
The Celebrated
"MATCHLESS"
Wood Tag Plug
TOBACCO.
THE PIONEER TOBACCO COMPANY,
New York, Boston and Chicago.

Forty years of success is sufficient evidence of the value of Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup as a cure for Consumption, Coughs, Colds, Hoarseness, Sore Throat. It contains no opium; is pleasant to the taste.

For sale by all Druggists.

The Greatest Discovery of the Age is Dr. Tobias' celebrated Venetian Liniment! 30 years before the public, and warranted to cure Diarrhea, Dysentery, Colic and Spasms, taken internally; and Croup, Chronic Rheumatism, Sore Throats, Cuts, Bruises, Old Sores, and Pains in the Limbs, Back and Chest, externally. It has never failed. No family will ever be without after once giving it a fair trial. Price, 40 cents. DR. TOBIAS' VENETIAN HORSE LINIMENT, in Pint Bottles, at One Dollar, is warranted superior to any other, or NO PAY, for the cure of Colic, Cuts, Bruises, Old Sores, etc. Sold by all Druggists. Depot—10 Park Place, New York.

TO CONSUMPTIVES.

The advertiser, having been permanently cured of that dread disease, Consumption, by a simple remedy, is anxious to make known to his fellow-sufferers the means of cure. To all who desire it, he will send a copy of the prescription used (free of charge), with the directions for preparing and using the same, which they will find a SURE CURE for CONSUMPTION, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, &c.

Parties wishing the prescription will please address
REV. EDWARD A. WILSON,
194 Penn Street, Williamsburgh, N. Y.

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

ASK the recovered dyspeptics, bilious sufferers, victims of fever and ague, the mercurial diseased patient, how they recovered health, cheerful spirits and good appetite; they will tell you by taking SIMMONS' LIVER REGULATOR.

The Cheapest, Purest and Best Family Medicine in the World!

For DYSPEPSIA, CONSTIPATION, Jaundice, Bilious Attacks, SICK HEADACHE, Colic, Depression of Spirits, SOUR STOMACH, Heartburn, &c., &c.

This unrivaled Southern Remedy is warranted not to contain a single particle of MERCURY, or any injurious mineral substance, but is containing those Southern Roots and Herbs which an all-wise Providence has placed in countries where Liver Diseases most prevail. It will cure all Diseases caused by Derangement of the Liver and Bowels.

PURELY VEGETABLE,

THE SYMPTOMS of Liver Complaint are a bitter or bad taste in the mouth; Pain in the Back, Sides or Joints, often mistaken for Rheumatism; Sour Stomach; Loss of Appetite; Bowels alternately costive and lax; Headache; Loss of Memory, with a painful sensation of having failed to do something which ought to have been done; Debility, Low Spirits, a thick yellow appearance of the Skin and Eyes, a dry Cough, often mistaken for Consumption.

Sometimes many of these symptoms attend the disease, at others very few; but the LIVER, the largest organ in the body, is generally the seat of the disease, and, if not Regulated in time, great suffering, wretchedness and DEATH will ensue.

I can recommend, as an efficacious remedy for disease of the Liver, Heartburn and Dyspepsia, Simmons' Liver Regulator.—LEWIS G. WUNDER, 1,625 MASTER STREET, ASSISTANT POSTMASTER, PHILADELPHIA.

"We have tested its virtues, personally, and know that for Dyspepsia, Biliousness and Throbbing Headache it is the best medicine the world ever saw. We have tried forty other remedies before Simmons' Liver Regulator, but none of them gave us more than temporary relief; but the Regulator not only relieved, but cured us."—ED. TELEGRAPH AND MESSENGER, Macon, Ga.

MANUFACTURED ONLY BY
J. H. ZEILIN & CO.,
PHILADELPHIA.

Price, $1.00. Sold by all Druggists.

How, When, Where,
TO GET A FARM.
Send for our Catalogues.
A. H. WYMAN & CO.,
206 South Seventh Street,
PHILADELPHIA.

AGENTS WANTED FOR THE PICTORIAL
HISTORY OF THE U. S.

The great interest in the thrilling history of our country makes this the fastest-selling book ever published. It contains over 500 fine historical engravings and 1,120 pages, and sells at sight. Send for specimen pages and extra terms to agents, and see why it sells faster than any other book. Address
NATIONAL PUBLISHING CO., Chicago, Ill.

THE NEW YORK
Commercial Advertiser.

TERMS:—Postage Prepaid:—Daily, one year, $9; six months, $4.50; three months, $2.25; one month, 75 cents.

Weekly, one year, $1; six months, 50 cents. Specimen numbers sent on application. An extra copy to Club Agents for club of ten; the Daily for club of thirty.

The Commercial Advertiser is the best Republican paper published in this country. Its Weekly edition is unsurpassed. Special terms to Agents.

All letters should be sent to
HUGH J. HASTINGS, 126 Fulton St., N. Y. City.

Gold Mines and Lands Coal

GOLD	MINES AND LANDS	COAL
SILVER	SOLD.	OIL
LEAD	COMPANIES ORGANIZED.	STONE
IRON	MINING AGENCY,	COPPER
MARBLE	206 S. SEVENTH STREET,	LIME
COAL	PHILADELPHIA.	MICA
MARL	A. H. WYMAN & CO.	GYPSUM

AGENTS WANTED!! A thrilling history of the war with CRAZY HORSE and SITTING BULL LIFE and DEATH of CUSTER, with full account of his last battle, RENO'S battles of the Big Horn, and TERRY'S march to his rescue; MOUNTAIN ADVENTURES, and perils of FRONTIER LIFE. 500 pages of wonderful romance and deep interest. Finely illustrated, and sells at sight. Buyers are pleased. AGENTS MAKE MONEY. For extraordinary terms, address COLUMBIAN BOOK CO., Hartford, Ct.

Agents also wanted for a standard work of 1,000 pages. A copy to canvass with sent, prepaid, for $1.50.

KEEP'S SHIRTS.

KEEP'S Patent Partly-made Dress Shirts, best quality, only plain seams to finish, 6 for $7.

KEEP'S Custom Shirts to measure, best quality, 6 for $9, delivered free. Guaranteed perfectly satisfactory.

RED FLANNEL UNDERWEAR.

Undershirts and Drawers, best quality, $1.50 each. White Flannel Undervests, best quality, $1.50 each. Canton Flannel Vests & Drawers, ex. heavy, 75c. each. Twilled Silk Umbrellas, paragon frames, $3 each. Best Gingham, patent protected ribs, $1 each. Circulars and Samples mailed free on application. Shirts only delivered free. KEEP MANUFACTURING COMPANY, 165 and 167 Mercer Street, New York.

BABBITT'S TOILET SOAP.

Unrivaled for the Toilet and the Bath. No artificial and deceptive odors to cover common and deleterious ingredients. After years of scientific experiment the manufacturer of B. T. Babbitt's Best Soap has perfected and now offers to the public The FINEST TOILET SOAP in the World. Only the purest vegetable oils used in its manufacture. For Use in the Nursery it has No Equal. Worth ten times its cost to every mother and family in Christendom. Sample box, containing 3 cakes of 6 oz. each, sent free to any address on receipt of 75 cents. Address
B. T. BABBITT, New York City.
For Sale by all Druggists.

LOVERING'S NEW MILLION DOLLAR
BOOK SALE.

The Grandest Book Sale the World ever saw. $250,000 in Presents to the buyers. Your choice of A Million Splendid Books for One Dollar Each, and an Elegant Present with every Book, including Pianos, Gold and Silver Watches, and other Elegant Articles, all free. If you want a Piano or Watch free, send for "Catalogue" of sale. Address
A. W. LOVERING,
399 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.

BEST GOODS AT LOWEST PRICES.
MAGIC LANTERNS AND VIEWS
Illus. Catalogues & Lectures. 3 Books, &c.
CIRCULARS FREE. OUTFITS WANTED.
MAGIC MUSICAL CABINET. Everyone a Musician.
THEO. J. HARBACH, 809 Filbert St., Phila'a, Pa.

WANTED SALESMEN for wholesale house. Liberal salary; traveling expenses paid. Address R. & Co., box 1364, Cincinnati, Ohio.

LUMBER,

Lath, Shingles, Cedar Posts, Doors, Windows, Blinds, Moldings, Builders' Hardware, Building Paper, Metallic Center-Pieces, Farm Pumps and Pipe, Paints, Oils, Salt, School Desks and Furniture at Manufacturers' Wholesale Cash Prices. Descriptive Catalogues for 1878 sent free to any address. Estimates on Bills promptly made. The only Wholesale House in Chicago dealing direct with Farmers and Builders at Strictly Wholesale Cash Prices. Established in 1857. Address GEORGE WOODLEY, 242 So. Water St., Chicago, Ill. Wholesale Lumber, Building Material & Farm Supplies.

JACKSON'S BEST
SWEET NAVY CHEWING TOBACCO

was awarded the highest prize at Centennial Exposition for its fine chewing qualities, the excellence and lasting character of its sweetening and flavoring. If you want the best tobacco ever made, ask your grocer for this, and see that each plug bears our blue-strip trade-mark with words Jackson's Best on it. Sold wholesale by all jobbers. Send for sample to C. A. JACKSON & CO., Manufacturers, Petersburg, Va.

A. L. L. [illegible] 16 column eight page Monthly for young and old. [illegible]

No amateur paper; established three years. P.O. stamps taken. Sample copy of paper, with best premium list ever offered, for 3 cents. Address
THE YOUNG FOLKS WORLD,
13 Winter Street, Boston, Mass.

PULMONA IS A SURE CURE FOR CONSUMPTION!

READ THIS STATEMENT FROM A PATIENT. From T. J. Carson, College Hill, Cincinnati: "I was in the last stage of CONSUMPTION. In ten days after taking PULMONA my CHILLS, NIGHT SWEATS and FEVER decreased, and finally altogether disappeared. A mere skeleton before, I am now well covered with flesh. My restoration is a marvel to all who know me."

PULMONA may be ordered through any Dealer in Medicines. Circulars, containing particulars of MANY CASES successfully treated, sent free. Address OSCAR G. MOSES, 18 Cortlandt St., New York.

$10 to $25 a day sure made by Agents selling our Chromos, Crayons, Picture and Chromo Cards. [illegible] samples worth $5, sent, postpaid, for 85 Cents. Illustrated Catalogue free. J. H. BUFFORD'S SONS, Boston. (Established [illegible].)

"The Best Polish in the World."
THE RISING SUN
STOVE POLISH

POND'S
EXTRACT

CATARRH.—Pond's Extract is nearly a Specific for this disease. It can hardly be excelled, even in old and obstinate cases. The relief is so prompt that no one who has ever tried it will be without it.

CHAPPED HANDS AND FACE. Pond's Extract should be in every family this rough weather. It removes the soreness and roughness, and softens and heals the skin promptly.

RHEUMATISM.—During severe and changeable weather, no one subject to Rheumatic Pains should be one day without Pond's Extract, which always relieves.

SORE LUNGS, CONSUMPTION, COUGHS, COLDS.—This cold weather tries the Lungs sorely. Have Pond's Extract on hand always. It relieves the pain and cures the disease.

CHILBLAINS will be promptly relieved and ultimately cured by bathing the afflicted parts with Pond's Extract.

FROSTED LIMBS.—Pond's Extract invariably relieves the pain and finally cures.

SORE THROAT, QUINSY, INFLAMED TONSILS AND AIR PASSAGES are promptly cured by the use of Pond's Extract. It never fails.

HISTORY and Uses of Pond's Extract in pamphlet form, sent free on application to POND'S EXTRACT CO., 98 Maiden Lane, New York. Sold by Druggists.

"VEGETINE,"

Says a Boston Physician, "has no equal as a blood purifier. Hearing of its many wonderful cures, after all other remedies had failed, I visited the Laboratory and convinced myself of its genuine merit. It is prepared from barks, roots and herbs, each of which is highly effective, and they are compounded in such a manner as to produce astonishing results."

VEGETINE
Is the Great Blood Purifier.

VEGETINE
Will cure the worst case of Scrofula.

VEGETINE
Is recommended by Physicians and Apothecaries.

VEGETINE
Has effected some marvelous cures in cases of Cancer.

VEGETINE
Cures the worst cases of Canker.

VEGETINE
Meets with wonderful success in Mercurial Diseases.

VEGETINE
Will eradicate Salt Rheum from the system.

VEGETINE
Removes Pimples and Humors from the face.

VEGETINE
Cures Constipation and regulates the bowels.

VEGETINE
Is a valuable remedy for Headache.

VEGETINE
Will cure Dyspepsia.

VEGETINE
Restores the entire system to a healthy condition.

VEGETINE
Removes the cause of Dizziness.

VEGETINE
Relieves Faintness at the Stomach.

VEGETINE
Cures Pains in the Back.

VEGETINE
Effectually cures Kidney Complaint.

VEGETINE
Is effective in its cure of Female Weakness.

VEGETINE
Is the great remedy for General Debility.

VEGETINE
Is acknowledged by all classes of people to be the best and most reliable blood purifier in the world.

VEGETINE
PREPARED BY
H. R. STEVENS, Boston, Mass.
Vegetine is Sold by All Druggists.

GUNS REVOLVERS. Price List free. Address Great Western Gun Works, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Safety Inkstand Free.—Don't spill, spoil pens or soil fingers. Write American Book Exchange, N.Y.

$200 a month. Agents wanted to represent [illegible], Cincinnati, O.

$3300 A YEAR. How to Make it. New Agents COE & YONGE, St. Louis, Mo.

$2500 a year. Agents wanted everywhere. Business strictly legitimate. Particulars free. Address J. WORTH & CO., St. Louis, Mo.

$3 GOLD PLATED WATCHES. Cheapest in the known world. Sample Watch Free to Agents. Address, A. COULTER & CO., Chicago, Ills.

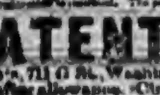
EYE RESTORERS better than Spectacles. The best reduced to $1. Circulars free. Address Box 788, New York.

PIANOS Retail price $900 only $260. Parlor Organs, price $340 only $95. Papers free. Daniel F. Beatty, Washington, N.J.

$350 A MONTH—AGENTS WANTED—36 best selling articles in the world; one sample free. Address JAY BRONSON, Detroit, Mich.

CLOCKS E. INGRAHAM & CO.'S [illegible] are superior in design and not equaled in quality, or as timekeepers. Ask your Jeweler for them. [illegible] Bristol, Ct.

DYKES' BEARD ELIXIR [illegible]



PATENTS AND INVENTORS. EDSON BROS., Agents, 711 G St., Washington, D.C. Established in 1865. Fees after allowance. Full instructions, etc., sent free.

SELF-INKING TRIUMPH PRINTING PRESS, $3.50; Outfit & Press $8.50. A new line of ROTARY POWER & Self-Inking Presses. Send 3 stamps for catalogue to W. WATSON, 73 Cornhill, Boston, Mass.

SWINDLERS All devices resorted to by bogus ADVERTISERS for defrauding the public EXPOSED. WANTED DETECTIVES and to report crime; will pay liberal; position permanent; terms and specimen copy of paper sent for nine cents. Address, Publishers American Criminal Gazetteer, Cincinnati, Ohio.

WORK FOR ALL
In their own localities, canvassing for the Fireside Visitor (enlarged), Weekly and Monthly. Largest Paper in the World, with Mammoth Chromos Free. Big Commissions to Agents. Terms and Outfit Free. Address P. O. VICKERY, Augusta, Maine.

FREE! FREE! FREE! An immense Descriptive Catalogue of Novels, Song Books, Music, Negro Farces, Acting Plays, Letter Writers, Fortune Tellers, Reciters, Cook Books, Speakers, Dialogues, Joke Books, Ready Reckoners, Playing Cards, Books on Magic, Swimming, Boxing, Draughts, Cricket, Base-Ball, Clog Shoes, Burnt Cork, Wigs, Face Preparations, &c., unequaled and unattainable elsewhere. Mailed free on application. DEWITT PUBLISHING HOUSE, 33 Rose Street, New York.

ELASTIC RUPTURE BELT

The Best Truss without Metal Springs ever invented. No humbug claim of a certain radical cure, but a guarantee of a comfortable, secure and satisfactory appliance. We will take back and pay FULL PRICE for all that do not suit. Price, single, like cut, $4; for both sides, $6. Sent by mail post-paid, on receipt of price. N. B.—This Truss WILL CURE more Ruptures than any of those for which extravagant claims are made. Circulars free.
POMEROY TRUSS CO., 746 Broadway, New York.

TEACHERS of VOCAL MUSIC,
Desiring the Best Book extant, should try FAVORITE SONGS. An unequaled collection of Gems compiled for their use by Profs. H. R. and T. H. R. Christie, and supervised by Prof. H. M. McIntosh, the eminent author and teacher. Price $4.00 a dozen. Sample by mail, 50 cents. SPECIMEN PAGES FREE. R. W. CARROLL & CO., Publishers, Cincinnati, or LYON & HEALY, Chicago.

CHICAGO
WEEKLY POST
THE PEOPLE'S PAPER.

32 columns of Editorial, News, Agricultural, Miscellany and Market Reports. One copy 1 year, postage paid, 75c. Same terms to Agents as last year. Address THE POST, 88 Dearborn St., Chicago.

THOMSON'S PATENT
GLOVE-FITTING
CORSETS.

The friends of this UNRIVALLED CORSET are now numbered by MILLIONS. Prices are much reduced. MEDAL RECEIVED AT CENTENNIAL. Get the Genuine, and beware of Imitations. ASK ALSO FOR THOMSON'S UNBREAKABLE STEELS. The best goods made. See that the name of THOMSON and the Trade Mark a CROWN, are stamped on every Corset & Steel.

GIVE COMPLETE SATISFACTION
THE FIGURE PERFECTLY

THE GOOD OLD STAND-BY.

MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT.
FOR MAN AND BEAST.

ESTABLISHED 35 YEARS. Always cures. Always ready. Always handy. Has never yet failed. Thirty millions have tested it. The whole world approves the glorious old Mustang—the Best and Cheapest Liniment in existence. 25 cents a bottle. The Mustang Liniment cures when nothing else will.

SOLD BY ALL MEDICINE VENDERS.

BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES
FOR COUGHS & COLDS

A
Cough, Cold, or Sore Throat,
Requires immediate attention, as neglect oftentimes results in some incurable Lung disease. BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES are a simple remedy, and will almost invariably give immediate relief.
SOLD BY ALL CHEMISTS and dealers in medicine.

WEBER'S
METROPOLITAN CORSET!
THE ONLY CORSET COMBINING
Grace, Comfort and Beauty!

Is constructed on purely scientific principles. The back is whole boned and left open at the hips to be laced at pleasure of wearer, and is so curved in back that the fabrics and bones adapt themselves with marvelous accuracy to every curve and undulation of the finest type or figure. For sale by all leading merchants. Lady Agents wanted. Samples by mail on receipt of $1.50.
WESTERN DEPOT, KEITH BROS., Chicago, Ill.

SANDAL-WOOD.

A positive remedy for all diseases of the Kidneys, Bladder and Urinary Organs; also, good in Dropsical Complaints. It never produces sickness, is certain and speedy in its action. It is fast superseding all other remedies. Sixty capsules cure in six or eight days. No other medicine can do this.

Beware of Imitations, for, owing to its great success, many have been offered; some are most dangerous, causing piles, &c.

DUNDAS DICK & CO.'S Genuine Soft Capsules, containing Oil of Sandal-Wood, sold at all Drug Stores. Ask for circular, or send for one to 35 and 37 Wooster street, New York.

O. N. U. No. 2

WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS please say you saw the advertisement in this paper.

Auburn Courier.

AUBURN, INDIANA, JAN. 24, 1878.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

SENATOR VOORHEES' GREAT SPEECH.

The Scene During its Delivery.

DEAR COURIER.—It was my great good fortune to be in the Senate Chamber during the delivery of the most eloquent speech of our distinguished statesman, Hon. D. W. Voorhees, on the 10th inst. Long before the hour of assembling, the galleries were crowded, for it was known that the greatest living orator would make his presentment of the cause of the people to the Senate that day. I obtained a place on the floor within a few yards of the Senator, where I could hear and see everything. From the time the Senate assembled until the hour when Mr. Voorhees took the floor, the lobbies and cloak rooms and every vacant space back of the Senators' seats were filled with members of the House and visitors, until there was not even standing room or a passage-way for the pages. At last one o'clock came, and as the Vice President announced that the morning hour had expired, Stanley Mathews arose, and there was a murmur of disappointment in the galleries. They had come to hear the "Tall Sycamore of the Wabash," but Mr. Mathews soon relieved them by giving way in laying his resolution over informally.

The Mr. Voorhees arose, perfectly calm and self-possessed. A hush fell upon the whole assemblage, and every eye was centered upon his commanding figure. The grave and learned Senators settled themselves in their seats, and turning so as to face the speaker, prepared to listen attentively. All but Conkling. He picked up a pen and commenced to write, apparently very busily engaged, but something in the speakers voice drew his attention, and he would stop and listen a moment or two and then to his writing again. He kept this up for perhaps fifteen minutes but the interruption became so frequent that he soon abandoned the pen, and turning full upon the orator gave his undivided attention until its close. In a clear, sound, full, resonant tone, Mr. Voorhees' first words fell upon the audience. Though hampered by manuscript, and having for his theme one of those dry, prosy subjects which fall to the lot of a deliberative body, he held that vast audience almost spell-bound, through the magnetism of his voice and matchless eloquence of his words. For two hours and ten minutes not a body moved, nor a muscle relaxed, in the intense interest to catch the impassioned tones. Even the bankers and aristocrats, who had poured into the lobbies, where the poor man dared not enter, gave the strictest attention. Ladies, whose costly dresses and sparkling jewels shown resplendent, gave ear to that persuasive voice as to the relation of a love story, and the less favored hung breathless on his words. Men of toil, with which a portion of the gallery was filled, heard the champion of their rights with beating hearts, and from all directions came a responsive thrill to the clear and forcible expose of the wrongs of the people. Clothed in most beautiful language, the legislation of the last sixteen years in the interest of the rich was shown up, and condemned. The schemes for the enrichment of the bond class were laid bare, and the wrongs inflicted upon the farmer and the laborer, which are now crushing out all hope, all ambition, were portrayed in telling tones.

It is impossible to describe the effect which his closing words produced. I give them in full as follows:

First.—Those for whom I speak demand the restoration of the silver dollar exactly as it stood before it was touched by the act of February, 1873. They desire that it shall have unlimited coinage, not fearing that it will become too plentiful for their wants, and that it be made full legal tender, believing that it is as good now with which to pay all debts, public and private, as it was during eighty-one years of American history.

Second.—They demand the repeal, unconditionally, of the act of January 14, 1875, compelling a resumption of specie payments in January, 1879, holding that the question of a return to a specie basis for our currency should be controlled entirely by the business interests of the country. They do not believe that the country should be dragged through the depths of ruin, wretchedness and degradation, in order to reach a gold standard for the benefit alone of the income classes.

Third.—They demand that the national banking system be removed, and a circulating medium provided by the government for the people, without taxing them for the privilege of obtaining it. And they ask that the amount thus placed in circulation shall bear a reasonable and judicious proportion to the business transactions and the population of the United States.

Fourth.—They demand that the currency authorized and circulated on the authority of the government shall be made a legal tender in payment of all debts, public and private, including all dues to the government, well knowing that it will then be at par with gold, or more likely at a premium over it.

Fifth.—They demand that hereafter the financial policy of the government be framed permanently in their interest, that they shall not be discriminated against in future legislation as in the past, and that their prosperity and not the mere growth of incomes to retire capitalists shall be the primary duty of the government.

In my judgment, sir, these demands are just and moderate. I implore Senators not to suppose that they can be disregarded with safety. If they are rejected now they will be renewed hereafter with still greater determination and perhaps with others added. I plead for the financial credit of the government. It rests on the popular will alone, and that will can no longer be defied or menaced with impunity. The people are sovereign, and they can bind and they can loose. If the money power is advised with wisdom it will stop and retrace its steps. It confronts a power now mightier than itself—a free people at the ballot box, influenced and united by a sense of injustice and oppression. If, however, it is joined to its golden idol; if its heart is hardened and its neck stiffened by its vast possessions; if the burning lust of avarice have made it deaf to the voice of reason and blind to all human experience it will push on in its career until it works its own destruction; for sooner or later the people, irresponsive of party names, will unite in their own defense and establish justice.

Sir, I have no word of menace to utter on this floor, but in behalf of every laborer and every owner of the soil whom I represent, I warn all such as value their investments that when these doctrines of despotism are sought to be enforced, this fair land will again be convulsed in agony and the fire of liberty will blaze forth again as they did one hundred years ago in defense of the national rights of man. (Applause in the galleries.) May the wisdom of our fathers and the benignity of our God avert such an issue; but if it shall come, if infatuation has seized our councils, the result will only add one instance to the long catalogue of human crime and folly, where avarice like ambition overleaps itself and in its unholy attempt to rob others of their possessions, loses its own (Great applause in the galleries.)

It was impossible to check the applause that burst out just before he uttered his last sentence. The President rapped with his gavel, and all knew that it was a breach of decorum, yet it burst forth, in one general irresistable response in obedience to a prompting that ignored time, place and authority in its flattering appreciation of a noble effort.

At the close of the speech everybody rushed towards Voorhees, and for a minute he was enclosed on all sides by admiring friends, among whom were Senators, Members, Governors, Generals down to the bony-handed laborer, all receiving the same attention, the same recognitions, from the polite Senator. I happened to be standing near the President's desk near which Mr. Voorhees was standing when Judge Thurman came up and said: "Why, Senator, you must have your steel gaffs on to-day." A moment after in came General Crittenden followed by a crowd of ladies, among them the aged mother of Mr. Voorhees, who received the first kiss of her gallant son. The flattering attention bestowed, the hearty friendship extended and the high appreciation shown to Indiana's distinguished favorite, place him at the head of that small but determined column now struggling against the money power to right the wrongs of the people.

Washington is unusually dull this winter, even with Congress in session. The social world is at a stand still, and parties, balls, receptions, &c., occur very rarely, and with less show and pomp than heretofore. The city is over run with tramps, beggars, and a large number of the unemployed. One can scarcely go ten rods at any hour of the day without being appealed to for a pittance with which to buy something to eat. Hundreds remain there who once were in the governments employ and still clinging to the hope that they will be reinstated in their positions. There are now about one hundred females on the rolls as employees, who have nothing to do and must soon be discharged, to increase the fearful tide of want and destitution that hovers in and around the city. The rich and mighty feel the chilling effect of its presence, and dare not spend thousands on banquets and suppers, while the contrast with the poor suffering class without is so great. So that this and the dull, distressed condition of business prevents an inauguration of the gaities common to the Capitol. In a conversation with Mr. Baker, he informed me that there would likely be an attempt to reduce the tax on liquors and tobacco. The south and west would no doubt vote for it to a great extent. He stated that the revenues now were scarcely sufficient to pay the ordinary expenses of the Government, and that the committee on appropriations, of which he is a member, had determined to maintain the same rigid economy as in last Congress. The reduction of the tax would largely decrease the revenues and the tax on other articles, perhaps the necessities of life, would have to be increased to meet current expenses. It is, to be hoped that this will not be done.

The active, light-hearted Mrs. Gen. Gaines is back again from New Orleans and is stopping at the Metropolitan. Her clear, ringing laugh can be heard in the parlors, and her bright eyes and golden hair as she flits by on the avenue are not all the attractions of the little woman. She has a warm sympathetic heart, and often expresses her feelings at the distress of the poor with tears in her eyes. She fires up with true indignation at the wrongful legislation that has brought oppression to the people. She is not in possession of her property in New Orleans, but has fair hopes to realize the great object of her life in a short time.

While at Pittsburg, on our way to this city, we enjoyed the hospitalities of our genial friend, Col. Wm. Holmes and his amiable, accomplished family of East Liberty. The Colonel is the principal live stock dealer in that city, where thousands are received and shipped every day. We made a pleasant inspection of the yards, under the guidance of that prince of good fellows J. B. Aveline, Esq., formerly of Fort Wayne, now connected with the firm. In our ramble we noticed one lot of cattle, about one hundred, which averaged 1700 pounds each. The yards are the most extensive and best arranged in the country and a walk through them presents a novel sight. We are obliged to Mr. Holmes, Jr., for his friendly courtesies.

TOM.

THE NEW YORK STORE,
AUBURN, INDIANA.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of an execution to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Rodgers, Puck and Lewis are plaintiffs, and John E. Freeburn is defendant, requiring me to make the sum of two hundred and twenty-eight dollars and nineteen cents, 228.19, with interest on said judgment and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder, on SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 16th, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House in DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

Lot number seventy-two, in Egnew's addition to the town of Butler, DeKalb county, Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said judgment, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose at public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said judgment, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
By GEO. W. MAXWELL, Dept.
Rose & Hartman Attorneys for plaintiff.
Auburn, Jan. 23d, 1878. Pr. fee $7.00.

Dr. A. G. OLIN'S Private Hospital, 187 East Washington St., Chicago, Ills, for the cure of all Diseases of a Private nature, resulting from early abuses or infection of either Sex. Seminal Weakness producing Emissions, Loss of Memory, Impaired Sight, Lost Manhood or Impotency, Nervous Debility, permanently cured; diseases of the Bladder, Kidneys, Liver, Lungs, Asthma, Catarrh, Piles, all Chronic Diseases, and DISEASES OF FEMALES, yield to his treatment. Dr. Olin has had a life-long experience, and cures where others fail. He is a graduate of the Reformed School, uses no mercury, has the largest practice in the U. S. LADIES requiring treatment with private home and board, call or write. Every convenience for patients. Send fifty cents for sample of Rubber Goods and circular of important information by express. DR. OLIN'S Female Pills, $3 per box. Consultation free.

MARRIAGE GUIDE 272 pages. Secrets & information for the young and middle aged of both sexes, on all diseases of a private nature. Valuable advice to the married and those contemplating marriage. How to be healthy and truly happy in the married relation. Everybody should get this book. Free by mail, to any address, sealed.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein James Griswold is plaintiff and David Floyd et ux. are defendants, requiring me to make the sum of four hundred and fifty-nine dollars and seventy-eight cents $459.78, with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 2nd, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House in DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

Described as follows to-wit: The first five acres off the west side of the south half of the north-east quarter of section twenty (20).

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
By Thos. D. Gross, Deputy.
Penfield & Emanuel Att'ys for plaintiff.
Auburn Jan 9th, 1878. Pr. fee $7.50.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Anthony E. Swinford is plaintiff, and John Trench is defendant, requiring me to make the sum of six hundred and four dollars and fifty cents, $604.50, with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY, 2nd, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M., and 4 o'clock P. M. of said day, at the door of the Court House in DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate to-wit:

Commencing twenty-two feet, 22, north of south east corner of lot number ninety-seven, 97, in the original plat to the town of Auburn, thence north twenty-two feet, 22, thence east eighty feet, 80, thence south twenty-two feet, 22, thence west to the place of begining in DeKalb county, Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said judgment and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
By Thos. D. Gross, Deputy.
W. H. Dills Attorney for plaintiff.
Auburn, Jan 9th, 1878. Pr. fee $8.00

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Geo. Egnew is plaintiff, and William Stough et al are defendants, requiring me to make the sum of five hundred and ninety dollars and fifteen cents, $590,15, with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder, on SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 9th, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M. of said day, at the door of the Court House in Auburn DeKalb county, Indiana the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

As the undivided one half of lots number twenty 20, and twenty-one 21, twenty-two, 22, twenty-nine, 29, thirty, 30, thirty-one, 31, and thirty-two 32, in Buforth's addition to the town of Butler, in DeKalb county, Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
Pinchin & Boyle, Atty's for plaintiff.
Auburn, Jan. 16th, 1878. Pf. $7.50.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein William L. Pettit is plaintiff and Geo. Wilmot and Lucinda H. Wilmot are defendants, requiring me to make the sum of two hundred and eighteen dollars, with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 2nd, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House in DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years of the following real estate, to-wit:

South half of the north east quarter of section twenty-two, 22, township thirty-three, 33, north of range fourteen, 14, east, containing eighty acres, 80, more or less.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
By Thos. D. Gross, Deputy.
Best & McClellan, Attorneys for plaintiff.
Auburn, Jan. 9th 1878. Pr. fee $7.25.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of an execution to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court, in a cause wherein Solomon Mier is plaintiff, and Samuel H. Hughes is defendant, requiring me to make the sum of three hundred and seventy-seven dollars and fourteen cents, $377.14, with interest on said judgment and costs, I will expose at public sale to the highest bidder, on SATURDAY, FEBRUARY, 9th, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M., and 4 o'clock P. M. of said day, at the door of the Court House of DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

The south half of the east half of the north east quarter of section thirty-six, 36, in township thirty-four, 34, north of range fourteen, 14, east, in DeKalb county, Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said judgment interest and costs, I will at the same time and place, expose at public sale, the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
By Thos. D. Gross, deputy.
Young & Ralston, Att'ys for Plaintiff.
Auburn, Indiana, Jan. 16th, 1878. Pf. $7.25.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of an Execution to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein three different executions. 1, J. S. Parratt, 2, Wm. Carpenter, 3, Mary Firestone, are plaintiffs, and David Fay, David Fay, and A. F. Pinchin and David Fay are defendants requiring me to make the sum of four hundred and sixty dollars, $460, with interest on said judgment and costs I will expose at public sale to the highest bidder, on SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 16th, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m., and 4 o'clock p. m. at the door of the Court House of DeKalb County Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years of the following real estate, to-wit:

The undivided four fifths, of the south east quarter, of the south west quarter, and thirty-seven 37, acres, off the west side of the south west quarter of the south east quarter of section twenty-four, 24, township thirty-four, 34, north of range fourteen, 14, east, in DeKalb county, Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said judgment, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose at public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said judgment, interest and costs.

Sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
McBride, Morlan & Leas, and Bope, Baxter & Plum, Attorneys for plaintiffs.
Auburn Jan. 23d, 1878. Pr. fee $8.50

$777 is not easily earned in these times but it can be made in three months by any one of either sex, in any part of the country who is willing to work steadily at the employment we furnish. $66 per week in your own town. You need not be away from home over night. You can give your whole time to the work, or only your spare time. We have agents who are making over $20 per day. All who engage at once can make money fast. At the present time money cannot be made so easily and rapidly at any other business. It costs nothing to try the business. Terms and $5 outfit free. Address at once,
H. Hallett & Co., Portland, Maine.
October 31.—6m coll.

1878. 1878.

ROOT & COMPANY

Have commenced their great annual closing out SALE and will offer during the next 30 days

Bargains

in every description of

CARPETS, DRY GOODS,
FANCY GOODS, HOSIERY,
GLOVES, NOTIONS, &c.

We would advise an early visit as the prices we shall put on many will close them out rapidly.

ROOT & COMPA'Y.
46 and 48 Calhoun Street.
FORT WAYNE, IND.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein George Ensley is plaintiff and Robert Zacher et ux are defendants require me to make the sum of one hundred and forty two dollars, and thirty cents, $142.30, with interest on said decree and costs. I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder on

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 2nd, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House in DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

Town lot number seventy-two [72] in Ensley's 2nd addition to the town of Auburn, in DeKalb County and State of Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
By THOS. D. GROSS, Deputy.
Penfield & Emanuel, atty's for pltff.
Jan. 9th 1878. Pr. fee $7.00.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Thomas H. Sprott, Trustee, is plaintiff, and Andrew J. Little is defendant, requiring me to make the sum of Thirty-five dollars $35.00, with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 2nd, 1878

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day at the door of the Court House of DeKalb County, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

Situated in DeKalb county, Ind., to-wit: One and one-half feet front by eighty (80) feet deep adjoining the south half of lot No. ninety-three (93) all in the original plat of the town of Auburn.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said judgment, interest and costs, I will, at the same time and place, expose at public sale, the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation and appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR Sheriff.
By THOS. D. GROSS Deputy.
Penfield & Emanuel, Atty's for plaintiff
Auburn, Ind. Jan. 9th 1878 Pf. $7.50.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein J. Hounstout is plaintiff, and Jacob Rook et al. are defendants, requiring me to make the sum of two hundred and ten dollars and fifty cents, $210,50, with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 2nd, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House in DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years of the following real estate, to-wit:

A strip of land thirty feet, 30, in width east and west running the entire length off of west end of lot number sixty-eight, 68, in the original plat to the town of Waterloo, DeKalb county, Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
McBride Morlan & Leas Attorneys for plaintiff.
Auburn, Jan. 9th, 1878. Pr. fee $7.50.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Solomon Mier is plaintiff, and L. S. Goodwin et al are defendants, requiring me to make the sum of three hundred and fifty-six dollars and eighty-five cents, ($356.85), with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY, 2nd, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House in Auburn DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate to-wit:

Being a part of south east quarter of section four, 4, township thirty-four, 34 north of range thirteen, 13, east, commencing in the centre of a road running parallel with the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern railroad at a stake being the north east corner of William Penilton's lot sold by Henry Zerkle to said William Penilton, thence east along the centre of said road seventy-six [76] links thence south two 2 chains and thirty-four 34 links thence west one, 1, chain and seven, 7, links, thence north one, 1, chain and thirty-four, 34, links, thence east thirty, 30, links, thence north one, 1, chain to the place of beginning.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
McBride, Morlan & Leas Atty's for plaintiff.
Auburn Jan. 9th, 1878. Pr. fee $9.50

—When a man, who has heretofore scarcely deigned to notice you, grasps you by the hand, shakes it cordially, inquires after your health and that of the whole family, take out your little book and write him down—a candidate.

Sheriff's Sale,

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court, in a cause wherein Joseph Boyer et al are plaintiffs, and Albert Widney is defendant, requiring me to make the sum of three hundred and nine dollars and sixty cents, $309.60 with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 2nd, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House of DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

North east quarter of the north east quarter of section twenty-four, 24, township thirty four, 34, north of range thirteen, 13, east, in DeKalb county, Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said judgment, interest and costs I will at the same time and place, expose at public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said judgment, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation and appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
McBride, Morlan & Leas Attorneys for plaintiff.
Auburn, Jan 9th, 1878. Pf. $7.50.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Miles Waterman is plaintiff, and John T. Haykes et al. are defendants requiring me to make the sum of three hundred and eighty-eight dollars and fifty cents, $388,50, with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 2nd 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House in DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

The north west quarter of the north west quarter of section twenty-one, 21, township thirty-five, 35, north of range fourteen, 14, east, containing forty acres, 40, more or less in DeKalb county, Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
McBride Morlan & Leas Atty's, for plaintiff.
Auburn, Jan, 9th, 1878. Pr. fee $7.50

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Jonathan Clutter is plaintiff, and Geo. W. Clutter et al are defendants requiring me to make the sum of twenty-six hundred and fifty-five dollars and sixty-six cents $2655.66, with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder on

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 2nd, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M., and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House in DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

North half of the south east quarter of section five, 5, township thirty four, 34, north of range thirteen, 13, east, containing seventy-five, 75, acres more or less in DeKalb county Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
Best & McClellan Attorneys for plaintiff.
Auburn, Jan. 6th, 1878. Pr. fee $7.50

AUBURN FRUIT HOUSE.

PHILIP BASHELIER

Having purchased the large grocery stock of B. TRENTMAN, of Fort Wayne, is now ready to supply the trade with

Groceries,
Provisions,
Fruits,
Crockery, &c.

At the lowest prices. Store in Odd Fellows' building, North of Court House, Auburn, Indiana.

Highest price paid for COUNTRY PRODUCE.

CHRONIC Diseases Cured. New paths marked out by that plainest of all books—"Plain Home Talk and Medical Common Sense,"—nearly 1,000 pages, 200 illustrations by Dr. E. B. FOOTE, of 120 Lexington Avenue, N. Y. Purchasers of this book are at liberty to consult its author in person or by mail free. Price by mail $3.25 for the standard edition, or $1.50 for the popular edition, which contains all the same matter and illustrations. Contents tables free. Agents wanted. MURRAY HILL PUBLISHING CO.,
129 East 28th St. N. Y.

Auburn Courier.

Local and Miscellaneous.

Do You Call This a Church.

My soul is in fetters here, its wings are earth-clipped. Things are all too fine; nobody can come in at the door, whose hat and coat and bonnet are not fashionably cut. "Fortune may favor fools, but that's a poor reason why you should make a fool of yourself. One set of Friuch China dinner ware for $66.00; 106 pieces Tea and Dinner $10. We warrant every bit of our solid silver ware and silver plated ware to be of the double and tripple plate, and all stamped with the names of Meriden Britanna Co., the best and largest plating company in the world. Tea sets $25 to 100. water set, $13 to 60; castors, $4 to 50. Card and Cake stands, pickle castors, knives, spoons, ladles, sugar shells, fruit knives, the best stock of plated at Ward's Cheap Crockery Store, No. 9 Columbia street, Fort Wayne, Ind.

—The Supreme Court has recently decided that incorporated towns are liable to be held for damages by persons receiving injuries from defective side walks, crossings, bridges or from open cellars, cisterns, &c., but that the town may have recourse upon the person or persons who are responsible for keeping in repair such side-walk, or who leave open areas in which the party was injured.

—The monument that is to be placed over the grave of Andrew Jackson has been received from the east It is an arch spanning both the grave of Johnson and that of his wife, and will soon be placed in position. From its place on the hillside it will be clearly visible for miles. In connection with this it is stated that three presidents are buried in Tennessee—Jackson, Polk and Johnson.

—A new counterfeit five-dollar note on the First National Bank of Hanover, Penn., has made its appearance. The paper is thin and color dark. Bank number 187, date February 20, 1864, and bearing the signature of F. E. Soinner and L. E. Chittenden. It is printed from same plate as the First National Bank of Tamqua, Penn., which made its appearance about September 20th, 1877.

For Sale or Rent.

The St. Nicholas, one of the best, neatest arranged and most popular saloons in the city, will be sold or rented very cheap. The proprietor contemplating a trip to Oregon, will sell or rent his entire stock of wines, liquors, cigars, &c., at a bargain. Also all the necessary furniture to complete a first-class establishment of this kind. Any one desirous of purchasing this stock should call immediately at the St. Nicholas, on Seventh street.

J. E. Beugnot.

Editor Courier.—As the tax-payers in De Kalb county are more or less interested in the management of the County Asylum, for the poor, and have a right to know what is being done there to make the institution self-sustaining, we make the following exhibit of the amount of grain, &c., produced upon the county farm for 1877, as shown by the report of Jonathan Rummell, Sup't. Co. Asylum, as made by him to the County Commissioners: Wheat, 330 bus.; oats, 410 bus.; corn, 4,000 bus; buckwheat, 54 bus.; beans, 42 bus.; potatoes, 400 bus.; cabbage, 4,600 heads onions, 25 bus.; beets, 44 bus.; rutabagas, 50 bus.; wool, 120 pounds. In addition to this there has been raised all the vegetables used by the inmates. Of stock on the farm at the present time there are: Horses, 4 head; Mules, 2 head; milch cows, 9 head; young cattle, 11 head; bulls, 1 head; sheep, 15 head; hogs, 20 head; number pounds pork killed during the year, 3,550; number pounds of beef, 2,174; number of inmates at the present time, 34.

Com. D.

Death of Mrs Long.

It was just week before last that we announced the death of an old and respected citizen, Mr. M. Long, Sr, and now we are called upon to do the same office. for his faithful alley and consort, Mrs. C. J. Long, who died on the 17th inst, in the 67th year of her age.

Mrs. Long was born in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, and in early life under the guidance of a christian mother, connected with the Presbyterian church, Mrs. Long grew up from a little girl as a member of the M. E. church, and for over half a century she had steadily followed the religious course, and faithfully discharged the duties of an earnest christian. The trials of her life developed that true christian spirit, and an exalted fidility and devotion seldom found in her sex. For years she patiently wrought and prayed for the redemption of her husband from dissipation, and spurned the advice, always so readily tendered, to abandon him to his fate. That was not the kind of christianity she had learned, when a little girl, from the Good Book. Her warm loving heart was a stranger to such ephemeral devotion. With a fixed purpose to do her duty, she clung to him until victory came—smiling, peaceful, happy, triumph, greater than that of Kings with conquering armies. Thus passes away one of the amiable and beautiful characters, that can be developed from the human family. Let her pure, devoted life long remain an example that others may be blessed and a good influence wrought upon society.

HERE WE ARE AGAIN.

Local Briefs Gathered Together For the Readers of the Courier.

—Cisterns are low.

—Where is Oiler's dog?

—Give us some amusement.

—We use everybody alike.

—Whooping cough in town.

—Spring elections pretty soon.

—What is a man without friends?

—The bowling alley has "shut down."

—Ask Billy Edgerton how that glove fit.

—The cisterns at the jail have gone dry.

—F. E. Davenport has erected new signs.

—The winter is certainly a conundrum.

—There are no more night mails on the B. & O.

—The western fever has seized some of our lads.

—Boys under 21 are now refused cider. Right.

—D. D. Snyder and wife will try housekeeping.

—Mich Houston put up a quantity of ice last week.

—Hook & Ladder company meeting Monday night.

—Hank Beecher is getting weak with New York society.

—There is talk of two more barber shops locating here.

—Noble county has one penitentiary bird this term of Court.

—The Song of the widow—"What is home without another?"

—Go to Kiblinger & Co's. for hard ware, stoves and tinware 4t.

—Jeff Myers was in town Monday, shaking here and there.

—Nelson Shook, at Corunna, had his leg broken Saturday night.

—Go to Kiblinger & Co's. for iron, steele and horse shoes. 4t

—They are still protracting their efforts at the M. E. church.

—Mrs. H. E. Little, of Corunna, was here on a visit last Saturday.

—Ab. Dawson's youngest child is lying very sick at this time.

—There was a good business transacted in town last Saturday.

—Mr. John Roskoff has started a barber shop in the Cool building.

—There were no services at the M. E church last Saturday evening.

—A number of Kendallville citizens started for the west last week.

—A number of boys want a temperance revival. Can they have it.

—Maggie Blair and Mrs Dilis, of Butler, have opened a millinery store.

—Our Presbyterian friends are talking of protracting their meetings.

—The order at the M. E. church is unusually commendable this winter.

—An eleven pound girl baby at the residence of Mr. Penfield, yesterday.

—Singing every Sunday afternoon at the M. E. and Presbyterian churches.

—The wood market was over run Saturday, selling for 50 cents a load.

—The boss place to buy clothing, hats and caps is at Schaab, Beugnot & Co's.

—There is some talk of Hopnix paying the balance of his fine and walk from jail.

—The Stamet's Hotel located south of the city, will be moved up town in a short time.

—Elder Ward has purchased several town lots, and will probably build on some of them.

—Some one broke one of the front windows in Mr. Basheller's Fruit Store Sunday night.

—Geo. Patterson and family have removed down the Eel River Road. Geo. will buy lumber

—A fire was discovered in the McQuiston building last Tuesday forenoon. No damage as yet.

—Mr. Strodel one of the oldest beer slingers in Fort Wayne, committed suicide last Saturday.

—Isaac Bachtel, of Corunna, and Mr. Silvers, of this place, we learn, have exchanged mill property.

—Mr. Kirkpatrick's sons, of Corunna, were in town Saturday last, guests of Mr. and Mrs. Kline.

—Some of our correspondents will forget and write on both sides of the paper. Don't do it.

—The Bryan Argus, one of the live papers of Ohio, gives a history of its town, in its last edition.

—The Detroit, Eel River and Illinois R. R. is now called the Eel River Road—owing to recent changes.

—The Turko-Russian war is about ended, and Turkey has been terribly humiliated and made desolate.

—Alex. Britton, well known among the citizens here, is gradually dying with consumption in Illinois.

—Calvin Beard, of Cedarville, was in the city Friday last, in attendance to the funeral of Mrs. Long, Sr.

—Geo. Lanning and New York Store dissolved last Saturday. He is now with his father in Easley's block.

—Miss A. O. Bodine and mother, of Plymouth, Ohio, are the guests of her relatives, Mrs. Bodine, of this place.

—We are informed that every thing that happens—to the boys—appears in Courier. That's what we are here for.

Written to the Bars.

Lady Gibson, of Newville is in jail charged with stealing wheat. This is the second time Lady has been arrested for theft. The first time he was acquitted, and the result of this arrest has not yet come.

—Germ Brown, of the Steuben Republican, gave the editors of this district away under the head of "Notes of the War." The first time we meet you, sweet Germ, we intend to baste you with a stuffed club.

—If business men were favored with better success in collecting outstanding accounts, they could help themselves pretty well. Slow collections cause them a great deal of annoyance and embarrassment.

—Treasurer Gonser lost a little girl about six months old, Tuesday morning. Soon after its death Mrs. Gonser was stricken with paralysis, on the right side, and rendered unconscious. She lies in a very critical condition.

—Down in the vicinity of Union county, Ohio, some animal, which goes about like a roaring lion, devouring sheep and pigs, has raised the hair on the whole community. It lately attacked a man and broke his leg.

—Five persons have joined the M. E. church by letter and one by probation, since the protracted meetings began. Two men baptized and received into full membership by the pastor last Friday evening.

—The Turkish war has undoubtedly given to the wheat growers of this country twenty-five cents per bushel upon their crops, to those who have sold. This illustrates the old adage, that an ill will blow somebody some good.

—We are glad to state that we were mistaken last week in the article that there was no sawmill in the city. The one at the south part of town, owned and conducted by Mr. Mitchel, is under full blast, and will continue so for the accommodation of our farmers.

—Mr. Hayes says that his overwhelming defeat in Ohio is not at all due to his administration, but to the greenback movement. "It wasn't the liquor in the punch," says the man with a head ache next morning. "It was that confounded lemon peel that fixed me."

—The Richland Township Sunday School Worker's Institute will hold its next meeting in the Lutheran church, at Sedan, on the first Monday in February, at 1:30 p. m. All Sunday School Workers are cordially invited to attend.

P. Graham, Sec'y.

—If Hayes had in time learned the lesson that honesty is the best policy, he would not now be learning the bitter one, that a Fraudulent President who seeks to conciliate favor by abandoning the principles of his party is doomed to defeat.

—Hon. O. Bird of Fort Wayne died last, Monday, after a short illness. Mr. Bird represented that county in the Senate and was always assigned a prominent influential position in all matters, whether political, social, or of a business character. One by one the Old Guard retires.

—An exchange truthfully remarks that it is easier to raise a hundred dollars for the purpose of a gold watch to be presented to somebody who does not need it, than it is to collect the same amount for some poor man, from the same persons who owe him the money.

—When a man drives through two or three good towns to get to James Anderson's shop in Auburn, to have horse shoeing done, there must be something in it. This was done Friday last by a gentleman living west of Angola. We can't blame him as Jim. is one of the best workmen in the state.

—In the olden time cheek was called a moral courage. There is nothing which adds so much to the beauty and power of a man as good, solid cheek. It is more valuable than wealth and influence. With plenty of it you can beat a bob-tailed flush and sometimes scoop the man who holds four aces.

—Petit Jurors—The following persons have been drawn as Petit Jurors, for the February term of Court:

S. Crocker,
Lewis Spangler,
Thomas Nelson,
Joseph Weller,
John Gaff,
Daniel Boardman,
Alex. Provines,
Jesse Mountz,
John Bell,
Otis S. Blood,
William Dirrim,
George Clark.

—At the causus last Thursday night Hon. George H. Pendleton, was nominated for United States Senator on the third ballot, having received four more votes on the ballot than was necessary for a choice. The selection of Mr. Pendleton is eminently satisfactory to the Democracy of Ohio He represents the Ohio idea of finance fully, and has the ability to maintain it in the Senate.

—We have an industrious carpenter in Butler who has worked all of the time since last spring and he declares that he has only received $1.50 in money for work during the whole of that time.—Butler Record.

And the same paper says, the other week: "If we had men in this town who could not pay their employes, we'd drum them out of town. "Savior hide us, &c."

—Go to Kiblinger & Co's. for your axes and cross cut saws. They are warranted. 4t

—The Venius 2 button kid glove warranted, for $1.00 at Schaab, Beugnot & Co.

—Garrett advertises for grain and then does not buy it, according to the Herald.

—Julius Young, of Edgerton, Ohio, was in the city Friday and Saturday of last week.

—A young man by the name of Chas. Antwerp was buried in the cemetery last Friday.

—The merry jingle of the sleigh bells have not yet been heard at Auburn this winter.

—We want it distinctly understood that no boys are allowed in this office except on business.

—The Democrats of Allen county elect their delegates to the State Convention February 9th.

—The average small boy makes himself scarce on first sight of the marshal, since the "belling."

—A stock company is in the process of organizing, at Logansport, to light that city with kerosene.

—Parlor and heating stoves at cost for the next 30 days, at Kiblinger & Co's. hardware store. 4t.

—Shooting matches are still the rage. We learn that Mr. Stimely, west of town, gave one last Saturday.

—The last quarterly meetings, for this year, will be held at the M. E. church next Saturday and Sunday.

—Schaab, Beugnot & Co. have the best fine cut tobacco, and also the best 5 cent cigars you can get in town

—We are in receipt of an invitation to attend a masquerade ball at Angola, this evening. Thanks Gentlemen.

—Too much Saturday night "disturbance" was the cause of one young gent wearing mourning on his nose.

—A detectives agency has been established at Fort Wayne. Capt. A. P. Kyle will be at the head of the business —Auburn is making an attempt to organize a brass band. That is right. Every town should have an organization of this kind.—Syracuse Gazette.

—The hog, grain and hay markets have been very active here the past few days. But a slight advance in prices.

—The Neoteric Club gave another hop Tuesday evening last, which was hugely enjoyed by those participating in the sport.

—It is doubtful whether the oldest inhabitant ever saw as rank growing wheat crop, at this time of the year, in this county before.

—Several hams belonging to Doctor Ford, in Houston,s smoke-house, were stolen a few nights ago. Look out for sneak thieves.

—Mortgage is a Latin word, and means "death grip." This is worth thinking of when one wants to get hold of your house.

—Everyone blames Beecher for thinking there is no hell. He has a good right to think so, fellow hearers. Reflect upon his record.

—Mrs. D. D. Moody and Mr. Wm. Ensley were baptised and taken into full membership at the M. E. church, last Friday evening.

—A lantern is a handy thing to have along with you, but you had better turn it down when you kiss a girl swinging on the gate.

Query: "Why will men smoke common tobacco, when they can buy Marburg Bros. "Seal of North Carolina," at the same price?" dec. 27.1y

—A girl-baby with three arms has been born in Michigan. This looks as though holding hair pins in the mouth might yet go out of fashion.

—Rev. Mr. Ervin delivered a sermon especially for the young folks, at the M. E. church, last Sabbath evening, which had good effect.

—When shall we have Mace Long here to deliver a temperance speech? If there are any temperance people in this town let them come forward.

—Several communications are unavoidably crowded out this week, owing to want of space, and the late hour at which they were received.

—The best is the cheapest. Dr. Bull's Baby syrup is acknowledged to be the safest and most reliable medicine for babies. Price 25 cents. Sold by F. E. Davenport.

—For coughs and colds take Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup. It has cured thousands. Recommend it to you friend and neighbor. Price only 25 cents. Sold in every drug store.

—"A friend in need is a friend indeed." Such friend is Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup for coughs, colds, &c. It only costs 25 cents a bottle, and may save many a doctor bill. Sold in every drug store.

—A freight conductor has just received a verdict of $5,000, from the B. & O. rail road company in Fredrick Maryland, for injuries recived upon the road.

St. Joe. Gossip.

—Mrs. J. D. Leighty is visiting friends at Fort Wayne, Ind.

—Mrs. Geo. Johnston and son, have gone east, visiting her father and mother.

—Mrs. J. B. Moore is visiting friends at Whitehome, Ohio.

—E. J. Hoffman, B. & O. conductor, is in town at Mr. Van Hyde's.

—Through the courtesy of A. S. Van Hyed, the passenger room at the station is kept open nights for passengers.

—An effort is being made by the citizens of this place to have the overhead bridge across the R. R. torn down, and the embankment taken away.

—In a game of base ball played by the Hoisington and Coburn town schools on Saturday, the first named came off victorious—they always do.

—The cross roads itemizer of this place for the Republican, should gather sooner, as some of his items were at least a month old. Wake up cross roads X.

—John Engle having a sore foot undertook to drive two cows home on Saturday, with what success Cross Roads can tell better than Rustic.

—Van says Jake should keep his horses out of the highway where the ladies go out carriage riding, as some people have horses high toned, and do not like to be bothered.

—Kit don't like to go unless someone pushes on the lines. Don't go too far ladies, or there is a chance that you will not get back the same day.

—Uncle Ed. is still buying hogs for Mr. Shilling. Three cars to be loaded Tuesday.

—Henry Robertson, Jerry Andrews and Cyrus Walters, were all in town with $4.00 hogs, selling at $3.50. Don't get discouraged gents., its always darkest just before day.

—We learn that Mr. Jenkens has gone out of the stock business, his first adventure not proving very profitable. We thought Uncle John had more sand.

Rustic.

Spencerville Items.

—The roads are getting better about town.

—Business dull since '77.

—The grist mill belonging to the Zimmerman estate was sold to Murray Bros. for $9,500.

—John Provines has a pet coon that attracts considerable attention among the boys.

—A gentleman from Hicksville was in town Friday last, looking up a location for a tin shop.

—The entertainment the band boys gave at Newville, was not very largely attended.

—A surprise party was held at the residence of Rev. Thos. Lancaster, at which handsome presents were made, amounting to about $20.

King's Corners.

—Weather fair and roads muddy.

—Grand game of base ball at H. Saylor's last Saturday, between Sweepstakes and Mud Legs. Sweep Stakes 23, Mud Legs 20.

—B. F. Hoyt is doing a business at blacksmithing.

—Singing school at Orangeville every Saturday evening. They talk of getting new books.

—Spelling at St. Joe Thursday evening.

—The boys from Spencerville had rather weak joints to play snap with the girls.

Bummer.

—We have received the first number of the National Reporter, published at Washington. It assumes the form of a journal only to avail itself of newspaper rates of postage.

—We are always pleased to recommend a good article. Dr. Bull's cough syrup never fails to cure a cough or cold in short time. The price is 25c. Sold by F. E. Davenport —At a "belling" in the lower part of town, last Thursday night, we learn there was considerable damage done, for which some of the boys may have to "put-up"—in the county jail.

—Some people are so given to lying that they frequently get themselves in to a very embarrassing predicament without deriving the slightest benefit. Lying is not only a wicked but also a very foolish practice.

—Dandelion flowers were plucked on Christmas, in Washington township, so Mr. Lise informs us. The oldest inhabitant has no recollection of the like.—Ligonier Banner.

—Married,—On Thursday eve, Jan. 18th, 1878, by Rev. P. Rhul. Mr. Michael Lumm, to Miss Elizabeth Hike, all of Auburn.

—The Catholic denomination at Avilla propose holding a grand fair in their new church building, commencing on the 25th of February and continuing through the week.

—All persons indebted to J. E. Beugnot by book account or otherwise, are hereby notified to call at his saloon and settle immediately, as he is desirous of closing up his business.

—Mr. Reesch's little boy, who took a "walk-off" last week, was found two and a half miles east of Avilla, and returned to his home by Mr. John Schmenk.

—Schaab, Beughot & Co's. is the place to buy your groceries. Coffee A Sugar, 10½c.; Coffee C Sugar, 9½c.; Choice dried peaches, 8½c.; Best Rio Coffee, 25c.; 6 bars of Buffalo soap, for 25 cents.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

Sheriff's Sale.

By virtue of an execution to me directed from the Clerk of the De Kalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein John M. Coombs et al are plaintiffs, and Lewis Burgett and John E. Freeburn are defendants, requiring me to make the sum of four hundred and forty dollars and fifty-five cents, $440.55, with interest on said judgment and costs, I will expose at public sale to the highest bidder, on SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 16th, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M., and 4 P. M. of said day, at the door of the Court House of De Kalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

Lots fifty-nine, 59, and sixty, 60 in Danforth's addition to the town of Butler, De Kalb county, Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said judgment, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose at public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said judgment, interest and costs. Sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation and appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
By GEO. W. MAXWELL, Dept.

Best & McClellan, Att'ys for plaintiff.
Auburn, Jan. 23d, 1878. Pr. fee $7.25.

Sheriff's Sale.

By virtue of an execution to me directed from the Clerk of the De Kalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Alra Knight is plaintiff, and John E. Freeburn, Lewis C. Burgett are defendants, requiring me to make the sum of one hundred and seventy-five dollars and fifty-five cents, $175.55, with interest on said judgment and costs I will expose at public sale to the highest bidder, on SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 16th, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M., and 4 o'clock P. M. of said day, at the door of the Court House of DeKalb county, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

Lot number two hundred and fifty-three, 253, in Egnew's third addition to the town of Butler De Kalb county, Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said judgment, interests and costs I will at the same time and place, at public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said judgment interest and cost. Sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation and appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
By GEO. W. MAXWELL, Dept.

Rose & Hartman, Attorneys for plaintiff.
Auburn, Jan. 23d, 1878. Pf. $7.25.

Sheriff's Sale.

By virtue of an Execution to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Adam P. Foltz and John F. Cannon are plaintiff, and Jared Eaton is defendant. requiring me to make the sum of forty-five dollars and five cents. $45.05, with interest on said judgment and costs I will expose at public sale to the highest bidder, on SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 16th, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m. and 4 o'clock p. m. of said day at the door of the Court House of DeKalb County, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate to-wit:

The north half of the north half of lot number ninety-three, 93, in the original plat of the town of Auburn DeKalb county and State of Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said judgment, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place, expose at public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much there of as may be sufficient to discharge said judgment, interest and costs.

Sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation and appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
By THOS. D. GROSS, Deputy.

W. H. Dills Attorney for plaintiff.
Auburn, Jan. 23d, 1878. Pr. fee. $7.25.

Sheriff's Sale.

By virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Auburn Building Loan & Saving Association is plaintiff, and Enos Kuhlman and Amand L. Kuhlman are defendants requiring me to make the sum of one thousand and sixty dollars, $1060, with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder, on SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 16th, 1878.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M. of said day, at the door of the Court House, in DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years of the following real estate to-wit:

East half ½ of town lot number one hundred and forty seven, 147, in the original plat of the town of Auburn, DeKalb county Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interests and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. StCLAIR, Sheriff,
By Thos. D. Gross Deputy.

Plum, Moody & Peterson Atty's for plaintiff.
Auburn, Jan. 23d, 1878. Pr. fee $7.25.

A LIBERAL OFFER.

Railroad fare to Ft. Wayne

FREE!

A Splendid Scheme.

For particulars enquire of your Station Agent.

SAM, PETE & MAX.

FORT WAYNE.

AUBURN COURIER.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 24, 1878.

THE NEWS CONDENSED.

THE EAST.

John F. Henry, Curran & Co., of New York, one of the largest houses in the patent medicine business, have suspended payment. The firm has been reputed worth over $500,000, but much of this was in patent-medicine rights......A heavy storm and gale occurred last week on the coast of Maine, doing much damage. At Camden trees and fences were prostrated, barns blown down and houses unroofed, the damage in the village exceeding $10,000. At Eastport forty chimneys were blown down, and several small fishing vessels went to pieces. The schooner Nightingale was ashore in Broad cove, and full of water. At Oldtown the steeple was blown from the Baptist church. Two schooners put into Seal harbor and went ashore on Norton's island. Several schooners went ashore at Tenant's harbor.

The bark Antioch, from Cuba for New York, lost five of her crew from different diseases on the voyage....Judge John R. Franklin, an ex-Congressman, died lately at Baltimore....A Harrisburg dispatch says a resolution was offered in the Pennsylvania Legislature by Representative Long, for the appointment of a joint committee of the Senate and House to inquire into the circumstances of the riots, and to ascertain the causes, as well as results of the same, and report the result of their investigation to the Legislature. A very spirited debate followed, after which a motion to indefinitely postpone the subject was carried by a small majority. Notwithstanding its defeat, the supporters of the resolution are confident of securing a reconsideration and passage within a few days. The dispatch says the resolution was offered as the beginning of an effort to make the State responsible for the payment of damages by the riots of last summer.

Another item of proof of the folly of leaving loaded firearms within the reach of children is afforded by the following dispatch from Pittsburgh, Pa.: "A terrible affair has occurred in the family of Mrs. E. Hepburn, residing at No. 867 Penn avenue. As the time to prepare supper drew nigh, Mrs. Hepburn left her two children, a boy aged 2 years and a girl of 3, in an up-stairs room, while she went to the kitchen below. She had been gone but a few minutes when she heard the report of a pistol in the room occupied by the children. Hastening thither, a terrible sight met her gaze. Her little girl was lying on the floor insensible, its face covered with blood from a pistol-ball wound in the head. The little boy, it appears, seeing a revolver lying on the table, took it up to play with it, and in doing so it was discharged, the contents lodging in his sister's head."

A Hartford (Ct.) dispatch, of Jan. 15, reports a serious railroad accident on the Connecticut Western railroad, just beyond Tariffville, about ten miles from Hartford, at 10 o'clock that evening. An excursion train returning from the Moody and Sankey meeting at Hartford fell through a trestle bridge into the Farmington river. Two engines, one baggage and three passenger cars went down. The bodies of seven men and six women had been recovered, and others were supposed to be in the wreck....Gen. George B. McClellan was inaugurated Governor of New Jersey, Jan. 15, at Trenton. About 15,000 persons assisted, the procession being quite imposing. When Gen. McClellan had taken the oath of office of Governor, and delivered his inaugural, which was frequently applauded, he returned to the Executive Chamber, when the Veteran Association of Philadelphia presented an address, signed by 2,036 members. The same party also presented him with a silver medal, made from a half-dollar picked up on the field of Antietam.

A Boston dispatch says: "Davis Brothers & Co., leather dealers, No. 73 High street, failed yesterday. Their liabilities are $800,000, half of which is secured. A large proportion of unsecured indebtedness is in favor of Boston parties. The embarrassment of William C. Childs, leather dealers, No. 21 South street, caused the failure of Davis Brothers & Co. Charles Richardson & Co., dealers in paints and oils, No. 85 Oliver street, have also failed. Their liabilities are reported to be $100,000."....By an explosion in Potts' colliery, near Ashland, Pa., four men—Henry Jones, Hugh Wilson, Walter Cosgrove, and a man named Guyer—were killed. George Scheber was severely, and two others slightly, injured.

The death of Mr. Samuel Bowles, editor of the Springfield (Mass.) Republican, occurred Jan. 16. Mr. Bowles was born in Springfield, on the 9th of February, 1826. His father published a weekly paper called the Republican in that place for many years. In 1844 the daily Republican was established, and young Bowles, only 18 years of age, became its editor. He has remained in that position ever since. He has been an active editorial worker, and a man of influence in the politics of his State.

THE WEST.

The Board of Trade of Chicago has adopted a memorial urging Congress to extend the time for completing the Northern Pacific railroad....A Bannock City (Mont.) dispatch says: "The Bannock Indians are alarmingly aggressive. Bands are roaming over the Beaver Head country, tearing down corrals, and feeding farmers' hay to their horses. The people are moving into Bannock from Horse prairie, fearing an outbreak. Several companies of troops are needed now at the head of Horse prairie, and, if we don't get them immediately, our ranches will be deserted and destroyed."

The Methodist ministers of Chicago have concluded to enter upon an interchange of views regarding the question, "How Shall We Teach the Doctrine of Future Punishment?"....State Senator Buehler, of Chicago, was assaulted lately in a street of that city, by a Bohemian named Michael Marso, who stabbed him three times with a dagger, but without fatal effect. Mr. Buehler is a banker, and the trouble arose from the foreclosure of a mortgage on Marso's property.

A Virginia City dispatch says: "Owing to the recent imbroglio between the Alta and Justice mines, a number of hired fighting men have been sent down to the level on which connection between the mines is momentarily expected to be made."

A Salt Lake dispatch says: "In November a man named Rhoden was killed by the Bannock Indians at Ross Fork, Idaho. The Indians have been threatening trouble since. The murderer was captured Jan. 9, by Capt. Bainbridge, commanding Fort Hall, since which the Indians were more hostile than before. Col. John E. Smith, of the Fourteenth Infantry, was sent to Fort Hall some time ago to induce the surrender of the murderer, but was unsuccessful. Maj. Hart, with three companies of the Fifth Cavalry, arrived at Ross Fork, and, together with three companies of the Fourteenth Infantry, surrounded the encampment of the Bannocks on Snake river, and demanded their surrender, which they acceded to quietly. Fifty-five bucks, some arms, and 250 horses were taken."....Ex-Gov. Washburn, of Wisconsin, has just made a tender to the State of his beautiful residence property at Edgewood, two miles from Madison, and valued at $100,000, as the site for an industrial school for girls....A decision has been rendered by the Illinois Supreme Court, in the long litigated matter involving the title to Christ Episcopal Church, Chicago, of which Rev. Dr. Cheney (now a Reformed Episcopal Bishop) was rector, and which was claimed by Bishop Whitehouse, on account of Mr. Cheney's heresy. The decision fully sustains Mr. Cheney.

A mine of unusual richness in gold is reported to have been recently opened a short distance from Pueblo, Col....The following notice appeared in front of Patterson & Co.'s bank at Sterling, Ill., recently: "Have done our best, but are obliged to suspend." The firm is composed of S. S. Patterson, W. L. Patterson and J. M. Patterson.

THE SOUTH.

Heavy rains have caused another rise in the Virginia rivers. The bridge over the Staunton river, on the Richmond and Danville road, just replaced, was again swept away, the third time inside of two months. An iron bridge over the same river, on the Virginia and Midland road, between Lynchburg and Danville, was also washed away. This bridge was destroyed during the great flood in November, and but recently replaced. The Roanoke river at Weldon, N. C., is very high, and the water rising six or eight inches per hour. The railroad bridges at that point are threatened.

An organization numbering 5,000 persons has been formed among the colored people of [illegible], having in view the subject of emigration to Florida. In reply to a request for advice, President Hayes has written a letter counseling against the enterprise.

An Atlanta dispatch says: The jury in the trial of the second indictment against ex-Gov. Bullock voted unanimously "Not guilty" on the first ballot. The trial lasted six days. This disposes of all the cases against the Governor except misdemeanor, to which this verdict is an admitted bar.

Hon. Wilson Primm, for thirteen years Judge of the St. Louis Criminal Court, died recently, at his home in Carondelet, from old age and general debility. He had attained 68 years. St. Louis was his birthplace....Col. Lem Meade, a prominent citizen of Northern Alabama, living sixteen miles east of Huntsville, was shot and killed lately by men supposed to be his tenants, with whom he had trouble, and whose arrest he had caused....The moonshiners in Wayne county, Ky., have repelled a Government force of thirty men seriously wounding an officer, killing a horse, and running the posse out of sight. They are very strongly organized, and announce their purpose to resist arrest.

GENERAL.

The Hudson Bay Company's bark Lady Thompson, from London with an assorted cargo, while entering Esquimault harbor, Vancouver island, ran on a rock and is probably a total loss. The bark Osmyn, from Seattle, for San Francisco, collided with the bark Aureola on the 9th inst., near Narrowstone point, Puget sound, and sunk. She was a total loss. The Aureola was slightly injured.

A San Francisco dispatch says it is believed that the American bark W. A. Holcomb, Capt. Dunton, which left Honolulu Sept. 27 for Baker's island, has been lost with all hands.

WASHINGTON.

A Washington dispatch says: "Postmaster General Key, being asked what would be the course if the anti-repudiators in Tennessee should call on him to lead them in the next gubernatorial campaign, replied: 'The campaign is a long way off—next fall—and I do not at present much expect to be called on. I am, however, known throughout the State as being bitterly opposed to the repudiation of the State debt, and, if an honest party should get into a strait, and it were thought that by running me as its candidate for Governor the cause would be strengthened, I would be greatly tempted to leave any position I might occupy, to answer the call thus made for me.'"

A Washington dispatch says: "The Committee on Foreign Affairs to-day heard Lieuts. Bullis and Shafter, the two army officers who had been summoned here from the Rio Grande border, together with the commercial agent stationed near the scenes of the troubles. Their statement is substantially the same that was made to the Military Committee. The most noticeable fact of the testimony seems to be that, while there is no doubt of the desire of Diaz to be entirely friendly to the United States, there is great doubt as to his ability to so strengthen his administration as to execute his friendly purposes."

The Attorney General, in the matter of the contest between the Pacific railroads over prorating, decides that additional legislation will be necessary to enforce the law which requires the Union Pacific to prorate with the Kansas Pacific.

POLITICAL.

George H. Pendleton has been elected Senator from Ohio to succeed Stanley Matthews.

The New Hampshire Democratic State Convention met Jan. 16, Col. Henry O. Kent presiding. The Committee on Resolutions reported a number of "planks" which may be summed up as follows: First, we cordially reaffirm the National Democratic platform of 1876; second, that we denounce upon the Republican party stern retribution for the great crime by which the people were defrauded of their right to be governed by the rulers of their choice; third, that we congratulate all good citizens upon the happy results which have ensued through the adoption of Democratic principles by the national administration in reference to Southern States; fourth, that we are in favor of a stable currency, honest payment of the public debt, and are opposed to all measures by which public credit may be impaired; fifth, we reassert our unqualified opposition to all schemes for depleting the public treasury or bestowing the remnant of public lands in aid of private corporations or monopolies; sixth, that we declare our abiding faith in the principles of the Democratic party; seventh, that we demand thorough revision and reform of the Federal tariff; eighth, that we tender our thanks to the Democrats and Conservatives in the Forty-fourth Congress for their refusal to appropriate money for the army while used in illegal and despotic oppression of citizens in any portion of the republic; ninth, that the public interests demand a thorough revision of the laws relating to taxation; and, tenth, that we demand more complete protection for the savings of industrial classes by stricter supervision and control of savings banks, insurance companies, and other institutions in which the people's money may be invested. Frank A. McKean was nominated for Governor, and Hadley B. Fowler was nominated for Railroad Commissioner.

In Memphis, Tenn., John R. Flippen, Citizens' candidate, has been re-elected Mayor by about 1,000 majority over John Johnson, the Democratic nominee, and J. W. Anderson, Workingmen's candidate....Gen. John S. Williams has been elected by the Democratic majority of the Kentucky Legislature as United States Senator to succeed Thomas C. McCreery, whose term expires March 3, 1879. In Maryland the Democratic caucus nominated James B. Groome to succeed John R. Dennis, whose term expires March 3, 1879.

THE TURKO-RUSSIAN WAR.

The cable brings news of the surrender of Antivari to the Montenegrins and of Nisch to the Servian army. The operations at these places have been on a much smaller scale than those of the Russians at Plevna, but the Turkish resistance has been no less stubborn than that which Osman offered in his Bulgarian stronghold. The places are of some local importance, but of no possible consequence in the general issue of the war....The garrison of Nisch, which surrendered to the Servians, numbered 4,000, with ninety cannon, 12,000 rifles and a number of flags....It is announced that Hakmi Pasha has been appointed Grand Vizier in place of Edhem Pasha, resigned....A telegram from Constantinople announces that the Turkish Ministry has been reconstituted, but Server and Safvet Pashas retain the portfolios of Foreign Affairs and Justice respectively....The Prince of Montenegro having applied to the Russian headquarters for instructions relative to an armistice, has been informed that he need not send an envoy, as the Grand Duke would take charge of his interests....A Pera correspondent sends the following: "The Porte has refused to allow the questions of peace and an armistice to be considered together, as it was understood that these questions were to be kept separate during the preliminary negotiations. I believe the Porte has determined that a defense of Adrianople is virtually impossible."....It is officially stated that the term of armistice proposed by Turkey is six weeks....A Constantinople dispatch of the 11th says: "The Porte has received the Russian answer to the Turkish communication proposing an armistice, intimating that the negotiations must be conducted on a basis of eventual peace conditions. The reply of the Grand Duke Nicholas to the Turkish Commander-in-Chief, that he would refer the latter's overture for an armistice to St. Petersburg, states that negotiations could only be conducted with himself direct, and that there could be no question of an armistice without a basis for peace."

A Malta dispatch says: "Vice Admiral Hornby and staff will leave on her Majesty's steamer Sultan for the Levant, whither the Alexandria and all the ships in port will follow when revictualed and refitted"....Constantinople dispatches say that refugees in large numbers are arriving there from Adrianople, and that there is great distress among them....It is reported from Constantinople that the Prince of Reuss, the German Minister, and Count Corti, the Italian Minister, have informed the Porte that if it permits the British fleet to come to Constantinople Germany and Italy will also demand permission for their fleets to pass through the Dardanelles....A dispatch from Tiflis says that, in a cavalry engagement near Boiburt, the Turks have been defeated and driven to Kopdagh. Erzeroum has been completely invested since Jan. 9.

Russia's demand that a peace basis should be determined before an armistice would be granted has been finally conceded by Turkey, and Server Pasha, Foreign Minister, and Namyk Pasha, have been appointed to negotiate, with full powers, for a peace and an armistice together.

A correspondent at Pera says it is calculated that 20,000 fugitives have arrived in Constantinople from Roumelia during one week. A train crowded with fugitives ran off the track near Tchataldja recently. About fifty were killed and wounded....The Turkish Parliament has raised a subscription for the relief of refugees....A Belgrade dispatch says: "The Servians have reoccupied Kurschumlje, which the Turks evacuated, and have taken Vranja. The Servian General, Belimarkovich, with fifty battalions, is marching on Prishtina. The Servians have effected a junction with the Roumanians before Widin. The commandant of that town has been summoned to surrender."

The Turks have bombarded the town of Theodosia, southeast of the Crimea. They burned ten houses, killed one person, and wounded twelve. They have also bombarded Anapa, on the Black sea, in Circassia, but did little damage to the town. One person was killed there....A battle is reported between the Russians under Gourko and Radetzky and the Turks under Suleiman Pasha, at a point between Tatar-Bazardjik and Philippopolis. The fighting lasted two days. Suleiman Pasha afterward took up positions near Philippopolis, and ordered the inhabitants to leave that town, which was subsequently ordered to be burned.

The Russian Government has ordered forty-two more torpedo boats at Stettin, to be completed by the middle of April....A special from Belgrade says Servia intends to claim the following peace conditions: The independence of the principality, the cession of old Servia, and indemnity for Turkish devastations in the last war.

The actual number of Turks captured at Schipka pass was 25,000, including four officers of the rank of Pasha and 280 of lower grades. Eighty-one guns were taken. The Russians lost 5,464 in killed and wounded.

GENERAL FOREIGN NEWS.

A dispatch from Berlin says Russia is negotiating with other Baltic powers for the purpose of prohibiting the war vessels of non-Baltic powers from entering that sea....Demetrius Bulgaris, the well-known Greek politician, has just died of apoplexy. He was President of the Provisional Government of Athens in 1862, later President of the Council and Minister of the Interior, and at the time of his death chief of the Greek Revolutionary Committee....The marriage of King Alphonso, of Spain, will be postponed for a few days from the date originally fixed, in consequence of the death of Victor Emmanuel.

The Blackburn (England) mill-owners have abandoned their attempt to reduce the wages of operatives....Wm. Cobbett, well-known for the strenuous efforts he made in behalf of the Tichborne claimant, fell dead in Westminster Hall, Jan. 12. He was a son of William Cobbett, the celebrated English radical politician and writer, who died in 1835....D. R. MacGregor & Co., merchants and steamship-owners at Leith, Scotland, have failed. Their liabilities range from £1,000,000 to £1,500,000. Their assets are not over £50,000. MacGregor, who is a member of Parliament for the Leith district, has resigned his seat.

The recently liberated Fenians—McCarthy, Chambers, O'Brien and Davitt—were received at Dublin with great enthusiasm, an immense crowd greeting them at the station on their arrival....Henry M. Stanley was received with much honor at Rome. A splendid gold medal, the gift of the late King Victor Emmanuel, was presented to him.

A Paris correspondent says that "circulars have been issued from the French embassy in London to all the French Consuls in Great Britain and Ireland charging them to report exact information concerning the popular feeling on the Eastern question and intervention. This confirms the report that France has interrogated Lord Derby in regard to England's intention in regard to Egypt. It will be seen, therefore, that this action of the French republic further complicates England's relations with the continental powers."

A Welsh colliery has received orders to immediately dispatch a large quantity of coal to Vourla bay for the British fleet.

A report comes from Dublin that Sergt. Charles McCarthy, one of the recently-released Fenian prisoners, died suddenly, in a hotel to which he had gone with the other three prisoners to breakfast with Charles Stewart Parnell, the Home-Rule member of Parliament for Meath....Garibaldi has written a letter to the new King of Italy, imploring him to continue the policy of his father....The average daily mortality from cholera at Mecca to the 31st of December was sixty. At Jeddah the average daily mortality was thirty-eight....Sir William Stirling Maxwell, the distinguished author, is dead.

The British Parliament assembled Jan. 17. The Queen's speech contained a brief history of England's connection with the Eastern difficulty thus far, and stated that up to this time neither of the belligerents have infringed the conditions upon which the British policy of neutrality is founded. The possibility, however, of a different phase of the situation, requiring the armed intervention of England, was plainly adverted to, and confidence expressed that Parliament would promptly furnish means to carry such measures into execution....The funeral of the late King Victor Emmanuel took place at Rome, Italy, Jan. 17, and was very impressive. The body of the late monarch was placed on the funeral car at 9 o'clock in the morning, and the procession started from the Quirinal about 10. It was headed by fifteen military detachments with three bands and clergy bearing tapers. The car used at the funeral of King Charles Albert of Sardinia, Victor Emmanuel's father, was used on this occasion. It was surmounted by an iron crown, the ancient diadem of the Lombard Kings, which was brought from Monza for the occasion.

An indication of the decline in rents at Boston is shown in the fact that one broker has rented an office on Doane street for $150 a year which three years ago was let for $1,200.

CONGRESSIONAL PROCEEDINGS.

Friday, Jan. 11.—Senate.—Not in session. House.—The substitute of Mr. Hale to Mr. Wood's investigation resolutions, as reported by the committee of the whole, being in order, Mr. Wood offered his original resolutions as a substitute. After some colloquy, they were passed as originally presented, by a vote of 111 to 107....Bills were introduced and referred as follows: By Mr. Price, to promote the deposit of savings and the refunding of the national debt; by Mr. Sapp, authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to issue coupon bonds of the denomination of $10, $25, $50, and $100 for the investment of savings....After some unimportant business, the House adjourned till Monday.

Monday, Jan. 14.—Senate.—Mr. Edmunds submitted a long amendment to the preamble of the resolution introduced by Mr. Matthews before the recess, declaring the right of the Government to pay its bonds in silver, etc. The amendment sets forth that the silver dollar of the United States had been [illegible] when the existing [illegible] of the United States were authorized; that gold coin had been the only lawful coin, and that Congress should not legislate to make money at the expense of its creditors; that it was the highest obligation of the United States to pay its debts in such coin as its creditors expected they would be paid in, and that it would be unjust to compel them, or laboring men either, to receive silver dollars or any debased money. Laid on the table and ordered printed....A large number of petitions, resolutions and bills were introduced and referred, among them the following: By Mr. Mitchell, a resolution instructing the Committee on Indian Affairs to inquire into the propriety of setting apart four large reservations for all the Indians of the country, and that the lands now occupied by them be open to settlement; by Mr. Thurman, a resolution instructing the Committee on Military Affairs to inquire whether any, and if any what, legislation is necessary or expedient to increase the annual appropriation for arming and equipping the militia of the States and Territories to correspond with the increase in population since the passage of the act of 1808, such increase to take immediate effect....Mr. Bailey then made a set speech upon the Matthew's silver resolution, after which the Senate went into executive session. On reopening the doors the Senate adjourned.

House.—Under the call of States, bills were introduced and referred, fixing rates to be paid for public advertising; providing for a commission on the subject of the alcoholic traffic; amending the revenue laws; increasing the special tax on wholesale liquor-dealers; increasing the tax on distilled liquors; repealing the law imposing a tax on friction matches, and repealing the law requiring stamps on bank checks; for the removal of the tax on deposits with State and national institutions and trust companies; restoring to either House of Congress the power to punish for contempt; to enable the Secretary of the Interior to make a final settlement with the Pottawotomie Indians; forbidding Territories to incur indebtedness in aid of railroads or other private corporations; to prevent the overloading of vessels carrying freight and passengers; to assign certain credits to the sinking fund, and to make their equivalent available for the redemption of United States notes; providing for the purchase of the best movable torpedo; authorizing the purchase of gold dust and gold and silver bullion at the mint at Denver and payment therefor by draft....A resolution, by Mr. Kelley, giving the session on Saturday, the 19th, to the woman-suffrage delegation for the presentation of petitions was rejected by 107 to 140....After some other unimportant business the House adjourned.

Tuesday, Jan. 15.—Senate.—A number of bills were introduced and referred. Among them were the following: By Mr. Dorsey, to authorize the payment of fees of counsel for the defense of poor persons in the courts of the United States; by Mr. Davis, to promote immigration to the United States, and for the protection of immigrants; by Mr. Windom, for the restoration of wages in the Government printing offices....Mr. Christiancy presented a resolution of the State Grange of Michigan, in favor of the construction of a ship canal across the lower peninsula of Michigan. Referred....At the expiration of the morning hour, the resolution of Mr. Matthews in regard to the payment of bonds in silver was taken up as unfinished business, and then laid aside informally, in order that Mr. Voorhees might address the Senate on a resolution submitted by him before the holidays, declaring it of the highest importance that the financial credit of the Government be maintained. In order to be so, the Government itself, in all its departments, should, in good faith, keep all its contracts and obligations entered into with its own citizens. Mr. Matthews, in expressing his willingness to have his resolution laid aside for the present, gave notice that he would ask the Senate to vote it on Monday next. Mr. Voorhees then addressed the Senate upon the resolution submitted by him....After the conclusion of his remarks the Senate adjourned.

House.—The following bills were introduced and referred: By Mr. Dunnell, to declare jurisdiction of the United States over harbors and navigable waters of the United States; by Mr. Blair, for the reduction of postage; by Mr. Springer, to prevent the further contraction of the currency....The House then went into committee of the whole on the state of the Union, and discussed the silver question....The committee rose and the House adjourned.

Wednesday, Jan. 16.—Senate.—At 12:30 a vote was taken on the pending question, to refer the resolution of Mr. Matthews, in regard to paying bonds in silver, to the Committee on the Judiciary, and it was rejected—yeas, 19; nays, 31....After some discussion, further consideration of the Matthews resolution was, by unanimous consent, postponed until Friday next, at 1 o'clock, to-day being assigned for eulogies upon the late Senator Bogy....At the expiration of the morning hour business was suspended, and Mr. Cockrell formally announced the death of the late Senator Bogy, of Missouri, and eulogiums were made by Senators Cockrell, Maxey, Christiancy, Johnson, Kernan, Merrimon, Sargent and Armstrong. The Senate then adjourned as a mark of respect to the memory of the Senator.

House.—A gift to the Government of Carpenter's painting of "The First Reading of the Emancipation Proclamation" was received and accepted....The Judiciary Committee reported bills to provide for stamping unstamped documents and making persons charged with crime competent witnesses in United States courts....The House went into committee of the whole and passed some internal-improvement bills....The committee rose and the House adjourned.

Thursday, Jan. 17.—Senate.—Bills were introduced and referred as follows: By Mr. Howe to punish the forcible obstruction of inter-State commerce by railways. By Mr. Ferry, providing for the classification of mail matter and rates of postage thereon....Mr. Wadleigh said that the family of the late Senator Morton found among his papers his views as a member of the special committee in regard to Chinese immigration, and he now presented such views, and moved that they be printed. So ordered....After the morning business had been disposed of Mr. McDonald submitted resolutions of respect to the memory of the late Senator Morton. Eulogies were pronounced by Messrs. McDonald, Thurman, Conkling, Morgan, Bruce, Voorhees, Edmunds, Burnside, Booth, Anthony, Wadleigh and Paddock. The Senate, then, as a further mark of respect, adjourned.

House.—Bills were introduced and referred as follows: To restrict Chinese immigration; extending the operations of the Lighthouse Board over the Illinois river....Mr. Hewitt reported a bill granting pensions to the surviving officers, soldiers and sailors (or their widows) of the Mexican, Creek, Florida and Black Hawk wars. Ordered printed....Mr. Watson introduced a bill to extend the provisions of the laws relating to soldiers and sailors of the war of 1812. Referred....The House then took up and passed the bill to make persons charged with crimes and offenses competent witnesses in United States courts....Mr. Banning reported a bill directing the Secretary of War to pay to the officers and soldiers engaged in the war with Mexico the three months' extra pay already provided for by the act of Congress. Passed....Mr. Cox reported back the joint resolution extending thanks to Henry M. Stanley, which was unanimously passed....Adjourned.

A Cat Story from Maine.

The editor of the Brunswick (Me.) Telegraph is fond of telling stories about intelligent animals, and fonder of the animals themselves. His latest contribution is found in the issue of his paper for the 28th ult., and reads thus: "Not long since, Dr. E. W. Johnson, druggist, while sitting quietly in his store, heard a scratch at his door, which he took to be that of the dog of a friend who often visits him. He did not rise for the moment, and heard the scratch repeated. He opened the door and in walked a strange cat, which looked up in a friendly way in his face. The cat roamed about the store, going, as cats do, into all the odd nooks and corners. Finally she came behind the counter, where the doctor was waiting upon a customer. Turning round he found the cat at a drawer, endeavoring to get the knob in her mouth and with both paws around it, endeavoring, apparently, to pull out the drawer. He drove the cat away, not thinking for the moment what she was after. In a few seconds pussy was again at work, and this time the doctor bethought him that she was at the catnip drawer. He opened it, threw down a handful of the herb, in the eating of which and in rolling in which the cat seemed to be in ecstasies. He gave puss a second dose, and puss had her fill, very soon after leaving the store. The doctor had never seen her before, and has not seen her since. A sick cat? In pursuit of medicine? If so, how did she learn where to go and just where to look for it? We state plain facts."

EDMUNDS TO HAYES.

The Subject of Executive Appointments Considered by the Vermont Senator.

A letter to President Hayes, from Senator Edmunds, of Vermont, in regard to official patronage has been published, in which the Senator gives his views on that important subject. Below we give the full text of the document:

United States Senate Chamber,
Washington, Dec. 29, 1877.

Mr. President: Returning from an absence from town I find your note of the 17th inst. In it, referring to a prior conversation between us in relation to the intervention of Senators and Representatives in respect to nominations and appointments by the Executive Department of the Government, you ask me to give you my views and experience on the subject. I do so with greater pleasure and freedom from the circumstance that your views and my own concerning what ought to be the independence of the Executive in making nominations and submitting treaties, and the independence of the Senate in acting thereon, are entirely in accord, and that I believe this independence would be made much more perfect if what is suggested below could be carried into practice.

In the great number of selections required to be made to fill the necessary offices in all parts of the republic, the capacity and character, and in many instances the opinions, of persons suggested for places sought to be known, and must generally be ascertained by information from some source extraneous to the Executive Department. It has not been possible generally for the President or heads of departments personally to know the propriety of a particular selection. This has naturally led to the practice of applicants for place and citizens recommending them communicating with the Executive branch of the Government through the Senators and Representatives in Congress, and reciprocally to the President and heads of departments, asking and receiving the information and sometimes the advice of Senators and Representatives on the subject. So far, I think, the process was natural and reasonable, and perhaps in a degree necessary, as the simplest and safest means of the Executive Department acquiring indispensable information. But, as in almost every kind of affair unrestricted by positive and binding limitations, a useful habit became a custom, and the custom gradually transformed itself from its true nature as a means of information into the course of practically disposing of Executive local appointments according to the judgment or the will of Senators and Representatives. They came gradually to volunteer recommendations in every instance, and the Executive Department in like manner came to receive and treat such recommendations as final, as a relief from personal scrutiny of testimonials and objections, and from much of the sense of responsibility for selections. This was evidently an abuse and perversion of the constitutional theory of appointments as well as of a salutary process in administration. The effect of this was of course not beneficial. The citizen securing the prize of office became too often the personal adherent of the Senator or member who secured him the place, and the disappointed ones became the reverse. Senators and members were sometimes influenced in their recommendations by considerations of ambition or of gratitude to those who had rendered, or were expected to render, aid to their personal aims in politics. The liberty of free political expression and action belonging to the place-holder as a citizen became also somewhat cramped and embarrassed. Perhaps still more injurious to the public interest was the entanglement of the relations between Senators and Representatives and the Executive Department. Who can measure in such cases how much of Executive action in appointment is due to a desire to secure an appropriation, or avoid an investigation, or encourage or reward a legislative or Senatorial following? Who can tell in such a case how far the Senator who votes for or against a favorite treaty or nomination, or the Representative who votes for or against an appropriation or an inquiry, has been moved directly by what has been or what is to be expected to be done or omitted by the executive branch in the direction of his wishes? I hardly need say that these things do not imply corruption in the ordinary sense on any one. They imply rather bias or prejudice and perversion of judgment arising from self-interest and absence of power and success, from which human nature is nowhere free. The distinct separation and independence of the various branches of the Government rest upon principles drawn from universal experience, and they cannot be too strongly maintained. The Senate and House of Representatives must in their respective spheres watch, and scrutinize, and deal with, if need be, every step of the executive departments, and they in their turn must administer the law as it is through proper agents free from the dictation of members of the legislative branch, and from the temptation either to yield to their domination or influence, or corrupt them by the bestowal of patronage. It may be that these suggestions are simple truisms, but they are those that cannot be too often repeated. They are stated in more general terms in the formal declarations of both the political parties of the country at their last conventions. How, then, shall we follow them? It has appeared to me that much could be accomplished in the right direction by the absolute abstention of Senators and Representatives from recommending particular appointments at all, unless their advice should be asked by the Executive Department, and accordingly, since the incoming of the present administration, I have endeavored consistently and steadily to abstain from doing so, and I believe I have kept my purpose. I have thought it consistent with this position, when applications or recommendations for place were sent me, to forward them to the proper office with a written statement or memorandum of the character and standing of the signers, if known to me, and I have thought it right, indeed a duty, whenever any of my constituents in the employment of the Executive Department have complained of its action as unjust in respect to him, to make the necessary inquiries and endeavor to rectify what should appear to be wrong. These, I think, ought to be the clear and positive boundaries in respect of appointments between the members of the two branches of the Government. I am gratified in believing that this course is satisfactory to my constituents, and in feeling that neither my official course nor that of the Executive Department, so far as I am concerned, can be affected by the influences to which I have alluded. But to have proper and fair effect, whatever course is pursued ought to be uniform, constant and universal. Any system will be radically vicious and will fail that opens the candidacy for the duties and honors of public trust to citizens of a State or section only, upon the previous knowledge of the Executive branch or the simple recommendations of private persons, while there is brought to bear for the candidates of other States and sections the powerful and personal solicitations of Senators and Representatives whose gratitude for success may be drawn upon in an emergency, or whose disappointment in failure may prejudice them against some necessary measure recommended by the Executive. It can be easily seen, too, that there would be no gain to the public welfare if the practice of following the volunteer recommendations of Senators and Representatives were to give place to the influence of private cliques or to a business of brokerage in office, as it is said has sometimes happened. It is not probable that the fitness of the persons appointed would be increased by such a change as this, and it is clear that the responsibility of the promoters of such appointments would be less, as they would be less easily ascertained, and would not have so strong motives to satisfy public opinion as those who have been elected to the House or Senate by their fellow-citizens, and who are generally supposed to desire fresh proofs of public confidence. With the vast extent of our territory and population the number of place-holders has of necessity become very great, and the means of personal or other definite knowledge of men by the executive branch has proportionally decreased, and in the same degree the evils of patronage, in whatever hands it is to practically exist, increased. I think these can be greatly mitigated by an entire cessation by Senators and Representatives whatever from advice or solicitations respecting appointments, and by the establishment by law of definite regulations respecting selections for many officers and employments, and the terms upon which they shall be held, so that the executive branch and the legislative department may be and feel perfectly free in their respective spheres, and so that the holders of office may feel also that they are the servants of the law and not the personal tenants at will in their places of either heads of departments or Congressmen. I am respectfully yours,

George F. Edmunds.

Another international marriage will probably occur during the coming year. The engagement of Miss Terry, of Fifth avenue, New York, to Baron Albert Blanc, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of Italy to the United States, is announced. The lady is of Cuban parentage, handsome and highly accomplished.

An Army of Ants.

Mr. Belt gives the following graphic account of the excitement caused by a marching column of ecitons in the primeval forests of Nicaragua: "My attention was generally first called to them by the twittering of some small birds belonging to different species. On approaching, a dense body of the ants, three or four yards wide, and so numerous as to blacken the ground, would be seen moving rapidly in one direction, examining every cranny and underneath every fallen leaf. On the flanks, and in advance of the main body, smaller columns would be pushed out. These smaller columns would generally first flush the cockroaches, grasshoppers and spiders. The pursued insects would rapidly make off, but many, in their confusion and terror, would bound right into the midst of the main body of ants. At first, the grasshopper, when it found itself in the midst of its enemies, would give vigorous leaps, with perhaps two or three of the ants clinging to its legs. Then it would stop a moment to rest, and that moment would be fatal, for the tiny foes would swarm over their prey, and, after a few more ineffectual struggles, it would succumb to its fate, and soon be bitten to pieces and carried off to the rear. The greatest catch of the ants was, however, when they got among some fallen brushwood. The cockroaches, spiders and other insects, instead of running right away, would ascend the fallen branches and remain there, while the host of ants were occupying all the ground beneath. By-and-by, up would come some of the ants, following every branch, and driving before them their prey to the ends of the small twigs, where nothing remained for them but to leap, and they would alight in the very throng of their foes, with the result of being certainly caught and pulled to pieces.—From "Our Six-footed Rivals," in Popular Science Monthly for January.

Paying the Piper.

Pennsylvania is now engaged in paying the fiddler for the music of the July dance of her rioters. A bill has been introduced in the State Legislature providing for the payment of the military for services during last summer's riots, and other attendant expenses. The amount demanded for the payment of troops is $200,000, and transportation, subsistence, quartermasters' and medical stores, $325,000. The estimates of the cost of the riots at the Adjutant General's Department exceed the above amounts about $24,000. These amounts do not include about $70,000 already paid to the three months' and independent regiments from Philadelphia. The cost of the riots, therefore, is $700,000. The cost of the Governor's train, which he used in conveying him to Pittsburgh, Scranton and other points of the State is estimated at $10,000.

British India.

A statistical abstract relating to British India, just issued by order of Parliament, shows that the area under British administration is 909,834 miles, with a population of 191,065,445. The native states comprise 573,052 miles and a population of 48,233,978. Including the French and Portuguese possessions, the total area of all India is 1,481,130 square miles, with a population of 239,978,595. Of the 191,000,000 inhabitants of British India the religious denominations are given as follows: Hindoos, 139,343,820; Sikhs, 1,174,436; Mohammedans, 40,867,125; Buddhists and Jains, 2,332,851; Christians, 897,682; others, 5,417,304, and "religion not known," 532,227.

A few days ago a teacher in one of the primary schools was instructing her lowest class in natural history. Her subject was the cat and its habits, and, as she proceeded with her remarks, she was charmed with the wrapt attention of her diminutive auditors. After her task was over she proceeded to question her scholars, in order to see how much they knew of the subject under consideration, and many were the answers—showing that she had not wasted her effort—that she received. At last she said to the smallest of her boys—a little mite with chubby cheeks and glistening eyes: "Johnny, what does your mother keep a cat for?" "To lay kittens," was the unexpected reply. The questioning for that session came to an abrupt end.

THE MARKETS.

NEW YORK.
Beeves	$7 25	@11 50
Hogs	4 40	@ 4 75
Cotton	11¼	@ 11⅜
Flour—Superfine	4 75	@ 4 90
Wheat—No. 2 Chicago	1 28½	@ 1 29½
Corn—Western Mixed	56	@ 58
Oats—Mixed	31	@ 39
Rye—Western	71	@ 72
Pork—New Mess	11 75	@12 00
Lard	7½	@ 7¾
CHICAGO.
Beeves—Choice Graded Steers	5 00	@ 5 50
Choice Natives	4 40	@ 4 80
Cows and Heifers	2 50	@ 3 50
Butchers' Steers	3 25	@ 3 50
Medium to Fair	3 75	@ 4 25
Hogs—Live	3 60	@ 4 10
Flour—Fancy White Winter	6 75	@ 7 00
Good to Choice Spring Ex.	5 25	@ 5 50
Wheat—No. 2 Spring	1 04	@ 1 06
No. 3 Spring	1 00	@ 1 01
Corn—No. 2	40	@ 41
Oats—No. 2	24	@ 25
Rye—No. 2	54	@ 55
Barley—No. 2	52	@ 55
Butter—Choice Creamery	30	@ 33
Eggs—Fresh	15	@ 16
Pork—Mess	10 65	@10 75
Lard	7	@ 7¼
MILWAUKEE.
Wheat—No. 1	1 10½	@ 1 10¾
No. 2	1 08	@ 1 09
Corn—No. 2	39	@ 40
Oats—No. 2	23	@ 24
Rye—No. 1	54	@ 55
Barley—No. 2	60	@ 61
ST. LOUIS.
Wheat—No. 3 Red Fall	1 14	@ 1 15½
Corn—No. 2 Mixed	41	@ 41½
Oats—No. 2	24	@ 25
Rye	52	@ 53
Pork—Mess	10 50	@11 00
Lard	7	@ 7¼
Hogs	3 25	@ 3 85
Cattle	2 50	@ 5 12½
CINCINNATI.
Wheat—Red	1 15	@ 1 25
Corn—New	39	@ 40
Oats	28	@ 34
Rye	62½	@ 65
Pork—Mess	10 75	@11 00
Lard	7	@ 7¼
TOLEDO.
Wheat—No. 1 White Michigan	1 26	@ 1 27
No. 2 Red Winter	1 20	@ 1 22
Corn	42	@ 46
Oats—No. 2	28	@ 29
DETROIT.
Flour—Choice White	5 80	@ 6 40
Wheat—No. 1 White	1 27	@ 1 28
No. 1 Amber	1 26	@ 1 27
Corn—No. 1	44	@ 46
Oats—Mixed	29	@ 30
Barley (per cental)	1 10	@ 1 60
Pork—Mess	11 10	@12 00
EAST LIBERTY, PA.
Cattle—Best	5 30	@ 5 60
Fair	5 00	@ 5 25
Common	4 00	@ 4 75
Hogs	4 00	@ 4 10
Sheep	3 35	@ 5 00

AUBURN COURIER.

T. C. MAYS, PUBLISHER.

AGRICULTURAL AND DOMESTIC.

Around the Farm.

"BULL BUTTER" is the not-inappropriate name bestowed by the trade upon oleomargarine.

THERE is a current paragraph—without credit, but good enough to be true—to the effect that a Connecticut farmer turned down a rank growth of clover and sowed winter wheat, which yielded twenty-seven and a half bushels per acre. A neighbor sowed the same kind of seed in an adjoining field, not fertilized with clover, and harvested—a fair crop of straw, that contained no grain.

I FOUND one of my pullets with the tips of her comb bleeding profusely, it having previously been frozen. She had become very weak. I carried her into a warm room, bathed her comb in warm water, and then sprinkled the tips with wheat flour, which soon stopped the bleeding. I kept her in a warm room for a day or two, then put her with the rest; she is now laying, and is as well as ever.—Cor. Exchange.

THERE have been many foolish things said and printed about saturating stumps with oil or saltpeter, to cause them to burn out, or to set a length of stovepipe on the stump to make a draught so as to consume it. All these plans are useless, and would fail. The practical methods are: to wait until they rot, to pull them out with a stump-puller, to dig them out, or to blast them out. This last method is the cheapest and quickest.—American Agriculturist.

HOW TO PLANT POTATOES.—My theory, which I have proved in my own practice, is this: If the soil is wet and heavy, plant shallow, and hill up heavily as the season advances; but if it is light and dry, plant deep, and hill lightly only during a wet season, or more heavily during a very dry one. The reasons are obvious. Never plant two years in succession in the same place, because the soil wants rotation, and because potato bugs always are more numerous in last year's field.—S. Rufus Mason.

AN intelligent farmer of Northern Iowa spread a light covering of straw over his newly-sown wheat, thinking that the growing grain would readily find its way through, and that during the probable midsummer drought the mulch would help the crop to mature. In this he was not mistaken, for the average on ten acres thus treated was forty bushels to the acre, while on the same kind of land adjoining, with the same seed sown, and as carefully put in, the yield per acre was twenty-two bushels. The increase was thus nearly double, while the straw was in excellent condition to turn under the past fall, and a double benefit consequently secured.

OFTEN in a fine orchard we find one or more trees leaning over so far as to destroy the beauty of the whole orchard. It is also much more difficult to cultivate around a leaning tree. This trouble may easily be remedied while the trees are young by partly digging up and replanting them. The roots will be found smallest on the side from which the tree leans; therefore, these roots should be loosened from the earth, and the tree set in a perpendicular position and carefully fastened by stakes and guys, and the earth replaced around the roots. It would be well to add some rich compost to promote their growth. If, as is very probable, the top of the tree has become one-sided, it should be pruned so as to restore the balance. In this way we have "righted up" pear trees six inches through the stem; but the best way is to look after the young trees and not permit them to depart from the way of uprightness.—Ohio Farmer.

THE bones of all animal creation are composed of three substances—phosphoric acid, lime and gelatine or glue, three of the best fertilizing substances to produce good seed. But where do the bones of animals come from? Certainly from the soil, through the grass, hay, grain, etc., consumed as food. Therefore, every horse, bullock, cow, sheep and hog sent off the farm without returning a like quantity of bone to the earth causes our land to yield less and less every year, till the land becomes what is called worn out. Beside, every load of hay and every bushel of grain sold off the farm carries away the same material, as it is the hay and grain that make the bones of cattle, horses etc. Five per centum of all plants are composed of ten mineral substances, of which bone forms a large part, and which comes directly from the earth, while the fat of the animals is composed of carbon, oxygen and hydrogen, three of the gases that plants take exclusively from the air, in the forms of carbonic acid and water, which constitute about 94 per centum of all plants.—Boston Transcript.

About the House.

COOKIES.—Three eggs, two cups of sugar, one cup of sour cream, two-thirds of a cup of butter, one teaspoonful of soda. Mix hard enough to handle easy.

NUMBER CAKE.—One cup of butter; two cups of sugar; three cups of flour; four eggs; one cup of sweet milk; one teaspoonful of soda, and two of cream-of-tartar. Flavor with lemon.

GINGER SNAPS.—One cup of brown sugar, one cup of molasses, two eggs, one cup of fried meat gravy, one table-spoonful of cider-vinegar, two heaping spoonfuls of soda, one teaspoonful of ginger. Flour enough to roll.—Mrs. Nettie Skee's.

COOKED CABBAGE.—Cut fine as for raw; put into a kettle and add water to cook until tender; then add one-half cup of sweet cream; one-half cup of vinegar, in which mix one table-spoonful of flour; season with pepper and salt to suit the taste; let it boil up and serve.

REMOVING PAINT STAINS FROM OIL-CLOTH.—A small quantity of soft soap and common soda, applied warm on flannel and carefully rubbed, will remove paint from oil-cloth, or, if not strong enough, a little (very much diluted) caustic potash will effect a clearance. The latter is very strong, and requires caution in using, not to burn or discolor the fingers.—Boston Journal of Chemistry.

TO GET RID OF BEDBUGS.—Wash the room and the furniture of the room they frequent with salt water, filling the cracks with salt, and you may look in vain for them. Salt seems inimical to bedbugs, and they will not trail through it. I think it preferable to all ointments, and the buyer requires no certificate as to its genuineness.—Cor. Exchange.

TAILOR'S CHALK FOR GREASE-SPOTS.—Tailor's chalk is one of the best things to remove grease from dresses. Simply rub the chalk on the spot and let it remain a few hours; or place the dress on the ironing-table with a brown paper underneath; cover the spot quickly with powdered chalk; place another brown paper and a warm iron over that, and let them stay until cool; brush off the chalk, and, if the grease is still visible, try again.—Household.

HOW TO CHOOSE POULTRY FOR THE TABLE.—Young, plump, well-fed, but not too fat, poultry are the best. The skin should always be fine-grained, clear and white; the breast full-fleshed and broad, the toes pliable and easy to break when bent back; the birds must always be heavy in proportion to their size. This applies to fowls. As regards ducks and geese, their breasts must also be very plump, the feet flexible and yellow. When they are red and hard, with bills of the same color, and skin full of hairs and coarse, they are old. For boiling, the white-legged poultry must be chosen, because, when dressed, their appearance is by far more delicate; but dark-legged ones are more juicy and of better flavor when roasted.—Toronto Globe.

DIRE DISASTER.

A Train Filled with Excursionists, on the Connecticut Western Railroad, Breaks Through a Bridge—Sad Loss of Life.

A Hartford (Ct.) dispatch giving particulars of the terrible railroad disaster near that city says: Over 500 residents of Winstead, Canaan, Salisbury, and other places in the western section of the State had visited the Moody and Sankey revival meeting, and embarked for home after services, leaving Hartford by a special train of eleven cars and two locomotives. The party had enjoyed a rare feast of religious communion with the great evangelists, and little did they imagine the fearful catastrophe so close at hand. There was no warning—nothing to lead to apprehension. Crossing the Farmington river bridge, one mile from Tariffville, the train was just entering upon the trestle-work stretching across the meadows when an ominous crash was heard ahead of the train. The west span, 100 feet long, on the Howe truss principle, had yielded to the overweight of two engines, and, parting near an abutment, caved into the stream, crushing through six inches of ice with which it was covered. The first engine cleared the woodwork of the bridge proper, and, turning over, landed bottom up, irretrievably damaged. Its mate went down, enwrapped in the wreck of the bridge, both landing upon solid ground, but the baggage-car crashed through the ice into six feet of water, and deposited its dozen occupants in the icy flood, mixed up with the myriad of splinters into which the woodwork was shattered. The first passenger-car was next crushed to half size. Swinging around at right angles, into its weakest spot, the side, came like a catapult upon the heavy front platform of the next car, the rear end of which remained upheld against the central pier of the bridge. The fourth car, striking its predecessor, swung off diagonally, and pitched headforemost into the chasm. This ended the crash, for the remaining cars were saved from going off by the ends of the two cars resting against the pier as described. In a moment the shrieks of women and groans of men rang out upon the piercing cold air—the shrieks of crushed, mangled beings, struggling to obtain release from the meshes into which the shock had hurled them in the ends of the overturned cars. The unhurt hastened to help the endangered, and additional aid came from the villagers of Tariffville, who were aroused by the noise of the crash. A merciful Providence preserved the passengers from the usual terrible feature of fire originating from lamps and stoves, but the occupants of the first two cars were brought face to face with death by drowning, as the cars forming their prisons settled gradually down in the water and sand. Measures for relief were well organized by a few leading spirits, and soon the workers hewed and tore away timbers with a will until, in less than two hours, every car was cleared of its living occupants, the wounded being borne away to the river bank on sledges hastily improvised from saplings and car-cushions, and thence to the genial warmth of the cars which had remained on the track, and where friends were ready to minister to their needs. Telegrams were dispatched to Hartford and Winsted for aid, and special trains arrived soon after, Hartford contributing a dozen surgeons under the excitement occasioned by the report that at least fifty deaths had happened and wounds were innumerable. The worst injured were removed to hotels and private dwellings, people throwing open their doors and offering every accommodation. Two hours later the members of the party able to travel were sent home by a special train over other roads affording connection beyond the break. Meantime search for the dead began, and five corpses of women were taken from the wreck, all having died from drowning. Further search yielded the bodies of six young men who met death in the same way, having been standing on a front platform when the car went down, and being pushed under the water. Strange to say, of an aggregate of thirteen deaths reported, all but two are by drowning, only one passenger, Fred Hotchins, and Engineer Hatch, dying from injuries usually incident to such a disaster as this. The wounded number about thirty.

Nearly all the dead were in the first passenger car, which was almost a complete wreck, although one body was taken from the second car, where it was found caught under a broken seat. Five young men from New Hartford, among the killed, were of a party of six who were on the platform of a car enjoying a moonlight ride and whistling in chorus. The only survivor of the six was inside at the time.

HORRORS OF PLEVNA.

The Frightful Scenes Witnessed by a Newspaper Correspondent.

The dispatch of MacGahan to the London Daily News, giving an account of the frightful scenes witnessed in Plevna on the entry of the Russians, a very brief extract of which was telegraphed by cable, is given in full below. It was written before the great snow-storm, which must have aggravated, in a great degree, the sufferings of the wounded and famishing men:

Plevna is full of horrors, and after the turmoil of the past few months the complete silence now seems strange and oppressive. As I rode into the town along the Lovtcha road the other evening, just after sunset, not a sound broke the dead quiet, and the only living thing I met was here and there a stray dog, which slunk away to his horrible meal among the shallow graves in front of the redoubts on the hills. With all the vivid recollections of the various incidents of the siege, the most active imagination could not picture the thousandth part of the frightful suffering, the awful misery and wretchedness, that are found within the narrow limits of the town, nor draw the faintest outline of the sickening spectacle, the panorama of ghastly horrors, that is almost unparalleled since the terrible plagues of past centuries. Human beings lying like sheep in the streets; houses filled with dead; hundreds stretching their hands heavenward for a morsel of bread or a drop of water, and no help that could be commanded to alleviate their suffering or save the wretched creatures from their painful death. Even in the midst of these scenes, which the pen of Dante alone could render, with all the terrible rhythm of the poem attracting every ear with its irresistable force—even after days of constant contact with human suffering in every form, with death in every aspect, I can scarcely bring myself to repeat the story of what has passed in Plevna since the surrender. I have become in a measure callous now to what I see every hour in the day, yet the horrors of the first few momentary impressions is still so vividly impressed upon me that I cannot refer to it without pain.

When the Turks made the sortie they left the sick and wounded, of whom there were thousands, entirely without attendants. There was never a regular hospital in Plevna, the sick being transported to Sophia, and the small ambulance corps was at all times insufficient to care for the wounded, even before the town was surrounded. Of course the attendants at the hospitals thought only of their own safety when the sortie was made, and they joined their lot with those who tried to break through the Russian lines. The day and night of the battle passed, and the sufferers received no food or water, and their festering wounds were undressed. The following morning the Russians entered and took possession, and made the day one of rejoicing with the visit of the Czar and the imperial staff; but this celebration of the event, however short it may have seemed to the victors, was a long season of horrible suffering for the wretched, helpless captives, who stretched their skeleton hands in vain toward heaven, praying for a bit of bread or a drop of water. Neither friend nor foe was there to alleviate their sufferings, or to give the trifle needed to save them from a painful death, and they died by hundreds; and before the morning of the third day the dead crowded the living in every one of those dirty, dimly-lighted rooms which served to shelter the wounded from the cold and wet, but confined them in a foul and fetid atmosphere of disease and death.

It was only on the morning of the third day after these wretched, tortured creatures had been left to their fate that the Russians found opportunity and means to begin, first, the separation of the living from the dead, and then the care of the former. The mosques, the largest houses, and many of the small dwellings had been filled with sick and wounded. Overcrowded in every sense, and, as I have before said, from the first without proper attention, these temporary hospitals were, at the best, most filthy and pestilential, and the air was tainted with the stench of undressed wounds, and the corpses that lay unburied in the court-yards.

The first room entered in one of these charnel-houses contained ninety-odd Turks. Of these thirty-seven were dead, and many others on the point of death. Piteous groans came from between rigid lips, and painful cries for water, and some made feeble signs for food. One or two of the strongest raised themselves, and fixed their hideous, sunken eyes with such a beseeching stare on those who had come to free them from the company of the dead, that it would have softened the hardest heart. The small room, dimly lighted by a high window with one pane of glass, was crowded with the forms of thirty or forty ragged, filthy human beings. Many of these forms were motionless, and scarcely audible groans were heard from one or two who raised with difficulty their bony hands to their lips, to signify their need of food. There were faint whispers of "Some water!" "Some water!" piteous to hear. The dim light was concentrated on the half-naked body of an old man stretched across the entrance, whither he had dragged himself in the last hours of his agony in hope of succor, or at least of a breath of fresh air; for in the unventilated room the air was thick with putrid odors, which burst out when the door was opened, overpowering strong men, and causing them to turn sick and faint. The old man's hands were clutched in the rigor of painful death on his nude and meager breast, and his head lay against the very crack of the door, so that it opened only by rude force. Living and dead were lying together undistinguishable along the walls behind the door and under the window. This room is one of fifty where a similar spectacle is presented. The pavement of the mosques is covered with crouching forms, some moving at intervals, others motionless and silent. Here and there the faces of the dead come out in ghastly relief, with a fixed expression of great agony.

Three open oxen-carts began the removal of the dead at once, and as I write the work still goes on. The hospitals daily supply more freight of this kind than the slow-moving teams can carry away to the ditches outside. The disinfection of the hospitals was promptly effected. As fast as possible with the small force of men at hand the rooms were emptied one after another. After a day or two some of the Bulgarians were compelled to serve in place of the soldiers, and they set themselves about the hated task with a brutality terrible to witness. They drag the bodies down the stairs by the legs, the heads bumping from step to step with sickening thuds, then out into the court through the filthy mud, where they sling them into the cart with the heads or legs hanging over the side, and so continue to pile up the load with a score of half-naked corpses.

It is horrible to hear the conversation of the men who do this work. They perhaps bring out a body still warm, the heart still beating, and the flush of life on the cheek. One says, "He is still alive," and proposes to leave him without stopping to decide the question. The others cry, "Devil take him! He will die before to-morrow, any way. In with him!" And so the living goes in with the dead, and is tumbled into the grave. I have seen this myself, and the man who has charge of the disinfection of the hospitals and burial of the dead told me that he doubted not that such cases occurred several times daily. When the three carts are full they start away through the streets toward the ditches outside the town. The horrible load jolts and shakes, and now and then a body falls out into the mud and is dragged into the cart again, and thrown down and jammed in solidly to prevent a recurrence of the accident. This heartless proceeding goes on in the public streets, crowded with the men, women and children of the place, the soldiers, the wounded and the sick; and, after so many days of the same spectacle, no one any longer pays any attention to the transport of the dead. Over a thousand have been already carted away, and from the hospitals come about 100 daily.

I have given but a slight outline of the scenes that have passed before my eyes since I came here. A long detailed account alone could give anything like an idea. Along the streets are frequently seen one or two wounded who have crawled out from the hospital and are dying in the mud. Out on the plain near the bridge over the Vid are bivouacked 15,000 or 20,000 prisoners, fighting for bread, miserable beyond description, in the cold, with hundreds of unburied dead covering the ground near the spot where the first attempt was made to break through. The story of the hospitals, of the prisoners, and of the Russian disasters, all hang on one thread. But the horrors of Plevna are not all in the town. Some are in the valley of the Vid. In the redoubts which the Russians stormed, hundreds on hundreds of still-unburied bodies lie; the whole ridge of the wooded mountain, the valley beyond and the hill further on, where stand the two redoubts overlooking the town taken with terrible loss by Gen. Skobeleff on Sept. 30, are strewn thickly with the corpses of the Russians who fell on those days. Some of these bodies have been partly covered with four spadefuls of dirt, but most of them lie as they fell. Not all as they fell, for the dogs have torn away the limbs of many, and the birds of prey have pecked at the skulls. In the pools of water lie corpses half decayed; pale, withered hands and feet stick out of the soil on all sides, and horrible dead, mummified faces stare at one from every little hollow in the ground, and from among every clump of bushes. Some of these bodies have been put in graves within a day or two, but still the whole region is strewn thickly with these dreadful mementoes of the fight there nearly three months ago.

Around the redoubts the ground is furrowed and dug with thousands of shells, and tons of pieces cover the earth. It is interesting to observe how few shells went into the redoubts, or struck the edge of the redoubts. The majority plunged into the ground just in front. The Turks built great transverses across the redoubts, and, under these, dug deep bomb-proof shelters, where they were as safe from harm from the shells as in Constantinople; but the whole surface of the hills is literally riddled with holes large enough to bury horses in, and all about lie great unexploded shells. Even away back in the ravines where the soldiers' huts are, bullets, fragments of clothes and equipments cover the ground; and one frequently finds, in the most unexpected spots, long-unburied bodies, or, sodden in the path, one sees the limbs of human beings who fell and were left there until many feet passing trod hard the thin layer of earth over them.

Plevna is one vast charnel-house, surpassing in horror anything that can be imagined.

A Desperate Case.

During the cholera epidemic that lately visited Bangalore, in India, a gentleman holding a high official position in that city was one morning informed that his horsekeeper had been seized with the dreaded disease. He at once sent for the doctor, who found the patient in a state of coma, and pronounced the case to be desperate. Disinfectants were profusely sprinkled throughout the house, and every precaution was taken to prevent the spread of the disease to the other inmates. The unfortunate man was himself tenderly removed to Bowdon Hospital, where the usual remedies were applied without producing any effect, for the patient still remained insensible. At last, his situation appearing hopeless, it was thought better to desist from further attempts to kindle the faint spark of life that was rapidly dwindling. Late in the night, however, to the surprise of the hospital attendants, the patient suddenly recovered consciousness, and in strong voice and language demanded to know "where he was." He was informed that he had been ill with cholera and was now in hospital, and was implored to remain perfectly quiet as his only chance of recovery. "Ill with cholera!" he shouted indignantly; "I have only been drunk;" and, to the consternation of the doctor and his employer, who had given him up for lost, this statement turned out to be true.

BEN HILL, on being asked to address some Alabama editors, answered: "I really desire to address a press association, because there is no power in this country capable of doing so much good, and really doing so much evil, as the press of this day."

ITALY.

Death of King Victor Emmanuel.

Victor Emmanuel, King of Italy, died on the 9th of January at Rome, aged 58 years. He was the eldest son of Charles Albert, and was born in Turin in 1820. The modern history of his family is a brilliant one. In 1813 Victor Amadeus II., Duke of Savoy, was, by the treaty of Utrecht, made King of Sicily, but in 1820 was compelled to exchange Sicily for Sardinia, and became the first King of Sardinia, and his branch of the family ran out in 1831 and was succeeded by the younger line of Carigan in the person of Charles Albert. This Prince strongly favored the unifacation of Italy, and, in 1840 granted a liberal constitution to several states in this kingdom. This involved him in a war with Austria. After a defeat in July, 1848, at Custozza, a truce was agreed upon, but in March, 1849, the war having been renewed, the King was defeated at Novarra, whereupon he abdicated and left Italy. Victor Emmanuel succeeded as King of Sardinia, and though compelled to make peace he adhered to his liberal policy and never lost sight of the great end, the unification of Italy. He called to his Cabinet Cavour and other leaders of the constitutional policy, and liberalized the internal government of his kingdom, and established commercial relations with other states. He joined France and England in the Crimean war. In 1859 Austria declared war against the aggressive Italian, who, with France as an ally, reconquered Lombardy, and the credit of the King as a soldier and a statesman was general. His policy of a united Italy made him the popular hero throughout all Italy. In 1860 Cavour was again placed at the head of the Ministry, and soon after Parma and Modena were annexed to Sardinia, and Tuscany also voted to be annexed. Nice and Savoy were ceded to France in 1860. An insurrection in Sicily in 1860, under Garibaldi, resulted in the expulsion of Francis II., and in October the Two Sicilies voted for annexation to Sardinia, and Victor Emmanuel entered Naples as King in November, 1860. Umbria and the March of Ancona soon after joined Sardinia, and, at the opening of 1861 he was sovereign of all Italy, save Rome and Venetia. Count Cavour died in 1861, but his successors continued the same policy. Negotiations were opened with the Papal Government for a peaceful reconciliation and for the annexation of that city, but all offers were rejected. The city of Rome had been occupied by French troops from 1849. The first Parliament of the new kingdom of Italy met at Turin, Feb. 18, 1861, which was opened by a speech from Victor Emmanuel, and an act was passed conferring upon him the title of the King of Italy. The Government was under an obligation with France not to disturb the Pope in his authority, and the capital of the kingdom remained at Turin until 1864, when it was removed to Florence. The King succeeded in establishing many and general reforms. As the local government of the various States had been more or less under ecclesiastical control, the establishment of an exclusively civil government was a work of difficulty, and constantly brought the Government into conflict with the church, but the work of separating church and state went on thoroughly and completely.

In 1866 Italy united with Prussia in the war against Austria, and a result of this war was the cession of Venetia to Italy.

In 1870, in consequence of the Franco-Prussian war, the French troops evacuated Rome, and the demand for the incorporation of that city into the kingdom was revived. All overtures to the Pope were rejected, and in September, 1870, the city was occupied by Italian troops. A plebiscite resulted in the annexation of Rome by an almost unanimous vote. The Italian Government made what are known as the guarantees for the protection of the Pope and for the support of the Papal Government. Italian unity was now complete; a new National Parliament was convened; the capital was removed to Rome, and on the 1st of January, 1871, Victor Emmanuel entered Rome as King of all Italy. There has been no official or political reconciliation between the Papal and the Royal Government, the Pope submitting, as he claims, to superior force, and protesting against all the acts of the Government since 1860, and especially against all the legislation disestablishing the church. The Pope has further protested that he is held as a prisoner in his own city.

A Noble Temperance Martyr.

Nine o'clock a. m.—"I lay my hand on my heart and forever forswear the use of intoxicating beverages."

Ten a. m.—"No, thank you. I lay my hand on my heart and forever forswear the use of intoxicating beverages."

Eleven a. m.—"Nuck, drink, drink. Laid my han' on m' heart 'smorning, an' forever forswore the use of intoxicating beverages."

High noon.—"Norra it. Laid my han' on my heart 'sh morning, and frever forswore th' use of intoxicating beverages."

Two p. m.—"Firsh time doeshn't count. But 'sh morning laid m'—hic—hand ommy heart, and forever forshwore use of intoxicating bevalages."

Four p. m.—"Settemupagain! Thish last time. Lay my han nommy—hic!—heart, and fullever foshwear uge of intoxicated bellavages."

Ten p. m.—"Lamrod, fill th' fuf—fuf—hic—fuf—flowing bo—hic!—owl! He'sh jolly goo' fuf—feller! Lesh fellever f'shwear uge of tockshicadel bevageler."

Eleven p. m.—"Whoop pee! I'm al' ri'! 'Smatter 'th you? Nev' mind bootsh; allus shleep 'ith 'em on. Lesh f'ever f'shwear hic!—tocksh—f'shwear tockshy—tocksh—tocksheed!—"

(The bell strikes 12. Mr. Duffy takes no note of time.)—Burlington Hawk-Eye.

A Meerschaum that May Be Colored in Thirty Seconds.

Devoted young men who spend months and injure themselves with excessive smoking, in coloring meerschaum pipes, may thank a philanthropic Frenchman for accelerating the process, obviating some of the expense, much of the annoyance, and, possibly, some of the dangers of the operation. He soaks a pipe of common porous clay, worth a few cents, in a mixture of ether and alcohol, to which a little rose essence is added, and in which 10 per is dissolved cent. (by weight) of camphor and 10 per cent. of borax or other flux. With this is combined a trace of nitrate of silver. The advantages of this treatment are that the pipe is made to look like meerschaum and to have a fine gloss; the smoke, perfumed by the rose and camphor, is agreeably aromatic; the pipe is cheap, and it will color nicely, either by smoking or exposing it to the light. In the latter instance, thirty seconds' exposure is stated to be quite sufficient.

ALL SORTS.

THE mourning color of the Turks is blue.

MANITOBA lands are advertised at 63 cents per acre.

A PRINTER at La Crosse recently fell heir to $75,000.

A LOUISIANA planter killed 1,960 snipe on the wing in six days.

THE next Georgia Legislature will have but one colored member.

WHEAT all over Kentucky is looking green as in the merry month of May.

A PLAYFUL horse in New York bit a gentleman's ear off in the public street.

THE cackling of geese saved a house in Annapolis, Md., from being burglarized.

ALL Queen Victoria's married children have issue except the Marchioness of Lorne.

A BERLIN firm is making a number of telephones for experimental use by the Russian army.

GUILFORD, Ct., claims the oldest house in New England, built in 1639, and still in good preservation.

A LONDON firm has introduced a hunting biscuit, containing in a small compass a great amount of nutrition.

THERE are 1,500,000 bushels of corn in Southern Indiana and Illinois to be moved within the next month or two.

THE young King of Spain proposes to guard himself against military uprisings by being the commander of his own army.

HEREAFTER no person can vote in Maine unless he has paid a poll tax within two years of the time when he offers his ballot.

TWENTY-TWO towns in Texas are organizing companies and making preparations to build the roads to connect them with the trunk lines.

THE birth rate in Georgia since 1863 among the whites has been a little more than 30 per cent., and among the blacks a little more than 50.

FOR THE HOLIDAYS

LORD & TAYLOR

NEW YORK.

WE INVITE ATTENTION TO THE FOLLOWING DEPARTMENTS OF OUR ESTABLISHMENTS. THE LOW PRICES AT WHICH OUR GOODS ARE MARKED, HAVE SPECIAL REFERENCE TO THE HOLIDAY SEASON, AND BARGAINS WILL BE FOUND THROUGHOUT THE HOUSE, THIS SEASON'S IMPORTATIONS GIVING US AN UNEQUALED STOCK OF GOODS.

BLACK SILKS,

handsome and durable, all widths $1.00 to $3.50. The GREAT AMERICAN INDESTRUCTIBLE SILK, $1.20, $1.25, and $1.50.

PLAIN COLORED SILKS,

new shades, commencing as low as 75c. per yard, and at $1.00, same as quality of last season at $1.25.

Fancy Broche and Damasse Figures of the new Paris shades, from $2.00 upwards. Trimming Satins at $1.00, worth $1.25.

THE PRICES AT WHICH WE OFFER OUR SILKS ARE ONE-QUARTER TO ONE-THIRD LESS THAN LAST SEASON.

☞ A SILK DRESS IS A HANDSOME HOLIDAY PRESENT.

IN DRESS GOODS

there is richer display of colorings and brilliant effects this season than for many years past.

The mixed COSTUME CLOTHS range in price from 50c. a yard to $3.00, and on low-priced DRESS GOODS, from 10c. a yard up, many of them being as effective as the heavier fabrics.

Shawls, Mantles and Wraps.

India Valley Cashmere Shawls from $100.00 up. India Filled Centers at $20.00 and up.

Real Dacca, Chedda and Striped India Shawls, new designs, from $10.00 upwards. Also, full lines British, French and German Shawls in beautiful new styles, of the best and most reliable manufacture. Paris Mantles and Cloaks of the latest modes from $15.00 up, and Berlin from $[illegible].

Ladies' and Children's Suits and Fine Under Clothing.

These departments embrace everything pertaining to Female Costume, suited to all ages and circumstances. For full particulars see catalogues.

HOSIERY.

Ladies', Misses', and Children's Hosiery from $1.50 a dozen, up to the finest goods. All the newest and prettiest designs in Hosiery are represented in our stock in Silk, Cotton and Merino.

FURS.

Alaska Seal Sacques, from $65.00 up.
Alaska Seal Muffs from $6.00 up.
Alaska Seal Boas, from $6.00 up.
Mink Muffs and Boas, from $12.50 a set, upward.
Silk Fur-lined Garments, from $25.00.
Alaska Sable Sets, from $7.50.
A good set of Furs as low as $5.00.

☞ A SET OF FURS IS A SUITABLE AS WELL AS SEASONABLE HOLIDAY PRESENT.

GENTS' FURNISHING.

DRESSING GOWNS, SMOKING JACKETS AND CAPS, SCARFS, TIES, UMBRELLAS, GLOVES, AND OTHER ARTICLES FOR GENTLEMEN, SUITABLE FOR THE HOLIDAYS TO WHICH THE ATTENTION OF LADIES IS INVITED.

GLOVES.

Kid, Silk, Lisle Thread and Merino Gloves of the new colors and shades, in great variety.

Lord & Taylor's Kid Gloves, 2 buttons, warranted, at $1.00 per pair, price last season $1.50.

ALSO,

Lace, Cambric, Linen and Silk Handkerchiefs, and beautiful Neckerchiefs, all prices from 25c. upward, and all kinds Dress Trimmings to match our goods.

☞ Our Goods are all first-class. We make a point to fill all orders exactly and to the interest of purchasers. We guarantee all purchases to be satisfactory to buyers, and stand ready to remedy all errors. We invite orders, convinced that a first trial will insure us the regular custom hereafter.

Catalogues of our entire stock sent to any address on application.

All orders for Goods to be accompanied by the money, or where parties wish Goods will be sent by Express, C. O. D. Where the remittance is too large, we always return the difference.

Broadway & Twentieth St.
Grand, Chrystie & Forsyth
Streets, N. Y.

DAVENPORT THE DRUGGIST

Would call the attention of the public to his splendid stock of

PURE DRUGS AND MEDICINES!

Which have been selected with especial refference to the wants of this locality, and warranted fresh and genuine. Also to his fine stock of

HAIR OILS AND PERFUMERY.

The finest in the county. He also keeps a full stock of

Toilet Soaps, Face Powders, Combs, Brushes, Sponges, etc. Also Trusses and Supporters, in large varieties and a full Stock of DRUGGIST'S SUNDRIES.

SCHOOL BOOKS WALL PAPER AND CURTAINS!

The largest and most complete stock in Northern Indiana. Be sure to call on

DAVENPORT.

His stock is very complete and PRICES WAY DOWN. Also a fu line of.

GOLD PENS, ALBUMS, POCKET BOOKS, BLANK BOOKS, INK and STATIONERY.

Be sure and call on

DAVENPORT, THE DRUGGIST,
AUBURN, IND

FRUIT HOUSE PRICES!

Great Reduction on Sugars

All grades reduced 1 cent per pound; the lowest they have sold for fifteen years. Best white coffee sugar 10c, best coffee C 9c, choice yellow sugar 8c.

An immense stock of all goods for

CHRISTMAS AND NEW YEARS!

Candies, Nuts, Toys, Liquors and Cigars.

TEAS!

Fifty more chests of the choice 40c tea and 40 chests of the good 25c tea. We sell large amounts of these two teas; being good drawers, strong and well flavored. We now sell more chests of tea in a month than we used to in a year, and this comes simply from our purchasing direct of the importers and selling direct to our customers, thereby saving the profit of the middle men, which is 20 to 40c on the pound.

Young Hyson Tea,	25, 50, 70, best 90 cents per pound
Gunpowder Tea,	60, 70, best 90 cents per pound
Imperial Tea,	40 60, best 90 cents per pound
Oolong Tea.	25, 60, best 70 cents per pound
Japan Uncolored Tea.	35, 50, best 70 cents per pound

COFFEE! COFFEE!

Our Best Rio, 22 cents. Good Fine Rio, 20 cents. Old Government Java, 30 cents.

SYRUPS.

Cuba 40 and 50 cents. New Orleans, 50 and 75 cents White Drips, 75 cts. and $1.

RAISENS, and ZANTEE CURRENTS for CHRISTMAS CAKE, CITRON, LEMON and ORANGE PEEL.

Valencia raisins per pound 6c, Best layers raisins 12½c. Zantee currents 9c Leghorn citron 25c. Orange and Lemon peal 30c,

CANDIES.

Toy candies of all kinds. Stick candy per pound 15c. French mixed 18c, Toy candy all sorts and varieties 30c. Toys for Santa Claus from a penny whistle to a nice album to make presents with a thousand different things to amuse the little ones—Dogs, cats, rats, mice, birds, elephants, lions, tigers, drums, wagons, horses, Chineese lanterns, pistol caps, &c., something for every little one in the country.

And for Christmas tree candles we have a large assortment of every color, from ½ cent to 2 cents each or 50c per box.

OILS. OILS. OIL!!

Coal Oil per gallon, 20 cents. Headlight Oil per gallon 25 cents. Lard Oil, per gallon, $1.00
Fish Oil per gallon, $1.00. Best Golden Machine Oil per gal. 70c. Machine Oil per gal. 30ct

Nut for Christms and New Years.

Brazil nuts 10c. Filberts, quart 15c. Almons, qurrt 25c. English walnuts, quart 15c. Pecans, quart 12 1-2c. Roasted pea nute quart 5c.

Liquors of all Kinds for Medical use Whisky, Rum, Brandy, Gin, Wines and Ales.

Good old bourbon $1 and $1.25. 2 years old $1.40 and 1.50. Best old 76 for medical use $2.50. Sherry Wine as good as any in the country $1.50. Port wine best in the market $1.50. California Angelica wine best $1.50. Gin $1.50 and $2.50. Dublin and London Porter 22c. Scotch 22c.

TOBACCOS AND CIGRS-

A No. 1 smoking for 30c per pound. Choice fine cut 50c per pound. No. 1 Plug Tobacco 50c per pound.

We have a large assortment and can sell a good cigar at $1.25 per box. And a choice No. 1 cigar for $1.75 per 100.

FRESH OYSTERS LOWER THIS YEAR THAN MEAT—We sell a fine Oyste at 12½. No. 1 full count saloon oyster 20c. Large A standard 30c.

You can save at least 25 per cent. on the dollar at the

Fruit House, Fort Wyne, Ind

BOOK STORE

WILLIS &CO.!

Successors to C. P. Houser, having purchased the above named stock, we wish to say to the people of Auburn and vicinity that by the patronage that we hope to merit, we expect to build up a first-class

BOOK AND NEWS STORE,

that will be a credit to the place. We are adding a large variety of goods, and shall endeavor to keep on hand the novelties of the season. We solicit orders for

Books, Magazines, Papers, etc.,

which will be furnished promptly at the publishers prices by

WILLIS & CO.

October 11 '77—

CARPETS

ELLSWORTH, ANDREW & Co.,

Offer a large and choice stock of Carpets in all the newest designs.

Body Brussels Carpets,
Tapestry Carpets,
Ingrain Carpets,
COTTON CHAIN CARPETS,
HEMP CARPETS,
RAG CARPETS.

Terry's Reps, Cretonnes, Lace Curtains, Shades, Wall Paper, Stair Rods.

OIL CLOTHS,

Mattings, Rugs and Mats, Druggets

And all goods pertaining to the carpet and upholestry business,

Lambrequins

A Specialty.

Prices Low to Compete with the Times

ELLSWORTH, ANDREW & CO.
26 East Berry Street
Fort Wayne, Indiana

BOSS HARNESS SHOP

I have purchased the harness stock of Geo. Nock, and added largely to every description of stock that is usually kept in my line of trade, such as

HARNESS, DOUBLE AND SINGLE!
Buffalo Robes, Lap Robes,
Horse Blankets, Collars,
Whips, Brushes, Combs,
Harness Oil, Axel Greese,
Fine Ready-made Harness,
Double and Single a Specialty.

Manufactured by the most experienced workmau that can be found in Northern Indiana, I employ none other, none other neee apply. I would say to all customer frends that I will warrant ad stock and work that goes out of my shop as recommended. I usl none but the best Oak tanned Leather. I would invite all in need of goods in my line to call at my shop before purchasing elsewhere Shop in Flukes old Tannery Building on corner Jackson and seventh St. As I am bound not be undersold in the same class of goods in Northern Indiana

Being an old farmer formily I keep a very effable experienced Foreman to see that all work is well done. Repairing done with neatness and dispatch.

J. E. SHILLING, Sole Proprietor.
W. SHEFFER, Foreman.

JOHN L. DAVIS,

OF THE

PIONEER HARDWARE STORE,

Would respectfully announce that he has made large additions in every department, and is prepared to turnish everything in the Hardwase line.

He keeps a full stock of

BUILDING MATERIAL.

Whichhe can sell at prices to suit the times. All kinds of

STOVES and TINWARE

on hand. He keeps a first-class TINMR and prepared todo all kinds of Eaves Trough hangnig Roofing, on short notice, and in a workmanlike manner.

MAIN STREET, OPPOSITE COURT HOUSE AUBURN, IND

$200.000.

GREATEST In order to clear out our stock of very superior Gold-plated Jewelry valued at over $200,000, we will send as below, 20 Pieces, all warranted Gold-plated for $1.00. 1 pair Gold Stone Sleeve Buttons; 1 pair Engraved Sleeve Buttons; 1 set Pointed Studs; 1 set Amethyst Studs; 1 Wedding Ring; 1 Engraved Band Finger Ring; 1 Amethyst Stone Ring, Inlaid with Gold; 1 Elegant Ring, marked "Friendship;" BARGAIN 1 Amethyst Stone Scarf Pin, Inlaid with Gold; 1 Silvered Hat Pin; 1 set Ladies' Jet and Gold Pin and Drops; 1 Misses' set Jet and Gold; 1 Collar Stud; 1 set Handsome Rosebud Ear Drops; 1 Gents' Elegant Lake George Diamond Stud; 1 Cardinal Red Bead Necklace; 1 pair Ladies Amethyst Stone Ear Drops, EVER Inlaid with Gold; 1 Ladies' Ornamented Jet Brooch; 1 Fancy Scarf Ring and Elegant Watch Chain. Take your choice, the entire lot of 20 pieces, sent Post-paid for $1.00 or any 8 pieces you choose for 50 cents. Now is the time to make money. These can easily be retailed at $10.00. CLUB PREMIUM. To any OFFERED one ordering 12 Lots at $1.00 each, we will present Free, an Open Face Coin Silver Watch as Premium. WATCH AND JEWELRY CIRCULAR FREE.

NOTICES OF THE PRESS.

Our cotemporary, the Boston Globe, speaks very highly of both advertiser and goods as being honorable in his dealings, and reliable in his goods, a commendation we heartily endorse.—St. Louis Dispatch, December 7, 1876.

The house is a thoroughly reliable one in every respect.—Boston Globe, Oct. 25, 1876.

His reputation for honesty, fair-dealing, and liberality is unequaled by any advertiser in this city.—N. Y. Day Book, December 10, 1876.

Advertises more and sells cheaper than any man in New York.—Herald, April 13, 1877.

F. STOCKMAN, 27 Bond Street, New York.

DOWN! DOWN! DOWN!

FROM 10 TO 25 PER CENT.

—o—

HARNESS, SADELES,

COLLARS, WHIPS, &c.,

At my new shop on seventh street, opposite Court House, in old Post Office building. Come and see me and I will sell you a good article for less money than you ever heard of before. All work warranted.

G. RHODENBAUGH

DAY'S AGUE TONIC

CURES EVERY FORM OF CHILLS, OR MONEY RETURNED.

DAY'S TONIC Cures Chills and Fever.
DAY'S TONIC Cures Dumb Chills.
DAY'S TONIC Supersedes Quinine.
DAY'S TONIC Cures Old Chronic Chills.
DAY'S TONIC Is pleasant for Children.

DAY'S TONIC Cleanses the Stomach.
DAY'S TONIC Acts on Liver and Bowels.
DAY'S TONIC Don't Buzz the Head.
DAY'S TONIC Don't contain Quinine.

DAY'S TONIC

Is a new innovation, and possesses advantages heretofore unknown and unclaimed by others.

It does not contain Quinine or any poison; it does not produce buzzing or roaring in the head, which follows the use of Quinine; it is retained by delicate stomachs; it acts upon the liver and bowels without the use of any other medicine; it never fails to cure, and our agents are authorized to return the money in each and every case of failure; one bottle will cure two cases. Try it and see. Sold by all Druggists at $1.00.

J. P. DROMGOOLE & CO., Proprietors, Louisville, Ky.

RAILROADS.

Lake Shore & Mich Southern R R

AIR LINE DIVISION.

On and after Nov. 19 1877, trains will run as follows:

GOING WEST

	Special Ex.	Pacific Ex.	Accm.
Toledo	11 05 a m	12 01 a m	5 30 p m
Wauseon	12 12 "	1 07 "	6 25 "
Bryan	12 50 "	1 50 "	7 54 "
Butler	1 35 "	2 29 "	8 28 "
Waterloo	1 50 "	2 40 "	8 57 "
Sedan	"	"	"
Corunna	"	"	9 15 "
Kendallville	2 15 "	3 05 "	9 30 "
Ligonier	2 55 "	3 40 "	"
Goshen	3 28 "	4 12 "	"
Elkhart	3 50 "	4 35 "

GOING EAST.

Elkhart	1 10 p m	9 40 p m	"
Goshen	1 28 "	10 10 "	"
Ligonier	1 58 "	10 42 "	"
Kendallville	2 33 "	11 17 "	6 00 a m
Corunna	"	"	6 15 "
Sedan	"	"	"
Waterloo	2 57 "	11 45 "	6 38 "
Butler	3 12 "	12 01 a m	6 52 "
Bryan	3 45 "	12 40 "	7 38 "
Wauseon	4 25 "	1 25 "	8 34 "
Toledo	5 40 "	2 40 "	10 00 "

CHAS. PAINE, Gen. Supt.
J. W. CARY, Gen Tic. Agt
J. R. CURTIS, Division Su

Pittsburg, Ft. W. & C. R. R

Condensed time card Nov. 11, 1877.

GOING WEST.

	No 1 Fast ex.	No. 7 Pac. ex.	No. 3 Nigh ex	No 5 Mail.
Pittsburgh	11 45 pm	9 00 am	1 50 pm	6 00 am
Rochester	12 53 am	10 15	2 54	7 45
Alliance	3 10	12 50 pm	5 35	11 00
Orrville	4 45	2 26	7 12	12 55 pm
Mansfield	7 00	4 40	9 20	3 11
Crestl'e ar.	7 30	5 15	9 45	3 50
" lv.	7 50	5 40	9 55
Forest	9 25	7 55	11 25
Lima	10 40	9 00	12 25 am
Ft. Wayne	1 30 pm	11 45	2 40
Plymouth	3 45	2 46 am	4 55
Chicago	7 00	6 30	7 58

GOING EAST

	No. 4 Night ex	No. 2 Fast ex.	No. 6 Pac. ex	No. 8 Mail
Chicago	9 10 pm	8 00 a.m	5 15 pm
Plymouth	2 46 am	11 25	9 05
Ft. Wayne	6 55	2 15 pm	11 30
Lima	8 55	4 10	1 30 am
Forest	10 10	5 20	2 37
Crestl'e ar.	11 45	6 55	4 20
" lv.	12 05 pm	7 15 pm	4 30	6 05am
Mansfield	12 35	7 44	5 00	6 55
Orrville	2 26	9 31	7 10	9 15
Alliance	4 00	11 15	9 00	11 20
Rochester	6 22	1 20 am	11 06	2 00pm
Pittsburgh	7 30	2 30	12 15	3 30

Trains Nos 3 and 6 run daily. Train No. 1 leaves Pittsburg daily except Sunday. Train No 4 leaves Chicago daily except Saturday. All others daily except Sunday.

F. R. MYERS.
Gen Pass. and Ticket Agent.

Detroit, Eel River & Illinois R R.

TAKE EFFECT Nov. 19 1877.

GOIMG EAST.

Stations.	MAIL No. 2.	ACCOM. No. 4.	LOCAL FT No. 8.
lv. Logansport	8 15am	7 30pm	6 20am
Mexico	8 37	8 28	7 40
Denver	9 08	9 06	8 25
Chili	9 17	9 12	8 47
Roann	9 35	9 37	9 35
Laketon	9 53	10 00	10 10
N. Manchester	10 06	10 17	10 35
Liberty Mills	10 17	10 30	11 00
Collamer	10 31	10 50	11 40
S. Whitley	10 45	10 55	11 50
Columbia City	11 05	11 31	12 50
Col en's	11 20	11 55	2 05
Churubusco	11 31	12 12	2 34
La Otto	11 57	12 42	3 25
Cedar Creek	12 06	12 53	3 45
Auburn Junct'n	12 22	1 12	4 25
Auburn	12 35	1 17	4 35
Butler	1 00am	2 00am	5 45pm

Going West.

Stations	No. 1.	No.	No. 7.
Logansport ar	7 00pm	1 30pm	6 50pm
Mexico	6 26	12 00	5 40
Denver	6 17	11 46	5 20
Chili	6 10	11 35	5 00
Roann	5 57	11 12	4 15
Laketon	5 43	10 50	3 30
North Manchester	5 33	10 35	3 00
Liberty Mills	5 27	10 17	2 35
Collamar	5 15	9 57	2 05
South Whitley	5 12	9 52	1 53
Columbia City	4 50	9 18	12 40
Collin's	4 32	8 53	11 20
Cherubusco	20	8 38	10 55
La Otto	3 55	8 10	10 05
Cedar Creek	3 45	8 00	9 48
Auburn Junction	3 27	7 40	9 15
Auburn	3 24	7 35	8 30
Butler lv	2 45pm	6 50pm	7 15

FRANK J. HECKER.
Gen. Sup't

Baltimore & Ohio Railroad.

IN EFFECT Nov. 8 1877.

GOING WEST.

STATIONS:	Express	Express	Cum'l A
lv New York	8 15am	8 55pm
Philadelphia	11 45	11 20
Baltimore	5 15pm	00am
Washington	6 55	9 40
Wheeling	6 20am	10 50pm	4 30pm
Bellaire	8 00am	11 15	4 50
Barnesville	10 10	12 20am	6 12
Cambridge	11 18	1 27	7 30
Zanesville	12 25p.m	2 35	8 50
ar Newark	1 30	3 30	10 00
Columbus	3 20	4 20
Shawnee	4 30	10
lv Columbus	12 40
Newark	2 20		5 00pm
Mt Vernon	3 19		7 15
Mansfield	4 54		11 25
Shelby	5 11		12 25am
Monroeville	6 13		3 00
ar Sandusky	7 00		4 50
lv Chicago Junction	6 00	4	6 15
Republic	6 45	1	8 10
Tiffin	7 15	8 25	9 35
Fostoria	7 45	9 10	10 05
Deshler	8 50	10 09	1 35pm
Defiance	9 52	11 06
Hicksville	10 41	11 53
Auburn Junction	11 22	12 35pm
Garrett	11 40pm	1 05	m
Avilla
Albion	12 17am	1 44
Milford Junction
Walkertown Junction	2 38	3 53
Chicago	5 40	7 00

GOING EAST.

Chicago	8 50am	9 40pm
Walkertown Junction	12 26pm	10 54pm	11 20am
Milford Junction			2 37pm
Albion	2 30	3 10	4 15
Avilla	2 49	3 30	4 55
Garrett	3 20	3 55	6 00am
Auburn Junction	3 28	4 03	6 18
Hicksville	4 07	4 42	7 42
Defiance	4 54	5 27	9 15
Deshler	5 49	6 23	11 35
Fostoria	6 47	7 23	2 10pm
Tiffin	7 15	7 54	3 20
Republic	7 36
Sandusky
Monroeville
Chicago Junction	8 40	9 30	1 25
Shelby Junction	9 15	10 08	2 35
Mansfield	9 44	10 37	3 55
Mt. Vernon	11 13	12 10pm	7 15
Ar Newark	12 15a.m	1 15	9 20
lv Columbus	5 50	3 20
Shawnee
Newark	12 30am	2 05	5 55am
Lv. Zanesville	1 35	3 10	7 10
Cambridge	2 37	4 06	8 14
Barnesville	3 38	5 05	9 20
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Philadelphia
New York	6 45	5 10pm

Zanesville Accommodation leaves Zanesville daily except Sunday at 6:40 a. m., and arrives a Columbus at 9:15 a. m.

Express trains run daily, other trains daily except Sunday.

L. M COLE, Gen. Tick. Agt.

Ft. Wayne, Muncie & Cin. R. R

Muncie Route.

THE SHORT LINE TO INDIANAPOLIS,
—AND—
THE SOUTHWEST.

Time Card in effect Nov. 18, 1877.

GOING SOUTH.

STATIONS.	1. Mail.	3. Express.	Accomo.
FORT WAYNE	1 00 pm	6 00 pm
Bluffton	2 10	7 15 pm
Montpelier	2 47	7 57 pm
Hartford	3 17	8 24 pm
MUNCIE	4 15	9 20 pm	8 25 am
Newcastle	5 08		9 00
Cambridge City	5 47		[illegible]
Connersville	6 25		10 30
Cincinnati	10 00 pm		12 30 p m
INDIANAPOLIS	6 05	11 20 pm
Louisville	10 05 pm	3 30 am
Terre Haute	10 34 pm	1 50 am
St. Louis	7 35 am	8 30 am

GOING NORTH

STATIONS		s.	4 Accom.
St. Louis		5 am
Terre Haute		1 30 pm
Louisville		7 17 pm
Cincinnati	7 50 am		4 10 pm
Indianapolis		4 25 am	pm
Connersville	12 45 am		pm
Cambridge City	am		pm
New Castle	am		50 pm
Muncie	pm	8 20 am	4 0 pm
Hartford	pm	9 15 am
Montpelier	pm	9 41 am
Bluffton	2 45 pm	10 19 am
Fort Wayne	3 50 pm	11 25 am

All trains daily except Sunday. Trains run on Columbus time. Through cars attached to trains 1 and 4, and run between Fort Wayne and Indianapolis via Muncie.

GEO. W. MULLEN, Act'g Gen. Tick. Ag't. W. W. WORTHINGTON, Gen. Supt.

Ft. Wayne, Jackson & Sag. R. R

Short Line Between

Michigan and the South.

Time card in effect Nov. 18—run by Chicago time

Going South.

Stations	Mail	Exp.	Fr't.
Saginaw	3 35 pm	7 15 am
Lansing	7 20 pm	10 00 am
Grand Rapids		6 30 am	11 50 am
Detroit	9 50 pm	7 00 am
Jackson	6 55 am	11 40 am	5 10 pm
Jonesville	8 10	12 50 pm	7 20
Bankers	8 28	1 07	7 47
Reading	8 44	1 20	8 15
Angola	9 45	2 12	8 45
Waterloo	10 28	2 47	10 50
Auburn	10 40	3 01	11 32
Auburn Junction	10 46	3 05	11 38
Ft Wayne	11 40 am	4 00 pm	1 00 pm
Indianapolis	6 05 pm	11 20 pm
Louisville	10 50 pm	6 30 am
St. Louis	7 25 am	8 30 am

Going North.

St. Louis		6 45 pm
Louisville		7 15 pm
Indianapolis		4 25 am
Dep. Fort Wayne	4 15 pm	11 15 am	1 30 am
Auburn Junction	5 15	12 05 pm	2 40
Auburn	5 18	12 08	3 03
Waterloo	5 32	12 19	4 05
Ar Angola	6 35	12 57	5 35
Reading	7 35	1 49	7 15
Bankers	7 47	2 04	7 40
Jonesville	8 05	2 30	8 10
Jackson	9 20 pm	3 40	10 00 am
Detroit	3 35 am	6 30	1 00 pm
Grand Rapids	7 05	1 00	4 20 pm
Lansing		5 55 pm
Saginaw	m	9 15 pm

All trains daily except Sunday.

P. A. LOOMIS, Pres't
S. K. HOOPER Gen. Ticket Ag't.

JAS. CLIFFORD,

WATERLOO, IND.

Keeps constantly on hand the best and choicest brands of all kinds of

Wines and Liquors,

Cigars, Tobaccos, &c.

He also has, in connection with the above a first class

BILLIARD HALL.

To our citizens and the traveling public, we would say that this is the popular resort at Waterloo. First door south of the railroad

---

GOLD. Great chance to make money. If you can't get gold you can get greenbacks. We need a person in every town to take subscriptions for the largest, cheapest and best illustrated family publication in the world. Any one can become a successful agent. The most elegant works of art given free to subscribers. The price is so low that almost every body subscribes. One Agent reports making over $150 in a week. A lady agent reports taking over 400 subscribers in ten days. All who engage make money fast. You can devote all your time to the business, or only your spare time. You need not be away from home over night. You can do it as well as others. Full directions and terms free. Elegant and expensive outfit free. If you want profitable work send us your address at once. It costs nothing to try the business. No one who engages fails to make great pay. Address "The People's Journal," Portland Maine.

Dr. A. G. OLIN'S Private Hospital, 187 East Washington St., Chicago, Ills, for the cure of all Diseases of a Private nature, resulting from early abuses or infection of either Sex. Seminal Weakness producing Emissions, Loss of Memory, Impaired Sight, Lost Manhood or Impotency, Nervous Debility, permanently cured; diseases of the Bladder, Kidneys, Liver, Lungs, Asthma, Catarrh, Piles, all Chronic Diseases, and DISEASES OF FEMALES, yield to his treatment. Dr. Olin has had a life-long experience, and cures where others fail. He is a graduate of the Reformed School, uses no mercury, has the largest practice in the U. S. LADIES requiring treatment with private home and board, call or write. Every convenience for patients. Send fifty cents for sample of Rubber Goods and circular of important information by express. DR. OLIN'S Female Pills, $3 per Box. Consultation free.

MARRIAGE GUIDE 275 pages. Secrets & information for the young and middle aged of both Sexes, on all diseases of a private nature. Valuable advice to the married and those contemplating marriage. How to be healthy and truly happy in the married relation. Everybody should get this book. Price 50 cents, to any address, sealed.

A PHYSIOLOGICAL

View of Marriage!

WOMAN AND MARRIAGE A Guide to Wedlock and confidential Treatise on the duties of marriage and the causes that unfit for it; the secrets of Reproduction and the Diseases of Women. A book for private, considerate reading. 260 pages, price 50 cts.

A PRIVATE MEDICAL ADVISER! On all disorders of a Private Nature arising from Self Abuse, Excesses, or Secret Diseases, with the best means of cure, 224 large pages, price 50 cts.

A CLINICAL LECTURE on the above diseases and those of the Throat and Lungs, Catarrh, Rupture, the Opium Habit, &c., price 10 cts.

Either book sent postpaid on receipt of price; or all three, containing 500 pages, beautifully illustrated, for 75 cts. Address DR. BUTTS, No. 12 N. 8th St. St. Louis, Mo.

CHRONIC Diseases Cured. New paths marked out by that plainest of all books—"Plain Home Talk and Medical Common sense,"—nearly 1,000 pages, 200 illustrations by Dr. E. B. Foote, of 120 Lexington Avenue, N Y. Purchasers of this book are at liberty to consult its author in person or by mail free. Price by mail $3.25 for the standard edition, or $1.50 for the popular edition, which contains all the same matter and illustrations. Contents free Agents wanted. MURRAY HILL PUBLISHING CO. 129 East 28th St. N. Y.

$45 PREMIUM WATCH AND CHAIN—a stem-winder. Free with every order. Outfit free. J. B. Gaylord & Co., Chicago, Ill.

$3 GOLD PLATED WATCHES. Cheapest in the known world. Sample Watch Free to Agents. Address, A. COULTER & Co., Chicago.

OPIUM and Morphine Habit absolutely and speedily cured. Painless; no publicity. Send stamp for particulars. Dr. Carlton, 187 Washington St., Chicago, Ill.

$2500 A YEAR. Agents wanted. Business legitimate. Particulars free. Address WORTH & CO. St Louis, Mo.

Recorder Office

THE AUBURN COURIER.

Devoted to the Interests of the Democratic Party and to the Collection of Local and General News.

Volume 8. AUBURN, DeKALB COUNTY INDIANA, JANUARY 31st, 1878. Number 5.

The Auburn Weekly Courier

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY, BY

TOM. C. MAYS.

One Year,.........$2. | Six Months,......$1.

Advertising Rates.

Space.	1m.	3m.	6m.	1 y.
1 Square	2 00	5 00	7 00	12 00
¼ Column........	6 00	12 00	12 00	30 00
½ Column........	10 00	15 00	20 00	50 00
1 Column........	15 00	25 00	50 00	100 00

Local Notices 10 cents per line, first insertion cents each insertion thereafter. Business cards five Dollars.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY

TERMS OF COURT.

COURTS IN DEKALB CO.	COURTS IN STEUBEN CO
4th Monday in February	1st Monday in Febr'y
3rd Monday in May.	4th Monday in April.
4th Monday in Septem'r	1st Monday in Sept'r
3rd Monday in Decem'r	4th Monday in Nov'r.

ATTORNEYS.

R. D. MOODY. F. V. HOFFMAN.

Moody and Hoffman,

ATTORNEYS AT LAW. Office over First National Bank, Auburn, Ind.

H. C. PETERSON,

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public. Office over Davis' hardware store, Auburn, Ind.

J. W. BICKEL,

ATTORNEY AT LAW Auburn, Ind. Special attention given to collections. Office over First National Bank.

A. F. PINCHIB

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public, Butler, DeKalb Co., Ind. Insurance and real estate business promptly attended to.

GUY PLUM

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public. Office in the Court House. Special attention paid to the collection of claims. Also agent for Home Insurance Company.

BEST and McCLELLAN.

ATTORNEYS AT LAW, Waterloo, Ind. Will practice in the Courts of DeKalb & Steuben counties. Liberal Advances Made on all first-class Claims left in our hands for collection.

R. A. FRANKS. O. Z. HUBBELL.

Franks & Hubbell,

ATTORNEYS at law, will practice in DeKalb and adjoining counties. Special attention given to the collection of claims, settlements of decendent estates and conveyance. Office on Broadway opposite Haskins & Son's livery stable, Butler, Ind.

R. WM. M'BRIDE, J. L. MORLAN, W. R. LEAS

McBRIDE, MORLAN and LEAS

ATTORNEYS AT LAW, NOTARIES PUBLIC, COLLECTING AND INSURANCE AGENCY Office over Fisher's Clothing Store, corner of Wayne and Marion streets, Waterloo, Ind. Will practice in all parts of the State. Especial Attention given to collections in DeKalb, Steuben, LaGrange and Noble counties.

DANIEL Z. HOFFMAN.

NOTARY PUBLIC, writer of deeds, mortgages, &c., making abstracts and looking up titles, attending to collecting. Also agent for Niagara Fire Insurance Company. Office with County Recorder, Auburn, Ind.

PHYSICIANS.

DR. J. A. COWAN,

PHYSICIAN & SURGEON, Auburn, Ind. Office on Main street, over Central Grocery.

DR. T. G. MATHENY.

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, office up stairs in McIntyre's block, Auburn, Ind. All calls promptly attended to.

W. S. ALLEN.

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, Office West of Court House, on Main Street, over Eldridge's store. Same office lately occupied by Dr. Cowan.

Dr. T. J. Dills,

Especial attention given to Diseases of the EYE and EAR. Rooms 1 and 2 Odd Fellows' building. Office hours—9:30 to 12 a. m.; 1 to 5 p. m., 7 to 8 p. m. Fort Wayne, Ind.

DR. TRITCH,

HOMEOPATHIC PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON Special attention given to Surgery and Chronic diseases. Office in Case's Block, Auburn Indiana.

DR. S. B. JOHNSTON.

DENTIST, WATERLOO, INDIANA, Does all work in the line of his profession at as low figures as possible. Special attention given to gold filling and making new teeth. All work warranted.

W. T. KNAPP, M. D.

Formerly of Chicago, Ill.,

HOMŒOPATHIC PHYSICIAN,

AUBURN, INDIANA.

Office at Residence, Ralston Property, Seventh Street.

Special attention given to

CHRONIC DISEASES

—AND—

DISEASES OF CHILDREN.

Calls promptly attended, day or night, city or country. Consultation in German or English.

HOTELS.

BUTT'S HOTEL,

FORMERLY THE BIGLER HOUSE, JOHN BUTT & A. B. RICHARDS, Proprietors, Waterloo, Ind. Free omnibus to and from all trains Good sample rooms on first floor.

Central House,

MR. M. C. MARKEL, Prop. Corner Main and Seventh streets. Good Sample Rooms for Drummers.

TREMONT HOUSE.

WASHINGTON, D. C. Accommodates three hundred guests. Terms $2.50 per day. Located corner Second street and Indiana Avenue, in full view of the Capitol City Hall.

F. P. HILL.

SANDS HOUSE.

COR. WABASH AVE. & MADISON ST. CHICAGO, ILL. New House, elegantly furnished. Only $2.00 per day.

Geo. S. PALMER, Late of City Hotel, Clerk. O. SANDS, Proprietor

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein William [illegible] is plaintiff and Geo. Wilmot and Lucinda H. Wilmot are defendants, requiring me to make the sum of two hundred and eighteen dollars, with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 2nd, 1876.

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House in DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years of the following real estate, to-wit:

South half of the north east quarter of section twenty-two, 22, township thirty-three, 33, north of range fourteen, 14, east, containing eighty acres, 80, more or less.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

J. C. St. CLAIR, Sheriff.
By THOS. D. GROSS, Deputy.

Best & McClellan, Attorneys for plaintiff.
Auburn, Jan. 9th 1878. Pr. fee $7.25

Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court in a cause wherein Thomas H. Sprott, Trustee, is plaintiff, and Andrew J. Little is defendant, requiring me to make the sum of Thirty-five dollars $35.00, with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 2nd, 1878

Between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, at the door of the Court House of DeKalb County, Indiana, the rents and profits, for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

